Goldwyn's Message to Quincy, Illinois

[And 10,000 Towns Like It]

MR. SOHM, of Quincy, does not know whether his Belasco Theatre will be able to afford Goldwyn Pictures because he is a "little exhibitor."

This announcement is to assure him and the thousands of other exhibitors like him that the big and powerful Goldwyn productions will be at his disposal and within his reach.

"Little exhibitors" are the backbone of the motion picture industry; they determine the success or failure of a producer. What could be more profitable and satisfying than producing big pictures for the "little exhibitors" as well as for the big ones ?

Goldwyn expects to contribute to its own success and solidity in the industry by the cordiality and intelligence of its relationships with the owners and managers of the smaller theatres.

BLUEBIRD

S. L. ROTHAPFEL needs no introduction to the Trade. He is known (if not in person—by reputation) to every Exhibitor in the business. Mr. Rothapfel by virtue of his exceptional managerial ability, keen foresight and knowledge of what the public wants, has achieved a brilliant success. That is distinctly why we doubly emphasize the fact that in Mr. Rothapfel's choosing BLUEBIRD PHOTO PLAYS for the Rialto (America's Finest Moving Picture Theatre) he has set an example that will be followed by the shrewdest Exhibitors in the Trade. IT'S A PRETTY SAFE BET TO FOLLOW THE FOOTSTEPS OF SUCCESSFUL MEN. Think it over.

MARCUS LOEW as one of the largest individual owners of Moving Picture Theatre circuits in the entire world, THINKS before he ACTS and always bases his judgment on something tangible. This "Something Tangible" is "the wishes of his patrons." Mr. Loew realizes, as does Mr. Rothapfel, that the life of pictures depends on the QUALITY of the pictures and NOT upon the Star. That's why Mr. Loew booked BLUEBIRD PHOTOPLAYS in all his Theatres. Thousands of men have succeeded by following the examples of successful men. Apply that principle to your Business.

ON this—the most remarkable picture ever filmed—the stupendous production that is still the sensation of Broadway, where at the Broadway Theatre it played to $22,000 in two weeks—are going rapidly as a glance at the map will show.

This remarkable realization and visualization of Jules Verne's great dreams and future prophecies as foretold in his 50-year-old classic "20,000 LEAGUES UNDER THE SEA" cost a half million dollars to produce and was over two years in the making.

IT is an ideal State Rights production, because so long as people can read, Jules Verne's wonderful tale will be read, and the people will clamor to see the story in this great picture. It will be as great a box office attraction five years from now as it is today when it is breaking all records wherever shown.

BLUEBIRD PHOTOPLAYS

MARCUS LOEW

BLUEBIRD PHOTOPLAYS

Indisputable evidence that Mr. Loew fully understands the ways and means of success in the Picture business.

THE bare announcement that Marcus Loew chooses BLUEBIRD PHOTOPLAYS for his entire list of Picture Theatres in New York must impress every serious minded Exhibitor in the United States. The Exhibitor who turns his back on evidence of this character, either does not know that Marcus Loew is the largest and most successful individual owner of Moving Picture Theatres in the United States or else connot be seeking growth, profits and prestige. Mr. Loew is successful in all of his houses for one BIG reason and that is—Mr. Loew does not guess what his audience like best—HE KNOWS. Thus—every Exhibitor in America can succeed by following the methods of Mr. Loew,—eliminating all guesswork, and giving the public what they pay for and what they want—perfect photoplays,—really delightful entertainment—answered by BLUEBIRD PHOTOPLAYS every week —52 weeks in every year.

In spite of the fact that more than a dozen costly features containing Stars, were offered in the same week Mr. Loew chose "GOD'S CRUCIBLE" to the immense satisfaction and pleasure of his patrons and with profits and prestige to all his houses. Mr. Loew realizes that in spite of all the talk about Stars in plays,—its the perfect play after all that makes people want to go to the theatre.

Mr. Loew believes with BLUEBIRD that "The Plays The Thing" Mr. Loew realizes that no Star on earth can make every picture a winner. It hasn't been done and it can't be done, because the majority of the present day Stars demand plays written to please the vanity of the Star. Its exactly the reverse in BLUEBIRD PLAYS.

In BLUEBIRD its the PLAY FIRST, last and all the time, with the perfect cast (Stars and otherwise) to portray the perfect play AND THAT'S WHAT THE PUBLIC HAVE SHOWN THEY WANT AND THAT'S WHAT BLUEBIRD PHOTOPLAYS ARE GIVING THEM. That's why BLUEBIRD PLAYS HAVE ARRIVED. That's why BLUEBIRD PLAYS will eventually supplant the wave of ordinary, mediocre features now flooding the country. THE GREAT NATIONAL DEMAND IS "FINER PICTURES AND FINER PLAYS"—and BLUEBIRD IS THE ANSWER.

To UNIVERSAL FILM MANUFACTURING COMPANY

Gentlemen:

We wish to advise you that the majority comment on your photoplay "THE PEOPLE VERSUS JOHN DOE" reviewed by The National Board of Review on NOVEMBER 17, 1916 was as follows:

ENTERTAINMENT VALUE EXCELLENT EDUCATIONAL VALUE EXCELLENT

ARTISTIC VALUE: Dramatic interest of story VERY INTENSE Coherence of narrative STRONG Acting EXCELLENT Photography GOOD Technical handling ADMIRABLE Costuming (if period production) Atmospheric quality of scenic setting CONVINCING Historical value (if period production)

MORAL EFFECT GOOD

GENERAL COMMENT: In the opinion of those present ~~this~~ production is a powerful indictment of capital punishment and third degree methods. Dramatically it was considered a film masterpiece.

RTAINMENT VALUE.—This term applies to all that which is entertaining or interest-holding.

TIONAL VALUE.—This term applies to pictures that are instructive in science, industry, travel, and the presentation and interpretation of great classics, or that are illustrative of customs of people and ways of living of different classes of society past and present.

L EFFECT —This applies to the moral effect of the picture either consciously or unconsciously produced.

ISTIC VALUE.—This term is interpreted broadly to include the acting, the drama itself, the stage settings, artistic out-door scenes and scenery, the appropriateness of the production to the story treated, the costuming, and the absence of incongruous elements.

PRODUCED BY LOIS WEBER

and you will understand why this stupendous LOIS WEBER production played to capacity at the Broadway Theatre, New York, and received from newspaper and film critics an endorsement rarely given to any cinema production.

Choice Territory Still Open

This is the ideal type of State Rights production. It not only gets the capacity crowds, but it starts discussion in Press and Pulpit, as well as among the People themselves. Choice territory still available, but quick action is necessary. Write today for handsome illustrated and descriptive folder which tells you all about this big production; advertising props, paper, etc.

S. L. Rothapfel says

I SAW "Joan the Woman," produced by Jesse L. Lasky under the personal direction of Cecil B. DeMille, and as a lover of the moving picture I consider it a treat for every one to go and see this production at the Forty-fourth Street Theatre.

In my opinion, I consider it the greatest picture since "The Birth of a Nation" and one that will take equal rank with this great production. In many respects it is even finer. If we are to develop the moving picture, if we are to make it the glorious institution that we want to make it, if it is to rise to the point where it can truly be called an art, every moving picture fan owes it to himself and to the picture to support an effort of this kind.

MUTUAL NEWS

"What's Going On In The Mutual"

WEEKLY NEWS OF THE MUTUAL FILM CORPORATION AND ITS 68 EXCHANGES

FEBRUARY 17, 1917

MARGARITA FISCHER HAS STRONG ROLE IN "DEVIL'S ASSISTANT"

"THE DEVIL'S ASSISTANT" is the newest Fischer-Mutual Photoplay. It features Margarita Fischer. It was produced at the studios of the Pollard Picture Plays Company at San Diego, California. It is in five acts. It will be released the week of March 5th.

Fourth of Fischer Series.

"The Devil's Assistant" is the fourth of the Fischer-Mutual Photoplays. The ones previously released are "The Pearl of Paradise," "Miss Jackie of the Navy" and "The Butterfly Girl." All are still playing to capacity business at theatres all over the country. Today Margarita Fischer is one of America's foremost screen idols. She continues to grow in popularity with each new release. In "The Devil's Assistant" she has a role totally different from anything that she has previously attempted. Those who have had the privilege of attending a pre-release showing are unanimous in the opinion that Miss Fischer is as charming and winsome in this drama as in anything that she has enacted.

Story With a Moral.

Aside from its appeal as an entertainment, "The Devil's Assistant" will appeal to many audiences on account of the moral it points. The same unusual camera work and technical perfection that have made previous releases from the Pollard Picture Play studios popular will be noted in this new release. "The Devil's Assistant" is a strong attraction for any theatre. Bookings on Fischer-Mutual Photoplays can be arranged at any Mutual Film Exchange.

Crane Wilbur Is Again With Mutual

Crane Wilbur will soon be offered in a series of five reel Mutual Photoplays which will be distributed by Mutual Exchanges. Mr. Wilbur has been at work for some weeks in the David Horsley studios in Los Angeles. Several Wilbur-Mutual Photoplays have already been completed. Mr. Wilbur feels that in them he has done some of his best work. In the past many exhibitors have found Crane Wilbur one of their strongest drawing cards. His return to the screen will be welcomed by a host of photoplayers. Titles and dates for release for the Wilbur-Mutual Photoplays will be made shortly. Mutual Exchanges are now ready to accept bookings.

"THE RAILROAD RAIDERS"

In Which Daring Helen Holmes Is Featured

NEW SERIAL PRODUCTION

Helen Holmes and her husband-director, J. P. McGowan, are again at work on a 15 chapter photonovel featuring Helen Holmes. Work has already begun on the new chapterplay. Its title is "The Railroad Raiders." Its locations will be in and about the offices, shops, roundhouses, depots and yards of a big transcontinental railroad. A glance over the manuscript of the story indicates that this will be the best railroad chapterplay ever filmed by the Signal Film Corporation. Helen Holmes was a great drawing card in "The Girl and the Game." In "A Lass of the Lumberlands" she did even more thrilling "stunts," and the picture proved even more of a box-office magnet. Now, in "The Railroad Raiders," she is working in a still better photonovel—one which will draw even bigger business to the theatres showing it. Exhibitors may arrange bookings now on "The Railroad Raiders" at their nearest Mutual Exchange.

Several big new stages have been specially erected at the Signal studios for the new chapterplay. This week Director McGowan is superintending the erection of a set that is costing $2,500. The exact date of release for chapter one of "The Railroad Raiders" will be announced in the near future. The new serial is in fifteen chapters—each two reels in length.

Sturgeon to Direct Gail Kane

Rollin S. Sturgeon, known to photoplay fans as a director of note, has been engaged to superintend the productions in which Gail Kane is to appear.

GALAXY OF STARS IS NOW WORKING IN MUTUAL PHOTOPLAYS

A TRULY phenomenal galaxy of stars is now arrayed under the Mutual banner. Each of the stars is already a national celebrity—an actor or actress whose name and fame is known from coast to coast. They are not people with reputations yet to be made—people for whom the exhibitors will have to create a following—but stars whose names are so well known that the announcement of their coming to any theatre will result in capacity business.

Many Studios Busy.

Studios in New York, Los Angeles, San Diego and Santa Barbara are working day and night. The plants of the American Film Company, Inc., the Pollard Picture Plays Company, the Frank Powell Producing Corporation, the Mardan Photoplay Company, The Lone Star Film Corporation and the Empire All Star Corporation are busy hives of industry. In one studio Marjorie Rambeau has completed or is appearing in such Mutual Photoplays as "The Greater Woman," "Motherhood," "The Debt," "The Second Wife" and "The Doll's House," and Nance O'Neil, who has finished "Mrs. Balfame," is working in "Hedda Gabler" and "Bleak House." At the American plant Gail Kane is enacting "Whose Wife," William Russell is starring in "My Fighting Gentleman" and "High Play," and Mary Miles Minter has just completed "The Gentle Intruder." At San Diego, Margarita Fischer is playing in "A Knight at Tarquizzi" and "Birds of Passage." Ann Murdock, first of the Frohman stars engaged by the Empire All Star Corporation, is hard at work in New York, and Edna Goodrich is soon to begin her first Goodrich-Mutual Photoplay. Charlie Chaplin is hard at it in Los Angeles creating laughs by the thousand, and in the near future still other former Frohman stars will appear before the camera.

"Big Stars Only" Policy.

All of these activities indicate Mutual's sincere intention to live up to its new slogan of "Big Stars Only." Nothing short of the best in the way of either stars or plays will satisfy Mutual executives. Exhibitors showing Mutual Photoplays are going to have the pick of the market. Advance reservations on the big productions now in the making can be arranged now at Mutual Exchanges.

A Gaumont cameraman of the Mutual Weekly scored a real "scoop" in getting the wreck of the U. S. S. Milwaukee on the screens of Los Angeles theatres hours ahead of any other animated weekly. This is but one instance of Gaumont's efficiency.

ANN MURDOCK in ENVY

Read what the Critics say:

The Moving Picture World

Miss Murdock presents a most pleasing appearance. She is cute, as you might say, and when she dons a peculiar style of bloomers and stretches out on a comfortable divan you don't blame either Adam or Skinner for their admiration. Rather do you envy the twain for being admitted to her presence.

Edward Weitzel.

Motion Picture News

Ann Murdock heads the cast. As Betty Howard, the actress, her beauty and histrionic skill are important assets in the success of the picture. A fetching boudoir costume, a chic bathing suit and an elaborate "nightie" are features of her extensive wardrobe.

Peter Milne.

Dramatic Mirror

This winning and gentle drama is anything but deadly, especially when decorated by the piquant personality of Ann Murdock.

If "Envy" with Ann Murdock is representative of the series, the release of this chain of plays should be eagerly watched for by exhibitors.

A. G. S.

New York Tribune

If the "Seven Deadly Sins" continue to be made so attractive, it is going to be difficult to say "Get thee behind me."

Harriette Underhill.

The Morning Telegraph

It would be hard to find a production better equipped in the way of players; each of the three principals has strong screen personality. Ann Murdock is a vivacious and sparkling Betty, and most ornamental, while Shirley Mason, who will appear in other pictures of this series, has a film magnetism which will carry her a long way on the road to popularity. She is a natural, unaffected little actress. George Le Guere is, of course, a fine juvenile.

Agnes Smith.

Exhibitor's Trade Review

Ann Murdock, who is featured in this release, wears many pretty gowns, and she is indeed an engaging picture to behold.

Billboard

The film has action; Miss Murdock is good to look upon, there are some unique scenes, especially that of a rainstorm, and it has the virtue of not being obviously didactic.

Variety. ("Envy")

It has much scenic beauty and a wealth of melodrama with a "punch," not to speak of the very agreeable pictures of the slender Miss Murdock several times in a boudoir negligee of black knickerbockers, and once again in an Annette Kellerman bathing suit.

THE NEW TRIANGLE

There is a NEW TRIANGLE.

The word has taken on an added significance, with the entrance of the Triangle Distributing Corporation into the field of activities broadly included by the word "TRIANGLE."

The motion picture industry knows what the word "TRIANGLE" has stood for, and still stands for, in its reference to the grouping in one compact program of the pictures produced by three studios, each in a class by itself—which will continue as heretrfore.

But now there is an added meaning, a NEW TRIANGLE—the Exhibitor, the Producer, the Distributor—joined firmly and solidly together by ties whose strength will stand every test.

The Triangle Distributing Corporation is composed of SPECIALISTS, men who appreciate the vital inter-dependence of producer, distributor and exhibitor whose breadth of vision comprehends that the needs of one are the needs of all. They will learn, through close touch with the exhibitor, his views and his suggestions, and thus be enabled to transmit to the producers of Triangle pictures information which will aid them in supplying a product even higher in standard and more satisfying in box-office efficiency than has been the case heretofore—and this is saying much.

Further announcements of very great importance to all exhibitors will follow.

Famous Stars Pictures Corporation

One Forty Nine Broadway New York City

SOME old fashioned exhibitors haven't yet realized what a great big place the RIGHT COMEDIES have in their programs. They still think the "feature's the thing"—entirely.

The PUBLIC knows better. They are DEMANDING enthusiasm and good cheer—HARLEQUIN COMEDIES which you are going to hear much about here. A program doesn't MEAN anything without the right comedies to round it out.

The Famous Stars Pictures Corporation begins a new era in Screendom. Famous stars, famous authors, famous directors, will combine to produce refined but screamingly funny two reel feature comedies. Comedies that will keep folks on edge for more. Comedies that will build goodwill and "comeback" patronage for your house.

See opposite page for additional information about HARLEQUIN releases.

Introducing

Mr. Tworeel Harlequin. He's the herald of GOOD comedies—the sort of comedies you've been waiting for to make your program A No. 1 from the first flicker to the last close up.

There's a jim dandy Harlequin two reeler coming along soon now starring one of the cleverest, prettiest, smartest little women in Filmland—a FAMOUS STAR from a FAMOUS FAMILY OF STARS.

Who is she?

We'll never tell you—that is, not this week.

But you are good enough business man to watch for further announcements of

HARLEQUIN

The Comedies with Counterplots

Harlequin comedies are "different" comedies—they've got a point as well as a tickle to them.

Remember—famous stars, famous authors, famous directors, all working together to produce just the very best fun that this great big, good natured world affords.

You'll be glad to welcome Harlequin.

BE in the vanguard of the Cleaner Films Movement. Be able to offer your Exhibitors better films. The Modern Mother Goose is endorsed by the Illinois Congress of Mothers, the Parent Teachers' Association and the Better Films Committee.

AT the two presentations of The Modern Mother Goose at the Strand Theatre, Chicago, childish shouts of glee greeted the funny capers of the well-known characters who returned to earth to perform. The delight of the children and the appreciation of the older ones who brought them was a thing not soon to be forgotten.

WHAT THE CRITICS SAY

LOUELLA PARSONS IN CHICAGO "HERALD":

"It is a picture that mothers can feel sure their little people will understand and enjoy. It has much in it that will appeal to grown ups as well as little ones."

What Manager Linn Says About "Gloria's Romance"

Carlsbad, New Mex., January 13th, 1917.

Kleine-Edison-Selig-Essanay,
Denver, Colorado.

Gentlemen: To the best of our knowledge, this was the best serial ever booked in this theatre. During the six months we have had the PEOPLE'S, our biggest business for any one night was done when we showed the first chapter of "Gloria's Romance." Since that time we could count on our biggest night being "Romance" night. The title gets a hand every time it goes on the screen, and the best people in town are the ones who have not missed a single episode. Allow us the privilege of thanking you for giving us the opportunity to book it.

Yours very truly,
(Signed) T. R. LINN, Mgr.,
PEOPLES THEATRE.

Manager Linn's letter is evidence of the tremendous success of Gloria's Romance—the Kleine masterpiece featuring the star supreme, Billie Burke. In the small towns and the big cities Gloria's Romance is showing to packed houses. Thousands of people who ordinarily do not patronize picture theatres are enthusiastic followers of this great motion picture classic. Billie Burke in Gloria's Romance is without a rival. Magnificent scenery, gorgeous costumes, an all-star cast and wonderful photography stamp this feature far above all others. No matter what the capacity of your house, you can pack it to the limit with Gloria's Romance. Twenty chapters—a new chapter each week. "The American Girl"

Quality, Not Length, Is What Counts

WE take great pleasure in announcing the early release of a NEW SERIES of two-part productions under the general title of "The American Girl."

We promise you superior photography, a superabundance of fast, snappy action, good direction and the services of Miss Marin Sais in the stellar role, supported by a strong cast of Kalem favorites.

The stories are being prepared by Frederick R. Bechdolt, one of the most brilliant writers of thrilling fiction ever recognized by such powerful magazines as The Saturday Evening Post, Collier's, The Red Book, Everybody's and the Popular.

The director is James W. Horne, whose "Stingaree" and "The Girl from Frisco" SERIES have been pronounced short length masterpieces.

Can YOU afford to pass up this Quality SERIES into which we have put all the experience gained in producing our former SERIES Successes? Ask your nearest General Film Exchange for information that will enable you to reap a substantial profit.

A Money Maker If There Ever Was One

IT is also our pleasure to announce the starring of Miss Helen Gibson in a SERIES of one-part Railroad Dramas, unique in their conception and execution.

Miss Gibson, whose heroic exploits are not approached by any other player of her sex in motion pictures today, needs no lengthy introduction.

In "A Daughter of Daring" we will introduce many new and novel bits of business, plenty of new thrills and more action and story to the foot than can be found in the average five-part production.

The stories (each complete) will be written by men who know the technical side of Railroading, who write from experience and can weave Romances of the Rails about Helen Gibson in a nevertobeforgotten way.

In short, we urge you to see your nearest General Film Exchange and arrange for these splendid SERIES pictures before a competing theatre ties them up.

Facts and Comments

AGAIN within the past few days we have been compelled to close the columns of this paper to the advertising of a film production the exploitation and exhibition of which we believe could only prove harmful to the whole industry. With censorship bills pending in twenty states, as we pointed out in last week's issue, it seems unbelievable that producers will still persist in building pictures, intended for amusement and entertainment, around such forbidden subjects as an unmentionable hereditary disease. Undoubtedly we will again be sneered at unjustly for our self-righteous attitude, but once more we are compelled to say that we do not want business of this sort. We are also quite sure that mighty few in the industry, either manufacturers or exhibitors, want this sort of filth.

STATE rights and other "special" pictures, except those that have won a big name, are under the disability of peculiar competition. A report from Montana states that many films of this nature have been sailing under breezy argument with no cargo and that exhibitors have grown leery of them. What is more, the state rights boys have formed the habit of taking them to the old "opry house" when the regular picture theater refuses them. The "opry house" man has on the percentage basis nothing to lose and he doesn't care how rotten they are. He depends on vaudeville and road shows; why should he worry?

PROMOTERS of "get-rich-quick" motion picture companies will find little comfort in the testimony given before the New York legislative investigating committee by leading motion picture producers of known standing in the trade, most of which has been printed in the daily press. Frequently the same daily papers carry advertisements of the most alluring character, calculated to coax good coin from the pockets of the uninformed, hence the fairly truthful statements regarding the extreme risks that are taken by picture producers may have the effect of cooling the ardor of those who hope to become wealthy over night by investing in the picture business.

A CORRESPONDENT brings forward a pertinent suggestion in connection with the present investigation by both the New York State and Federal legislators with a view to increased taxation on the industry. As the public eventually pays all taxation the screens of our picture houses might become a potent factor in a campaign for an investigation of the pork-chasing investigators. We hear a lot about the waste and extravagance of some of our picture producers, but what about the extravagance in our legislative assemblies? A real investigation in the sole interest of the taxpayer would be mighty instructive and the picture theaters could help greatly in such an agitation.

THERE is in this neighborhood a slight but noticeable increase in the popularity of vaudeville. Vaudeville is wholly entertainment; it seldom makes any appeal to the mind. Pictures perhaps have been overdoing this appeal to the mind with their problems of the hour, their sociological and sexological, political and religious stories. The fact that they could offer more matter than vaudeville gave them a tremendous advantage at the start; but it won't do to make the picture show too much like a forum. Perhaps, also, programs of pictures have been growing too long.

ANNOUNCING in the printed program the projection time of the daily feature is proving to many theater managers to be one of the most effective means of preventing a satisfied patron from becoming disgruntled. The announcement should be made in a prominent part of the space allotted to each day's show. The plan operates particularly well with neighborhood houses and houses having a mailing list, as it enables patrons to leave their homes in time to reach the theater before the feature is shown.

"REFINED comedy in pictures does not go strongly with refined audiences," said a local exhibitor of marked success. "They want slap-stick, but without vulgarity. They prefer comedies in a stage setting with dialogue to picture stories that carefully build up a comedy situation. Picture comedies are enjoyed piecemeal and the slap-stick parts are liked the best."

As High As His Brow

By Louis Reeves Harrison

IF THE whole history of motion picture production could be briefly presented in bright and attractive style by some man writing from the fullness of experience it would not only be of general interest, but it would have a definite value for those who are attempting to make moving pictures under present conditions. Not only might it give a clearer view of what is to be done in the future to strengthen an art which has won its way to people's hearts as a medium, in spite of bad examples, but it might prevent a repetition of avoidable mistakes now being made over and over again.

It is manifestly impossible to relate within the limitations of an editorial what these mistakes have been—they number thousands—but it may be indicated that most of them resulted from the dominating influence of men who had never been called upon before for an accurate measurement of public taste, inclusive of some who could not measure anything beyond their own limited capabilities.

It was not so very long ago that backdrops were painted with the light effects from one side for use in open-air studios where the actual light was from the opposite side. Everything was theatrical. The characters walked up to the supposed audience, as if to deliver their lines, most carefully facing the camera while talking to each other, and there was a veritable scrimmage in all mob scenes to get to the front. Both characters and situations were of the limited kind that has dulled many a stage performance.

Nothing seems to take such deep root in the human mind as a well-established error, such as that of there being only a certain number of "situations" possible in a story. Some old saw has compiled them all and enumerated them in purely arbitrary fashion to the serious detriment of original work, wholly unaware that variety is what has ever made for improvement, just as variation has brought the human race out of monotony of type. Nature has a larger vision. Rarely do two human beings so closely resemble each other that they cannot be distinguished one from the other. Almost never are two characters to be found not presenting differences easily recognizable.

A male guest enters a private household of two people who have found married life uncongenial. Instantly the man of statistics says "Eternal Triangle." The "Eternal Triangle" presumes that the guest and the wife are to fall in love with each other, while the arrival of that guest may simply precipitate any one of a thousand situations, as in real life, but the mind purely theatrical has been accustomed so long to connect that arrival with one development that no other is conceivable. Then it is wholly overlooked that plots, situations, incidents, characters and motives are merely a composite in great plays. The whole impression is really the thing to be considered.

Suppose the effect is biblical, "The peace of God which passeth all understanding," "Though your sins be as scarlet they shall be as white as snow," "The way of the transgressor is hard," "The wages of sin is death," "Ever learning and never able to come to knowledge of the truth," "A still small voice," or any one of hundreds of effects, what has any particular set of stock characters or stock situations to do with the matter other than a means to an end. The designer of the play gets along with them or without them in accord with the best possible method of reaching what he is after—they are of minor importance.

We have improved. One play used to be repeated over and over again, with scarcely any variation. The hero is falsely accused of committing the crime and the cowboys decided to string him up because the villain carefully planted the weapon in the innocent hero's pocket, or wherever it could mislead the unwary. At the last moment, when all seemed lost, the villain conveniently dies and confesses his crime to the heroine, signing his name to a written statement, and she dashes to the scene of lynching to be embraced by the hero as he is about to say his prayers.

Such was the typical scenario of rough stuff, slightly varied with a bomb conspiracy where cowboys were not handy. People liked moving pictures, and they went like lambs to the slaughter, always generous and hopeful. What they saw would be laughed to scorn now, just as much now shown on the screen will be laughed to scorn tomorrow. If you are standing in close conversation with a man, you only see the upper part of him within direct line of vision, yet it was a long time before such close-ups, giving as they do a chance to interpret motive, were permitted by the gentleman with the purse. He said they were not true to life.

A man's estimate of human intelligence can only be as broad as his vision, as high as his own ideals. If his vision and his ideals are limited to the theatric we must expect the stage villain to be unmasked at the altar, just as he is about to wed the unfortunate heroine whose banker father is in the villain's power, or some other self-sacrifice situation all out of focus with common sense. We will continue to gaze in stupid reminiscence at the "After All" dramas of the mellow. Then the salacious, produced only for the salacity that is in them, leaving a bad taste in the mouth at the end, will come along with stale-beer frequency until the time when all concerned in motion picture production get a larger view.

Gone are many of the old producers, some of them with fat purses, who could not adapt themselves to changed conditions. Many others will follow without fat purses on the same account. Their brows are too low for a race of people enthusiastically devoted to self-improvement. If there is a keynote to American character it is progress. Progress does not mean adherence to worn-out ideas and ideals. We still have gentlemen of accidental success in our midst, the kind that never read the papers. It is even doubtful if they would learn anything if they did. But there is a change for the better constantly taking place.

Some producers are paying insane salaries to stars; others are squandering money on settings; still others are avoiding extravagant outlay through system at the starting point, and only those will survive elimination who carefully weigh all the composite elements of motion picture making and appraise them accordingly. It takes breadth of brow as well as height to grasp the close relation of artistry and financial success and of a due proportion of the elements of artistry, each element dependent upon the other, all fusing harmoniously in the crucible.

Far from reaching the end for which they are intended, moving pictures are still in the experimental stage. We are developing the means, the authors, actors and directors, now more or less antagonistic, eventually to fuse them in plays that make a deep and lasting impression. Individual artistry is far ahead of that we knew yesterday. The melting together in one harmonious blend is yet to come. The producer who considers only one or another of those elements cannot expect to win—he must have them all. More than that—having them is not enough—he must be able himself to melt them together in one product of beauty and power, or one suited to the new educational system which is bound to come.

The Fight Is On

By Rev. W. H. Jackson

WHAT a pity, nay, we might almost say what a disgrace that in these days of enlightenment, of arbitration and of peace councils such a matter as the use of moving pictures on Sunday has to be called a "FIGHT"! What a bad example it is for a minister to announce an address on the Sunday picture question under the title "The Fight Is On". Equally bad is it for the moving picture champions to call for an attack on the Lord's Day Alliance and kindred organizations because they are conscientiously dedicated to the principles of Sabbath observance. Both of these attacks are beside the truth and what should be the proper issue of the day.

Two questions in this debate should be considered as settled: There is a recognition of the Sabbath which must be both demanded and conceded, likewise there is a recognition of the moving picture which must be both demanded and conceded; the next point in question is, What are the best means of bringing concessions together to the advantage of neither, but to the advantage of both. The Church should remember that the use of the moving picture on Sunday is not an evil. Hundreds of churches are using it with great profit to their general church work. The commercial use of it is the one problem that confronts.

Let us first consider the labor part of this matter. All the labor required is that of attendants, which the moving picture more than anything else has reduced to a minimum. Where is there a public entertainment which calls for so little labor as the exhibition of the moving picture? We use our telephones on Sunday without thought of the labor engaged; and yet if we only knew we should find those employed on that day is by by no means an inconsiderable number. The writer has also verified the fact that the moving picture operator has more time to himself on the Sunday than has the rich man's chauffeur, who takes his master to church.

The Church must also remember that this is not a "fight" between the moving pictures or nothing. Before the moving pictures came there was an everlasting contention between the "Church and the World" as to the many and varied forms of Sunday attractions. Many of these were of admittedly objectionable kind, which the moving pictures have driven away and supplanted. Should the moving picture in turn be driven out these former objectionable things will return, with perhaps others still more objectionable, so that "the latter state of things will be worse than the former." It is, therefore, a choice between the moving picture and the former things or others still worse.

Such a thing as vacuum in the social order of the human family is impossible. Even idleness itself is not a vacuum. It is nothing more than a period of time between that which last occupied the human activities and that which is to follow. When, however, that which is to follow is not dictated by useful motives it becomes first useless, then mischievous and then criminal. To attempt to create a social vacuum is to become the indirect cause of crime, for "Satan finds some mischief still for idle hands to do." Let the Church be careful not to create a city full of idle hands without preparing to take the responsibility therefor.

Let us now ask a broad question, or rather put the matter hypothetically. Given a large city with hundreds of thousands of inhabitants, the vast majority of whom have neither the means nor the circumstances to conduct themselves according to the requirements of the Church on the Sabbath day; also believing that the greater part of these people desire to secure from the day of rest the greatest possible good, spirit, soul and body; knowing the impossibilities which so surround them that the well-meaning offers of the Church cannot be accepted by them; knowing also the tendency to yield to attractions non-advantageous to their better welfare, and, having abolished the greater evils which surrounded these thousands of people, and, knowing also that something must be given in the place of those things taken away, and seeking always to do that which shall secure "the greatest good for the greatest number" without considering those few who have advantages on the one hand, or the limitations on the other, what can be given the people at large that shall better fill all possible conditions and contingencies than the moving picture?

Is there any other form of attraction or entertainment that can be made if necessary to serve at least a religious purpose? Has it not also a store of religious attractions so that it can be directed in that channel? Is there any other attraction which can be truthfully called educational? What other form of entertainment can send the people to the public library so that they may become the better acquainted with the classics that have first been introduced to them on the screen?

Where else can the poor stay-at-homes go that will give them a larger knowledge of "the world in which we live" than to see the wonderful travel and scenic pictures which the camera has brought to their doors? How superior to the newspapers are the topical subjects which give them an actual view of the extraordinary events happening everywhere of which the papers give only a meagre description, which too often many cannot read.

Following this theme in the larger sense, how is the literary digest of the screen which takes up the more educating happenings of the day and reveals them to the people who would otherwise never hear of them? How refreshing to the dwellers in the city, with its confines so often distressingly irksome, to be able to read from "the living book of nature" those things which the dwellers in the country themselves delight to see and read.

For the young "the fowls of the air, the beasts of the field, the fishes of the sea" become a real thing as they are seen, not in cold print, but alive in their haunts, revealing their manners and customs. The workers, too, are interested and helped by the great number of industrial pictures now becoming exceedingly common, so that they are made familiar with their own and other forms of industry either kindred to or associated with that which interests them most.

The moving picture house has been called "the workingman's theater." This title was good in its way, in that it was intended to imply that those things in the theater which were beyond the workingman had been brought within his reach. Truly, the time has come when something more immediately profitable than the theater can be ascribed to the moving picture. Can it not be called the workingman's educator? In behalf of the moving picture interests the day has gone by when it was found profitable to pander to a questionable taste. We are living in the days of progress and culture. Even the very fun of the pictures has become of that kind which excludes coarseness and vulgarity, it having been learned that the laugh which may be repeated and remembered is more exhilarating than the one which should be forgotten lest it sting.

Without doubt, then, the moving picture must be allowed to demonstrate for itself it has a Sunday mission.

Deposits or No Deposits: That's the Question

By Sam Spedon

THE deposit system now in vogue by most of the exchanges is nothing more nor less than a bond upon the exhibitor, and the most surprising part of it is the exhibitor is his own bondsman. In addition to the bond, it places him under an obligation, with no reciprocal bond or obligation on the part of the exchange. The exhibitor must sign a contract to take a program or a certain number of releases for a certain length of time, and in addition must deposit a certain sum of money to make it binding on his part to take these releases, for which he must also pay weekly in advance.

From the standpoint of fairness it does look all one-sided. If the exhibitor is obliged to give a deposit, or put up a cash bond, why don't the exchanges give a bond to the exhibitor? Such a bond would not only guarantee the exhibitor his service—the right kind—but would also be a security to the exhibitor for the deposit which he places with the exchange. The exchanges say the exhibitor may not be responsible. In some instances he may not be, but it is the business of the exchange to have its credit man find this out. We have heard it said, quite as justly, that some of the exchanges are not responsible. We are frank to admit that we have always thought the exhibitors as a general rule are not good business men; they are apt to take too much for granted. On the other hand, exchangemen are generally good business men and take nothing for granted.

We make bold to say that a feeling of distrust pervades the motion picture industry and the business has not been conducted on the same business status as other industries not half as large and important. Some sort of credit system, some sort of financial report, like Dun's or Bradstreet's, could be established. In this way we could readily tell who is and who is not financially responsible in any branch of the industry. Some wise fool has said, "A man who is suspicious of everybody else is a suspicious character." It is time the industry should destroy, as far as possible, this atmosphere of suspicion that surrounds it.

As the deposit system now stands, it does seem that it is all in favor of the exchange. An exhibitor would not dare to presume that all exchanges are irresponsible. Then, we ask (as a point of information), why should the exchange presume that all exhibitors are irresponsible?

We have all heard that no other business under the sun is conducted on this presumption. Every business gives credit, when it is good, for thirty, sixty and ninety days. We cannot vouch for all exhibitors throughout the country, but we do know that the members of New York Exhibitors' State League do not ask credit. They are willing to pay for their service or programs weekly in advance, and furthermore, the league is ready to bond all its members with a reliable bonding company which will make good any non-payments on their contracts. In this way they can do away with tying up their money, for which they often have immediate need. We have very often heard it openly stated by exhibitors that the money they are placing on deposit is being used to capitalize producing companies interested in the exchanges, and without this capital they would go to pieces. No one can contradict this unless they know the inside workings of the exchanges, and there should be some way of refuting it, as George Kleine did in his recently published statement and suggestions on the deposit system.

About ten days ago we repeated Mr. Kleine's suggestions to one of the exhibitors' leagues in a nearby state, and one of the members flatly said he repudiated the deposit system in toto as a reflection upon his and other exhibitors' standing as reputable and responsible business men. This "slam" hurt us because we used it to refute the imputation of all the producers using the deposits as working capital. We publish our views and these statements for what they are worth—not to agitate but to elucidate a question that should be solved by some sort of credit system which will establish the responsibility of each and every component individual interest of the industry.

We Are Now In Society

By Sam Spedon.

THE strongest evidence of the popularity of moving pictures is the numerous educational, philanthropic and pro-bono-publico societies that have recently come into existence for their promotion. These societies are composed of some of the most socially prominent and influential people of this country.

Don't take it from us, take it from the New York World of Jan. 17th. Here are the facts:

> A national organization called the Photoplay League, with offices at No. 665 Fifth avenue, and a long list of prominent backers, has been formed to uplift the movies. Its purpose, according to the prospectus issued yesterday, is to make "an organized effort to create a demand for wholesome, attractive and instructive plays.
> "The present tendency toward sensational and otherwise undesirable photoplays," it continues, "is not only a matter of concern to those who believe in the possibilities of the motion picture as a means of public education, but may become a menace to the welfare of the community. The Advisory Board of the league will undertake the publication of lists of recommended plays and of subjects suited for the best productions."
> The League purposes to make itself "a great power in the improvement of public taste." It will encourage classical and educational pictures, will show instructive films at educational institutions, and will urge "the preservation of the films of permanent value in the public libraries."
> It will hold a meeting at 11 o'clock this morning at the Rialto theater to see "The Development and Psychology of the Photoplay" on the screen.

They all insist upon one essential, however, namely, that pictures must be clean, free from anything vitiating, unmoral—not shocking or sensational; unnecessary so at any rate.

What does it mean? It means that those who have been slow to recognize the value of moving pictures, those who have heretofore belittled them, have suddenly woke up to a realization that the people want them and must have them. They are part of their lives. Now they are anxious and willing to see that the people get them and get them right.

A few years ago the producers were bewailing that moving pictures were not attracting the attention of the cultured and better class, the appreciation which the pictures deserve. Their dreams have now come true and now we have got to make good.

How often have we heard the exhibitor lament the difficulty he had to get the better element of his neighborhood into his theater. He naturally felt that he was a public benefactor, a reputable, respectable business man and a power for good in his community. In some instances he was not, but no doubt he wanted to be. Now he must be.

The day of the vulgar rough-neck and the side-show exhibitor is a thing of the past.

The sooner we realize that the producer and the exhibitor of moving pictures are a power for good and uplift the sooner censorship will be a dead letter in the laws of the land.

We are on the threshold of a new era in filmdom. We have all been expecting it. The Educational and National pictures are now demanding the attention of the producers. To some extent they will in the future share the patronage of the public. This is all the more reason why our motion picture theaters will have to more carefully consider their programs and bring them up to the higher standard set for them. It is up to the producer to see that he gets them.

It looks as if the public is becoming educated to moving pictures and it looks as if there is a general movement on foot to see that they shall be educated up to the higher standard of moving pictures.

This does not mean they are going to be dry and liverless; it means they have got to be clean, with stories of some beneficial purpose or moral.

At Leading Picture Theaters

"Each to His Kind" at the Strand.

SESSUE HAYAKAWA, the famous Japanese actor, in "Each to His Kind," written by Paul West, and prepared for the screen by George Dubois Proctor, was the star at the Strand the week of Feb. 4. Mr. Hayakawa portrays an East Indian, the son of the Maharajah, who, through a girl's fickleness, is embittered against the English and vows to start a rebellion. He captures Dick Larrimer, an English officer to whom the English girl is engaged. The story is worked out with much dramatic strength. In the supporting cast are: Tsuri Aoki, Vola Vale, Ernest Joy, Eugene Pallette, Walter Long, Paul Weigel and others.

War pictures taken on the French front, a new comedy, interesting and instructive educational studies, and the Strand Topical Review complete the picture part of the program.

"Polly Redhead" at the Rialto.

"Polly Redhead," the Bluebird photoplay founded on one of the "Pollyooly" stories by Edgar Jepson, was the leading attraction at the Rialto. It introduced Ella Hall as a star in a dual role which called for some clever double exposure work. The story tells of a twelve year old girl who is exchanged for another who is her double, after the manner of "The Prince and the Pauper." Miss Hall plays both parts. It is the portrayal of this sort of characters which has given the star her reputation.

In "Easy Street," as he calls his latest whimsicality, Charlie Chaplin was seen as the pestered policeman who patrols a beat in a tough neighborhood. New war pictures and educational features were also shown.

Henry Miller and a sextette were on the musical program.

"Twenty Thousand Leagues" at the Broadway.

Eighty-First Street Theater Bill.

At the Eighty-first Street theater on Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday, Dorothy Dalton was seen in "Chicken Casey," and Claire Anderson in "A Male Governess." Thursday, Friday, Saturday and Sunday, Frank Keenan in "The Crab," and a Triangle Comedy, "The Road Agent," were the picture features.

DORIS KENYON IN DRAMATIC ART.

Doris Kenyon, who created such a favorable impression in the International's five-reel feature, "The Ocean Waif," in which she was starred with Carlyle Blackwell, has been engaged as co-star with Henry B. Walthall, in the Essanay's forthcoming production, "On Trial." Miss Kenyon's ability as a dramatic screen actress will be given full play in "On Trial." She is one of the most popular of the younger motion picture actresses, and her friends expect that her work in "On Trial" will prove their claim of her great dramatic power.

Uncle Sam Going After Film Business

Post Office Department Intends to Give Special Attention to Wants of Shippers.

THE First Assistant Postmaster General, J. C. Koons, has issued a circular letter, inviting attention to the instructions issued by the Post Office Department, admitting motion picture films for transmission in the mails. In his letter Mr. Koons states: "Postmasters are directed to give particular attention to the handling of motion picture films and should consult with exhibitors and exchange managers with a view to making arrangements for the prompt delivery, collection and dispatch of cases containing films."

It is the intention of the Post Office Department in a way to make a specialty of carrying films. Its intentions were outlined by the Superintendent of Mails of the Washington Post Office, W. H. Haycock, to the exchange managers of Washington at their last meeting. The managers were favorably impressed with what Mr. Haycock had to offer, he speaking for officials of the Post Office Department as well as of the local post office. Superintendents and postmasters in other sections of the country are now to do likewise. Where the business is large enough to warrant it the belief is that the department will detail a special wagon or automobile to picking up and delivering films to the exchanges. In addition, where requested, a schedule of train movements to such points as the exchange managers ship films will be provided.

Mr. Haycock pointed out that it would enable the exchange managers to effect quite a little saving if they would patronize the mails for the transmission of films in the first and second zones. In the third zone the rates would be about the same as those of the express companies. There are more trains carrying United States mails than there are trains carrying express matter and it is pointed out that this is another advantage for the motion picture interests. In any event the department realizes that the film business will prove a very remunerative one for the mail service if it can be secured.

Louise Du Pre

THE happy combination of youth, beauty and extensive experience is always pleasant to behold and in picture work amounts almost to success insurance. Louise Du Pre, the little leading woman in the Plimpton Epic feature, "Old Ways and New," is the fortunate possessor of these attributes.

Louise Du Pre.

Miss Du Pre is a southern girl with a convent education and a dramatic training that has occupied nearly half of her twenty-one years of life and includes the leading parts in such well-known stage successes as "Bought and Paid For," "The Wolf" and "Hanky Panky."

To quote Horace Plimpton's opinion, "she has a screen personality that is decidedly original both as to type and style and it is the matter of distinctiveness of type that has won the present popularity of the great stars of the picture play, and in Louise Du Pre I believe I have featured an accomplished little actress that will very shortly take her place among the popular stars of the screen."

Miss Du Pre has come to the screen with the stage title of "The Ingenue Vampire," but being of the diminutive demure type physically and mentally abhorring anything that is not pleasing she has determined to bend all her efforts to appear on the screen only in parts that call for emotional work without the element of questionable motives.

Legislative Committee Still Nosing Around

Hunt for Information Brings Another Batch of Picture Men Before the Committee—Submits List of Questions to be Answered

FURTHER testimony that the motion picture industry is not a fit subject for taxation was given last week before the committee appointed by the New York State Legislature, when the committee resumed its hearings in the Murray Hill Hotel, New York City. The committee is composed of members of the State Senate and Assembly. Senator Hinman is counsel for the committee. The motion picture industry is represented legally by William L. Seabury.

Testimony was given last week by Marcus Loew, W. W. Hodkinson, Theodore Wharton, William Wright, Samuel L. Rothapfel, Richard A. Royland, Mitchel Mark and Abraham Finch.

During the week the committee had mailed to sixty-nine concerns a "quiz sheet" on which were forty-six questions. The response to the committee's request that these questions be answered was very poor, only three of them having been returned up until last Friday. Senator Hinman remarked that perhaps different measures might have to be used to obtain information.

The first witness called on Wednesday was Theodore Wharton, president of Wharton, Inc., which corporation produced for the International Film Service the serials "The Mysteries of Myra," "Beatrice Fairfax" and "Patria." The Whartons had received one of the "quiz sheets" and had returned it to the committee. Mr. Wharton testified that the net profits of Wharton, Inc., for the year ended December 31, 1916, had been $45,229. In answer to Mr. Seabury's questions, the witness said that the profits earned by Wharton Inc. had been earned because the Whartons were contracting producers.

"Do you know if the International Film Service's business was successful last year?" he was asked.

"I don't know, but I believe their business was not successful last year," he answered.

"Well, you know that International is now releasing through Pathe, don't you; and that that in effect eliminated the International from the field as an independent?" Mr. Seabury asked.

Questioned regarding his belief as to financial conditions prevalent in the motion picture industry, the witness said: "I believe the industry is financially weaker today than it has been for some time; but it is in no danger."

Mr. Wharton told the probers that besides the three serials his corporation had produced for International they had also produced a feature picture with the title "The Black Stork." He said that that had been produced for a group of Chicago men.

Explaining his contract with International and the basis on which costs were figured, the witness declared that in approximating in advance the cost of production a leeway of fifty per cent. profit was allowed. This was to cover unforeseen contingencies that always arise in the production of pictures. He cited an instance where a whole town had to be rebuilt and where more than 500 "extras" had to be rehired for some scenes because the film exposed on the destruction of the town the first time had been defective.

William Wright, manager of the Kalem Company, was next called. The Kalem company had also answered the 46 questions sent out by the committee, and Mr. Wright testified as to the authenticity of the answers. During the course of his testimony the witness said: "Motion pictures to be great must be home entertainment. There have been some pictures produced that are not home entertainment, but we are praying for their elimination."

Asked as to present conditions, Mr. Wright gave it as his opinion that conditions in the motion picture industry are at present deplorable. "The business is extremely unprofitable at the present time," he said. "It is suffering from overproduction and overmarketing. It is suffering, too, because men with only a smattering of knowledge of the business entered it. They would interest capital, companies would be floated, and they would start to make pictures. In order to immediately begin production these newcomers would take the older companies' employes away. Frequently these new productions were mediocre and even worse, and they found no ready market. Then they cut prices on the pictures. As a consequence the old-line manufacturers who were paying their expenses out of their earnings lost money."

Mr. Seabury asked Mr. Wright if Kalem pictures had not been profitable up until about one and one-half years ago.

"They were profitable up until about a year and a half ago," said the witness, "but since then competition has been too keen for anyone to make money."

Mr. Wright stated that the Kalem company had lost upwards of $100,000 on "The Social Pirates" series.

"Do you believe that the motion picture industry is a fit subject for state taxation at the present time?" Mr. Seabury asked.

"Absolutely not! To tax the motion picture industry would be to tax a losing proposition—losing on every end, producing, distributing, exhibiting. This can be proved by any one interested."

"Yes," was the reply.

Further questions by Mr. Seabury elicited answers from Mr. Wright to the effect that Kalem had declared only one dividend in the past year and a half. "And that," the witness added, "was over my protest."

The morning session closed with testimony by Samuel L. Rothapfel, managing director of the Rialto Theater, New York. He told the committee at great length of his career in the motion picture business, which began several years ago when he changed the unsavory dance hall that was connected with a saloon in a small Pennsylvania town from a place of ill repute into a respectable motion picture house.

Mr. Rothapfel stated that the Rialto Theater Corporation had already declared a dividend of seven per cent. on the preferred stock. No dividend on the common stock has as yet been declared, he said. He also stated that the Rialto Theater was at present in a very flourishing condition, and was probably the most successful motion picture theater in the country.

The Rialto's managing director had no hesitancy in telling the committee anything they wished to know upon which he could enlighten them. He freely told them, when asked, that he was receiving a salary of $10,000 a year, in addition to a certain percentage of the Rialto's profits.

Statements by Mr. Rothapfel that any exhibitor could make money if the right principles were applied to his theater were later qualified, through Mr. Seabury's questioning, with the condition that any exhibitor could make his house pay if he had the capital to invest in improvements.

"But few exhibitors have any capital; is that not so?" queried Mr. Seabury.

"That is true," the witness replied.

The entire afternoon session was taken up by Senator Hinman's examination of Richard A. Rowland, president of the Metro Pictures Corporation. Mr. Rowland's examination was confined to questions that brought out in great detail information as to Metro's exchange system. Most of the questions had to do with capitalizations and incorporations. Mr. Rowland also told the committee of his exhibiting interests in Pennsylvania.

W. W. Hodkinson, president of the Triangle Distributing Corporation, and former president of the Paramount Pictures Corporation, was called as a witness on Thursday. He was questioned at great length regarding the financial affairs of Paramount. In answer to Senator Hinman's questions, he stated that $100,000 cash was put into Paramount at the time of its incorporation. Later, he said, the authorized capital was increased to $5,000,000, of which amount $3,500,000 in common stock was issued.

The witness testified that Paramount took over fifty-one per cent. of the stock of each of the five subsidiary exchange corporations, and gave each corporation in exchange for its stock $700,000 worth of Paramount stock. This was on the basis of fourteen shares of Paramount stock to one share of the exchange corporation's stock.

On September 16, 1915, Mr. Hodkinson testified, Paramount made a note issue of $500,000. The cash acquired was advanced to the producing corporations, he said. This took place, according to Mr. Hodkinson's testimony, at about the time he resigned as Paramount's president.

Mr. Hodkinson was followed on the stand by Abraham Finch, assistant treasurer of the Astra Film Corporation. He told the committee in detail of the affairs of the Astra Corporation.

Marcus Loew, who operates and controls a large chain of theaters, and who is one of the biggest exhibitors in the country, appeared before the committee on Friday. He told the legislators that the only producing company he was interested in was the Comique Film Company (Roscoe Arbuckle's company). He said that he was only a small stockholder in that concern. He stated that he was interested in about eighty theaters throughout the United States.

Mr. Loew testified that the margin of profits of exhibiting motion pictures had been steadily narrowing during the past few years. He said that this was due to enormous increases in operating costs. "The people have been educated up to a higher quality of pictures all the time," he said, "and now they demand the best. The better quality of entertainment naturally costs more. Where I used to pay $150 for entertainment a few years ago, I now must pay $3,000."

The witness gave as an example of the narrowing of the margin of profit the Seventh Avenue Theater, New York. He said that seven years ago that theater cleared $100,000 net in a year. Now, he stated, the theater, although doing the same business in point of attendance as it did seven years ago, was netting only about $6,000 a year. Keen competition also made profits less, he declared.

Mr. Loew told the commitee that since he had been in the business the smaller theaters were constantly being crowded out by larger houses. Not even one of the small theaters he had been interested in, he said, was left.

The witness gave it as his opinion that producers were not making any money at present. He said that there were big profits in the producing end several years ago. He said he believed motion pictures were of a higher character and quality today than they have ever before been.

The trend of the questioning turned toward off-color pictures. Mr. Loew said that the exhibitor who runs an off-color picture is killing his own game. "That type of nictures might get you a few extra nickels once," he said, "but in the long run they do not pay. I would not permit any of my theaters to show a picture that wasn't fit for the entire family to see. It doesn't pay."

"Do you believe censorship is necessary?" Mr. Seabury asked.

"I do not," asnwered Mr. Loew. "Every exhibitor should be his own censor. More and more exhibitors are learning that clean entertainment pays best, and as a consequence there are few, if any, off-color pictures being produced."

"Generally speaking," said Mr. Seabury, "how are financial conditions with the exhibitors of New York State?"

Mr. Loew remarked that it might appear egotistical on his part to answer that question because he himself is making money. But he finally told the investigators that financial conditions were, in his opinion, very bad throughout the State.

"Would you say the majority of exhibitors were conducting a profitable or unprofitable business?"

"Unprofitable. All exhibitors seem to be bidding against each other for pictures, and the prices are almost prohibitive and ruinous as a consequence."

Questions by Mr. Seabury brought testimony that exhibitors were going out of business every day. "The number of exhibitors going out of business at the present time," said Mr. Loew, "is proportionately greater than the number of failures in any other business."

"But wouldn't the right kind of a man succeed? Doesn't failure or success depend on the man?" Senator Hinman asked.

"I wouldn't care to say that?" answered Mr. Loew. "There are any number of factors to be taken into consideration. Almost every exhibitor used to make money, but not now."

"But in those days," interjected Mr. Seabury, "they weren't worried with censorship, licenses, fire laws, and all other manner of things, were they?"

Before the witness had a chance to answer Senator Hinman broke in with questions regarding Mr. Loew's experience in the fur business.

"Before you entered this business—when you were in the fur business—didn't changes in style and other like matters act upon the fur business much as do the things that Mr. Seabury has mentioned act on the motion picture business?" the Senator asked.

Mr. Loew said that changes in style was his reason for quitting the fur business.

Mitchel H. Mark, who operates the Strand theater, New York, followed Mr. Loew on the stand. He told the committee of his holdings and interests, stating that he was interested in several theaters. As an indication of the growth of the business, Mr. Mark cited Buffalo, N. Y., where he has theater interests. He said that Buffalo had fifteen theaters six years ago and that there were now ninety-three motion picture houses in that city.

Mr. Mark said that he believed eighty-five per cent. of the producers were not making money. "They have valuable negatives on the shelf that they cannot get a just return for," he said. "I believe they would make good profits if they could invade the foreign markets, but at present the foreign markets are practically closed to American manufacturers."

Mr. Mark, like Mr. Loew, was very willing to answer any questions. He told the legislators that the expenses of Strand theater were $10,000 a week.

Mr. Mark's testimony concluded the morning session. A witness who had promised to testify in the afternoon did not appear, and the hearing was adjourned until Wednesday, February 7.

Questions the Committee Want Answered.

The committee has formulated forty-six questions which it wants the manufacturers to answer. Sixty-nine copies were submitted to as many different concerns, but up to Friday replies had been received from but three. Here are the questions:

1. Corporate name of company.
2. Date when and name of state in which incorporated.
3. Location of principal and branch offices, giving city, street and number.
4. If a foreign corporation, give location of each office and place of business of the company in the State of New York, the kind or class of business conducted by the corporation in this state, and the name of the person in charge of each such office, with his official title.
5. Amount of the company's original authorized capital stock, and dates and amounts actually issued.
6. Has capital stock been increased? If so give date and amount of each increase authorized, and of increased capital issued.
7. Classification or description of stock.
8. The par value of each share.
9. Name and post office address of each stockholder, giving number of shares of stock owned by each, as appeared on the books of the company on January 1, 1917.
10. Names and addresses of officers and directors of the company.
11. Statement of amounts paid each year to each officer, director and general manager of the corporation since the date of its incorporation in the way of salary, compensation for services or otherwise.
12. A statement of the amounts which the company has paid each year to each director having charge of the production or distribution of its pictures.
13. An itemized statement of all royalties and commissions paid by the company to any of its stockholders, officers or employees during each year since its incorporation, the name of the persons to whom paid, and purposes for which paid.
14. General description of real estate owned or leased by corporation in this state and where located.
15. General description of real estate owned or leased by a corporation outside of the State of New York, with location thereof.
16. Total amount of cash actually invested by company in tangible property, with general description of such property and its location.
17. Total amount of cash actually paid to and received by the company for capital stock issued.
18. If capital steck issued in whole or in part for property or labor, give general description of such property and the amount for which it was turned into the company.
19. Total indebtedness of the company in notes or bonds, with statement of date when, purposes for which, and names of persons or corporations to whom issued, together with rate of interest, and how secured.
20. Does any officer, corporate director, manager, director of production, or other employee of the company have any contract or arrangement with the corporation by which he has received or is to receive any royalties, commissions, compensation, benefit, emolument, or thing of value, other than his fixed salary? If so, give names of such persons and statement as to the amounts so paid and for what.
21. Total amount of dividends declared or paid by the company since its incorporation, with dates of payment, and whether such dividends have been in cash or otherwise.
22. Itemized statement of royalties, commissions, or other form of compensation which the company has received or is receiving from any story, scenario, play or picture owned by it or in which it has any interest, and which has been or is being produced or distributed by or through any other corporation or concern.
23. Statement of the number of exchanges, including branches, operated by or through which your corporation distributes its pictures in this state, giving name and location of each, and whether owned or controlled in whole or in part by your company through stock ownership or otherwise.
24. Statement of the name, location and seating capacity of each theater in this state served in whole or in part by pictures manufactured or distributed by your company or its subsidiary or allied companies and concerns.
25. Of such theaters, state which ones are exclusively motion picture theaters.
26. Total number of exchanges and branches located in the United States and Canada operated by or through which your company distributes its pictures, with location and names of such exchanges. Do such exchanges handle pictures of producers other than your company?
27. Has your company any foreign trade or business? If so, give description of such business and where located and how conducted.
28. Statement of average number of prints made of each picture produced or distributed by your company.

29. Statement of the average number of prints of each picture which are distributed in this state by your company.

30. The average length of time between the release of any given picture and the date when it has completed the circuit of the zone in which it is operating, and has become "dead."

31. Total number of pictures produced by your company each year since its incorporation, with the number of reels in each picture and number released each year.

32. Average length of the print of the pictures so produced by your company.

33. Average cost per foot of the negative of each picture produced by your company up to and including the making of the negative, and not including special feature pictures nor cost of advertising.

34. Cost of advertising paid by your company each year in connection with the marketing and distribution of pictures, during the last three years.

35. Average cost per foot of the raw film used in the production of your pictures, stating where and from whom the same is purchased.

36. Average cost per foot to your company of printing each print.

37. The total amount in feet of raw film purchased by your company each year during the past three years, with name of the corporation or concern from which purchased.

38. Name and location of each studio or place where the corporation's pictures are produced.

39. Has your company purchased pictures from or distributed them for any other concerns? If so, name such other concerns and state generally the kind and the extent of such business and on what basis it is done.

40. Do you distribute your pictures through any exchanges or concerns except those owned or controlled in whole or in part by your company? If so, state through what exchanges it is done and on what terms.

41. Does your company produce pictures for any other companies or concerns? If so, what ones and on what terms?

42. Does your company have any interest, direct or indirect, in the way of stock ownership or otherwise in any other corporations or concerns engaged in any of the so-called "branches" of the moving picture industry? If so, name all such corporations and concerns, giving the kind and location of the business conducted and the kind and extent of your interest therein.

43. Give itemized statement of all taxes of every kind paid by your corporation or the corporations or concerns in which your corporation is interested, during each of the past three years, to the Federal Government, to the State of New York, and to each municipality in the State of New York, giving the date and amount of each such payment, to whom and for what purpose paid.

44. Give the total number of reels released each week in 1916 in this state by your company.

45. What is the general practice of your company or the subsidiary corporations or concerns through which it distributes its pictures in requiring the exhibitors to make deposits, and the amount of deposits which it requires as security for the payment of accounts and return of reels, or otherwise.

46. State generally whether the distribution of pictures released by your company is on a cash basis. If not, what are the average terms of credit?

Ohio Censors Pass "Birth of a Nation"

Report from Cleveland Says That Griffith's Famous Picture Has Been Approved.

According to the advice of the Moving Picture World's Cleveland correspondent, the Ohio Board of Censors has finally put its official seal of approval on David W. Griffith's famous production, "The Birth of a Nation," which has been barred from exhibiting in that state for nearly two years. This action will permit the people of Ohio to see and to judge for themselves how ridiculous is the institution "Censorship."

"The Birth of a Nation" was first presented to the board of censors in Ohio in the fall of 1915, at which time it was rejected. An appeal was taken to the state courts, which claimed they had no jurisdiction at the time because the question of the constitutionality was in the Federal courts. The matter was then taken to the Federal Court and again the "buck was passed" back to the state court, where it has hung fire ever since.

It is believed that politics was at the bottom of the barring of "The Birth of a Nation" from Ohio. A certain former high officer of that state is said to have promised certain of his constituency that he would keep the picture out. With the return of Governor Cox to office efforts to have the ban removed were at once instituted with the result above reported.

It should be made a matter of record that Maude Murray Miller, a member of the Ohio Board, voted at all times to admit "The Birth of a Nation" to Ohio theaters.

DANISH NOBLEMAN IN CAST OF "THE GREAT SECRET."

Baron Carl von Winther, a member of the Danish nobility, who plays the East Indian in Metro's serial, "The Great Secret," starring Francis X. Bushman and Beverly Bayne, is a director who has taken up acting to get the motion picture actor's point of view, having studied the profession from every other angle. The Baron is an expert cameraman, and is familiar with every detail of laboratory work in connection with preparing a picture for the screen. For the speaking stage he studied at the Royal School of Acting in Copenhagen, Denmark, taking it up, as he says, "just for fun."

Buffalo's Second Annual Ball a Success

Under Auspices of Local Screen Club Four Thousand Persons Gather to Dance and Greet Players.

The second annual Buffalo Screen Club ball, held the evening of January 29, was without question one of the most successful social events ever held in Elmwood Music hall. Over 4,000 moving picture fans gathered from the surrounding country to welcome the club's guests for the evening, Francis X. Bushman, Beverly Bayne and Muriel Ostriche.

The hall was transformed into a Persian Garden, such as one has seen in "Omar the Tent Maker" or "The Garden of Allah." Rich colors of the Orient predominated. Boxes hung with silks and carpeted with rugs surrounded three sides of the hall. The ceiling was covered with a bunting in sky blue, while thousands of vari-colored incandescent bulbs represented the stars. On the edge of the dancing space, bordering the promenade, were large Oriental vases filled with flowers, joined with strands of electric lights.

Over the stage was the club emblem in a setting of colored bulbs. On each side of the stage were stationed the music stands, one of which was occupied by the Seventy-fourth Regiment band and the other by an orchestra of forty men, under Joseph A. Ball, director of music at Shea's theater.

In this setting the Buffalo Screen club greeted its many friends and guests. The ball was opened at 9.30 o'clock with a promenade concert by the band. At 10 o'clock President and Mrs. G. A. Christoffers, to the tune of a peppery one-step, pirouetted out upon the dance floor and the ball was on. At 11 o'clock the event of the evening claimed the attention of all. This was the entrance of Francis X. Bushman, Beverly Bayne and Muriel Ostriche and the signal for a great outburst of applause.

From the stage Mr. Bushman talked of the progress and achievements of the silent drama, and inveighed against censorship.

"The people are the only censors to whom there should be any deference," he said. "No little handful of men and women in any state or community knows what the people want. The people are demanding higher standards all the time. Their judgment is to be trusted. No picture play that is unfit or harmful will last. I advise you to boost clean pictures and stay away from theaters showing questionable subjects."

Mr. Bushman introduced Miss Bayne, who spoke briefly, as did Miss Ostriche. The players then joined with the Screen Club in the grand march, following which the players retired to their respective boxes and immediately became the center of a throng.

On the afternoon of the ball, Charles A. Taylor, local manager of the Metro, took Mr. Bushman and Miss Bayne to Rochester, where they appeared at the Piccadilly theater and were accorded an enthusiastic reception.

All the local theater managers had boxes at the ball, as did the various film exchanges. The publicity committee flooded the town with posters, cards, billboards and other material for weeks preceding the ball, while the local newspapers were very liberal with space for the event, devoting many columns every week.

The committees which deserve credit for putting the ball over were:

Entertainment—G. H. Christoffers, chairman; Ira Mosher, J. M. Sitterly, C. A. Taylor, W. A. Mack, Frank Leonard, B. Brady, M. Cohen, B. J. Brandon and W. Penn.

Music—Pete Hofmeister, Harry Marsey and M. Whitman.

Tickets—C. A. Taylor, chairman; Daniel J. Savage, James R. Morgan, B. J. Brandon, J. M. Sitterly, B. Siegel, P. Hofmeister and H. F. Brink.

Reception—G. H. Christoffers, chairman; Frank S. Hopkins, G. H. Christoffers, J. M. Sitterly, W. A. Mack, Ira M. Mosher, C. A. Taylor, Arthur C. Willats, Charles B. Taylor, Frank Leonard, Al Becker and Daniel J. Savage.

Refreshments, Board of Governors and President Christoffers.

Decoration of hall, construction of boxes and checking—Harry Marsey, P. Hofmeister, Frank S. Hopkins and Al. Becker.

LAPPEN TO BOOST PARAMOUNT SALES.

There has recently been added to the sales force of the William L. Sherry Feature Film Company, distributors of Paramount Pictures in New York, Frank A. Lappen, who hails from the New York office of the Metro Company. Mr. Lappen will act as special representative throughout the state, conducting a selling campaign on single reels. This single reel business has grown to such an extent Mr. Sherry came to the decision a special man was necessary to handle this department of the business.

The Motion Picture Exhibitor

WRITE US EARLY AND OFTEN

THE MOVING PICTURE WORLD carries the most complete record of Exhibitors' News. This department aims at being the fullest and fairest chronicle of all the important doings in the ranks of organized exhibitors. To keep the department as complete and as useful as it is now we request the secretaries of all organizations to favor us with reports of all the news. Coming events in the ranks of the organized exhibitors are best advertised in this department of the Moving Picture World.

EXHIBITORS' LEAGUE ORGANIZER.

In answer to recent inquiries in regard to the Exhibitors' League Organizations and for the information of exhibitors in any of the States, readers will kindly note that Fred J. Herrington is National Organizer for the Motion Picture Exhibitors' League of America. All correspondence on the subject may be addressed to him at 402 Knox avenue, Pittsburgh, Pa.

Trigger Not a Candidate

Says National League Should Have Big Man at Its Head—Is Satisfied to Be a Worker in the Ranks.

THIS is the season for the irresponsible boosters to propose candidates for president of the National League and they are already on the job. It was quite natural that Sam Trigger should be mentioned for that office, since he is the one live wire in these parts and is familiar with the politics of the national organization. But Sam does not want the job, so he says, and he is very definite in describing the kind of man he thinks should be selected. Here is his letter on the subject:

New York, January 30th, 1917.

Editor The Moving Picture World, New York City.

Dear Sir: Noticed in the Motion Picture News' issue of February 10th, a statement to the effect that I was out for the presidency of the National League.

Will you please deny such statement? In my opinion the president chosen at our next convention should be an exhibitor from the West, a man thoroughly acquainted with all the branches of the industry and one with organization ability and force to sustain, strengthen and demand the confidence of the League, a man balanced well, and truly square, to whom difficulties and obstacles are simply things to be surmounted. Such a man could get every big man in the business to support the League with their money and influence.

There are scores of such exhibitors. Am frank to admit that I am lacking in a number of the above qualifications. So, will you kindly tell those doing the boosting, to FORGET IT, as I would much prefer to remain a WORKER IN THE RANKS, and reiterate that under no circumstances will I become a candidate for League presidency.

Thanking you for past courtesies, I am, very sincerely yours,

SAM H. TRIGGER.

Secretary Varner in Legislative Fight

North Carolina Exhibitor Says Picture Men in His State Are Being Hit Too Hard.

H. B. VARNER, secretary of the Motion Picture Exhibitors' League of North Carolina, who has been in Washington on matters connected with the fight of newspaper and magazine publishers throughout the country with the manufacturers of news print paper, received a hurry call last week from President Percy W. Wells to join him and Attorney A. F. Sams in Raleigh, N. C., to appear before the joint finance committee of the General Assembly of North Carolina to aid in the protest being made by these officials on behalf of the exhibitors of that State against the existing taxes levied on theaters.

Mr. Varner, while visiting the Washington office of The Moving Picture World, outlined the injustice heaped upon the Tar Heel exhibitors by the Federal, State, County and City governments in the way of severe taxes.

"It seems as though we are paying out all of our earnings in taxes," said Secretary Varner. "We no sooner dispose of our obligations to the Federal Government, which imposes upon us an emergency revenue tax, based on the seating capacity of our theaters, as well as the corporation and individual income taxes assessed by the same law, when we have to start thinking about other assessments. Take the city of Raleigh, for instance. The fellows who operate motion picture theaters in that place have to pay $450, one-third of which goes to the State, one-third to the county, and the other one-third to the city. That is too much under existing conditions and we want the General Assembly to cut that down to a single one-third. In other words, we think $150 per annum is just about all of the taxes of that nature we ought to be called upon to assume, and Percy Wells, Mr. Sam and myself are going to see what can be done in the matter."

Mr. Varner is very active in the work in North Carolina and is in close touch with the folks capable of lifting a part of this burden if they will. He thinks the committee will be able to convince the law-makers of the justness of their contentions and that some sort of a reduction will be forthcoming.

Philadelphia Exhibitors Will Entertain

Have Planned Banquet and Ball for February 15—Expect Large Attendance.

THE Exhibitors' League of Philadelphia has completed plans for a banquet, entertainment and dansant which will be held on Thursday evening, February 15th, at the Hotel Bingham Roof Garden. Although this is the first affair of its kind to be given by the league, it has already secured the hearty co-operation of the various branches of the film industry in Philadelphia.

Ninety exhibitors at present compose the membership of the League, with a prospect of about fifty others from up state.

All of the exchangemen here have already pledged their support to the forthcoming entertainment in a substantial manner. President Lee Ochs of the National Exhibitors' League is reported to have vouched for the appearance of several noted screen stars who will be given a royal welcome. Charles H. Goodwin, the secretary, has sent invitations to several prominent public officials, most of whom are expected to be present. Among the number are Mayor Thomas B. Smith, Director of Public Safety W. H. Wilson, Chief Fire Marshal Joseph S. McLaughlin, E. J. Cattell, city statistician; Edwin Clark, George W. Elliot and James Robinson. In addition a large number of the public is expected to be in attendance.

The program has been carefully arranged so that everyone who attends shall find some form of diversion suitable to their individual taste. A combination ticket will entitle subscribers to the privileges of banquet, entertainment and dance. For those who wish to attend the entertainment and dance only a fifty-cent ticket will be required.

The banquet will start promptly at 7 P. M., after which the entertainment will follow at 8.30 and continue until A. M. Tickets are on sale at the local theaters and at the Bingham Hotel.

The entertainment committee comprises the following members: Sam Blatt, John O'Connell, Ben Shinder, J. Conway and B. Amsterdam.

St. Louis Exhibitors in a New Home

Take Lower Floor of Hotel Beers—Said to Be Well Suited for Purpose.

THE regular weekly meeting of the St. Louis Theater Managers and Motion Picture Exhibitors' Association was held in the Association's new headquarters for the first time on Friday, January 26. The new home of the organization is on the rathskeller floor of the Hotel Beers, at Grand avenue and Olive street.

A better location for the purpose could not have been found. The Hotel Beers is just across the street from the General, World Film, Metro, V. L. S. E., Unicorn and Fox exchanges, and within walking distance of half a dozen more, and the intersection of the Grand and Olive street car lines makes the place easy of reach from any point in the city.

The association is in possession of the entire lower floor of the building; an excellent restaurant with good meals for thirty cents, is maintained, and those with parched throats can find plenty of liquid refreshment at the buffet. The assembly room has liberal space, and in the event of an especially large gathering, or for banquets, the dining hall of the hotel is available. The association has taken a year's lease on the place.

Al Wittmann, of the McKinley Theater, says the Association would not refuse anything in the way of pictures and photographs of stars to decorate the assembly room, and furthermore, that the first pictures to arrive will be given the most conspicuous places on the walls.

California Exhibitors Hold Mass Meeting

Progress Reported on Organization of State Association—Many Applications Received.

A MASS meeting of the exhibitors of California was held on the morning of Jan. 25th in Photoplayer Hall, San Francisco, under the auspices of the recently organized Motion Picture Exhibitors' Association of California. The gathering, which was a very representative one, and which filled the hall, was called to order by Chairman H. L. Beach, who outlined what had been done at the meeting of the previous week at Oakland, where the Association had been formed. He told briefly of the manner in which the Alameda County local had kept its organization intact during recent years, part of the time without a state organization and without the co-operation of other locals, together with the many accomplishments of that league. He called attention to the fact that the work of organizing the new association had been completed already, and that the present meeting was for increasing its membership and completing the selection of a board of directors.

H. C. Schmidt, of Palo Alto, was the first to offer to join the state organization, and his application was followed by so many that the chair appointed J. Hellman to assist the secretary in caring for those wishing to affiliate. W. S. Webster, of Woodland, told of having been at Sacramento recently, where the State Legislature is in session, and stated that it was common talk there that active preparations were being made for the passage, if possible, of a state censorship bill. President H. L. Beach then read extracts from a Berkeley publication showing that the Rotary Club was active in this work and was organizing women's clubs to assist it.

Upon motion of Mr. McCullough a committee of three was appointed by the chair to visit the large theater owners of San Francisco and enlist their support, this consisting of Louis Greenfield, of the Kahn & Greenfield Circuit; C. L. Langley, of the Turner & Dahnken Circuit, and I. Oppenheimer, of the Royal Theater. It was decided to hold another meeting at the same place on February 8th to perfect the organization and in the meantime applications by mail will be received at the rooms of the American Photoplayer Company.

Maryland League Holds Special Meeting

The Board of Directors of the Maryland Exhibitors' League was called together at a special session by President Frank A. Hoernig on Tuesday, January 30, at the New Theater, 210 West Lexington street, and among other things, a committee of three was appointed to investigate and report upon the advisability of holding a ball for the exhibitors of Baltimore and Maryland in the near future in order to bring those who are now not affiliated with the body in closer contact with the members. After this committee has reached a decision, a report will be made to the President and then the action to be taken will be decided upon. Another meeting was also called for Tuesday, February 6th.

DELAWARE EXHIBITORS ENTERTAINED AT LUNCHEON.

Following out the general Paramount policy of promoting good relations with its exhibitors, the Famous Players' Exchange of Washington held its third exhibitors' luncheon at the Hotel Dupont, Wilmington, Del., on Monday, January 29.

An interesting feature of the occasion was the presence of W. H. Tunis, general traffic agent of the Adams Express Company for that territory. Mr. Tunis presented the company's side of the film handling question, and pointed out ways in which co-operation on both sides would aid in eliminating present difficulties.

The exhibitors present were D. Lee Short, William H. Warren, J. M. Ginns, T. M. Breeding, H. A. Newman, C. C. Hubert, H. P. Fennimore, L. S. Armour, C. C. Marshall and A. L. Heis. Representing the exchange were Messrs. W. W. Hines, G. M. Mann, E. R. Carr and H. P. Mulford.

Censorship Fight in West Virginia

M. E. Morgan Reports Some Progress in His Almost Single-Handed Contest Against Two Pernicious Bills—Getting Little Support.

EXHIBITORS of West Virginia are quite asleep, it would seem, to he danger that threatens them in the form of censorship. In a previous issue of this publication mention was made of the censorship bills that had been introduced in the Legislature at Charleston, it being pointed out at that time how great was the burden proposed to pile on the back of an industry already overladen with legal restrictions and various forms of taxation, but very little has been done to prevent the bills from becoming law.

The Moving Picture World is in receipt of a letter from M. E. Morgan of Fairmount, W. Va., which would indicate an unreasonable and almost suicidal attitude on the part of the exhibitors of that state which should speedily be remedied. This is what Mr. Morgan says:

Charleston, W. Va., Jan. 23, 1917.

Editor Moving Picture World, New York City.

Dear Sir: Relative to the censorship bills for motion pictures concerning which I wrote you some time ago, beg to advise you as follows: There are now two bills pending before the West Virginia Legislature providing for censorship, one of them being the bill of which I sent you a copy some time ago. The other is a bill introduced under the auspices of the Board of Regents (the board which has control of all educational institutions of the state), this bill being referred to the Committee of Education. A hearing for this bill was set for yesterday before the committee, but being somewhat doubtful of being able to defeat it before the committee, and knowing that even if it were defeated before this committee the result would simply be a fight before the Judiciary Committee, to which the other bill was referred, I succeeded in having the educational bill transferred to the Judiciary Committee, thus giving us only one committee to fight.

Ultimately, I feel, that these bills will be defeated. However, the fight is most discouraging, because of the fact that neither exhibitor, manufacturer nor exchange is giving any encouragement whatsoever. I am making the fight absolutely alone, with the help of a few Charleston exhibitors who are on the ground. So far neither exhibitors, manufacturers nor exchanges have done anything worth while to assist in bearing the financial burden.

About the time I wrote you regarding the West Virginia censorship bill, I wrote 175 exhibitors of West Virginia, asking that they take up the matter with their representatives in the Legislature, that they circulate petitions against the bill (which petitions I had printed and forwarded to them), and requesting a contribution of about $5 from each to assist in the fight. From the letters sent out, I received two replies, one enclosing $5, the other $3 as a financial contribution. The exhibitors in the vicinity of Fairmont, with whom I personally came in contact, responded to the request for financial help, but the small amount they were asked for has already been spent in sending out letters, etv.

Of the exchanges written to, two gave me any encouragement whatsoever. That you may see the attitude of teh exchanges, I am enclosing you a letter from the exchange of Pittsburgh, which will give you an insight into the genral feeling among the exchanges. Exhibitors of the state who have personally written to the exchanges with whom they have been doing business for years, have either not been accorded an answer, or have received replies similar to that enclosed. The result has been that these exhibitors have refused to take any part in an active fight, stating that at the present time they are paying every dollar in rentals to the exchanges that they can afford to pay, and that it will be absolutely impossible for the exchanges to shift the burden of censorship on them; that it is the exchange rather than the exhibitor in this state that should be making the fight.

From the manufacturers I have received only the statement that the matter of censorship in West Virginia was being considered, and something would ultimately be done about the matter. The Legislature of this state will adjourn on February 23, and if any censorship bill is passed, it will be before that time. For that reason, any action against the bill must be taken quickly. I would very much appreciate the favor if the Moving Picture World could call the attention of the Moving Picture Manufacturers' Association (or whatever name the associated manufacturers use) to this matter. If no help is to be expected from that source, it would be a great help to me to know that fact as early as possible. There are a multitude of expenses that could be legitimately incurred, and would be worth while, if there was any prospect whatsoever of being reimbursed for them. Personally I do not feel in a position to give my time to this fight, and bear the financial burden also, and consequently I am letting several things go that should be done, because no funds are in prospect to cover the expenditures.

Permit me to thank you for the press sheet and pamphlet covering the matter of censorship which you so kindly sent me to Fairmont some time since. I have had occasion to make use of both.

Very truly yours,
M. E. MORGAN, care Hotel Jefferson.

EXHIBITORS TO HOLD BALL FOR CHARITY.

The Motion Picture Exhibitors' League, Local No. 1, of Manhattan, will give a ball at Terrace Garden on Friday, February 16. It will be given to establish a fund for charitable purposes. Very often the league is called upon to contribute to charities of different kinds, hospitals, institutions for the blind, etc. The money made at this ball will be used as a nucleus to meet such demands. The league is promised the patronage of some of the most prominent people of the city and they will contribute liberally.

Every exhibitor in the city is expected to do his part, selling tickets and whatever he can to show an appreciation of the public support and patronage given his theater. This will give him an opportunity to help his fellow-men in a really charitable cause.

Samuel H. Trigger, president of the local, and his fellow leaguers have taken the initiative. They hope to make each one's contributive share of effort so small it will not make it a task so hard that any one will consider it a burden.

Indianapolis Exhibitors' Election

New Officers Named at a Recent Meeting of Local No. 1.

INDIANAPOLIS Local No. 1, of the Exhibitors' Protective Association of Indiana, has elected the following officers: B. V. Barton, president; A. C. Zaring, secretary; Harry Koch, treasurer. Celebrating the general good will and good feeling among the Indianapolis exhibitors in a Dutch lunch the other evening, a general good time was held in the exhibitors' headquarters, third floor, Lyric theater building.

B. V. Barton.

The new president, B. V. Barton, was inaugurated with a very impressive ceremony. The installation was conducted by Brother August Schmidt and State President F. J. Rembusch, who invested him with a large brass star (which hung around his neck by a chain) and a gavel so large that it took two hands to lift it. Mr. Barton is one of the oldest exhibitors in the state; is the present owner of the Alhambra, Isis and Lyric theaters; is very progressive and at the same time has a very lovable disposition.

Another meeting of the Indiana state organization will be held early in the spring. Our representative who attended the state meeting on January 18 said it was one of the best exhibitors' meetings he had ever attended, business from the word go. The Indianapolis Motion Picture Exhibitors' Protective Association, he said, is one of the best organized in the United States and believes it is actuated solely by high motives to bring about a betterment of the industry.

Mr. Barton as its president is the right man in the right place, a splendid personality with an executive and a parliamentary knowledge to conduct his office with honor to himself and advantage to his business associates; he has their confidence which assures him of their support.

To Bar Vice Pictures

Exhibitors of the Northwest Corporation Propose to Stop All Questionable Pictures in Minneapolis.

ON the question of the suppression of vice pictures and all others that tend to arouse the censorious tendencies of the public, are to be summarily suppressed by the members of the Motion Picture Exhibitors' Corporation of the Northwest, an organization composed largely of Minneapolis theater owners. The case against questionable and trouble breeding productions is stated in a letter from Secretary Koenig, which reads as follows:

Minneapolis, Minn., Jan. 25, 1917.

Dear Sir: As secretary of the Motion Picture Exhibitors' Corporation of the Northwest, I feel called upon to drop you these few lines.

After a conference with Mayor Van Lear concerning certain pictures being exhibited in the city, this organization went on record as being opposed to any and all vice pictures, or pictures with titles that are a disgrace to the motion picture industry.

We are certain that every exchange will feel that this organization is working in the right direction to eliminate censorship by going on record as being opposed to such pictures as have been shown in four or five theaters of this city during the past month. It seems strange to us that the exchanges cannot realize that the time for putting out pictures of that sort has passed and that the public is disapproving of motion picture theaters more and more as the result of that class of pictures being exhibited. We hope that the exchanges will realize that we are trying to bring back the picture patrons by giving them good, clean and wholesome films and we are almost certain that the exchanges handling such subjects will be more than pleased to co-operate with this association in this effort to regain the confidence of the public.

While practically every exhibitor in the Twin Cities is a member of this organization, still there are a few that have not united with us, and some of them think that they can put on pictures of questionable merit and get away with it. This association has gone on record as being opposed in a body to every picture which has received the least bit of criticism, and our reason for writing you at this time is because the Legislature is now in session and unless we all work together we are liable to be put out of business, the innocent suffering for the guilty. You konw as well as we do that there are already two bills in the Legislature concerning motion pictures and when you get State Censorship you will find that you will pay for all the laxness you are now displaying.

As a last appeal this association requests you to work with us toward eliminating that class of pictures which have caused such articles as have appeared in the daily papers during the last few weeks, and to prevent such articles appearing again.

We will make no more appeals to the exchanges. We are trying to do our part, and if the exchanges feel that they can afford to have a State Censor Board, all we can say is, "Try it and find out what you will get."

Trusting to hear from you on this matter, we remain,

Very truly yours,
MOTION PICTURE EXHIBITORS' CORP. OF THE NORTHWEST.
By WILLIAM KOENIG, Secretary.

Jersey Movie Ball Huge Success

Three Thousand Enthusiasts Make Merry at New Jersey Exhibitors' Ball in Newark.

EXCEEDING all the wildest expectations and anticipations of the New Jersey exhibitors, the first annual movie ball, given by the New Jersey State Exhibitors' League, on February 1, at Kreuger's Auditorium, Newark, was a decidedly social, fraternal and financial success. Fully three thousand persons thronged the hall to gain a view of their favorite stars. Such a galaxy of stars and luminaries in the film world were present, and so many stunts were presented in an interesting and entertaining manner during the evening, that everyone present enjoyed the affair.

Much credit must be give the committees and the charge d'affaires, Frank E. Samuels, who seemed to be everywhere in the big hall. The arrangements were so perfect that not a hitch interfered to spoil the affair.

Two bands furnished the music for the dancing, of which there was plenty. During the intermission between the dances, the stars were introduced by Mr. Samuels. Several professionals also helped entertain, as did also several of the younger film artists.

The grand march attracted considerable attention, due to the fact that the leaders were Hon. Thomas L. Raymond, Mayor of Newark, and Miss Anita Stewart, the famous Vitagraph star. Many screen celebrities were present and participated in the march. Among the photoplayers at the ball were the Misses Anita Stewart, Alice Brady, Florence La Badie, Marguerite Courtot, Leah Baird, Florence Turner, Gordon Gray, little Madge Evans, Jane and Katherine Lee, and Fred Mace, Edwin August, Paul Panzer, Roger Pierrot, Andrew Branigan and Mr. and Mrs. Sidney Drew. Ad Kessel, of the New York Motion Picture Company, was also present with several Triangle stars. A large delegation from New York City was also at the ball. Secretary Tom Howard, of the New York Exhibitors' League No. 1, and Billy Quirk, president of the Screen Club, were attendants at the affair.

Samuel Spedon, of the Moving Picture World, who was chairman of the publicity and press committee, received a hearty ovation when introduced by the chairman. Mr. Spedon expressed himself as being delighted at the large gathering present, and urged co-operation among the exhibitors.

The event of chief importance to a good percentage of those present was the contest of the young ladies desirous of becoming motion picture actresses. This event took place immediately after the grand march. The judges were Florence La Badie, of Thanhouser; Walter Maier, representing the Exhibitors' League; L. T. Blumenthal, the trade journals; G. A. Falzer, of the Newark Sunday Call, and Billy Quirk, of the Screen Club. After some conferences, the committee finally decided that Miss Hortense Alden, of Bloomsbury, N. J., was entitled to a tryout with the Thanhouser Company. Miss Alden is a charming miss of just past sixteen. She is confident that she has the "makin's" of a star, and the decision of the judges affords her an opportunity to make good.

The arrangements of the affair were in the hands of F. E. Samuels, who was engaged by the league to superintend the ball. The executive committee consisted of the various chairmen as follows: Dr. H. Charles Hespe, J. G. Crawford, Philip Bornstein, F. C. Cross, F. E. Samuels, W. C. Smith, B. F. Porter, L. E. Atwater, David J. Hennessy, Max LeBow, F. H. Mertens, Samuel Spedon, H. J. Rockafeller, Miss Marguerite Courtot, Herman Austerman, Arnold Davis and Martin Singer.

The reception committee consisted of F. C. Cross, Louis Blumenthal, Nathan Beier, Ad. Kessel, Lee Gainsborg, Lynn S. Card, Lester W. Adler, A. Reinlieb, M. Markowitz, Harry Harris and M. Feldman. The entertainment committee was headed by Martin Singer, who had as aides J. B. McNally, Lewis H. Golding, Joseph O'Crowley, Lewis J. Fosse, Pat Casey, Henry Siegel, R. D. Burdge, A. Buxbaum, Joseph Brandt and George Balston, Jr.

Samuel Spedon, of the Moving Picture World, headed the publicity and press committee, the other members of which were John Wylie, W. A. Johnston, Conrad Haney, W. Stephen Bush, Harry Reichenbach, Jacob J. Kalter, Walter J. Flanigan, G. A. Falzer and J. V. Foster.

The floor committee was comprised of F. H. Mertens, Joseph Stern, F. H. Black, Peter Adams, Henry Robrecht, Max LeBow, Walter M. Hoffman, H. J. Rockafeller, A. Fiorito and L. Diehn.

The special committees for specific details were as follows; Louis P. De Wolfe, W. J. Hagerty, O. Caveness, William Lesser, C. J. Fitch, Walter H. Meier, Charles C. Hildinger and Benjamin Nussbaum.

Chicago Exhibitors Elect Officers

Local League Has Exciting Time Behind Closed Doors as Factions Fight for Control—Official News Withheld.

AN IMPORTANT and fairly well attended meeting of the Chicago Local of the Exhibitors' League was held on Friday, February 2. The sessions commenced at 10 o'clock in the morning and continued without recess until 7 o'clock in the evening. No one except members of the league was admitted and very little of the proceedings were permitted to leak out. The principal business of the meeting was the election of officers and there were two tickets in the field, over the choice of which there was a determined contest. The successful candidates were as follows:

President, Joseph Hopp; vice-president, William E. Haney; secretary, Sidney Smith; treasurer, William J. Sweeney; sergeant-at-arms, William Rohe; executive committee, Robert R. Levy, Alfred Hamburger, John Frundt, M. S. Johnson, George D. Hopkinson and Max Schwartz.

Lee A. Ochs, president of the National League, was there and succeeded in getting the meeting to endorse his trade paper and to follow the lead of the New York State League in its condemnation of the Universal Film Manufacturing Company. A resolution was also adopted condemning the advance deposit system.

It is reported that the defeated faction, headed by Joe Choynski and Louis Frank, had threatened to split the Chicago local, but that it was doubtful that they could succeed in such an undertaking.

Among the visitors present were Thomas Furniss, of Duluth, Minn., and A. P. Tugwell, of Los Angeles.

WITH APOLOGIES TO MR. SANDERS.

In last week's issue of the Moving Picture World it was stated in the report of the New York State Convention of the Exhibitors' League, that Rudolph Sanders moved to adopt the resolutions against the Universal Company. We overlooked the fact that Mr. Sanders afterwards withdrew his motion and then the resolution was sent back to the committee for changes.

INDIANA PICTURE BILLS KILLED.

The bills introduced in the Indiana State Legislature by Representative Elkinberry, one creating a censor board, the second providing for Sunday shows and more censorship, were both killed in committee last week. A third bill has been submitted providing for censorship.

ELIZABETH McGAFFEY TO WRITE LASKY SCENARIO.

Elizabeth McGaffey, formerly head of the Research Department at the Lasky studio, will henceforth write original scenarios for the Lasky company under supervision of William C. DeMille and Marion Fairfax.

FRANCINE LARRIMORE IN "A ROYAL PAUPER."

Among the well known screen players who will support Francine Larrimore in "The Royal Pauper," a five-reel Edison production released through the Kleine-Edison-Selig-Essanay Service on February 12, are Herbert Prior, Charles Sutton, Richard Tucker and William Wadsworth.

Australian Notes

THE New South Wales Cabinet decided this week upon the appointment of a board to carry on the work of film censorship. The board consists of Mr. Fuller, chief secretary; the minister for education, the director for education, the inspector-general of police and the director of health.

There was a proposal to make the body representative of a number of outside organizations, including the picture theaters, the churches, and certain societies which exist for the purpose of looking after the morals of the people. It was, however, decided that such a board would be unwieldy, while it would be impracticable to give representation to every body that might reasonably claim to have a nominee to look after its interests.

As constituted, the board is wholly official. The chief secretary will be chairman. A synopsis of the story depicted by each film must be forwarded to the board, and if it is obviously a subject that may be exhibited without injuring the morals of the community or without danger of offending the sensibilities of any section of the people, it will be passed. In any case where there is a doubt, the board will witness a private screening of the picture and decide whether or not it is fit to be shown, either in its entirety or after passages have been eliminated.

In the official notice issued by the new board it is stated that the experience of the chief secretary's department is that British films have generally been above reproach. Those that give the most offense have almost invariably come from America, and during the past few months there have been many pictures objected to in some of their details. The trouble was that a number of these objectionable films were not discovered until they had been shown in public. In future each photoplay must satisfy the board before it is shown in the ordinary way.

This may be explained as being due to the fact that practically no British films have been seen in this country for some time. A few London productions have been released from time to time, but otherwise the British film is conspicuous by its absence.

The South Australian government is establishing a departmental board of censorship for moving pictures on lines similar to those now in force in New South Wales. Although the present position, on the whole, is considered satisfactory, the chief secretary (S. A.) is of the opinion that a systematic and careful inspection is necessary.

The entertainment tax bill has been passed through the final stages in the House of Representatives.

After a very lively discussion it was agreed that the tax should be greatly modified, and should take the form of one penny tax on each shilling ticket, and an extra penny on every succeeding shilling.

It is expected that the tax will begin to operate during January. Showmen in general are satisfied with the tax, as the usual rates of admission to picture theaters are now six-pence and nine-pence, upon which the tax will have no effect.

Alec B. Hellmrich, who returned to this country from the U. S. A. last mail, brought the news that he had secured the sole rights for quite a number of good brands of pictures. These include Frohman features, B. S. Moss features, Ince Mutual master pictures (these have not been released here yet), and Christie Comedies.

The Co-operative Film Exchange, of which Mr. Hellmrich is the manager, has become one of the largest Australian exchanges in a very short time. They started with World features over a year ago, and secured Metro subjects a few months later. They still hold the sole rights for the latter brand.

At their last meeting the Sydney Suburban Picture Showmen's Association recorded a vote not to play features on a percentage basis.

Fox's "Romeo and Juliet" is a current attraction this week at the Strand Theater, and is doing big business at prices ranging up to two shillings. THOS. S. IMRIE.

Advertising for Exhibitors

Conducted by EPES WINTHROP SARGENT

How It's Done.

GEORGE EDITOR CARPENTER has a happy trick of getting a lot into a small space. Here is on example of one of his condensations. We won't say what he condenses it from, even though we may know, but in tabloid form he gives the whole trick of getting out good advertising as well as how to get the bad. Read it:

> The successful kind never trusts to luck. When he writes an advertisement he knows in his mind's eye just how it will look in print. If he does not know anything about printing he cultivates the acquaintance of his printer and learns the difference between six-point and ten-point type, the values of spacing, the playing up of lines and the making of a layout generally. He gets his printer to give him a proof sheet carrying all the samples of type he has in the cases. He learns how many letters of a certain font of type go to the column line. He borrows a printer's trade journal or two and studies the various samples of display advertising. He acquires knowledge on the merits of fine and coarse screen cuts. Presently his ads attract attention and hold the eye.
> The other fellow writes out an ad., hands it to the printer and just trusts to luck. Possibly he gives the printer matter for three inches of space that could not be rightly displayed under six. When he sees the result (he is always too busy to insist on a proof) and compares it with what the other house displays he gives vent to harsh and grating sentiments. In his opinion he got the worst of it.

Getting it still shorter, the way to do a thing well is to know how to do it and the way to know how is to study, and no man ever did good studying unless he gave his entire attention to it for a time.

Beautiful Snow.

As this is written it is snowing. It's nothing to be proud of. It looks more as though someone has been beating a rug on a nearby roof and the lint was drifting past. It is not even making the sidewalk damp, yet, but in the morning we may have to lift a couple of tons of it off a sixty foot walk with a wooden shovel. We probably will—if it keeps up. That's the big idea. IF it keeps up. One four inch advertisement one time does not amount to much, but if you keep it up you'll make business. Just remember that when you spend eighteen dollars and want to quit because you have not yet gotten your money back. Keep on snowing and some day you may be a ten foot drift.

Varied.

The Opera House, Leighton, Pa., sends in three programs, all different. Two of them seem to have been suggested by the Lehigh Orpheum; one four page and one six page folder, but the third is a two week program with side dates that is good enough to stick to for keeps. The back page of this uses some stuff written by J. C. Rathbone some years ago. What's become of the man from Exeter?

One Way to Celebrate.

The Majestic, Columbus, O., has been celebrating its third anniversary. Its always readable program gives the details, chief of which is a series of morning performances for the newsboys and the inmates of various charitable institutions, winding up with a special party for the Boy Scouts who have been campaigning for the Anti-Tuberculosis Society. This is a real way to celebrate, but the Majestic is always doing things that gain it the favor of the thinking patron. And as it's creed we clip this from its columns:

> If the theater is not to be a useful and an upbuilding factor in the life of the city; one which builds up, rather than tears down; one that amuses and instructs rather than caters to viciousness and suggestiveness, it has no excuse for existence. The Majestic looks forward to another pleasant year, pleasant because it will be spent in trying to please its family of patrons and continue the policy of clean pictures in a clean theater, attended by courteous employes.
> Every milestone means either progress or retrogression. The Majestic hopes to be numbered among those institutions of Columbus which has become better and which has helped its people to become happier, more satisfied with life, more contented.

If you can live up to a platform like that, you cannot be far from wrong.

Wilby Is "There."

Lately the Strand Amusement Co., Montgomery, Ala., added the Colonial, a new house, to their string, and R. B. Wilby got out a booklet for the opening attraction that reminds us of those happy days when he was in Selma and used to surprise us every little while with some unusual printing. The cover is of heavy paper, a sort of brown-grey, embossed with the house name and the monogram. A window is cut into it to show a colored portrait of Clara Kimball Young on page three. Inside the printing is a contrasting tint with red border and initials, simple and vastly effective. Most of the text is given to The Common Law but there is a goodly list of features underlined. The text is simply but smoothly written, and all told it is the sort of thing that gives people the right idea about a good house. It's a good thing to look at.

Kid Shows Again.

The usually alert Rowland and Clark circuit, of Pittsburgh, seems to be skidding badly on the kid show proposition. M. J. C. Kornblum, of the publicity staff, discusses the matter in a recent Film Forecast, and his attitude is so nearly that of many others that it is worth looking into. In Korny's Korner he writes:

> We attended a meeting of representative club women the other day in which the subject of movies for children was thoroughly discussed. Listened with much interest to the views expressed by the various speakers, all men of reputation, but we confess that the mesage they brought did not show the way out. We realize that children do not always enjoy the pictures which are shown in motion picture theaters, any more than "The Story of the Gadsby's" is read behind text books in school, although we will admit that "The Jungle Stories" by the self same Kipling are devoured with great pleasure. Robert Louis Stevenson wrote a book that all ages are fascinated by in "Treasure Island," but there are quite a few that he did not write for the younger ones. And we could multiply the list indefinitely. The principal objection on the part of the exhibitor is that the added expense is seldom justified. One must pay for the regularly scheduled film whether he runs it twenty-four hours or not at all, and extra pictures cost extra money.
> If we run a children's picture at a cost of say fifteen dollars for an afternoon, which is about what it would cost, that means 300 extra children at 5 cents to make up the initial outlay. If we could be assured that we would receive that initial outlay back, there would be no hesitancy on our part, but the experience has been that children don't patronize children's shows as they might be expected to. To advertise just to children, is no easy matter. To circularize schools is not allowed. The youngster does not follow the newspapers and if they did the cost of space is prohibitive. It remains with the mothers to tell the children that the show is to be given, and if that is done, the turnout should be sufficiently encouraging to justify the exhibitor in continuing his efforts. We told the meeting what we have told practically everyone who has broached the subject, that Rowland & Clark theaters is with any movement that has merit, and if the plans are sufficiently well developed, we shall lend every assistance in our power.
> On another page we have an announcement of the inauguration of a special children's attraction at the Liberty theater every Saturday afternoon. We realize that the children wish something just a little different from the dramas which are presented from time to time, and you will note that our Saturday bill always includes a comedy or cartoon for their benefit. These Saturday afternoon children's pictures are regular full length features, and will be shown in addition to the usual Liberty program without any extra admission charge.

That doesn't seem to be the right way of looking at it. The Rowland & Clark circuit is an important one. It can afford to spend $15 or even more in advertising each week. Prorating the advertising value to the circuit would make it only $2.50 per house each week, if but one house took hold of the idea, and it would be worth that much to each house in the approval gained from the people who are interested in clean pictures for children. Evidently the meeting was called to discuss this matter, and evidently no exhibitor was found who was willing to stand up and announce that he would take a chance by running the pictures until it could be shown whether or not the idea appealed to children. If it does—then it pays, but stating it in terms of interest instead of admissions would have given an effect.

Adding a subject to the Saturday afternoon bill is by no means the same thing. For the first try Shadows and Sunshine was added to a bill featuring Frank Keenan in The Bridge of Hate. It offers about eleven reels of stuff, but six of which are of the proper sort. It also reduces the number of afternoon performances given. Here is a double loss—too much show and one show lost. Giving a performance at eleven o'clock probably would add to the operating cost as well as to the film bill, but it would be what was wanted and not a makeshift and properly worked, the women will do all the advertising necessary. The Majestic, Columbus, O., splits its takings with various welfare societies in turn and they bring in surprising crowds; right up to the capacity of the house in most instances. The Rowland & Clark houses have put on a game fight against censorship, yet they fail to use the most potent weapon we have at hand at present.

Too many exhibitors look at it in the same light. They want to be assured a paying attendance in advance. Lose a little money at the start, if need be, and charge it to advertising. But make it a distinctive show. Give special emphasis to the fact that the bill is composed of interesting pictures and not educationals. Get a two or three reel feature rather than a five. Fill in with comedies and good travel and cartoon stuff and you cannot keep the kids away and the school teachers will help to give publicity to the idea if they are approached by the societies instead of by the management.

Compact.

The Lilliam, Martin, Tenn., sends in a compact postcard that tells a lot in little space. Martin doesn't seem to be a very large town, but they have a printer down there who knows his business and how to pick and stick type. He lays out his stuff nicely; knows how to play up his lines and acts like a regular printer in general. The card is worth studying. You'll find comparatively small type faces, open display and yet it all reaches. The type faces are picked to fit the space.

"HONOR THY NAME"

Needs Identification.

John C. Mahaney, of the Best, Poughkeepsie, asks for criticism on several advertisements he sends in, but he sends in the advertising for several theaters; possibly houses for which he does work, since some are in Newburgh and the rest in the place where they have the boat races. The Best advertising has one seemingly chronic fault, though this may be governed by local conditions. The advertisement reproduced is four sixes and the whole carries but a column width name cut. Another advertisement, three fives, carries the same cut, and a third, seemingly part of a larger space, shows none at all. We cannot judge half advertisements, but as a general proposition the name should be so well displayed that even if an eight column advertisement is divided the house name will show. The days should be dated, even though the paper is. "Tonight" and "Tomorrow" is not definite in its suggestion. Most of the displays are too crowded, many of them carrying even more copy in proportion to the space than that reproduced. The Star, apparently in Newburgh, uses a more open form and is more easily read and therefore more apt to be read. Sometimes it hurts to pay for space and not fill it with type, but if white paper works harder, white paper is cheaper than the printed lines. There may be some local reason why the Best needs no more definite an identification, but unless there is, there should be greater prominence given to the house name, which is more of an asset and a permanent factor.

Have You Noticed?

Have you noticed that general advertisers are coming to the old style form of advertisement? This was started by the Straight Cut Cigarettes, using old style type and copy, but many department stores are now using much the same thing in the way of a design. If you can get hold of some old books with a lot of fussy scroll work around the wood cuts, have the engraver enlarge some of these frames, not too much, and you will be right in fashion and have something that is different, for the time being, from the rest of the page.

Jimquin Remarks.

Jimquin of Los Angeles seems to have been moving around a bit, for he dates his last from Sacramento. His letter is so full of good sense that it is worth running in full.

> Here I am starting the New Year by a jaunt "up-country." I have run across more unusual things in the past three weeks than in any three months of any of my previous trips, and have seen more funny things than I thought there were in California.
> As far as I have been able to observe the picture business along the line as well as in the southern end of the state seems to have run against a dead wall with everyone concerned scrambling around the foot of the wall and not one seeming to give the time to wonder if it wouldn't be a good idea to get together and give each other a "boost" over the obstacle.
> It is the same old story—when you talk to Smith he tells you more about Jones' business than Jones himself knows. And you get the same old thing rehashed from Jones. Mostly everyone seems bent on putting someone else out of the running. Of course this is not true in every individual case but it is absolutely in general. Why should it be? I don't know.
> There are some exhibitors on the other hand who claim they don't pay any attention to what their neighbors do. I figure they are both wrong. I think that as business in every line to-day is essentially a battle of the "fittest" to exist I should watch what my neighbor is doing at all times—not to the detriment of my own business but for the betterment of it, and not with any malicious motives, but from the knowledge that it isn't at all likely that I am going to get all the bright ideas that are floating around, and if he gets some that I can improve on and adopt for my own use I have no false pride that would keep me from doing so, just as he is welcome to use anything I have. If he can make better use of it than I can that's his advantage. And from actual experience, if I had a neighbor exhibitor that I figured was one too many for any given locality, the last way in the world that I would attempt to relieve the situation would be the stirring up of hate or enmity between us. A fellow who, for reasons of inability to properly handle the business, must eventually quit, will do so a good deal quicker if he has been treated fairly and squarely and humanly than he will if he has been all but "blackjacked." Not only that but the surest way to ruin a fellow's own business is to stage what is really, from a business standpoint, a "rough and tumble" fight. I was in a town a couple of days ago of about 3,500 people where one of the nicest fellows to talk to that I have met on the trip runs the only theater there. He changes program every day, a big feature—that is Metro, Fox, K-E-S-E, Paramount, World, Bluebird, etc.—daily, with a comedy, and six serials a week, a condition brought about by his efforts to keep others out of the town Now where does he get off himesif under those conditions?
> It is queer too how conditions vary—how you run into one town where cut-throat competition is the rule, everything looking spick and span, houses up to the minute, projection fine and things generally done in big town style, and perhaps you have just left a town a few hours back that is a good town with things in such a dilapidated condition that a "regular" house run on the right lines would probably do the kind of a business that picture men never talk about any more only reminiscently. I have seen such places in the past month. There is a town between here and Los Angeles and its population runs into the thousands—a good big town—where there struck me as being the biggest opening I have seen in years. It looks like somebody has fallen asleep by the wayside, and I predict that something in the way of grabbing up that gold mine is going to strike that town in the not far distant future, and it is liable to be yours truly if he can get around to it before someone else noses him out. And just to think that a few hours' ride away from it there are two splendid houses in a place about one-tenth its size with the owners fighting tooth and nail for business!

That's about all there is to say. Don't neglect your business to watch the other fellow, but know at all times what he is doing and, if possible, what he is going to do. We hope that Jimquin lands the house he has in mind, for we like the Jimquin advertising and have been getting none lately.

In Two Tongues.

Down on the border bills in English and Mexican are not uncommon, but the Regent, Kansas City, got out a special bill in Hebrew characters for The Kreutzer Sonata in addition to its usual special advertising in English. It is a straight throwaway on white paper, printed in black, but it is less usual to see bills in Hebrew out west than down around the East Side in New York where bills in Italian, Greek and Hebrew are as common as those printed in English. The Regent's English bill is a sort of form letter in body and display type. It is neither circular nor letter, though it uses part of the letter head form. Two cuts of the stars are used, with some display matter and twelve lines of solid matter. Whoever got up the bill wrote in English instead of adjectives. In nine lines it tells about the book with a vividness that makes you want to see the play and yet it is done with only one "most" and no words ending in "est." That in itself is an accomplishment, but more has been done. The same text will rouse the interest of the person interested in Tolstoi and get the attention of the fan who wants vivid drama. It is good enough to pass along to others who may have the subject booked. If you have not booked it, it is at least an interesting study in advertising.

> It will be well remembered that Mme. Bertha Kalich made her greatest success in this great production. Theda Bara, the famous emotional actress, plays the character with great strength and sinister fascination.
> In many respects "Kreutzer Sonata" may be called the drama of the clash of the "old order changing, giving place to new." Throughout its shifting scenes, from the sombrely sad plains of Russia, to the thrifty atmosphere of rural Connecticut, and the rush and turmoil of New York City, this theme and the tragedy of a noble woman's soul betrayed and relentlessly crushed, form the dominant motif of this play of splendid force and sweeping power. It holds the spectator relentlessly in thrall, with blood jumping heartward and nerves athrob, from the opening scenes of the prelude to the terrific climax where shattered lives and blasted hopes—the toys of a grim fate—topple to a common ruin. This is, in briefest form, an epitome of one of the most remarkable dramas of to-day.

This is better than "super feature" and the rest of the extravagant terms that are so widely used that they fail to impress any more. This sounds as though the writer were talking about a picture too good to need false appraisal and so it carries conviction.

A Program Cover.

Although we get this sample of the program cover from Paramount Pointers, Philadelphia, we presume that all of the Paramount Exchanges have similar stock. Philadelphia offers them at $1.50 a thousand, unprinted, which is cheap enough. The inside pages also carry the portrait frame, which gives pictures of all the Paramount stars, and it might be a good stunt to offer prizes to those who identify the greatest number of the portraits. This is a matter of skill and not of chance and it will rise interest in the players and attract attention to the house as well.

Have You a Liberty?

Have you a Liberty theater? There are quite a lot. If you have, you can do what Ralph Ruffner did out in Spokane. He got one of the first of the new half dollars, framed it and put it in the lobby for inspection. Underneath was a card reading:

LIBERTY MONEY.

Note our name on every piece.

It is not too late yet to use the idea, and if you go to a little trouble you can get the newspapers to run a few squibs about the special coinage you have had prepared for your house. It is so clearly a josh that no one will get bad tempered about it.

Turns to Display.

L. W. Barclay, advertising manager of the Grand and Nemo theaters, Johnstown, Pa., sends in a number of samples and writes:

> Up until a short time ago the Nemo and Grand, under the same management, ran their advertising separately. Display was used infrequently, the system in this city—about 60,000 population—being to pay for space taken up by heads and cuts in newspapers, the reading matter accompanying, running in the form of a news item, being used without charge.
> Since adopting the display style of advertising, we have combined the newspaper stuff of the two houses. It is costing a great deal more—many times more, in fact—but we believe it will pay because it is different.
> Would like to have you suggest any changes for the better that may occur to you.

The scheme of charging only for the display type is unusual, and while the reader is one of the best forms of advertising, it needs to be backed by display if attention is to be gained. Readers only are all right in a town of five thousand or under where the daily paper is read through by everyone, but in a town of 25,000 or over, some display is needed. There is not much to be said about the advertising other than it is good, though inclined at times to crowd the space. Mr. Barclay offsets this to a large extent by paneling his space and making things easier to read by isolating the various details of the copy. The cut shows one style of advertisement, but he is committed to no special layout and suits his space and dimensions to the matter he has to run. In view of the poor quality of the press work, we think it would be better to run cuts only when they are better than usual. In one or two of the advertisements they are little more than blotches and it does not pay to run smudges. Cutting down a little on the copy would probably bring a better display, but this is largely a matter best decided by the man on the ground.

Special Matinees.

The Star, Weiser, Idaho, sends in a monthly program, a white four pager bound into a stiff red cover with a window to let a cut through. Instead of stitching, the insert is tied with yellow ribbon, the yellow and red making an attractive yet not too pronounced a combination. Usually matinees are given only on Saturdays, but on New Year's Day there was a free matinee to the school children and another on Wednesday to the ladies only, the film in each case being that run on Monday and Tuesday evening. These complimentary performances marked the opening of the house under new management. The program is well handled, but for an opening, we think there should have been some form of greeting on the lower half of page one, or on the inside cover pages. It all helps along.

We like Mr. Gordon's general attitude. For example, he sent tickets to all the teachers for the free matinee for the children. The card of admission offered six general styles of subjects which might be offered. With it went a form letter that ran:

> Will you kindly accept the inclosed tickets for the School Children's Matinee New Year's day, with compliments of the season?
> May the New Year start and each succeeding day impart some added pleasure. The new management trusts you may enjoy a part of these pleasures at the Star Theater.
> You will note the tickets are, in a way a question blank. Will you mark your choice of subjects? What in your judgment would be best for Children's Matinees? These subjects will be shown so far as possible Saturday of each week.
> Our desire is to cooperate with the parents and teachers in the matter of proper films for children.
> Try and attend the matinee on the above date, but in case you cannot see your way clear to visit the matinee, why just come in the evening, mark your ticket and sign your name giving street number. Take the extra ticket and bring a friend with you. With very best wishes I remain.

That last paragraph is the friend maker. The recipient does not have to come with the kiddies or not at all. Come then or at any regular show. It sounds friendly and it is friendly.

INQUIRIES.

Questions concerning photoplay writing addressed to this department will be replied to by mail if a fully addressed and stamped envelope accompanies the letter, which should be addressed to this department. Questions should be stated clearly and should be typewritten or written with pen and ink. Under no circumstances will manuscripts or synopses be criticized, whether or not a fee is sent therefor.

A list of companies will be sent if the request is made to the paper direct and not to this department, and a return stamped envelope is inclosed.

Studying Stories.

MANY students of photoplay are studying the stories of the films published in this paper each week, and now and then they find one that puzzles. One correspondent, for example, cannot get the correct placing of the trinity in an Essanay story. Briefly, a business man employed only women when possible. Dying, his son goes to the other extreme, of men only. A quick-witted girl catches one of the newly-employed men peculating and the young man is won over to his father's theories. The correspondent seems to find it difficult to identify the protagonist, antagonist and the objective. At first glance it would seem that the girl should be the heroine, the young employer the hero and the thievish clerk the villain, but on the other hand, the employer is not heroic and seems to be more of the villain of the story. The trouble is more with the story than with the student's observation. He knows that there is something wrong. The trouble is that the story is badly laid out, and it is unusual that in this case a theory and not a person is the protagonist. Interest centers not on the characters, but on the upholding or destruction of the old man's theory. The theory is the "hero" or protagonist, and the objective is the upholding of the theory. The antagonist is the young employer who seeks to overthrow the old method, and the girl and man clerks are merely lay figures. With these points established, it may readily be seen that the story conforms to the rule. Studying the synopses is one of the best forms of learning what plots are. Not all of the stories of the film carry real plots; indeed many of them violate the simplest rules of writing, but taking good and bad and analyzing and separating them will give the beginner a better bnowledge of real plotting and plot analysis than any other form of study, and we are glad to see that since the appearance of the third edition of Technique of the Photoplay this practice has apparently, grown, since so many more write in for information as to specific plots. You cannot plan a story until you know your three chief factors, the protagonist, antagonist and object, but knowing these you can work with certainty in developing the plot to give the fullest emphasis. First learn to dissect other plots, and then make it a practice to dissect your own until this analysis becomes so strongly an instinctive act that you perform it sub-consciously. Not until then can you write real stories.

Not Just Yet.

Many requests have been received for a new brain polisher, but it will not happen for some time. It is no easy task to hammer out even brief criticisms to a couple of hundred scripts running from a half page to three or four, and while we think that these polishers help, we cannot spare the time to make them a regular feature. But why not provide your own brain polishers? If you follow the releases, you know about what your local theater is going to run. Read the synopsis, do your own script, or at least plot out the major action, and after the film has been run, see how close you have come to the producer's ideas.

It's Here.

It had to come. We have a printed form that tells why you cannot tell how many scenes or how many words make a thousand feet. That worries us no longer, but ever since Essanay announced that time and not footage would be the measure of its films we've been waiting. It has come. An author wants to know how many scenes will run an hour and fifteen minutes. The answer is as many scenes as can be run within that time. That's the beauty of the Essanay idea. You do not write to exact thousand feet, but you write a five-reel story and they make it in its proper length, and anyone should know about what makes a five-reeler. Anyhow Essanay is not in the market, so why worry?

A Good Suggestion.

The Writer's Magazine always has one idea that is worth the price of the issue even without all the rest that is given. Last month the prize suggestion is contained in an article in which the student is urged to make use of his typewriter for study purposes. The writer tells of her own experience in copying excerpts from books she was unable to purchase or of which she wished to make a study and she asserts that by this method she is better able to memorize material.

The trick is by no means a new one. Many actors invariably copy off their parts in new plays, sometimes more than once, but this writer brings out a new phase when she suggests that not only is memory aided, but that the writer is thus enabled to make up a library of selected facts instead of being required to keep an entire book for the sake of the comparatively small portion that is of real value. Few books are solid value all the way through, and by the machine method the words are better sensed than when merely read with the eye and at the same time the meat of many volumes can be contained in small space. It is a clever scheme.

The best plan would be to get a loose leaf cover with sheets the regulation typewriter size. Then have good bond paper punched (by any printer) for the proper holes and do all copying on this. The sheets can be placed in the cover and when the cover is full the material can be sent to the binder for permanent binding at less than the cost of a new book. The idea of punching typewriter paper is that these sheets will cost less than half the price of the ready punched sheets supplied by the cover makers.

Technique.

"One of the handicaps I've labored under has been an adherence to technique," writes an author. "I think I've read every work on technique ever published, and I know every rule of construction, and have written to rule, but I'm going to try throwing technique overboard and just writing for action."

Here is a man who has half the trick of writing. He is going to stop writing according to rule. He is not going to put the try square to every sentence before he frames it and will not plumb every paragraph with the spirit level. For the first time he is going to give his entire mind to his plot instead of worryng about technical form. To this extent he is on the right track. What he fails to add is that if he has done his studying properly, he will write in good technical form because he will through force of habit, unconsciously write in technical form, and the first rule of technique is to be willing to break all the rest of the rules if you can get a better result by doing so. This is the only unbreakable rule of technique; that imagination must be capable of rising superior to mere rule if occasion demands.

This does not mean that a writer should deliberately seek to break the rules of technique in order to gain an unusual effect. It does mean that he should write correctly and follow good practice, but that he should be able to see when a variation from a rule will bring a better effect and so be willing to violate that rule.

Grammar is the technique of correct speech. We learn the rules and in time instinctively apply them. The dictionary is, in a way, the technique of words, and yet at times the ungrammatical sentence and the slang phrase mean much merely because they are unusual. It is the same with playwriting, know when to break the rules.

Something New.

School schemes and revision bureaus have become almost obsolete. The sales bureau flourishes for a time because there will always exist the man who wants to let the other fellow do it. The newest seems to be the photoplay paper de luxe. Daniel Ellis, who was editor for the Lubin company in its death throes, announces the publication of a fortnightly paper for script writers only at five dollars a year with occasional prize contests for "hundreds of dollars." Just after the Lubin incident—it did not last long enough to be more than an incident—Mr. Ellis conducted a revision and criticism bureau that did not pay very well. We think that he will find even an eight pager at that price will pay still less. The Photoplay Scenario died for lack of support, at a much smaller subscription price, and The Photoplay Author did not prosper greatly until it was turned into The Writer's Magazine, which, under the able editorship of Dr. J. Berg Esenwein, has become a real factor, though it now divides its space between fiction, photoplay and song writing.

Swipes.

The man who worries most about stolen stories never had anything worth stealing.

Sticking

"I'd never have the patience to stand more than five or six rejections from one firm," writes an author. Then he goes on to complain of his small market. If you know a concern is buying, get mad at them and stick to it until you make them take one.

Manufacturers' Notice.

IT IS an established rule of this department that no apparatus or other goods will be endorsed or recommended editorially until the excellence of such articles has been demonstrated to its editor.

Important Notice.

Owing to the mass of matter awaiting publication, it is impossible to reply through the department in less than two to three weeks. In order to give prompt service, those sending four cents, stamps (less than actual cost), will receive carbon copy of the department reply, by mail, without delay. Special replies by mail on matters which cannot be replied to in the department, one dollar.

Both the first and second set of questions are now ready and printed in neat booklet form, the second half being seventy-six in number. Either booklet may be had by remitting 25 cents, money or stamps, to the editor, or both for 40 cents. Cannot use Canadian stamps. Every live, progressive operator should get a copy of these questions. You may be surprised at the number you cannot answer without a lot of study.

Question No. 174.

Explain all the various things which are directly or indirectly affected by speed of the intermittent movement.

Roll of Honor on Question No. 166.

Reply to Question No. 165.

By C. E. Linstruth, Carthage, N. Y.

The Question:

Is there any way to tell what arm is grounded without taking the lamp apart?

The Answer:

Yes, there is a way to tell which arm is grounded without taking the lamp apart, and that is by using a test lamp. Proceed as follows: Put a 110 volt bulb in your test lamp socket and touch the leads to the positive and negative point on the 110 volt side of the rheostat. If the lamp burns up to candle power then the test lamp is O.K. Of course if you have 220 volt current you will have to use two lamps in series for testing the test lamp. Having learned the test lamp is O.K., close the switch controlling the circuit, and with the carbons separated touch the upper carbon or carbon arm with one wire of the test lamp, and the lower carbon or carbon arm with the other wire. The lamp should burn at about one-half candle power, and if it does we know we can now test each arm for ground. Touch one wire of the test lamp to the upper carbon arm on the "live" side of the insulation, and the other wire to the lamphouse or the frame of the lamp, and if the bulb glows, or there is a spark when contact is made or broken it is proof that the lower arm is grounded. If when placing one wire on bottom carbon arm and the other wire on the lamphouse or frame of the lamp, the bulb lights or there is a spark it is proof that the upper carbon arm is grounded. Before making tests, however, one should be careful that the mica insulation is not bridged with carbon dust, or something of that kind.

All of which is correct, except that, while I do not know positively, still I think that the test lamp would burn to candle power, or very nearly candle power, when touched to the upper and lower carbons, under the conditions named, because the resistance of the rheostat to the passage of ½ ampere of current would hardly be sufficient to reduce the voltage appreciably. If I am wrong correct me. Another thing: All those who answered this question failed to mention the very best test there is, viz: a magneto bell, or a bell and several batteries in series. The test with the magneto bell is a particularly efficient one, because the magneto develops high voltage and has very little amperage. The bell and battery is a good test also, provided there be a number of cells in series in order to get considerable voltage. The test lamp is the thing the operator would naturally use, but I regard the bell and battery as being equally efficient, and easier for the operator who is not very well posted on electrical action to use. To test with either the magneto bell, or bell and battery, simply touch one lead to the carbon arm and the other to the frame of the lamp. If you get a ring the insulation is not good, if you do not it is O.K.

Some time ago I took up the question of the change-over sign with the general manager of one of the large producing concerns. This gentleman gave careful attention to my arguments for more than an hour, agreed with me that something ought to be done; also he agreed to take the matter up with the studios and get action if possible.

After two or three months had elapsed without any aparent result, I wrote asking what, if anything, has been done, and now from the sales manager of the distributing end of the corporation comes the following:

> Replying to correspondence you have had with our corporation relative to the change-over sign for multiple reel releases, wish to advise you that while this subject was discussed with you by our general manager, we are not apt to be so familiar with the subject as we might be, but from our experience in the past, we have found that it is absolutely unnecessary for the operator to punch the last scene in each reel in order to warn him of the aprpoaching end of the reel. We also believe that, while the change-over sign may be helpful it is not necessary, as any operator can easily find out when he is nearing the end of the reel if he has any experience at all in running a machine, and gives his entire attention while running it. If you have anything to suggest, or any light you can throw on this subject which you feel is not clear to me, I shall be pleased to have such information.

And now what do you think of that! For the past year this department has made strenuous efforts to abate the punch marks all too prevalent in the last scenes of multiple reel releases, which same constitutes an outrage on the audience, and tends to very materially lessen the value of multiple reel releases, not only of other producers but of the productions of the corporation in question. We have also interviewed producers, called their attention to this absolutely unnecessary evil, and have from time to time published various practical methods of incorporating a change-over sign into the negative, yet here comes a man, who is presumed to be in close touch with everything which affects the welfare of his organization, and calmly informs us that he would like to be informed on this subject if there is anything we feel we can suggest. He also says it is absolutely unnecessary for the operator to punch the last scene in each reel, and while he believes a change-over sign may be helpful it is not necessary; also any operator can easily find out when he is nearing the end of the reel if he has any experience at all in running a machine, and gives his entire attention to running it. If the matter was not such a serious one we would feel inclined to laugh. No, my dear sir, it is not—it really is not necessary that the operator punch these films, BUT HE DOES PUNCH THEM, and after all that is the main thing to be considered, isn't it? The punching has been going on for more than a year, and you, Mr. Producer, have not been able to stop it, have you, although I venture the assertion that the last ten to fifty feet of at least 50,000 reels of film have been uterly ruined, and millions of these punch marks are slapped in the faces of audiences every day. Your saying "it is not necessary" is on a par with the man who says it is not necessary to go to the theater, and therefore is a waste of money, but the money continues to be wasted. We DO go to the theater, and the operator DOES punch the films, and what is more he will probably continue to punch them until you, Mr. Producer, wake up and exercise at least ordinary horse sense by incorporating into your multiple reel releases an adequate change-over sign, AT LEAST THREE OR FOUR OF WHICH HAVE BEEN PUBLISHED IN THE DEPARTMENT DURING THE PAST YEAR—ALL OF THEM PERFECTLY PRACTICAL.

And what do you think of the statement "if he has any experience at all in running a machine and gives his entire attention to running it"? What do you operators who are compelled to project a picture, thread the idle machine, change the carbons in the idle machine, rewind and repair films, all at one and the same time, think of that proposition? "Give his entire atention"? is rather amusing to you, is it not?

The whole thing boils down to just this. This producing corporation proposes to side-step its plain duty to incorporate a change-over sign by throwing the burden on the operator. In effect this gentleman's letter says: Oh, we don't want to be bothered, or put to the expense of incorporating a change-over sign. You look all those films over every day when you get a new show and fix up a change-over dope sheet, or else, if you prefer it, violate the fire laws by yanking open the magazine door every five minutes at the end of each reel.

THAT IS PRECISELY, IN PLAIN ENGLISH, WHAT THE STATEMENT OF THIS GENTLEMAN AMOUNTS TO.

This department don't expect any consideration of any kind whatsoever from the producing corporations for the operator. He is merely the insignificant atom who re-produces the art of their ten-thousand-dollar-a-week star on the screens. He is only the "unfortunate circumstance" who either places the producers' products before the audience as a splendid photoplay, or as a jumping, shadowy travesty on the original, according to the amount of skill he possesses; therefore why should the great producer bother with him? Of course if he has skill, and is allowed by the theater manager to use it, the producers' productions will be what they are supposed to be, and will therefore succeed. But if he has no skill, or is careless, incompetent, or is not allowed to use the skill he does possess to the best advantage, then Mr. Producer can work himself black in the face and his products will amount to nothing insofar as the individual audience be concerned, since they won't be re-produced properly.

There are altogether too many producers who seem to have, though the good God knows where they got it, an idea that the projection of pictures is purely a mechanical operation which any fool can perform. This department has for years been literally fighting to raise the standard of operating room practice to a plane where the modern, magnificent photoplays will be placed on the screen in all their original glory, but I am sorry to say that all the direct help we get from the producers on this particular proposition you could stick in your eye, without injuring the optics in the least.

This article may be worded rather strong, but it is somewhat discouraging to get such letters as this from big producers, who ought to know better, but apparently don't.

Speaks for Itself.

> Mr. F. H. Richardson, Moving Picture World, New York City.
> My Dear Mr. Richardson—I wish to take the opportunity of thanking you personally for your attendance here during the Convention of the North Carolina Branch of the Exhibitors' League, which has just closed. Your presence, beyond the shadow of a doubt, has been productive of much and lasting good, and although these thanks are personal, I feel absolutely positive that I am voicing the sentiments of all in presenting them.
> Please accept my very best wishes for yourself during the holiday season and the entire coming year. Yours very truly,
> R. V. Anderson, Manager

And it will thus be seen that the exchange men, as well as others, find value in my humble endeavors. I appreciate voluntary letters of This kind. It is such things as this that make life worth living. It is no joke to leave home and make a trip involving almost a thousand miles, particularly in disagreeable winter weather and right at the verge of the holiday season, but a voluntary letter of this kind makes one forget all of the hardship and remember only that he has really accomplished something, not only for the good of those he tried to serve but for the good of the moving picture industry as well.

My compliments, Brother Anderson, and may you enjoy all the blessings Providence is able to bestow during the coming year.

Operator Graduate.

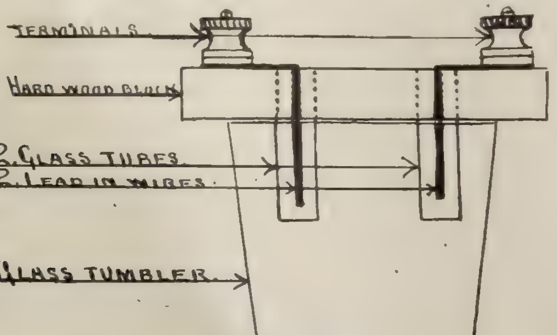
Brother George Viverito, a member of Moving Picture Machine Operators' Local Union, No. 293, I. A., New Orleans, La., is one of those who, graduating from operating, started into the supply business in a small way. He is a skilled repairman, and has built up a supply business of which he has just cause to be proud. Brother Viverito still retains his membership in the local and allows no opportunity of letting the boys at the machine end get by him. He has the name of being a conscientious union man, a hard worker, and a successful supply dealer.

Polarity Tester.

Charles Gibson, Toledo, Ohio, writes:

> Will you please tell me how I can construct an efficient, and at the same time reliable polarity tester. I expect to go on the road presently with an advertising outfit, and it will be essential that I be able to determine the positive from the negative wire, in order to hitch up properly without loss of time.

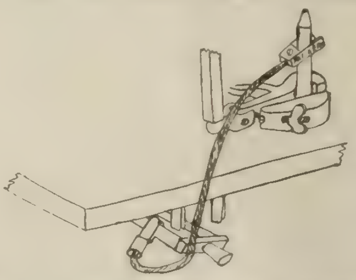
The attached sketch will show you how to construct such a tester, Brother Gibson. But I am inclined to think you will soon discard its use, because experience will soon enable you to detect a wrong hitch almost the instant you make it. To use the tester shown, fill the glass with water, in which you should dissolve about one ordinary level tablespoon of salt, the salt being necessary to reduce the resistance of the water. Next strip the insulation from an inch or so of the end of both wires and stick the raw wires into the salt water as far apart as possible, whereupon fine bubbles will form on one of the wires, and that wire is the negative, if no bubbles form, then slowly bring the wire ends nearer to each other until they do. If the water becomes agitated as soon as you put the wires in, it shows that either there is too much salt or the wires are too near each other. For 220 volt current you will need less salt and a larger vessel than for 110. Don't use a metal vessel unless you want a short circuit and blown fuse; use only glass or porcelain.



Temporary Repair.

Duluth, Minn., writes:

> Do you know of any method of making a quick connection when a wire burns off inside the lamphouse? I have considerable trouble in that respect and thought possibly there might be some way of quickly repairing it of which I am not acquainted.



Yes, Duluth, there is a method, which is shown in the accompanying sketch. This particular plan is patented, and was described in the department a long time ago. I think the illustration makes the thing quite clear. The connecting wire is, of course, asbestos-covered stranded.

I would suggest however, that there ought to be no necessity for any such repair, because your wires ought not to burn off. If you are using heavy amperage, I would suggest that you cut off your asbestos wire just outside the lamphouse, and attach a connector such as is shown at D, Figure 30, Page 89 of the new Handbook. From the other end of this connector connect to the lamp with a short piece of stranded asbestos covered wire, and once every week take this wire out, throw it away, and put in a new piece, particularly the lower one. The upper one might last a little longer. This may seem like waste, but it really is not. After a week's run, using heavy amperage, if you will take this piece of wire out and strip off its insulation you will find that for at least a goodly part of its length it has turned brown, which means that it has been pretty hot. You will also probably find that up near where it joins the lamp it has lost considerable of its "life." It is soft and flabby instead of having some spring to it, and when a wire is in this condition its resistance is high, therefore if you continue to use it you will lose more in resistance in a few hours' run than the piece of wire is worth. This matter is dealt with fully on Page 233 and 271 of the Handbook.

Very Dangerous.

An operator in Vermont recently sent in samples of film cut out of a feature supplied by a "Feature Film Corporation" in Boston. These samples were taken from the first reel of "May Lillie, Queen of the Buffalo Ranch," the total amputation being approximately 36 feet. An examination of the samples showed the film to have been in utterly wretched condition. The samples were mostly tinted film, and the film track was literally torn all to pieces, due unquestionably to cracks in the film track caused primarily by impurities in the dyes which had hardened the emulsion and made the underlying film stock brittle. The operator reported that the reels were not even rewound when received, which is evidence they had had no inspection whatever.

Now, I submit that the sending out of reels uninspected is an utterly indefensible proposition. It constitutes an outrage upon the operator in that he is called upon to, without pay, act the part of exchange film inspector. It constitutes an outrage on the theater manager who has paid for service in at least projectable condition, and, more than this, it places the life of every man, woman and child in that audience in danger. Had the operator undertaken to project the film in question before examining and repairing it, there most certainly would have been trouble, and unless he was right there on the job a fire would in all human prabability have resulted. Query: Had there been a fire and had that fire resulted in injury or death to some of the audience, who would have been the responsible party? Answer: The manager of that exchange, and no one else under the broad canopy of Heaven.

In a case of this kind the exchange manager usually retorts: "Well, the film came in too late to be inspected, and the theater manager would have raised a howl if he had not received it." Yes, that may be all very true, but Mr. Exchange Manager, in that event you should have put a printed notice in each one of those reel cans, reading: This film has not been inspected. Operator kindly inspect, repair and present bill. This would shift the responsibility from the shoulders of the exchange man and put the matter up to the operator, but it would put it up to him on a fair basis. It would not be asking him to perform the work of the inspector minus the pay which an inspector is presumed to receive.

Of course the exchange manager who reads this will no doubt, either, if he has no sense of fairness, laugh or sneer at the proposition of reimbursing the operator, and some of those who don't do that will dismiss the matter with the remark that it would be a fine opening for an operator to put in an unfair bill. Yes, quite true, Mr. Exchange Manager, but would that be any more unfair than the proposition to have the operator do your work for nothing. I doubt it, and moreover, the average exchange is financially better able to stand a slight imposition than the operator is to stand the whole business. If you compel an operator to spend two hours in inspecting and repairing films, that two hours ought to be worth at the least calculation $1.00, all of which you calmly ask the operator to stand. The operator, on the other hand, is hardly to be expected to "do" you out of more than half that sum.

at the very worst. And anyhow you could have a check on the matter by insisting that the theater manager O. K. the time slip. Also I can assure you the operator don't want the job of inspection at any price, hence will be perfectly satisfied to have you do it yourself.

Carbons Flame.

George Eberwine, Marblehead, Ohio, says:

> Have read the department for years, but this is the first time I have troubled you. Can you tell me what makes my carbons flame when starting the arc? Also I must watch it very close to keep it from flaming all through the run. After spending much money on lamphouses, lenses and transformers, I get a quite satisfactory light, but would like to eliminate the flaming at the arc. Have two Edison machines, just alike, attached to economizer, with a rheostat for burning in the carbons before the other operator finishes his reel. My other machine, or arc, always works perfectly and never flames.

I am not sure that I quite understand you, Friend Eberwine. Apparently you are telling me that although both machines are connected to the same economizer, there is flaming at one arc and not at the other. Since you undoubtedly use the same kind of carbons in both lamps, that lets the carbons out, and there are apparently only two remaining possible reasons, one being the lack of ventilation in one of the lamphouses, with better ventilation in the other; the second is that one lamp gets more current than the other. Now if it was ventilation it ought not to effect the arc at the moment of starting, or until the lamphouse got filled up with gas and the whole thing became pretty warm. We may, therefore, lay the matter of the ventilation aside, which brings it down to the proposition that, for some reason or other, one lamp is getting more current than the other. You say both your machines are connected to the same economizer. That being true, one of the circuits must have more resistance than the other. This may be due to the fact that the wires of one circuit are smaller than the wires of the other; that there are some poor connections in one circuit which offers considerable resistance; that one of the lamps offers high resistance at the point of contact with the carbon. In other words, the carbon jaws of one lamp do not make good contact with the carbons, thus setting up considerable resistance. Yes, and, come to think of it, one lamp may be slightly grounded. Better test out for grounds first. To do this take an ordinary 110 volt lamp and attach two wires to its binding post, each one about a foot long, separate your carbons, close the switches and proceed as follows: first attach one of the wires to the frame of the lamp at any convenient point, then with the other end of the wire touch first the upper and then the lower carbon arm. If the lamp lights on either one of them that indicates faulty insulation on that arm, but even if the lamp does not light you should carefully watch the wire as you pass its end along the metal to see if there is a spark. There may be a ground which is not heavy enough to carry sufficient current to heat the filament of the lamp. Next extend one of the wires to a permanent, known ground, such as a water pipe—not a gas pipe, but a water pipe, or to the conduit of the system, which is presumed to be thoroughly grounded, and then touch the other wire to the upper and then lower carbon arm of the lamp. The latter test, however, is of no value if the system be a three-wire Edison in which the neutral is permanently grounded. The simplest method of testing the Edison three-wire system is to first, the lower carbon arm. If the lamp lights on either, that indicates faulty insulation on the opposite arm, but even if the lamp does not after having made certain that the machine is not grounded, test in the usual way. In ground testing it is necessary that you use common sense and carefully trace the possible electrical action. If there is a ground you will get a light or spark.

For a complete explanation of this matter, I would refer you to pages 255, 256, 257, 258, 259, 260, 261 and 262 of the Handbook, wherein the matter is not only fully explained, but is also illustrated. I would recommend that every operator establish a permanent ground in his operating room as per Fgure 108, page 258 of the Handbook.

High Voltage.

During the last two years there has been an increasing tendency on the part of high class theaters to use very high amperage in the projection of motion pictures. Here in New York City as high as 90 amperes D. C. have been used, and 70 is nothing at all uncommon, but to the credit of the operators in charge, most of the 90 ampere theaters have made a material reduction.

Now this department has time and again pointed out the absolutely indisputable fact that when you go above a given crater area you, due to limitations of the optical system of the projector, lose a tremendous percentage of the extra electrical energy expended. When one reaches the point where 90 amperes are used, I do not believe he is getting an excess of 10 per cent. of the light value of the last 10 amperes, and from 70 to 80 amperes I doubt if the percentage of the actual value will exceed 20. There are several equations entering into this matter, one of which is that in order to secure a quiet arc, when pulling such high amperage, one of necessity pulls a very long arc, and in order to secure the stability of the long arc, the cored lower carbon becomes a necessity. Now the long arc is, from the projection point of view, not an efficient arc. Also, as has been many times pointed out, the use of a cored carbon below not only cuts the actual quality and quantity of light reaching the condenser, but it also lowers its tone value, due to the immense quantity of gas produced by the core in the lower carbon and thrown up directly in front of the crater.

Just how far it is possible to go in the matter of amperage I cannot say, but I think beyond 60 D.C. the operator will not get an appreciable increase in screen illumination, and certainly will not get enough additional light to justify the expenditure of current.

I am also firmly convinced that a lens system can be evolved which will actually enable a 40 ampere arc to put more light on the screen, or, in other words, produce a higher screen brilliancy than is at present produced by the 70, 80 or 90 ampere arc.

But to get back to the original argument. I would suggest to operators that, in the interest of the advancement of the profession of projection they ought to try out the charts which have been presented in this department, and make reports of the results. I, of course, have reports from some operators, but what we need is a lot of them, so as to check up one against the other, and thus determine with considerable accuracy just where we are "at." Of course, if operators are satisfied, and refuse their help in matters of this kind except where they be specifically, personally asked to make tests, why they will hamper the work, and just to that extent retard the advancement of their profession. This department, gentlemen, is trying to help you, and will do so regardless of your apathy. It can help you a very great deal more, however, if you, in turn, show your sense of appreciation by making tests of the various things submitted, and report to the department. Your name will, of course, not be used if you do not wish it mentioned. Do we get your help, or don't we?

From Pocatello.

W. P. Horne, Pocatello, Idaho, writes as follows:

> Dear Brother—For you are indeed a brother to us poor struggling operators. By "struggling" I mean the effort and labor of trying to get a little genuine, useful knowledge into our heads—not the hardships of the trade. I myself sincerely regret that there are so many thick skulls who don't, because they will not, give credit where credit is due. I have studied the department for a number of years and it has been a very great help. I also have made use of the last edition of your Handbook, and have found it to be of untold value.
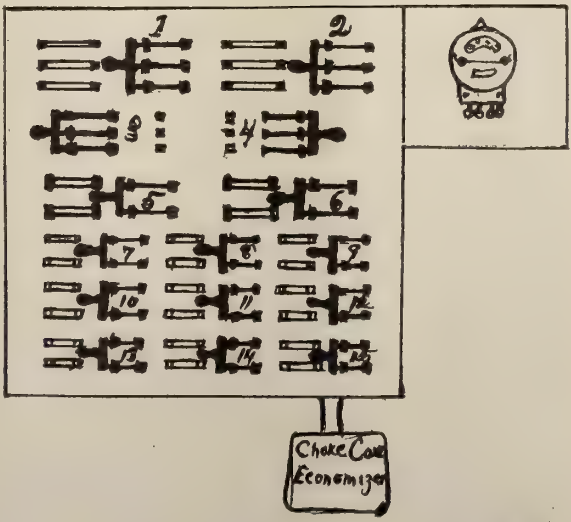
> I am going to take a chance, and am sending in an answer to question 167; also a diagram of the wiring of the New Lyric theater, Logan, Utah, which I designed and installed three years ago. I do this because I notice you were not satisfied with the replies to question 146, which was answered in issue of September 30, and you said you hoped to see the matter taken up again in the department. I am therefore submitting this plan for your approval or disapproval. I found it very convenient and economical in every way, but you may see methods by which it can be improved, and I am always willing and anxious to receive suggestions. I wish you and the department every success through the coming year, and I sincerely trust I shall have the opportunity of meeting you at no distant day.

As to the switchboard diagram, why it is very good, Brother Horne, but you have, unfortunately, used blue ink in making the drawing, which means that in order to reproduce I must trace it all over with black—darn you.

> 1. Switch controlling office switchboard. 2. Main switch from street mains. 3. Double-throw switch arranged to throw in this board to feed from stage board in case of trouble on street mains. 4. Double-throw switch controlling main house lights, arranged with similar one on stage board so they can be operated from either. 5. 220 volt circuit for rectifier. 6. 110 volt circuit machine lamps. Had a double-throw switch in front of each machine so this circuit could be cut in on either machine any time for warming up carbons, etc. 7-8-10. Front lighting above marquise. 9-11-12-14-15. Auditorium lights divided into proper circuits. 13. Operating room.



> The dim lights, exits, fans, stairway to balcony, box office, office, lavatory and lobby lights were controlled from switchboard in the office as the operation of these are at the conven-

> Having the house lights divided off on the operating room board was very convenient as when running intermissions, etc., it was not always necessary to use all of them, but for road shows they were all left in.
> The double-throw switches, so they can all be thrown on instantly from either operating rom or stage, I consider not only a convenience but a necessity.
> Wiring was done on the three-wire system, and was properly balanced with the exception of the A. C. emergency circuit for machines.
> Am very much in favor of the operator having a switch controlling the house lights and in straight picture houses would also advise having the double throw arranged on the office board instead of the stage. This costs a little more to install but pays.

My father ran the first Oregon Short Line engine that went into Pocatello, and I arrived on the scene when Pocatello consisted of a telegraph office, in a dismantled freight car, plus a mighty poor eating house, and a very small round house. I expect to pass through there next spring, and intend to try to stop off two or three hours if I can just for old times' sake. The switchboard plan seems to be excellent and I see no criticism to make. As to your words of commendation, why they are thoroughly appreciated.

Condenser Combination.

Otto Anders, Milwaukee, Wis., says:

> Am using 28 amperes D. C.; 1½ inch diameter objective lens; 5 inch back focus; distance between condensers ½ inch. What do I need? Present condensers are 8½ and 9 inches, and different lenses are recommended every time I purchase one. Acting on your advice I have ordered a Preddy condenser holder.

Well, Brother Anders, I am not yet in a position to guarantee results, but I think you will find the following to be pretty good. It will be all right with the single exception of a possibly too large spot. First you are going to have a loss of light with that objective, no matter what you may do. The least possible diameter, with 22 inches between the apex of the front lens and the film, is 2 inches when the lens is working at 5 inches back focus. I would therefore advise you to change your objective to one of 2 inch diameter, and then get your lamphouse back just as far as you can, up to 22 inches from the apex of the condenser to the film, and, using the meniscus-bi-convex set preferably, use one 6½ inch meniscus and one 6½ bi-convex. If you use plano-convex, use one 5½ inch and one 7½ inch, with the 7½ inch next the film. Mind you, I don't guarantee the result will be all it should be, but if it is not good with the lamphouse clear back, then try moving the lamphouse up until you get a sharply defined spot.

You may wonder that I am still not able to give absolutely reliable advice on this matter. The reason for this lies in the fact that the present projector optical system is in itself full of faults. The projection machines themselves are limited as to distance between condenser and film, and it is difficult to secure all the different focal lengths made necessary by varying conditions. In other words, the present optical system of the projector is extremely imperfect and needs a complete and very thorough overhauling.

Has Moved.

S. S. Holt, Superior, Wis., who was formerly president of Local Union No. 389, Fort Dodge, Iowa, writes:

> I was compelled to leave Iowa on account of my wife's health. Am now located in Duluth, but run a machine in Superior, across the head of the lake from that city. There is a local in Superior, but it was only chartered August 22 of this year. Nearly all the men were members of Local 32 of Duluth. The boys here are now giving a rigid examination and require a percentage of 75 in order to pass.

The Superior Daily Telegram has the following to say about Brother Holt: "S. S. Holt, who is now operating at the Broadway theater, is the most experienced man in the business at the head of the Lakes. Mr. Holt, who was president of the Ft. Dodge, Iowa, Motion Picture Machine Operators' Union, came here with his wife. He has been active in union circles ever since the union was formed. Mr. Holt first began operating when the motion picture business was in its infancy, and the theaters were store rooms. He at one time owned a theater of his own in Minneapolis, and has operated in many Iowa cities and towns. His work at the Broadway of this city is ample evidence of his ability in his chosen line of work."

Worn Machines.

Indianapolis, Ind., comes forward with the following:

> Am running an old Standard American machine, with which I get a fair picture. There is, however, hardly a reel that does not break three or four times, and I am unable to locate the seat of the trouble. The cam pin came loose about a week ago and broke the star. But the manager says he will not put in a new machine, and that all that is needed is an operator. Perhaps he is right, but, nevertheless, if he will get me a new, up-to-date projector I will put as good a picture on the screen as any in the city; also I will try to get a better one. I was a member of the union until a short time back, but violated one of the by-laws, and am now working on permit. This limits me to jobs which the other boys don't want.
> The machine I am using has been in place for five years, and I guess more has been spent for repairs than a new machine would have cost.

Well, brother, in the first place, you should not have violated the by-laws. I don't know what particular one you fractured, but I trust when you are again reinstated you will be more careful.

As to the film breaking, why that might be due to any one of a number of reasons, but inasmuch as you have not set forth details it is difficult to diagnose the case. I would suggest, however, that you examine your take-up tension, and only have it tight enough to just barely rewind the whole reel. I would also suggest you look carefully to the tension of your machine and see that it is not twice what it ought to be. You say you have a Handbook. Well, I would particularly commend to your attention "General Instruction No. 9," page 463.

As to the new machine end of it, if you have an American Standard five years old, and if it has been in constant use, your manager is losing money at the box office by keeping that projector. If he only has one projector he would find that a new, up-to-date machine will only have to improve results on his screen sufficiently to bring in about twenty-seven cents a day added revenue in order to pay for the new machine in three years, and certainly no manager could dispute the fact that an up-to-date, modern projection machine will improve the results on the screen as against an old, badly worn, out-of-date projector five years old at least enough to bring that much added patronage. It would be worse than foolish to argue against a proposition of that kind. Your manager can buy an up-to-date, high class motor drive machine for about $300. Assuming this machine will only last three years, and be worth absolutely nothing at the end of that time, divide the number of days in three years into 30,000 cents, and you will see how much he will have to take in additional in order to have it pay for itself.

Which Is "Stronger?"

Coplay, Pa., says:

> One of our managers received a shock from the A. C. switch, and claims that A. C. is stronger than D. C., voltage and amperage being the same. Now I presume I could pass an examination for operator's license, because I am fairly well posted, as I have studied hard on the electrical end of things, though I am not so well posted on the practical. Will you kindly tell me what is the right dope on this "stronger" question?

That depends, my friend, on what the manager means by "stronger." If he speaks of the effect of the shock, why yes, you feel an alternating current shock more than you do a direct current shock, voltage being the same. This is not because the current is "stronger," but by reason of the fact that the alternations of the current are felt by the nerves of the body, and this causes a very different sort of feeling. If you take a mild shock of 60 cycle alternating current for a second or so you can distinctly feel the alterations, whereas with direct current you will only feel a sort of stinging sensation.

If the manager means that A. C. is stronger than D. C. in that it will do more work, voltage and amperage being the same, why that is not true, except that alternating current motors have certain advantages over direct current motors, but whether these advantages are such that will actually deliver more power than will direct current motors I don't know. Will some of our better posted motor men kindly advise us on this point?

Baltimore Local Elects Officers.

Baltimore Local Union No. 181 has selected the following officers to conduct their affairs during the coming year:

President and business manager (re-elected), G. Kingston Howard; first vice-president, William George; second vice-president, Norbert Haefele; third vice-president, Nelson Baldwin; financial secretary-treasurer, Carroll G. Bayne; recording secretary, Otto J. Niquet; business agent, William F. Evans; sergeant-at-arms, Harry T. Hess; delegate to I. A. Convention, G. Kingston Howard.

So far as the individual knowledge of this particular editor goes, the selection is a good one, and the Baltimore Local may therefore look for prosperity during the coming year, remembering that the prosperity of any local and the efficiency and energy of its officials are intimately connected and that, no matter how able the officers may be, they cannot accomplish the greatest possible amount of good without the active backing of a united membership.

FRAME LINE.—The frame line is the position of the line between the frame in reference to the perforation. It is a great pity that there is no universally accepted standard for the position of the frame line, some manufacturers maintaining that it should be at the center of the perforation hole, others that it should be midway between the perforations, and still others having it at various points between. A few camera makers, recognizing their inability to suit the demands of all the different manufacturers with a fixed frame line, have provided an easy method for adjusting the frame line to any desired point. The Universal camera contains a gauge showing the position of the frame line which may be adjusted by simply turning a screw. The frame line which seems to have the preponderance of usage is sometimes called the Pathe standard, which is midway between the perforations, although there are many using the Gaumont standard, which is in the center of the perforation hole. Most makes of cameras require the services of an expert mechanic to change the frame line, and if a different frame line is ever required it must be changed again. If you have to do work for various companies by all means purchase a camera with an adjustable frame line, or at least one in which the construction permits the least amount of mechanical work to affect the change.

Focusing Device.—Focusing devices are many and various, some of them being very easy and quick while others require much focusing, opening of the camera and partial unthreading, to enable one to focus the image. A direct focusing device is one in which the image may be viewed from the back of the camera through a focusing tube without any other bother than merely uncapping the focusing tube. These direct devices are generally furnished with some sort of magnifying glass to magnify the image upon the film. Nearly all focusing devices, however, require the removal of the film from the aperture plate and the substitution of a piece of matte film or ground glass where the light is not very strong, since the density of the negative film cuts off too much light for the image to be plainly visible. Most cameras which do not permit of a direct focusing tube reaching through to the back of the camera have a prism or mirror fixed in the camera in such a position that the image may be viewed through an eye piece fixed to the side of the camera. The Bell & Howell permits the camera to be shifted to one side, leaving the lens in the position at which it is to photograph the scene, at the same time bringing into position a ground glass upon which the scene may be focused. The Newman & Sinclair, an English camera, uses the reflex principle, so that by pressing a spring one may view the image reflected upon the ground glass without moving the camera or film. It seems strange that other makers have not adopted this reflex principle, as it appears to be the handiest and quickest of any device for viewing the image direct on ground glass without going to the trouble of unthreading the negative from the gate, with the subsequent loss of light-struck film. There is still another method of focusing direct on the film used by many cameramen, which is an opening, or tube, with a cap placed in front of the camera and as near the lens flange as possible. By removing this cap the image may be viewed directly on the front of the film. The principal disadvantage of this is that one is able to obtain only an oblique view of the image, which makes it difficult for the eye to focus upon the different portions of the frame. Lenses are often provided for accurate focusing, while many cameramen provide their own, sometimes having several of various strengths. A high power magnifying glass permits of the examination of only a portion of the frame, while a low power which has a field covering the entire frame may not be sufficiently powerful to obtain the most accurate sharpness of focus.

View Finder.—There are three types of view finders in general use, the most common being the camera obscura, or Pathe type, which is simply a small box provided with a lense and ground glass and means for attaching to the camera. The field of the finder should be larger than that taken by the camera lens, the lines corresponding to the frame being marked upon the ground glass. The next type is that of the direct vision finder, which is simply a negative lens with cross lines and sight for keeping it centered. The third type is simply a frame with cross threads and a sight for centering, the adjustment of the cross threads being such as to indicate the edges of the picture. It is used by looking through it directly at the scene without the intervention of any lens whatsoever. As it is not possible to attach any type of view finder to the camera so as to give the same point of view as the camera lens some allowance or adjustment must be made for the difference in the viewing angle, and it must be kept in mind that this angle of view varies as the distance from the camera to the object varies. Many view finders are provided with a means for adjustment according to the distance to the scene being taken. If this is not provided for the camera operator must be able to tell how much the image shifts from the lines indicated upon his finder, and he must also bear in mind in using either of the last two types of finders that they are only correct when the eye is held in one certain position in relation to the view finder. Otherwise what he sees in the view finder will not be the same as what is being photographed at the picture plate.

Trick Crank.—The trick, or single picture crank, is not always provided on all cameras, although it is an absolute necessity in many kinds of trick work, especially the variety known as stop-motion. This is a spindle to which the regular crank may be attached, but which instead of taking eight pictures to the turn only takes one picture, or frame, at each revolution. Cameras equipped for trick work should have a trick crank, a reverse take-up and an accurate footage indicator. The standard number of frames per crank revolution in ordinary taking is eight pictures per turn, two turns per second, although there are some cameras, such as the Edison, which take sixteen pictures per turn, and one or two of German make which take six or seven frames per crank revolution.

Lens and Front Board.—The lens of a camera is, of course, one of the most important parts of the camera. The merits of the different makes of lenses need not be entered into in this discussion, but the means of adjustment to the camera, its rigidity in relation to the aperture plate, and the ease with which its adjustments may be performed are properly specifications belonging to the camera. The front board is the panel of wood or metal surrounding the lens, and usually, though not always, acts as a support for the lens. When it is used as a support for the lens the flange holding the lens and mount is fastened to the front board. When the front board is used to support the lens it is highly important that it be fastened firmly to that part of the mechanism which is the frame for the aperture plate. In many makes of cameras the front board is of wood attached to the camera case, and is independent of the mechanism. This is an entirely wrong principal of construction, as any swelling or binding, or warping of the case is very apt to alter the distance between the front board and the aperture plate. It is customary to rely upon a focusing scale engraved upon the lens mount, but if the support of the lens mount moves even a small fraction of an inch from its calculated position it will necessarily throw the image out of focus. Cameras of this type are much improved by substituting a rigid metal panel for the wooden one supplied with the camera, and having a mechanic place metal struts, or pillars, from the mechanism frame extending outward to the front board, to which it should be fastened with machine screws. The Bell & Howell and the Ernemann cameras have a revolving front board, to which several different focal lengths of lenses may be attached, any one of which can be brought into use by pressing a release catch and swinging the desired lens into position. This is probably the quickest and handiest method of using several lenses of different focal length. In the Bell & Howell, the camera is entirely of metal and the front board is very accurately made and held in position, while in the Ernemann the turret carrying the lenses is supported by the wooden frame of the camera. In the Universal camera the front board does not serve to hold the lens mount, which is held by a metal frame which is screwed directly to the aperture plate. In the Pathe camera the lens support is also fastened rigidly to the camera frame and is independent of the front board. It is important to know the shortest distance permissible between the back of the lens mount and aperture plate. Many cameras are so constructed that the position of the shutter and movement mechanism will not permit of the use of short focus lenses. It is often desirable to use lenses of less than two inches focal length, and yet there are many cameras which cannot be used with a lens of a focal length shorter than two inches. It is very desirable in a camera that any type of lens may be used, and that the mechanism of the camera permit of any kind of lens being quickly inserted or exchanged for another.

THE design of this department is to diffuse among musicians and exhibitors correct information on all important subjects pertaining to music for the film, to improve the quality of playing and to raise the standard of music in motion picture theaters.

Any question concerning music; suitable instrumentation; questions relating to the organ and mechanical players; in fact, any queries, criticisms or suggestions dealing with the musical interpretation for moving pictures will be answered through this department.

LOOKING through Wagner's musico-dramatic works we must acknowledge, whatever musical creed we have, that there are parts which are of a beauty unsurpassed in the past and present literature of music; parts that will take hold of us with irresistible force, sweep through our system like a tornado and often leave us exhausted and prostrated. Any person who has been fortunate to hear "Gotterdaemmerung" cannot forget the dramatic power of this enormous tragedy, the intense passionate and fiercely emotional music that can never be forgotten.

The same feelings will be experienced in "Tristan and Isolde," and in still stronger measure. Whether this stirring up of one's innermost being is the final object of general art may perhaps be questioned, but it is surely one of the principal factors in dramatic art. It must take hold of us, force us to follow the action on the stage and to actually feel and live over again with the composer what has moved his heart. Only that which has lived and stormed, suffered and complained in the composer's heart, will ignite the audience, and stir it up.

Dramatic music appeals more directly than any other to our heart and emotions. The composer with the most human feeling, with the most passion, will follow his instinct a great deal more than his scheming reason and will always be sure of moving his audience, especially those that come to him not blase, but with unspoiled heart and undegenerated ideas and nerves.

Wagner once said, with certain pride, that his audience was up in the gallery and that he always was sure to touch the heart of the common people, whether or not they knew anything about his revolutionary ideas in music, his orchestration, harmonies or leit-motifs.

Such part of Wagner's works, where the dramatic flood rises high, where he has left philosophy and deliberately planned theatrical effects at home and has followed his strong emotional and dramatic nature, where he reveals to us the depths of his own burning passion, these are the parts that are most beautiful in his dramas. The orchestration is here the most ingenious, spontaneous and striking; the melodies the most characteristic and beautiful, the harmonies the most suggestive and touching.

Take, for instance, Siegfried's horn-call in the end of the greatest of all paeons in the "Gotterdaemmerung." Since Siegfried's youthful days this happy phrase has gaily fluttered from the horn with its merry 9-8 time and its bright major key. Now it appears in 4-4 time and in minor, laden down with heavy harmony, the cheerful rhythm is torn to pieces; tired and exhausted, it staggers to its end and the syncopated notes make it appear like a face drawn up in agony and wretched pain.

Wagner's musical expressions of human emotions are wonderfully true and characteristic as they are beautiful, touching and pathetic. These passages appeal to everybody capable of being moved by art; they are aglow with intense fire, fraught with anguish, and with their mournful pathos they bring tears to the strongest man.

Take, for instance, Tannhauser's "Pilgrimage to Rome," musically narrating the suffering of the minstrel; the first act of the "Valkyrie," with its quick changes of emotional pictures; take other places in "Lohengrin," "Tristan," "Nibelungen" and "Parsifal." Wherever we look we find the emotional life reflected in the masterly handled orchestra. Here it is the far distant horn of Dunding which speaks of the trembling fear of Sieglinde; again it is the beautiful phrase in the tender woodwind recalling in Parsifal the dim picture of his mother, lost in early youth. Then again it is the sorrowful little melodic phrase which foretells to us the sad fate of Tristan and Isolde.

In such moments Wagner never fails; he always accomplishes his purpose to impress upon his hearers just what is felt in his own heart, whether his means be a broad, sweeping melody, a small tympani solo, a sequence of brilliant irridescent chords or an intense phrase, which, like the outburst of uncontrollable passion, rends through the orchestra with its unruly syncopated rhythm.

Bonnet, Distinguished French Organist, Arrives.

Joseph Bonnet, the distinguished French organist, arrived in New York January 14 from Paris via Bordeaux, on the steamer Chicago.

Mr. Bonnet, one of the most prominent pupils of the late Alexandre Guilmant, has been for years organist of Saint Eustache, Paris, and the successor of the late Alexandre Guilmant as official organist for the Society of Concerts of the National Conservatory. Among recent honors conferred upon him was his unanimous election as Honorary Fellow of the Royal College of Organists of London, this election taking place at the time of the fiftieth anniversary of that institution.

Mr. Bonnet, who is here on leave of absence from military service, will remain only three or four months and during that time will make an extended tour, during which he will be heard in practically all of the larger cities of the United States. Since the beginning of the war he has been almost continually at the front. This is the first visit of a distinguished foreign organist to the United States since the last tour of the late Alexandre Guilmant at the time of the St. Louis Exposition. There is much interest to hear him and already a lively demand for his services as recitalist.

Serious Playing in the Theater.

M. P. Moller reports the completion of his fourteenth organ contract for William Fox, in the New Terminal Theater, at Newark, New Jersey.

This instrument, like the others, is a three-manual arranged partly on the stage and partly in the house in such a manner that either section is a complete two-manual organ.

The Fox policy in exhibiting pictures is generally considered very advanced musically. His larger theaters each have an orchestra of twenty or thirty men under competent directors, and the organists are men of high attainments. On his staff more than twenty organists are men who have held important cathedral positions in Europe or England and the other players are without exception men who have held important positions as church or concert players.

It is interesting to note that in William Fox theaters the organists are expected to play in a "legitimate" manner. Waltzes and rags on the organ are taboo. The player is expected to exploit the dignity and grandeur of his instrument in the serious and subjective parts of the picture. This is on the theory that the organ has its greatest usefulness not as an imitator of the orchestra, but as a foil or contrast to it.

In these theaters the organists are not encouraged to thunder on their instruments and are under strong injunction as to heavy pedal work. Quiet and unobtrusive melody is the desideratum and anything calculated to detract attention from the picture is discouraged.

Music Every Musician Should Know.

Mignon Overture—Thomas.

"Mignon" was the composer's most successful opera. It won success at its premiere at the Paris Opera Comique in 1866, and its fame and popularity traveled into the nooks and corners of the universe where opera is given. Save for occasional performances of "Hamlet," "Mignon" is probably the only one of this famous musician's operas which still thrives outside of his own country. And the Overture is even more universally heard than the opera itself.

It has been suggested that this overture might more aptly be called "Introduction," since it has none of the earmarks of the classic overture form, but the term "Overture" has become so elastic that it does not seem out of place here. The thematic material of the "Mignon" Overture is taken from the opera, and its chief themes, following a brief, effective introduction, are "Know'st Thou the Land" (which is sung by Mignon) and the Polacca, or polonaise, which is the vehicle for the display of the coloratura voice of Filina, and is sung by her in the second act. It is a graceful overture and is received with as much favor in the concert room as it is in the theater.

Hawaiian Orchestra Music.

The following Hawaiian orchestra music is published by Carl Fischer, New York City:

One, Two, Three, Four (Hawaiian Waltz); Hilo Hawaiian (One Step); Like-No-a-Like (Hawaiian Love Song); Kahola Honolulu (Hawaiian," a selection of Hawaiian numbers arranged by M. L. Lake, (Waltzes); Kilauea (Hawaiian Patrol); Aloha Oe (Waltz), and "Hawaiian," a selection of Hawaiian numbers arranged by M. L. Lake, containing the following:

My Honolulu Tomboy; Lei Aloha; My Tropical Hula Girl; The Old Plantation; On the Beach at Waikiki; Like-no-a-like; One, Two, Three, Four; Aloha Oe; Hula o Makee; Pua Mohola; Kaui I Ka Huahuai; Lika I Ke Ahola; My Honolulu Girl; Hawaii Ponoi (National Hymn,, and My Hawaiian Maid.

Motion Picture Educator

Conducted by REV. W. H. JACKSON and MARGARET I. MACDONALD

Catalogue of Educational Pictures

Released Between October 1, 1916, and January 1, 1917.

Compiled by Margaret I. MacDonald.

THIS list of educational pictures released between October 1, 1916, and January 1, 1917, does not include the various news pictorials issued from week to week, such as the Hearst-Pathe News, the Animated Weekly, the Mutual Weekly and Selig-Tribune. Attached to the catalogue will be found a list of selected films suitable for children's programs and for the family group, information regarding addresses of the manufacturing and distributing companies mentioned herein, and the location of the different productions through their brand names.

AGRICULTURE.

Farm, a Back-yard—(Reel Life No. 23)—Mutual-Gaumont—Oct. 8 (showing how a variety of apples, pears and smaller fruits were grown on a 40 by 150 foot lot in Providence, R. I.)

Farm, a Swedish—Vitagraph-General Film—Dec. 4.

Farm, High Life on a—Powers-Universal—(Gives comparisons between the farm life of the past and present, pointing to modern methods now attainable in rural life).

BIOGRAPHY.

Hale, the Life of Nathan—("The Heart of a Hero")—World Film-Peerless—November (5 parts).

"The Southern Highlands" (Pathe).

COVERING a half reel of film, "The Southern Highlands" is coupled with an animated cartoon. It allows us to glimpse at the people of the mountains of Tennessee and North Carolina and their primitive dwellings. An old woman carding, spinning and weaving is an interesting sight as an example of some of the primitive methods still in use in those districts. Attractive views of mountain streams followed by a tempting sample of the edible fish which they produce, and also views of a possum hunt with closeups of young possums form a part of this picture.

"Coast Resorts of Normandy" (Mutual-Gaumont).

"Mutual Tours Around the World No. 13" contains interesting scenes at the main coast resorts of Normandy. Among these is Honfleur and Etretat, showing the fishing fleet of the latter and the fisherfolk at work, men and women pulling side by side at the fishing nets. Scenes at Trouville, the most frequented of the coast resorts, and a rendezvous for yachtsmen, show the bathing beach and movable bathing houses and other scenes of interest.

"Winter in the Vosges Mountains" (Mutual-Gaumont).

One of the first views shown in connection with this subject is the French town of Gerardmer high in the mountains. Following this are scenes on the mountain streams, winter sports, including sledding, skiing and other attractive winter sights.

"San Diego, Cal." (Mutual-Gaumont).

Views of one of the most fascinating spots on the Pacific coast, San Diego, California, are shown in "See America First," No. 73. Among the most interesting of these are a bird's eye view of Fifth street, San Diego's main thoroughfare, Coronado Beach, the old Spanish lighthouse at Point Loma, the Sunset Cliffs, the Bennington Monument, the Hotel Del Coronado, the Temple of Peace, a Theosophist institution; the Raja Yaga College, Ramona's Marriage Place, the home of Schumann-Heink, Balboa Park, Pigeon's Tower, and portions of the Exposition grounds in which the building have been retained.

"Teheran, Persia" (Mutual-Gaumont).

Scenes in and about Teheran, the capital of Persia, will be found in "Mutual Tours Around the World, No. 13." Teheran, we are told by sub-title, is seventy miles south of the south shore of the Caspian sea; and in the film we are shown first one of the picturesque entrances of the city, then some of its narrow streets and the interesting types of humanity that inhabit them. In the Elburz mountains that lie between Teheran and the Caspian sea we are treated to quaint sights along the roads. An interesting scene is of a mountain village, where we see the travelers being made to show their passports. Other scenes of interest in Teheran is the Gate of Diamonds, an old mosque, a study of Persian types and the main market place. A group of dervishes or wandering beggars also claims attention.

No. 5 of "Uncle Sam's Defenders" opens with a group of hangars on the Gulf of Mexico, followed by closeups of testing a hydroplane, which finally sails out over the water in preparation for its upward flight. A flight with the cameraman over Pensacola and a close view of the descent and return to its hangar of the hydroplane are among the thrilling scenes of the picture. Leaving the hydroplane question, our attention is next attracted to the destroyers, a fleet of which are seen headed for Vera Cruz, in company with the "mother" ship. The K-37, carrying four torpedoes, is used as an illustration of our submarines. We are shown the water ballast tanks being filled, the sealing of the ventilator

By James S. McQuade

The Chicago Federation of Labor Has Refused to Recognize Local 157, I. B. of E. W.

FOR several years past more or less friction has existed in Chicago between the members of the International Alliance of Theatrical Stage Employes and the Moving Picture Machine Operators, with whom they are affiliated, and the members of the International Brotherhood of Electrical Workers, who also desire to retain within their organization a body of moving picture operators. This friction reached its most dangerous point near the close of 1916, finding expression in deeds of violence against the lives of men and property.

The explosion of bombs was almost of nightly occurrence, while serious conflicts between the members of the rival organizations were frequent. So threatening against the peace and the good name of the city did these disturbances become, State's Attorney Maclay Hoyne began an inquiry into the struggle some time ago, with the object of grand jury action in case he secured sufficient evidence.

Desiring to ascertain, if possible, which of the rival organizations, or if each, was responsible for these outrages, The Moving Picture World, through its Chicago representative, investigated the history of the rival organizations from the time that friction between them was first manifested. This history is confined to the official reports of the proceedings of several annual conventions held by the American Federation of Labor, with which each of the organizations under discussion is affiliated.

On page 133 of the official report of the thirty-fourth annual convention of the American Federation of Labor, held at Philadelphia, in November, 1914, the following paragraphs appear under the heading "Electrical Workers—Theatrical Stage Employes":

> With the introduction of moving pictures and their operation, a disputed claim of jurisdiction arose between the International Alliance of Theatrical Stage Employes and the International Brotherhood of Electrical Workers. Conferences were held at the headquarters of the American Federation of Labor, and on September 25, 1907, an agreement was reached, signed by the officers of the two organizations and recommended and approved by President Gompers. Since then the moving picture operations have been widely extended, and with them counter-claims by the two organizations have been made of violation of the terms of the agreement of September 25, 1907.
> Additional conferences were held with a view of reaching some agreement, the last one in New York City on May 8, 1914, at which a new agreement was reached affirming the agreement of 1907, signed by the officers of the two organizations, in interest, and by Organizer Frayne, acting as substitute for President Gompers. However, the agreements were either not ratified or they are alleged not to have been observed. This is particularly so in the city of Chicago, where the officers of the Stage Employes charged that their members' places were not only taken, but other action employed involving a trespass of the agreements reached and the jurisdiction generally conceded. We have endeavored to bring about an understanding and an agreement for the future, but thus far nothing of a tangible character has been accomplished.
> This matter should receive the attention of this convention in the effort to accomplish a working agreement so that the present unseemly course to the injury of both may be elimited. The agreements of 1907 and 1914 can be consulted by the committee to which this subject should be referred.

In the official report of the same convention (1914), on pages 400 and 401 there appear the following paragraphs under the same heading as before mentioned:

> Your committee (the Grievance Committee of the A. F. of L.) finds that jurisdiction over moving picture operators was granted to the International Aliance of Theatrical Stage Employes, and such jurisdiction is here reaffirmed.
> We find that the claim of jurisdiction over moving picture operators by the International Brotherhood of Electrical Workers is not well founded, and the same is denied.
> We further recommend that the International Brotherhood of Electrical Workers refrain from organizing moving picture operators, and where it has organized moving picture operators they shall be turned over to the International Alliance of Theatrical Stage Employes.
> A motion was made and seconded to adopt the report of the committee.
> Delegate McNulty, Electrical Workers: Upon what grounds does the committee bring in the report?
> Chairman O'Connell: The report is based upon decisions of the American Federation of Labor. They were conceded jurisdiction over moving picture operators.
> Delegate McNulty: Where were these decisions rendered, and when? Where, in any convention or Executive Council meeting, was any such dcision ever made?
> President Gompers: I know of none. But the answer would be inconsistent, however, did I not say that an agreement was reached, to which I was requested to be a party, and was, and that agreement was reaffirmed later. It was reported to the convention of the American Federation of Labor and approved by the convention.
> Delegate McNulty: That is entirely correct; that is what I wanted to bring out. Now, Mr. Chairman, I am going to offer a substitute for the committee's report, because I realize that the committee had so much work to perform it was not in a position to get down to the cold facts in this case. There was no decision ever rendered by the American Federation of Labor or by its Executive Council in the premises.
> I move, as a substitute, that this question be referred back to the Executive Council, they to thoroughly investigate the contention of both parties thereto, to ascertain which contending party is to blame for the abrogation of the past agreement between the two organizations; the Executive Council to render a decision as soon as possible, and not later than the next convention, which shall be binding upon both organizations. (Seconded.)
> Secretary Golden (acting secretary of the A. F. of L., in place of Secretary Morrison, who could not attent): The report is based on the agreement contained in the Executive Council's report of September 25, 1907, signed by both parties and approved by President Gompers. The word "decision" is not used here in either report.
> Delegate McNulty: If that substitute is agreeable to the International Association of Theatrical Stage Employes, I will not go into it; if it is not, I will discuss it.
> Delegate Shay, Theatrical Stage Employes: The Theatrical Stage Employes are in favor of the report of the committee. They are not in favor of the substitute offered by Brother McNulty.
> The question was discussed by Delegate McNulty, who stated that in 1906 the representatives of both organizations in the Minneapolis convention drew up an agreement, and at the next convention of the Theatrical Stage Employes they repudiated the agreement; that through the good offices of the American Federation of Labor and President Gompers a meeting was held on September 15, 1907, but the representatives of the Electrical Workers refused to go into a conference unless the Federation became a party in the agreement, as the Theatrical Stage Employes had abrogated the former agreement. He stated that every point was agreed upon except two, one of which was decided by President Gompers in favor of the Electrical Workers, and the other in favor of the Theatrical Stage Employes; but in the following convention of the American Federation of Labor the Theatrical Stage Employes repudiated that agreement.
> Delegate McNulty referred to subsequent meetings held with the representatives of the Theatrical Stage Employes and the representatives of the American Federation of Labor.
> Delegate Shay stated that he objected to the substitute offered by Delegate McNulty because it would bring about a state of affairs in the organization that would be deplorable; that it was a subterfuge to give the electrical Workers a year and help them destroy the organization he represented. He stated if it were adopted the organization he represented would be injured by it. Delegate Shay discussed at some length the work of the picture operators and other theatrical stage employes, over whom, he claimed, no other organization had jurisdiction. He referred especially to the improvement in wages, conditions and hours of the picture machine operators after they became affiliated with the Theatrical Stage Employes. He stated that the intention of the Electrical Workers was simply a raid on an organization that was getting better conditions for its men than those who were trying to procure them had ever been able to secure.
> The substitute motion offered by Delegate McNulty was lost by a vote of 38 in the affirmative to 150 in the negative.
> The motion to adopt the report of the committee was carried.

In the official report of the thirty-fifth annual convention of the A. F. of L., held at San Francisco, in November, 1915, the following appears, under the same heading as before:

> Your committee (Grievance Committee of the A. F. of L.) finds that some misunderstanding has arisen during the year in connection with the decision rendered by the Philadelphia convention upon the controversy between these two organizations, and in order that there may be no further misunderstanding as to the intent of the decision that was rendered at the Philadelphia convention, your committee decides that the Theatrical Stage Employes' International Alliance has full jurisdiction over moving picture machine operators, and the International Brotherhood of Electrical Workers has jurisdiction over all electrical workers employed in the installation of new work and the repairing of old work on the outside and inside of theaters. The International Brotherhood of Electrical Workers shall, within six months after the adjournment of this convention, turn over to the Theatrical Stage Employes' International Alliance any local unions of moving picture machine operators or member of their organization holding position as moving picture operators; and, if the Theatrical Stage Employes' International Alliance has within its membership any members engaged as electrical workers, they shall turn over such members to the International Brotherhood of Electrical Workers within ninety days from the adjournment of this convention. This decision, however, is not to be construed to interfere in any way with the right of the members of the Theatrical Stage Employes' International Alliance to handle all electrical apparatus or appliances necessary to a theatrical production.
> A motion was made and seconded to adopt the report of the committee.
> Delegate McNulty, Electrical Workers, announced that it would be impossible for the International Brotherhood of Electrical Workers to comply with the decision within the time specified by the committee; that there was no power within that organization that could concede jurisdiction over any work to any other organization except a referendum vote of the membership, and to get that would require more than ninety days.
> Chairman O'Connell stated that the committee had no objection to extending the time, but had specified ninety days, as that was the time usually given for organizations to take such action.
> Delegate Shay, Theatrical Stage Employes, states that he would be willing to have the time extended if President McNulty of the Electrical Workers would give the assurance that there would be no further effort to do anything in violation of the report of the committee.
> Delegate McNulty stated that he wished the time extended to six months, but without any qualifications such as suggested by Delegate Shay.
> After a discussion by Delegate Miller (O.), Delegate Shay and Delegate Sweek the report of the committee was adopted as amended.

The report of the proceedings of the last convention held by the A. F. of L. at Baltimore, in November, 1915, has not been printed at the time of writing; but from a reliable source the following information has been received regarding the further action of the A. F. of L. on the question at issue between the two rival organizations.

The grievance committee of the A. F. of L. had been notified by the International Alliance of Theatrical Stage Employes that the International Brotherhood of Electrical Workers had not complied with the finding of the committee at the last convention to turn over the moving picture operators in their organization to the I. A. T. S. E.

To this the committee replied that they had already rendered their decision, that it had been ratified and confirmed at the convention held in San Francisco in 1915, and that the decision had completed the action of the A. F. of L. in the matter, since a ratification made by the Federation always stands and is never revoked. The committee, therefore, advised that the rival organizations should do their utmost to settle the matter themselves, locally.

It is pertinent at this point to state that Chicago is now the only city in the territory including the United States and Canada in which the International Brotherhood of Electrical Workers is affiliated with moving picture operators. Chicago Local 157, of that organization, is the only one which has not complied with the decision of the A. F. of L., and it is responsible for the friction with the International which has resulted in bomb throwing and other outrages.

On January 17, this year, a letter of grievance was sent to the Building Trades Council of Chicago by the Chicago Federation of Labor drawing attention to the fact that certain sympathetic strikes had been called in the city since the convention of the A. F. of L. at Baltimore, in November, 1916, which had placed the I. A. T. S. E. and the moving picture machine operators affiliated with that organization in a serious position. The letter drew attention to the fact that Local 157, International Brotherhood of Electrical Workers, was calling strikes in moving picture theaters, unless its moving picture operators were employed in the theaters where the strikes were called.

The Chicago Federation of Labor declared that it refused to recognize the moving picture operators of Local 157, I. B. of E. W., in conformity with the ruling of the American Federation of Labor at various conventions.

On January 19, the following letter, signed by Simon O'Donnell, president, and J. J. Conroy, secretary of the Chicago Building Trades Council was sent to F. M. Nockels, secretary of the Chicago Federation of Labor: "Dear Sir and Brother: Regarding the attitude of the Chicago Building Trades Council in the moving picture operators' controversy, will state that the council took unanimous action instructing its affiliated trades to refrain in any way from interfering with, or embarrassing, Moving Picture Operators' Union No. 110 of this city."

Since this action was taken the great majority of the owners and managers of moving picture theaters in Chicago have recognized Local 110 as the rightful organization.

The members of Local 110, I. A. T. S. E. and M. P. M. O. desire to express their appreciation of the loyal support given them in the controversy by the Ascher Brothers, Jones, Linick & Schaefer, Alfred Hamburger, Lubliner & Trinz and other prominent exhibitors. They also take this opportunity to thank the Exhibitors' League of Chicago for its mutual co-operation, which has aided materially in bringing about better conditions.

JOE MILES GIVES OFFICE WARMING.

Joseph Miles has opened offices in the Candler Building, 220 West Forty-second street, where he will carry on a general film brokerage and commercial projection business, paying particular attention to the foreign markets.

But there is much more than the above to be said about the opening of Joe's offices, for on the afternoon and evening of Saturday, January 27, scores and scores of Joe's friends both in and out of the industry were his guests at a reception that formally heralded the beginning of business. The beautifully appointed suite of offices and the extremely modern projection room were alive Saturday with a happy throng of well wishers. The projection room was transformed for the occasion into a ballroom, and, judging by the animation of those who danced to the raggy strains furnished by the dusky orchestra, the projection room will never see a more happy picture, moving or still, than it did Saturday.

The projection room is one of the best appointed in the city. It is equipped with two machines and Minusa gold fibre screen. It is well ventilated and comfortable and was formerly occupied by the Vanascope Company. The offices are up-to-date in personnel and furnishings, and indications augur well for Joe's venture.

British Notes

T. P. O'CONNOR, the new president of the British Board of Film Censors, is an Irishman and it is unlikely that a more popular successor to the late G. N. Redford could have been found. Both before and since entering Parliament he has had a great name as an author and journalist and none the less as the founder of "T. P.'s Weekly." His association with the moving picture industry in Great Britain goes back to the formation of the Cinematograph Exhibitors' Association, he beng its first president, and to the first British moving picture trade exposition at Olympia. The one particular direction in which the film promises to make headway under Mr. O'Connor is in its application to education, for "T. P." is likewise at the head of some of the foremost educational movements in the country.

The Cines Company of Rome version of "Ivan the Terrible" has been withdrawn from the market in deference to the wishes of the Russian Embassy in London, which considers the production inappropriate at the moment. The subject was passed by the British Board of Film Censors as suitable for public exhibition in March of last year, and in fact has already been exhibited at some theaters.

The moving picture commission sitting under the auspices of the National Council of Public Morals to inquire into the allegations recently made respecting picture plays being incentives to juvenile crime opened in London on Monday, January 8. The Bishop of London, whose sweeping statements were the prime cause of the inquiry, was invited to give evidence, but declined, on the ground that he has only hearsay knowledge, which has no value.

The new year conference of educational associations discussed at the London University during the early part of the week had for its leading topic, "The Control and Direction of Cinemas." A Liverpool speaker pointed out that of the local authorities exercising special control of cinemas, Liverpool and Middlesbrough were examples. Here programs of films have to be passed by the police before exhibited. Liverpool requires synopses of the films and also takes care that no children shall view pictures at a distance of less than fifteen feet. Carlisle makes this compulsory for all patrons. The speaker claimed the assurance of the new president of the British Board of Film Censors, T. P. O'Connor, of a higher standard of moving pictures in the future and appended the following suggestions: The careful study by educationalists of local licensing laws; periodical visits to cinema exhibitions to see that these regulations are maintained; and, when a film is objectionable, to ask the manager of the theater to withdraw it and if he refuses the licensing authority should be informed. A lengthy discussion upon moving pictures and their influences, pro and con, followed, most of the speakers being markedly in favor of the educational development of the film. A few of the observations made were: That there might be free picture theaters as well as free libraries; that education authorities might arrange free exhibitions of films of geographical and historical interest and dealing with some of the best romances; that every state school should have its cinematograph.

Not the least interesting aspect of the conference was the pronunciation of the terminology of the industry. A professor of literature at one of our universities, Prof. Gilbert Murray, pronounced the word cinema as syneema. Others favored the hard initial consonant and spoke of it as kinemaa with a drawl on the last syllable that would be popular in America. Government authorities invariably use the word cinematograph in reference to moving pictures, though most etymologists are agreed that its Greek orign makes certain that the first letter is a hard k and the fourth a long e.

The next official war film to be released in Engand late in January deals with the British land dreadnoughts, popularly known as "tanks," and their activities in the recent push near Beaucourt. The length is five reels.

Oregon Has Its Exchange-Exhibitor Question

By Abraham Nelson

Portland Correspondent Outlines Some of the Handicaps Under Which Exhibitors in His Town Do Business

THE facts for this discourse are culled from the moving picture situation in Portland, Oregon, a city claiming 270,000 population, supporting about thirty-five photoplay theaters, six of which are first run houses seating from 1,000 to 2,200 people. Six more are smaller houses in the downtown district and the remainder are out in the suburbs. The regular program exchanges, Pathe, General, Mutual, Universal and International have offices in the Rose City. Other film distributing concerns attempt to market their product from Seattle, over two hundred miles away, relying on traveling representatives to do their business for them.

Portland has recently been favored with an unprecedented business impetus. Shipbuilding and manufacturing are flourishing. The banks are full of money as they have never been before. But the picture theater men are complaining of poor business and exchanges are doing the same. The reason is undoubtedly the lack of co-operation between the two.

A visit to representative theater men discloses a prevailing sentiment that exchanges are against the exhibitor and not with him; that they are after his money and not after his business. Whether or not this sentiment among the exhibitors is founded on actualities in dealing with any indvidual exchange, the conscience of the exchange can best say.

Exhibitors are required to pay for their films in advance or have their shows C. O. D.'d to them. A man has always paid his film rentals promptly; he has sent his money in advance as required. Then one week the exchange ledger 200 miles away shows that no advance payment has been made. The fact that the exchange bookkeeper might have failed to make the entry evidently doesn't matter. The next show is shipped C. O. D. This was the case of John Adams, owner of the East Side Broadway. Is honesty at a premium in the film game?

"You will be required to put up $90 as a deposit before we will supply you with service," is the substance of a communication from an out-of-town exchange to a Portland exhibitor in response to an inquiry concerning its product. It was a good brand of films, all right; perhaps that was why the exchange assumed a take-it-or-leave-it attitude. Suppose the two hundred theaters in the state were each required to deposit $90 before they could get that brand of film service. The exchange would have $18,000 of the other fellow's money to do business with. All this is just getting the exhibitor's money; it is not getting his business.

"One reason why exchanges are so exacting of their customers," said one exhibitor who didn't want his name mentioned for business reasons, "is perhaps that exchanges very often do not trust their own representatives." The reason sounds logical. Managers change with the seasons and roadmen change with the moon; "representatives direct from New York City" expound film merits, quote prices and take the night train back—to New York City.

Exhibitors state that exchanges make every effort to get their names on the contracts. If there are complaints afterward, exchanges stay away until the exhibitors cancel. Then they go back and try to sell the exhibitors again. There are exceptions, of course. Those exceptions are the men who are permanent in the territory. There are men working out of Portland who make it their personal policy to assist the exhibitor.

Feature film agencies and regular releasing concerns who handle the "big stuff" have got the idea of late that they can establish headquarters in Seattle and from there dictate what the theaters in Portland, 200 miles south, shall pay for service. Similar situations undoubtedly exist in cities similarly located. It leaves the exhibitor to worry about express charges, train delays and censorship difficulties. Of course the exhibitor can either take the service or leave it. Somebody nearly always takes it because it is the best he can do at the moment. The exchange gets his money, but not his business because the exhibitor has it all planned to cancel tomorrow or as soon as some miscast star in the service suffers a temporary eclipse.

"The idea of distributing concerns attempting to centralize their headquarters in any one city in the Pacific Northwest and then dictate terms and conditions to first run exhibitors in a city the size of Portland is all wrong if the exchanges intend to co-operate with the exhibitors," said Charles E. Couche, publicity man for two of Portland's largest theaters. "All publicity matter we get with some of the best feature programs is such as some thoughtful shipping clerk throws into the can of film. If we want additional publicity, we must send to Seattle and it takes four days to get a reply. There is very little co-operation. The condition hurts the product as well as the theater."

Those exchanges that maintain offices in Portland and the free lance feature men who are established here have a minimum of misunderstandings with their customers in the city. They are on the ground, they meet the exhibitors every day and their service is personal service. It is unfortunate that they cannot supply all the demand.

"Exhibitors feel they must be on their guard in dealing with exchanges," said W. M. Rogers, of James' Broadway. "Anybody in the business knows the right feeling between exhibitors and exchanges does not exist."

Can any industry have a healthy growth where the sentiment of producer against consumer prevails? Mercantile concerns have not flourished upon that principle. On the other hand, co-operation has built big business that is still growing. Co-operation in the moving picture industry will do away with the sentiment of exchange versus exhibitor.

Exhibitors in all localities are organizing. Once organized they will shun the exchanges that operate on the take-it-or-leave-it plan. What a pity that exhibitors' organizations must put their powers to use for purposes such as these when bigger and nobler things are before them!

Williamson Brothers to Make Films

THE Williamson brothers, submarine photographic specialists, announce their intention to launch their own motion picture producing organization, which will include marketing arrangements as well. As a preliminary to this step they have appointed three foreign reresentatives, one of whom, Russell E. Shanahan, who will take under his jurisdiction England and Europe, is now in London. Stephen T. King has sailed for South America, where he will handle productions and arrange business affiliations throughout the Latin-American countries. Stanley H. Twist will within a fortnight start on a round-the-world trip, visiting East and South Africa, India, Burmah, Ceylon, Straits Settlements, Java, Sumatra, Siam, the Orient, the Philippines, Australasia and Hawaii.

"In making this somewhat radical departure from the established custom of marketing features we have a twofold object in mind," said George Williamson, secretary of the Submarine Film Corporation and active business head of the Williamson brothers' interests. "First, we believe that the cumulative publicity effect and advertising value which will be derived from the simultaneous presentation of a big master picture in twenty-five or thirty of the world's largest cities will have a decided financial advantage for every one concerned. Where our special representatives make arrangements for the outright sale of a picture in foreign countries, the buyer will have the opportunity of timing his first presentation so as to reap the benefits of this plan.

"Secondly, we intend to jump right over the group of middlemen, commission brokers, and buyers' agents, who add no value to the picture and create nothing in connection with it, and do our business direct with the ultimate buyers in the various countries, thus saving for them big items of time and expense.

"In the United States when we are ready to put our new productions on the market, which will not be for some little time to come, we intend to open the pictures simultaneously in several of the leading cities, this being in keepng with our larger plan."

CHANGE IN MUTUAL FORCES.

W. H. Rippard, formerly manager of the Wilkes-Barre branch of the Mutual Film Corporation, has been appointed assistant manager of the Philadelphia office. Mr. Rippard is succeeded by Bert King as manager of the Wilkes-Barre Mutual Exchange.

Leonce Perret, Famous Frenchman, Here

LEONCE PERRET, famous French producer, is at work on his first American picture, "The Court of St. Simon," a Selznick subject featuring Robert Warwick. It will be registered in Mr. Perret's private catalogue as No. 309—he having written and produced before coming to this country 308 subjects, running in length from one to ten reels. Mr. Perret's engagement was negotiated by Claude Patin, of Beacon Films, who some months ago went to Paris for the purpose.

Leonce Perret.

Mr. Perret was born in France in 1880. His first professional effort was in the musical field, in the Scola Cantorum, in Paris. From that he went to the stage, playing at the Athenee, the Vaudeville and the Odeon in Paris.

In 1909 Mr. Perret made in Berlin his first picture, "The Fiancee of the Gondolier," the result of which was a contract with Gaumont. In 1912 he made his first serial, "The Iron Hand," which was shown in the United States. His first feature was "The Life of Moliere." In Italy and along the Riviera he made the Grands Films Artistiques Gaumont, which included such successes as "Light and Love," "The Ransom of Happiness," "My Love," etc. In Belgium he made "The Dentelliere," an exquisite legend of the lace-makers of Flanders.

Mr. Perret's "The Child of Paris" and "The Romance of a Middy" were shown all over the world. Of the first 280 positive copies were printed and of the latter 230. These were the first five-reel subjects made in Europe. He created the series of the Leonce one-part society comedies, in which he played the leading part. There were about fifty in the series.

Since the beginning of the war Mr. Perret has made seventeen five and six part subjects, most of them dramas based on the war, and about a dozen comedies.

In the course of his work Mr. Perret has brought into world-wide prominence such players as Valentine Petit, Suzanne Grandeis, Yvette Andreyor, Fabienne, Fabreges and Suzanne Debrais. Mr. Perret is a lover of the American motion picture. He knows the work of the American producers and players, having seen most of them on the screens of London and Paris. He realizes that only America can for the present give to the motion picture art the place it deserves in world activities. His work in this country will be awaited with interest.

FILM SALESMEN TO EAT BEEFSTEAK.

As recently vaguely stated from a number of sources now definitely brought to a focus, the first annual beefsteak dinner of the Film Salesmen's Association will be held Saturday evening, February 17, at Keen's 44th street chop house. It is promised by Chairman Corn of the entertainment committee that there will be no lapses between the acts. The entire cabaret feature of the evening has been hired exclusively for the occasion at a cost of approximately $1,200. This does not include several well known acts that have volunteered as well. This part of the program will be known as "Novelty Surprises."

POSTERS IN FILM CONTAINERS.

W. L. Sherrill, chairman of the transportation committee of the N. A. M. P. I., reports that the Interstate Commerce Commission, in explaining its ruling regarding the sending of advertising matter attached to film containers, says that such matter may be inclosed in the container, but not tied on the outside.

Frankie Mann Visits Pennsylvanians

UNDER the direction of Mayer Silverman, manager of the Liberty Film Renting Company of Pittsburgh, Frankie Mann has been making personal appearances in six Western Pennsylvania theaters. These were the Imperial and Olympic of Pittsburg, the Grand of Butler, Grand of Homestead, Cameraphone of East Liberty, and Strand of Greensburg.

Frankie Mann.

Miss Mann's tour was arranged to coincide with the showing of "The Sex Lure," the Ivan six-part production in which the player portrayed the heavy or vampire role. Following the exhibition of the picture Miss Mann gave a short talk, in which she tried to impress on her audiences the fact she was not the vampire that in the picture she was represented to be.

On Friday, January 19, Miss Mann was entertained by the Woman's Press Club of Pittsburg at a popular restaurant. On the following Monday, in company with Miss Gertrude Gordon of the Pittsburg Press, the player attended the trial for murder of Leon Harter, and followed with deep interest the real drama as revealed in the development of a capital case.

Miss Mann, who before her appearances in Ivan productions, had been seen many times in Vitagraph pictures, made many friends in Pittsburg and Western Pennsylvania. As will be noted from the accompanying photograph she has her full share of good looks, but what is more to the point she has refinement, a keen mentality and acting ability. She was one of the Ivan delegation at the recent ball of the Massachusetts exhibitors, and in the Hub she received much attention.

EDWARD ELLIS SUCCUMBS TO PICTURES.

One of the last of the prominent theatrical stars to take up picture acting is Edward Ellis, famous for his wonderful "crook" characterization in "The Dummy," which enjoyed a year's run at the Hudson Theatre in New York and proportionately long engagements elsewhere, and for the character of his acting in association with Holbrook Blinn in the Princess Theater productions. Mr. Ellis is also author of "Any Night," a play which exposed "The Raines Law Hotels."

In "The Law That Failed," by Louis Reeves Harrison, Mr. Ellis will portray a character which fits him like a glove. Apollo Pictures, Inc., will produce the picture for the Art Dramas Program.

CARL PIERCE TAKES IN BEAUTY SHOW.

During the progress of the Southeastern Land Show in Atlanta, Ga., during the week of February 5, when there was held as the special feature a motion picture beauty contest, to ascertain what young woman in the southeast makes the most artistic and beautiful appearance on a motion picture screen, the Paramount Exchange at Atlanta entertained all of Paramount's exhibitors in their district at the Exchange during the week. Carl H. Pierce, special representative for Paramount and its producing companies, left New York this week to attend this function for Paramount exhibitors.

BESSIE LOVE SINGS IN GRAND OPERA.

Bessie Love, the Triangle-Fine Arts favorite, made her first appearances in grand opera on January 22nd and 23rd, when she sang in "One Night in Venice," an opera written by Manfredi Chiaffarelli. In the cast also there were such noted musical artists as Italo Picchi, Paola Bartoluzzi, Constance Balfour and Miss Emilla Vergeri. All but Miss Balfour sang with the California Grand Opera company at Clune's Auditorium last spring, and are known as some of the best artists on the coast.

Paris as Seen by a New Yorker

Paris, January 9, 1917.

PARIS cinemas are hard hit by the new taxes which, commencing January 10, are to be collected by the Government. While the Chamber of Deputies imposed merely a nominal tax on State subventioned theaters and dealt comparatively light with the theaters and music halls, the cinema tax will be 5 per cent. of the monthly receipts up to $5,000, 10 per cent. from $5,000 to $10,000 a month, 20 per cent. on theaters taking in from $10,000 to $20,000 a month, and 25 per cent. on theaters having a monthly revenue in excess of $20,000. The Government expects to obtain a revenue of approximately $700,000 a year from the cinema taxes alone.

The cinemas are now paying a 10 per cent. poor-tax and a 5 per cent. tax for war relief organizations, and the imposition of the new tax will probably result in the closing of many of the theaters.

On December 26, the cinema proprietors, after an exciting session at the Palais des Fetes, announced their intention of closing down for an indefinite period if the taxes were imposed. The music halls and concert establishments, through their representatives, Mr. Dufreyn, also declared at the same time that they would take similar action.

M. Rene Viviani, Minister of Public Instruction and the Beaux Arts, fought hard for the smaller cinema proprietors in the Chamber of Deputies when the question of the tax was under discussion, and it was largely due to his efforts that the smaller theaters were not subjected to the same high taxes as the "legitimate" theaters and the cinemas of the Grand Boulevards.

Even Paris is beginning to complain of the atrocious crimes depicted in American serials and feature films. The Minister of Public Instruction has obtained the suppression of certain spectacles and the city fathers declare that in the outskirts of Paris the cinema shows are particularly disquieting. They point out that, whereas the cinema might become a means of education and instruction for the people, it has degenerated into a medium for depicting adultery and the most atrocious of crimes. They contend that it has led to the remarkable increase of immorality, murders, robberies and all sorts of crime in Paris. The municipal councillors agree that it is better for the Paris workman to spend his money in the cinema than in the cabaret, but some sort of control is urged to protect children from the criminality and immorality of the screen.

"Christus," the religious feature which was recently shown at the Vatican to fifteen cardinals, a clever bit of press work, by the way, is now installed at the Vaudeville, the Strand of Paris.

"Christus" succeeded on December 21 the dual bill of "L'Invasion des Etats Unis," the French version of J. Stuart Blackton's production, "The Battle Cry of Peace," and "Caligula," a drama of the days of early Christianity, in which Napierkowska, the great Russian danseuse, and M. Raffaello Maran take part in some scenes which would never pass the Pennsylyania State Board of Censors.

"L'Invasion des Etats Unis" has been tremendously popular in Paris. Concurrently with its long run at the Vaudeville, it has been shown for weeks at a time in the theaters of the arrondissements and the suburbs. Three sheets showing an astonishing and very lurid destruction of Manhattan are plastered all over Paris.

Parisians gaze in open mouthed astonishment at the preliminary cinema views of the life of New York and are frankly amazed at the grand hodge-podge of topical weekly cut-outs which constitutes the "destruction of New York." Soldiers are intensely amused at the scene in which Richman smilingly exits after being mitrailleused. Theodore Roosevelt's statement of approval of the film is freely used in the billing on one sheets.

"La Masque aux Dents Blanches," Pathe's "Iron Claw," invariably arouses roars of approval when the preliminary announcement of its projection is flashed on the screen. Parisians are now feverishly awaiting the eleventh episode.

The Universal's "Master Key" has also put in a belated appearance here and is sharing honors with "Le Cercle Rouge," which is the French title for "The Red Circle."

American producers who get their laughs by speeding up their action might take a hint from the French, who are partial to "Le Cinema Lent," in which all the characters play their parts in such atrociously slow fashion that even the shortest comedy is a roar from start to finish.

Charlot (Charlie Chaplin), Lolot (Mabel Normand), and Marie Dressler have the cinema audiences of the Grand Boulevards at their mercy. The French want what they want when they want it, and in a cinema in the Boulevard des Italiens the other night a near-riot was precipitated when the management delayed presenting Charlot, Lolot and Miss "Dresslaire" on the screen.

Omnia-Pathe and Pathe Palace recently saw Max Linder in "Max and the Pancakes" and their audiences are now anxiously awaiting for more Linder releases from America.

"Mlle. Cyclone," a three-reel feature with an all-French cast, relates the romance of an eccentric American heiress who has seven eccentric American suitors in her train. The heiress falls in love with a Parisian dramatic critic and finally wins him away from his mistress. The film is illuminating in that it affords one an opportunity to see pictured the average Frenchman's conception of la belle Americaine.

It is doubtful whether M. Edmond Rostand's masterpiece, "L'Aiglon," which was shown in two weekly installments at the Gaumont Palace, would appeal to American audiences. The cinematographic reproduction of Rostand's world-wide stage success is superbly staged and photographed and admirably acted, but it is questionable whether it would move Broadway to tears as it does French audiences.

BOB DOMAN.

LOUISE GLAUM TO BE STARRED BY TRIANGLE.

Louise Glaum will soon be presented upon the Triangle program by Thomas H. Ince in a vivid drama of French life in which she is said to have the strongest and most varied role of her career. Ever since the pronounced hits she registered in "The Wolf Woman" and "Somewhere in France," requests for more Glaum features have poured into the Culver City studios from exhibitors all over the world.

While they are planning their future the world war breaks upon them, and the young lover is called to the front. Again the woman's heart is torn with bitterness, but she accepts the decree of fate, and the underlying nobility of her nature comes to the surface.

In a ruined church back of the fighting line, where Miss Glaum enacts the part of an angel of mercy among the stricken, the most thrilling scenes take place, and the former "vampire" finally emerges from the chaos around her with her faith restored and the love she has given her fellow countrymen returned by the enduring love of the hero for whom she has sacrificed so much.

CARSON WITH METRO.

Carson hails from Carson City, Nevada, and for several years punched cattle on the famous Miller Brothers' "Ranch 101" at Bliss, Oklahoma.

MAX DILL SIGNS UP, TOO.

Max Dill, who is being featured with Juanita Hansen and William Kolb in "Glory," the latest release of the Unity Sales Corporation, has recently taken unto himself a wife, Miss Josephine Clark, of San Francisco.

Big Linder Comedy Campaign

More Than One Hundred Thousand Dollars Appropriated for Advertising—E. R. Pearson Is Manager.

AT A meeting called by George Kleine last week in Chicago, he notified each Kleine-Edison-Selig-Essanay branch manager, that $100,000 had been appropriated to conduct a national advertising campaign in behalf of Essanay-Max Linder comedies. This $100,000 will be supplemented, Mr. Kleine said, by $25,000 to be expended with trade papers. A considerable sum is also appropriated, he said, for novelty and specialty advertising.

At this meeting there were fifty-five branch managers and salesmen in attendance. In addition to twenty-four Kleine-Edison-Selig-Essanay branch office managers, there were thirty-one salesmen, especially employed by Essanay Film Manufacturing Company to sell the Essanay-Max Linder comedies during the next twelve months.

These salesmen had been drawn from all parts of the country, and were selected because of their especial adaptability, wide acquaintance with exhibitors and past records as business-getters. They will co-operate with Kleine-Edison-Selig-Essanay branch office salesmen, but will be under the direct supervision of E. R. Pearson, whom George K. Spoor, president of Essanay, has employed as a general supervisor in connection with this campaign.

E. R. Pearson.

The $100,000 appropriation for newspaper advertising will be expended by the Kleine-Edison-Selig-Essanay branch managers, under direction of the K-E-S-E advertising department. The trade paper advertising will be placed through the same channels as the Kleine-Edison-Selig-Essanay advertising is handled at present. The novelty and special advertising will be looked after chiefly by the Essanay Film Manufacturing Company through Mr. Pearson.

The major portion of this large advertising fund will be expended, it is thought, within the next ninety days. Whatever results are obtained during that period will serve as a guidance for further appropriations. As the Kleine-Edison-Selig-Essanay branch offices cover the United States effectively, a large number of newspapers will be the beneficiaries of this $100,000 appropriation.

Mr. Pearson has for years been coming in daily contact with the exhibitor and his problems, having been branch manager about five years in Omaha for the General Film Company, Pathe and World, respectively, prior to opening and managing the V-L-S-E Inc., branches at St. Louis, Denver and Kansas City, hence, as manager of sales for the Max Linder comedies, he is making use of that experience in evolving a plan of distribution and advertising that will be of the greatest good to the exhibitor.

Max Linder, the famous European screen comedian, will make his first appearance in a "Made in America" production when the Essanay-Linder farce, "Max Comes Across," is shown to the reviewers and the trade at the New York Roof, Tuesday morning, February 6th, at 11 o'clock. "Max Comes Across" is the first comedy made by Monsieur Linder since the comedian was wounded in the trenches "Somewhere in France," while serving in the French army, and its action is based on some of the humorous happenings aboard the steamship Espagne, during Linder's voyage to America to fill his contract with the Essanay Company.

The film is the initial number in a series of twelve Essanay-Linder comics to be released through the Kleine-Edison-Selig-Essanay Service.

Mary Garden Signs with Goldwyn

Famous Grand Opera Star Added to Roster of New Producing Company.

MARY GARDEN, international opera star, has signed a contract with Goldwyn Pictures Corporation to become a screen star. Miss Garden has been regarded by all screen producers as the biggest woman star holding out against the screen, and her remarkably successful career with the Metropolitan Opera in New York, the Hammerstein opera ventures in New York and Philadelphia, and with the Boston and Chicago opera companies amply sustains their belief. In a critical sense she is ranked as one of the greatest dramatic artists America has ever contributed to grand opera.

Mary Garden.

Miss Garden's contract with Goldwyn Pictures Corporation calls for a series of motion pictures the titles or themes of which are not yet announced.

Miss Garden will sail soon for Paris to arrange for the designing and making of her costumes for her first screen productions.

Announcement of Miss Garden's contract with Goldwyn at once gave rise to speculation on the part of metropolitan editors and critics. Both the New York Herald and the Tribune ventured the prediction that her first Goldwyn picture would be nothing less than Strauss' sensational "Salome," in which she achieved tremendous operatic success.

Goldwyn Starts Production

First Mae Marsh Picture Begun at Fort Lee—Maxine Elliott Starts Feb. 15.

SIX weeks after its incorporation and organization, Goldwyn Pictures Corporation has begun the work of actual production in its Fort Lee studios. The first company reported for work on Monday morning, January 29th, to Director Ralph W. Ince, who was selected by the Goldwyn officers to direct the first Mae Marsh picture of the new and quickly-expanding firm of producers.

Miss Marsh, fully recovered from her recent cold and indisposition, reported at the studio early, almost hidden in furs. She was accompanied by her sister, Marguerite Marsh, who is to play the sister role opposite Mae Marsh; Mother Marsh and at least two smaller Marsh descendants. Vernon Steele, a handsome young actor who has been chosen as Miss Marsh's leading man, is expected to win quick popularity on the screen.

Director Ince brought with him to the Goldwyn organization his assistant director, James Dent. George Hill is the cameraman for this production; W. K. Hedwig is laboratory manager, and Herbert M. Messmore, the technical director. Goldwyn has organized and installed its own managerial staff in the Solax studio.

Maxine Elliott will begin her career as a Goldwyn screen star when she faces the camera on February 15th. Announcement is made that Miss Elliott will be directed for her debut on the screen by Allan Dwan, whose achievements in an artistic sense have made him one of the dependable factors in screen direction.

Miss Elliott's first screen play will be the work of Louis K. Anspacher, author of "The Unchastened Woman," one of last season's dramatic successes in New York. The theme or character of Miss Elliott's first picture is not revealed.

RIALTO BOOKS "SKINNER'S DRESS SUIT."

S. L. Rothapfel, manager of the Rialto, New York, has booked the Essanay subject, "Skinner's Dress Suit," for a week's run beginning February 18. This is the first public showing to be given this subject, of which an extended review will be found on another page of this issue.

Billy the Exhibitor

By E. T. Keyser

Change the Program as Often as Your Local Conditions Warrant and Don't Follow the Fellow's Lead Blindly

"THAT was some slam that a manufacturer handed the guessing habit in the last issue of 'The World,' observed Billy, as he threw one leg over his chair arm and a cigarette butt at the cat. "But if he fancies that 'guessing' is an indoor sport confined solely to the perpetrator of pictures, he has another guess coming, himself."

"How and which?" I asked. "Please amplify your accusations."

"Here's your amplification," said Billy. "The finest little guesser in the game today is the exhibitor. With him, it has passed from the amusement stage and has become a disease and you can go right out now with a lawn mower and cut the grass over the graves of the business chances of those fellows who guessed wrong."

"Evidently you do not believe in taking a chance," I said.

"I'll take a chance all right enough," said Billy, "when it comes to a game of draw, I'm willing to try and guess from the way my opponent handles his face and fingers whether he is holding a couple of deuces or something really negotiable, but in business hours I prefer to figure out the answer so far as considerable energy and a little common sense will allow me."

"But the funny thing about it is that, after I've figured out something according to my own local conditions and find that it works, along comes some one, very differently situated, who 'guesses' that I've solved the problem also."

"Exactly," said Billy. "Here's an example: My program changes three times per week because I discovered that I have not enough 'every nighters' among my trade to warrant the expense of daily changes and the loss of the advertising effect of the good word passed along by the man who had seen a picture to those who had missed it.

"Brother, who happened in last night, slips it to the rest the family at breakfast that he saw something mighty good on the screen and that afternoon those who lost the treat hotfoot it to the matinee. What good would the glad tidings have done me if the film had been in the can and shooting exchangeward by that time?"

"How did you find out that your people were not in the habit of coming about every night?" I asked.

"Simplest thing in the world," Billy replied. "I arranged, way in advance, for an educational matinee and evening and then had two weeks' tickets printed with coupons. Each day's tickets were numbered consecutively, commencing with Monday as number one. Each coupon was a notice that six would be accepted as a complimentary admission to the educational show, which we wanted our regular patrons to view and then advise us if they desired an educational evening of that character once a fortnight.

"Anybody could attend at regular admission prices, but the free admission flattered many; we got a line on the popularity of the educational and also on how large a percentage of our patrons came regularly. The numbered coupons made that part of the investigation easy."

"And you found?" I asked.

"That the people who turned in sets of coupons in straight numerical order were mighty few and that those who cashed in on six coupons in twelve exhibiting days were not enough to warrant cleaning the screen every night.

"And how did they vote on the educational?"

"They voted for it and enough of the free matinee audience passed around the good word to influence a choice collection of paid admissions for the night show. We got a line on our trade, established a fortnightly educational entertainment and made our audience feel that they had a voice in the management, all at the expense of a little extra planning and printing.

"But the joke of it was that another exhibitor in a business section of the next town saw how my plan was working and shifted to three changes per week also. It was some time before he woke up to the fact that his trade for matinees was composed of those who came about five times per week and did not crave encores. Now come outside and look at that lobby display that I've put in to dazzle the passers-by and inoculate 'em with a desire to see just how much of heartbreaking that bunch of beauties can accomplish when they unwind themselves on the screen."

"And cost considerably less," chortled Billy. "But, whatever it cost is coming back in good shape over the ticket counter. The people who built it loosened up the other day in 'The World' and showed what the actual goods looked like, instead of leaving it to the exhibitor's imagination, or trusting that he would dig it up from a catalog. What gets me, as an exhibitor, is why, in these days when the picture makers are spreading themselves in art work publicity, the accessory manufacturers do not come out with some color stuff for the benefit of us theater owners who have more than a mild curiosity as to the actual appearance of their wares?"

J. VAN CORTLAND, BLIND, IN PICTURES.

Probably the only blind man now acting in motion pictures is J. Van Cortland, who is playing in "The Great Secret," Metro's new big serial. Mr. Van Cortland is an actor of culture and experience, and up to a little over a year ago was rarely out of an engagement. Then came his sad affliction. He had been working for the Essanay company in Chicago and one night, while leaving the studio, he was held up by thugs and robbed. Finding that all he had was $4, the robbers blackjacked and beat him so severely that his eyesight was permanently affected.

Mr. Van Cortland is a native of Rotterdam, Holland, and came to this country twenty-three years ago. Something over ten years ago he went on the stage, steadily playing in stock companies up to two years ago, when he went in for motion pictures. His last engagement on the spoken stage was with the Butterfield Players in Washington, D. C., in "If I Were King."

The Actors Fund of America have volunteered to take care of Mr. Van Cortland; it obtains employment for him when it can and makes him an allowance when he is not working. He steadfastly refuses to go to an institution, for he is devoted to stage work. It was this earnestness for employment, added to his culture and stage experience, that appealed to Director Christy Cabanne, who used him in "The Great Secret."

ALMA RUEBEN, TRIANGLE FAVORITE.

A student in the convent of the Sacred Heart, San Francisco, until a little more than a year ago, Alma Rueben, the Triangle favorite, is one of the few motion picture actresses who has never played a less prominent part than that of a leading woman.

She was discovered by a Vitagraph director and persuaded to become a screen performer. After her parents' consent had been won by considerable argument, her first role was in support of a Vitagraph star. She shortly afterwards joined the Triangle-Fine Arts forces as leading woman. Miss Rueben was born in 1897 in San Francisco. Her latest success was with Douglas Fairbanks in "The Americano." Her next part will probably be with Wilfred Lucas in "Orpheus," the picturization of Samuel Hopkins Adams' story. Miss Rueben is a pronounced brunette and has been pronounced by artists to have a perfect profile.

SCREENS ON THE DOT.

A record in screen shipment and delivery was surely made week before last as reported by President Genter, of the J. H. Genter Co., Inc., of Newburgh, N. Y. They received an order over the phone from Mr. Edwards, of the Picture Theatre Equipment Company in New York at five p. m. on Friday for a 10-foot by 13-foot screen for the U. S. S. "Texas" lying at the Brooklyn Navy Yard. Instructions were that screen must be at its destination on Saturday morning. It took the Genter Company just eighteen minutes to cut out and pack the screen and deliver it in the express office in Newburgh.

A milestone in moving picture progress will be marked by the Tenth Anniversary Number of The Moving Picture World. No such advertising proposition has ever before been offered the trade. Dated March 10th, advertising forms close February 23.

Mary Pickford to go to Los Angeles

Player Temporarily to Forsake the East in Order to Secure Change in Backgrounds.

IT is announced by the Artcraft Pictures Corporation that immediately following the completion of Mary Pickford's latest picture, "A Poor Little Rich Girl," now being produced at Fort Lee, Miss Pickford will temporarily forsake her eastern studios and take up the production of several new Artcraft releases on the West Coast.

A big studio has been taken over for her in Los Angeles. From present indications Miss Pickford's work in connection with "A Poor Little Rich Girl" will be completed in time to allow her to leave New York Wednesday, February 7.

It is understood Miss Pickford will appear in several subjects during her stay in California, among these being "Rebecca of Sunnybrook Farm," the well-known Kate Douglas Wiggin story and play, which was recently secured for her by the Artcraft Pictures Corporation.

Mary Pickford's trip to California makes it possible for her to appear in subjects presenting entirely different locales from those in which she has already starred for Artcraft Pictures. On her transcontinental trip Miss Pickford will be accompanied by her mother, Mrs. Charlotte Pickford, and her personal representative, Edward Hemmer.

General Film Cuts Out Release Dates

President Hampton Announces Details of New Policy, Which Has Been in Effect Since January 1.

THE producers of General Film Company have concluded to cease advertising release dates, announces President Benjamin B. Hampton. The first of the year the program idea was abandoned and each subject is now handled on an individual basis. Since the operation of this policy began conditions have altered materially. Each producer is now justified to put back of his product all the ability of which he is capable. His product has an opportunity to sell for its individual worth and therefore it can earn for him as much money as possible.

The result is that extreme care is given to the development of each subject. This has affected the matter of releases, in that the producers are reluctant to release their new subjects until each is properly and completely prepared. Consequently the company announces it feels it inadvisable to advertise the dates on which subjects are to be released.

The full service—of twenty-five to thirty reels of assorted subjects—are being released each week, and no change in this practice is contemplated. Customers will be advised, as usual, of subjects, description, etc., the only change in methods being the discontinuance of public advertising of release dates.

LILLIAN WALKER HAS NOT RENEWED VITAGRAPH CONTRACT.

Out of the cloud of rumors and counter rumors surrounding the future relations of Lillian Walker and the Vitagraph Company, there remains the one real fact, for which Miss Walker is herself authority—that the star has not renewed her contract with the producers. Miss Walker states that she has not signed a new contract with Vitagraph and that she is merely appearing in Vitagraph two-reel pictures temporarily at the personal request of Benjamin B. Hampton. In the meanwhile, Miss Walker is completing negotiations with another producer and the signing of a long-term contract with the new company will be announced shortly.

"The fact that so many conflicting stories have recently appeared in print concerning myself leads me to make this statement concerning my own activities," declares Miss Walker, "as it seems only just that the facts be known and no further misunderstandings be fostered by the erroneous reports that have been circulated. Until I have completed my negotiations with the new company, I am not at liberty to disclose its name—I can only say that my present relations with Vitagraph, though happy, are temporary."

Charlotte Walker, who has just been announced as star in a new Broadway play written by her husband, Eugene Walter, is featured in the Thanhouser drama, "Mary Lawson's Secret." This play, written by Lloyd Lonergan and directed by John B. O'Brien, is to be released as a Thanhouser-Pathe Gold Rooster Play in April. It is interesting to know that Mr. Walter was a visitor at the Thanhouser studio when some of the scenes were being taken and volunteered to be an "extra."

GOLDWYN PICTURES CORPORATION ADVISORY BOARD.

Seemingly there is considerable point to the Indianapolis Star's observation that the Goldwyn Pictures alliance is "a film company with brains." Here you see the literary advisory board of Goldwyn, photographed in the offices of the organization.

The Goldwyn Advisory Board.

GRIFFITH A BUSY MAN.

D. W. Griffith's activities have been particularly varied during the past week. On Thursday, January 25, at Washington, D. C., he delivered an address to the members of the National Art League of America. The following day he was the guest of honor at a dinner given by the Hon. Champ Clark. From the Capital Mr. Griffith went to Richmond, Va., in response to an invitation to speak to the Richmond division of the Daughters of the Confederacy. And, on Tuesday of this week, he was the guest of the Norfolk, Va., Chamber of Commerce. Mr. Griffith's present visit to Richmond and Norfolk, his first since his boyhood, was welcomed by the newspapers of both cities as the occasion for lengthy interviews. "Intolerance" is appearing in Richmond this week.

BETTY HOWE RECOVERING FROM APPENDICITIS.

Betty Howe, International star, who had prominent parts in several of the episodes of "Beatrice Fairfax," has just been discharged from a hospital in Brooklyn, where she underwent a serious operation for appendicitis. Miss Howe was in a critical condition for several weeks, but she is now in her normal health again, and expects to appear shortly in a new picture for the International.

NEW PUBLICITY MAN FOR ROCHESTER'S STRAND.

Paterson, N. J., Has Too Many Shows

By Hanford C. Judson

Showmanship Is Not Lacking, But the Keenest Kinds of Competition, With Too Many Reels to the Program, Is Hurting the Business

IN competition the rub is in the sticktoitiveness of the other man. "The man down the street is losing money and I am losing. If he would only get out, I would have a pretty good thing. We can't get together, because then neither of us would be satisfied." One hears talk like this in Paterson, N. J., especially in one section of the city, where, no matter in what direction he might move, one would move into some show or other. And yet, hidden away in a little-used block, around the corner and off the main thoroughfare, is the biggest and most attractive picture theater in the city, sanely independent, giving the show that it thinks right for the right price and to prosperous-looking and well-filled houses.

The theater that seems to be above the competition is the Regent. It seats 2,500 persons and is run by C. L. Dooley, who says that before the Regent was opened there was a large clientele who preferred to go to New York for their picture shows but who come regularly now. Its regular show is about eight or nine reels and the night we were there the program consisted of Pathe Daily News with a topical, a Christie comedy and "Panthea." The admission is ten cents in the afternoon and fifteen at night.

Mr. Dooley choses his features carefully. He finds plenty of good film; but says that there has been some very weak stuff in the drama features of late and he attributes it to the scenario departments. He says it is one of the reasons why so many rival companies have started and that program companies will have to realize that their men do too much writing. The greatest stars without a good story will fail, and he mentioned two stars whose popularity in Paterson has depreciated, one 50 per cent. and the other at least 25 per cent. through weak productions lately released.

Along Main, near Market street, there are seven shows, four of them grouped together; and including the Regent and the Majestic, a vaudeville house with occasional films, there are eleven in proximity and thirteen in the city. Thirteen shows, not to mention theaters of another kind, in a city of few over a hundred thousand population, mean that someone is unlucky. Paterson—known all over the world—is so brimming over with prosperity that it fairly smiles. Wages and unionism go together and both are strong here. Prices are high, but admissions to theaters remain the same and competition has made reels multiply.

"This is a good picture town," said W. A. Daly, one of the Main street exhibitors. "The people are here and they have the money." He said he was doing well, but that he was tired and had lost his enthusiasm. It was after four in the afternoon and his house was hardly half filled. I had just been across the street to the Majestic, a vaudeville house, and had seen every last seat occupied.

"The reason is," said Mr. Daly, "the picture business is a slide-in and slide-out proposition at five cents. Some people have boosted it up till it thinks it is a dress affair, but that condition won't endure. This double-feature business has killed the goose that laid the golden egg. What is more, to meet this demand they have made pictures that have divided the family. In the early days they all came together. Now the children slip in without the knowledge of their parents, the mothers come to the shows that appeal to them, and the fathers want only films like (he named certain much-discussed pictures). I think there is a modicum of truth in this—the feminine discussion has come up in the last ten years and has given a divided interest. Film's mirror the great questions, while vaudeville remains in the simple, broad appeal of mere entertainment."

Mr. Daly took a crack at the "percentage basis" men. "I ask them," he said, "how much they have paid for their state rights. They tell me, perhaps, six thousand dollars. I tell them that my theater investment is forty thousand. And they ask me to give them 60 per cent. of the net while I have to pay fifty-fifty of the advertising expenses." He also said that the exhibitors ought to get the Federal Government to pass a law compelling the exchanges that demand an advance-deposit to run their business under the banking laws.

Across the street from Mr. Daly's is the Royal, owned and managed by Henry Fleigh. It is a five-cent house with 400 seats, and is, to speak plainly, rather unattractive. Mr. Fleigh says business is bad and that the exhibitors are themselves responsible. "There is fuel for organization here, but no fire burning. Every exhibitor in Paterson," he said, "will recognize it as true that they have fallen short of common sense and good business judgment in their failure to realize that their competitors' problems and their own are identical. They try to cut each other's throats and are too narrowly selfish to see what ought to be done." Then he added: "There is no place on earth where the charity appeals for churches, schools, Y. M. C. A.'s and the like are more numerous than here."

There are three picture theaters and one vaudeville house under the direction of one company of which Max Gold is the head. The three picture theaters are the Garden on Market street, the Lyric and the Strand. The Garden is a bright, new and pleasant house under the direction of David Mark. It seats 1,500 and shows ten to twelve reels for ten and fifteen cents. Normally it changes three times a week, running each feature two days; but Pickford has a whole week run and "The Witching Hour" was kept four days. Short reels are changed every day. The theater was opened on November 6, 1916.

The Strand, on Main street, is a five and ten cent house and under the direction of J. Margolis. It has 750 seats.

The Lyric, under the management of J. Merker, is a 550-seat house. It is also on Main street. Six reels are shown with a daily change at five and ten cents. The projection seemed to be particularly good as we looked in.

The Adam Brothers own two houses, one on Market street, the Paterson Show, and a big house on Main street, the United States Photoplay. The smaller of the two theaters seats 500 and charges five and ten cents, showing six and seven reels, three changes a week.

The U. S. Photoplay is a 2,000-seat house charging ten and fifteen cents for nine and ten reels. Superfeatures are shown at a higher rate—twenty-five and fifty cents. Mr. Adam told me that business was fair at both of these houses.

Another interesting picture theater on Main street is the Washington Show, owned and conducted by Peter Jensen, who talks entertainingly about the business. He says the showing of double features has tired the average patron. His people want railroad stories, westerns, business life stories. They like variety and are not averse to instructive films. They do not seem to care much for vampire or three cornered sex dramas.

The Star theater is way up on the hill, where one sees few stores and many dwellings. It is strictly a neighborhood house, has 641 seats and is managed by Charles Bostow. The charge is five cents afternoon and evening, except on special days when ten cents is asked. It sometimes happens that, with a program changed every day, a ten-cent show may be at the theater every day in the week. The best films are shown, including new Chaplins.

On the other side of the city, on Clay street, in the midst of the big factories, but where there are many dwellings, is the Colonial, a 400-seat house, charging five cents for seven or eight reels. It is managed by M. Grummy.

INDIANA EXCHANGE MANAGERS ORGANIZE.

All the film Exchange managers of the city of Indianapolis met at the Severin Hotel, Friday, January 26, at 6 P. M., for the purpose of organizing the Indiana Film Managers' Association. H. F. Druckey of the F. I. L. M. Club of Chicago, was present, and helped in the formation of the organization. The purpose of the club is to co-operate with the film companies in other cities to eliminate such evils in connection with the renting of the films as come up in the every-day life of film exchanges. Mr. Druckey pointed out the advantages of organization and co-operation, and spoke of the good work that was being done through such organization and co-operation in the cities of New York and Chicago. Those present included W. A. Ratz of the K-E-S-E Co., D. W. Van de Walker of the General Film Co., W. H. Engleman of the Mutual, Sam Sax of the Blue Bird Photo Play Co., K. O. Landis of the World Film Co., and J. I. Schnitzer of the Central Film Service Co. representing the Universal films.

General Film to Make Four-Reelers

Beginning March 2 to Issue One a Week Based on Stories Printed in Street & Smith Publications.

EVERY story published in "Ainslee's," "The Popular," "Smith's," "The Topnotch," "People's," "Detective Stories," and "The Picture Play Magazine" becomes available at once for motion pictures through an arrangement concluded between the General Film Company and Street & Smith, publishers of this group. General Film has acquired the exclusive motion picture rights to the vast storehouse of motion picture material furnished by the great magazine combination.

Selecting from this mine of fiction the best stories, The General Film Company will release weekly a four reel all-action photoplay, commencing about March 2. These pictures will be five reel features, cut to a four-reel length. In other words they will be all action.

This series will be swept into nation-wide prominence at once by a most comprehensive advertising campaign. A page or double page display will appear in every issue of every Street & Smith publication for one year. Real features with real exploitation is the essence of this new combination concerning which the General Film Company makes the following statement:

"Street & Smith buy more fiction annually than all other magazine publishers combined. Their seven publications, covering every range of fiction, have a combined circulation of over three millions. Their stories are packed with punch from start to finish. These magazines are not even illustrated. They do not have to be. The stories alone furnish the interest. They are ideal for the screen.

"Selecting the fifty-two best stories from this absolutely limitless mine of fiction, we will release one four-reel feature each week, commencing about March 2. Every one of the Street & Smith stories contains plenty of material for a five-reel feature, many of them enough for ten reels. Our features will be but four reels in length. The result will be action from start to finish. We believe that is what exhibitor and picture public alike want today. The first of the series will be founded on the great short story, "The Inspirations of Harry Larabee," by Howard Fielding, which appeared in the Popular Magazine. It contains enough action to make five ordinary features.

"We have selected H. M. and E. D. Horkheimer as the producers. Nation-wide magazine advertising such as never before has been attempted for motion pictures will inaugurate this series and continue with it.

"Stories by the world's greatest writers, the pictures cut down to one-hour screen time to confine them to action only, and an advertising campaign that will reach every picture fan in the United States—this is a combination that should produce the greatest feature series in the history of the motion picture industry."

C. C. Vernam of Street & Smith has issued the following statement concerning the new combination: "Almost since the inception of the motion picture industry our fiction output has been the object of keen competition on the part of film manufacturers. Our seven publications containing the stories of every well known writer in America offered a pleasing prospect to the producers who have long suffered from a dearth of good material for scenarios. We have had offers without number. We have seen many of our competitors enter the field.

"After careful investigation and close study, we have decided that the General Film Company with its great releasing system and its group of high class manufacturers offers us the ideal medium to transfer our great storehouse of fiction to the screen. We feel sure that the coming four-reel series will mark an epoch in film production. We have a tremendous fund of material and we are confident that the General Film Company will bring it before the exhibitor in a manner that will make this series a sweeping success."

VIVIAN M. MOSES JOINS GOLDWYN.

Vivian M. Moses has resigned from the Times after a long connection with that paper and entered the scenario department of Goldwyn. On the Times Mr. Moses was the editor in charge of the Mid-Week Pictorial, one of the illustrated publications that is an offshoot of that big journal. Prior to his Times connection Mr. Moses had been well known in the literary world as the editor, or as a member of the editorial staff of many of the most important magazines in the United States and England. He is well known to authors, artists and writers through his connection with Harper's Magazine, Current Opinion, Hearst's and the Cosmopolitan, and in London was associated in the editorial management of Nash's magazine with Perriton Maxwell.

Baumann Retires from N. Y. M. P.

AFTER many years of close relations with Ad Kessel, Charles O. Baumann has retired from the New York Motion Picture Corporation. The company name, in the minds of all film men, always has stood for Kessel & Baumann. The severance of business association does not mean any lessening of the friendship which has so long existed between the partners. Mr. Baumann will take a year's holiday, having started for Los Angeles on Wednesday, January 31. In that city he will take things easy. When the mood impels him he will return to the East.

Charles O. Baumann.

With Mr. Baumann will go as far as Los Angeles, Charles Kessel, for a long time closely connected with his brother and Mr. Baumann in the affairs of the New York Motion Picture Corporation. Mr. Kessel will remain in Los Angeles for some time, taking up matters concerning the New York Motion Picture Corporation studios, the Kay-Bee dios, the Kay-Bee plants at Inceville and Culver City and the Keystone studio in Alessandro street, Los Angeles. He will put into execution plans already agreed upon as the result of the closer association of the N. Y. M. P. with the Triangle company, which for nearly two years has been releasing the Kay-Bee and Keystone products as well as those of the Fine Arts studio. The N. Y. M. P. is the second oldest company on the coast, having reached there on the day following Thanksgiving, 1909.

President Ad Kessel will remain in New York. When Mr. Kessel was asked last week if he would confirm a report that most satisfactory arrangements had been completed between his company and the Triangle he replied that such a confirmation would be easy. Asked if he would in the future continue to give as close attention to business as he had in the past, he replied:

"Yes, I will give the same close atention to the business as I have in the past. Being very largely interested in the Triangle I surely must devote my best efforts to help this concern make money."

TRADE SHOWING FOR "THE DEEMSTER."

On Thursday morning, February 8, the Arrow Film Corporation will give a special trade showing of Hall Caine's master picture, "The Deemster," at the Strand Theater, at 9.30. The showing is to be held for state rights buyers and friends of Hall Caine and Derwent Hall Caine.

The picture has been set to music by a famous Russian composer, and at the private showing the full Strand orchestra under the able direction of Mr. Edouard will render the score. This is the first public presentation of the Arrow Film Corporation's version of Hall Caine's famous book.

HECTOR TURNBULL ADDRESSES WOMEN'S PRESS CLUB.

Hector Turnbull, head of the Famous Players-Lasky scenario department, was sole representative of the motion picture producers of America at the Motion Picture Day session of the Women's Press Club at the Waldorf-Astoria Hotel on Saturday, January 27. The object of the meeting was to discuss the question of censorship, as related to the motion picture and the press, and to obtain an expression of opinion from a representative of the producers as to their attitude toward better pictures.

Salisbury Shows Some of His New Pictures

Many Interesting Scenes of Life and Adventure in South and Central America Included in the List.

THE first of the pictures taken by Edward A. Salisbury and Rex Beach on their recent trip to Central and South America were shown to the trade last week. The subjects selected for the initial presentation were all taken on the east coast and ranged in variety from the equipment of the Wisdom in New York harbor to photographing a total eclipse of the sun, the camera posted on a mountain in South America. Fifteen reels were shown. Titles had not been supplied, but there was no necessity for them, inasmuch as Mr. Salisbury gave what amounted practically to a lecture on the scenes. The titles are now in course of preparation by Mr. Beach. Mr. Beach, accompanied by Mrs. Beach, was present at the showing. In the different scenes the author figures much. The pictures are of remarkable interest. The photography is good.

Running through all of the scenes there is a deep human interest. Mr. Salisbury never fails to keep that factor uppermost. Of personal adventure, of risking of life and limb, there are several instances. We see a mountain lion, nine feet in length from tip to tip, at large in a tree fighting off the prods of a pole. We see a native enter a corral of large turtles, finally getting hold of a flipper of one and eventually hooking him up to a tackle. We see the whole party, assisted by natives, stir out of the mud in the bottom of a pool a crocodile a dozen feet in length, a fight in every inch of him; we see a rope finally put about his neck and closely follow the efforts of the men to get him through the knee-deep mud up to the solid turf.

There are many close-ups of animals that to the man in the street are unknown. There are shown intimate and descriptive pictures of many of the staple industries of South America. Sugar is one of these, from the planting of the cane through all the phases of cutting, carting, grinding and shipping. Banana plantations are described pictorially with great detail. Coffee and cocoa raising receive due attention. Several of the reels contain scenes taken solely on account of their scenic value—and they are worth while.

The section devoted to the San Blas Indians is of particular interest. This diminutive race has never before been photographed; the shyness of the men and the females is apparent. The aloofness, however, does not reach the boys, who are won over by the explorers in short order and pose many scenes for them. They come before the camera in all sizes of dugouts, from four feet in length up. Babes just out of arms manipulate them with inconceivable skill and daring. Much attention has been given by Mr. Salisbury to this unusual race, and it was justified by results.

There are fine pictures of the spillway at Gatun Lake. But one of the thirteen gates are lifted, but the volume of water is tremendous. Mr. Beach is shown in the fast running water catching tarpon. The big fish leap clear of the water following the strike. Several of the old time forts are shown, one of these being the ruins of San Lorenzo, where on three occasions the pirate Morgan was confined following his sacking of Panama. Another object of interest is the view of the oldest town in the western hemisphere, one established by Columbus on his third visit to the New World.

The photographing of the eclipse of the sun gives us some rare pictures. At the point of totality the light rays constitute the notable feature. Around the sun are lines like those of a spider's web, with intersecting cross rays, all clearly defined. Even more distinctly marked are the aureoled streaks extending from each side of the orb. There are bits, too, of the sun in partial eclipse.

The whole series will provide for picturegoers unusual entertainment and instruction, and their release may be awaited with keen interest.

FOX GETS FRANK LANNING.

Frank Lanning, long-time of the stage and veteran of thousands of feet of film, is the newest photoplayer under whose name will appear "Direction of William Fox." Mr. Lanning has played with many footlight favorites during his career. Many will recall him for his splendid work in "The Girl of the Golden West," with Blanche Bates. He entered filmdom in 1908, and most of his impersonations have been in the character of an Indian. He has been with Griffith, Lasky, Universal and Kalem.

ESCALATOR IN PICTURE HOUSE.

An escalator is the newest thing in motion picture theater construction. Charles Steiner's $225,000 house, which is being built on East Houston street, New York, will boast one.

Bluebird Sees Vindication of Policy

Thinks Vogue in Big Houses of Starless Subjects Proves It Right on "The Play's the Thing" Idea.

WHEN Bluebird Photoplays, Inc., went back to the Shakespearean theory that "the play's the thing" for its policy, the exhibitors who had been nursed along on the "star system" protested the absence of "big names" among Bluebird players. Producers who have been promoting their subjects along the line of the largest possible type for their leading players held to their own purpose, the "wise ones" in the trade laughed up their business sleeves—and Bluebird proceeded on its way.

After six months of the "Bluebird Policy" there came a change in the attitude of many exhibitors, and two weeks ago the "star system" got its worst jolt when S. L. Rothapfel booked his first Bluebird into the Rialto. This week (February 4) there is another Bluebird, "Polly Redhead," featuring Ella Hall, and a third subject has been contracted for in which Myrtle Gonzalez will be the leading lady. Here, in one of America's two greatest picture palaces, is a demonstration of the Shakespearean dogma—and the "star" has nothing to do with the case.

As a matter of fact Mary MacLaren, featured in "The Mysterious Mrs. M.," was an utterly unknown unit among the pretty girls of pictures. She was playing "maids" and doing other services in a very small way among the "extras" at Universal City. Ella Hall had contributed artistically to both the stage and screen before Bluebird gave her a chance, and featured her in some of their productions. Myrtle Gonzalez had always been a clever girl, but she has had her greatest opportunity since Bluebird put her name in large letters.

But none of these three "Bluebird Babies," as the press department of that organization likes to call them, had ever been what could by rarest stretch of imagination be termed a "star" in the high-salaried sense or through past notoriety in big productions and long public service. They were given a chance to be useful to Bluebird, have "made good," and when Mary MacLaren led the procession into the Rialto it is recorded that the business secured by "The Mysterious Mrs. M." was right up to the standard.

Outside of New York the change of heart on the part of exhibitors has been gradual and complete. The attitude of Manager Friedberg, of the Alhambra, East Liberty, Pa., is an instance in point. Every week he has mailed to Bluebird a criticism on the productions they sent him—always constructive, and therefore helpful; but, at the outset, continually bemoaning the absence of "stars." Lately he has changed his "tune" and now declares his patrons are asking for "Bluebirds" as a product and not laying stress upon any special star.

Glantzberg Returns From Trip South

WHAT was a very profitable business trip through the South has just been completed by Ernst Glantzberg, president of the Typhoon Fan Company. He reports that everywhere in the South the theater managers are realizing how great are the returns to the man who looks after the comfort of his patrons. Many of them are laying particular stress on the ventilating and cooling of their theaters, especially as the warm summer season is not so far distant.

"There are few managers in the South," says Mr. Glantzberg, "who have not seen the box office receipts of a theater shoot right up as soon as a cooling system has been installed, whether in their own theater or in that of a neighboring theater."

Jacksonville, Fla., was the first stop on Mr. Glantzberg's trip, and here he secured a contract to ventilate and cool the new Imperial Theater.

A contract for the Paramount Picture Theater at Miami, Fla., came next. Then, at Daytona, came contracts for equipping not only the Arcade Theater but also the Arcade Skating Rink, which is run in conjunction with the theater. In Savannah Mr. Glantzberg "cleaned up the town," so to speak.

Mr. Glantzberg also equipped many houses in New Orleans, including four theaters for Josiah Pearce. He stopped at Mobile on his return trip, getting contracts from the Empire and the Crescent.

Before taking another Southern trip Mr. Glantzberg will enlarge his factory facilities.

Lopsided Journalism

By F. H. Richardson.

I HAVE noticed, with considerable amusement, an editorial statement recently made by a new publication that its subscribers are entirely confined to one branch of the industry, and that it proposes to cater exclusively to that particular branch.

Now it is neither my desire nor intention to enter into any controversy with any publication, or with any member of the staff of any publication, but I cannot refrain from remarking upon the utter foolishness of such a course as this. Granting, for the sake of argument, that the exhibitor forms the one most important group in the entire moving picture industry, as this paper has always believed he does, it most emphatically does not follow that his interests are or can be best served except by a paper which serves all branches of the industry with equal zeal. It does not require any large mental exertion to understand the proposition that, regardless of the relative importance of the exhibitor in the scheme of motion picture affairs, anything which operates to injure any other branch of the industry is inevitably going to injure the exhibitor. Conversely anything which operates to aid or improve any branch of the industry is going to aid and improve the exhibitor himself.

And now let us for just a moment consider this "relatively important" matter in the light of cold common sense. The exhibitor is the man who has the theater. He is the man who invests his money in the plant in which the finished product is going to be sold to the public. But the exhibitor himself, important as is his position, cannot get results unless he can get films which will satisfy his public, nor can he get results unless those films can be shown to the public in an acceptable manner, which means, in effect, that the exhibitor will be very greatly injured if the producer falls down on his end, or the exchangeman on his, or if the projection end is not up to the highest standard.

Now The Moving Picture World concedes to the exhibitor that importance in the scheme of affairs which is his due, but The Moving Picture World proposes to serve the exhibitor not only by doing all that can be done to serve him directly, but also by serving the producer, the film exchange, the photoplaywright, the musician, and last, but by no means least, the men who must reproduce the films upon the screen—the operator, not overlooking, however, the manufacturer of projection and other necessary apparatus.

To me it sounds purely silly to say, in effect, nobody reads our paper but the exhibitor, and we don't propose to cater to anybody but the exhibitor. This may be good pap and piffle to fool some exhibitors into the ranks of subscribers with, but that is about all.

Well, it is the inalienable privilege of each paper to conduct its own affairs as to it seems best, but I do thank heaven that the paper with which I have the honor to be connected does not take any such impossible point of view; also I hope (and believe) it never will.

More Censorship Graft

Missouri Senator Proposes a Measure Which Provides Many Jobs at a Total Salary of $33,000 a Year.

FROM an exhibitor in Missouri we have just received a copy of Senate Bill No. 7,949 General Assembly, introduced by Senator McClintic and read the first time, January 16th, 1917. We do not have space to print the whole text of the bill, but a few extracts will suffice. The provisions of this bill seem to make the salary requirements of all other proposed state bills and even the Federal censorship bills look like thirty cents. Either the Missouri Senator is a practical joker and purposely desired to make the bill appear ridiculous or he has the most grossly exaggerated ideas in regard to the industry that we have ever heard. Just read the following two sections:

"Sec. 11. The chairman shall receive an annual salary of three thousand dollars; the vice-chairman, an annual salary of two thousand five hundred dollars; and the secretary an annual salary of two thousand four hundred dollars. The salaries shall be payable monthly. Each member and employe of the board shall be allowed all expenses, of whatsoever nature, actually and necessarily incurred by him or her in carrying out the purposes of this act.

"Sec. 12. The chairman shall appoint, with the approval of the government not more than the following employes: One chief clerk at a salary of eighteen hundred dollars; one assistant clerk at the salary of fifteen hundred dollars; one assistant clerk, at a salary of twelve hundred dollars; two stenographers and typewriters, at salaries of one thousand dollars each; two stenographers and typewriters, at salaries of seven hundred and twenty dollars each; one chief inspector, at the salary of fifteen hundred dollars; three inspectors, at salaries of fourteen hundred dollars each; one operator, who shall be an electrician, at a salary of fourteen hundred dollars; two operators, at salaries of twelve hundred dollars each; one operator, at a salary of one thousand dollars; two messengers at salaries of seven hundred and twenty dollars each; one assistant operator or patcher, at a salary of six hundred dollars; one assistant patcher, at a salary of four hundred and eighty dollars. The salaries provided for above shall be annual and payable monthly. In addition to the employes enumerated above the chairman may, with the approval of the governor, appoint such additional employes as the work of the board may necessarily require. The salaries of such additional employes shall not exceed, in the aggregate, the sum of five thousand dollars annually."

Here we have a salary list aggregating over $33,000 annually, to say nothing of cost of "adequate offices and inspection rooms, furniture, books, stationery, supplies, machines and paraphernalia necessary in the work of the board," all carefully povided for. What are you going to do about it, moving picture men? Can your screens tell the people of Missouri that they are the ones to pay all this graft for the benefit of a few political hangers-on. That it is their pockets that are being robbed. Exhibitors! get busy for your own sakes.

Exhibitor Complains of Sex Stuff

J. W. Ballenger, of Nebraska, Would Speed the Day When There Is No More of It.

Editor Moving Picture World:

The articles you are publishing in every issue regarding the "Sexy Stuff." May the Creator speed the day when it is no more. We note that "Mr. So and So is filming the version of such and such a noted novel," and many other kinds of advertising. Do the filmers ever think about, or do they just jump at it?

You know, they know, and we all know, that there are many novels which can be read, by ourselves, by all sexes, in the seclusion of homes, without producing any ill effect. Can the same be said of having this same story filmed and shown to mixed audiences? We do not think so. A certain producer adapted such a novel. Is it good that a young couple of tender years sit side by side and see this? It was a Big Best Seller; but, does that make it any more fit for public entertainment?

This thing of the story is just one angle of the "Sexy Stuff." There are many others, all of which need criticizing. We mention it as just one phase which we have not seen taken up. The story should be the central point of consideration. It is the one thing which should have the utmost thought and careful consideration. What difference does it make to the exhibitor if it is one that will "get the money," if it is a story such as is questionable in result when shown to mixed audiences.

When the people go into a show house they have but one object: "Seeking entertainment." Is "The Greatest Moral Lesson, "Expose of Such and Such" and those countless pals of such trash to be classed as "entertainment"? We say no. We believe no. We know no.

The exhibitor is not in business for one night. The producer should not be in business for one picture. The industry is not to be killed off in one gasp. The only answer is "come clean" and stay that way.

There are thousands of stories, "dandies," with action, plot and situation, which do not even dream of approaching the border line. Get to them. They are the ones that make patrons, and patrons made are patrons who keep up the bank roll.

This is a plenty for once. Will probably come again, as there is always something in your excellent journal that needs commenting on from the exhibitors. We read them all, think lots, and write seldom.

Best wishes to you is our wish.

York, Neb., January 30, 1917.

DEAN THEATRE COMPANY, J. W. BALLENGER.

NEW PLAYERS WITH MONOGRAM.

Frederick Robinson, E. J. Flynn and L. A. Darling are recent additions to the forces of the Monogram Film Company, producing the "Adventures of Shorty" series, featuring "Shorty" Hamilton for Mutual, and will direct their efforts toward addition to the artistic effect of the films.

Mr. Robinson is an artist, illustrator and author of international fame. He is also famous as the creator and producer of such spectacles as "The Battle of the Monitor and the Merrimac," "The Sinking of the Titanic" and "The War of the Worlds."

Mr. Flynn, recently assistant director and business manager with Mary Pickford, and before that time with D. W. Griffith and Jack O'Brien, will have charge of locations.

Mr. Darling, who has joined the camera squad, has had a long experience in this line, having been with the Lasky, Selig, Universal and Kalem companies.

Among the Picture Theaters

The U. S. Theater, Bronx, N. Y.

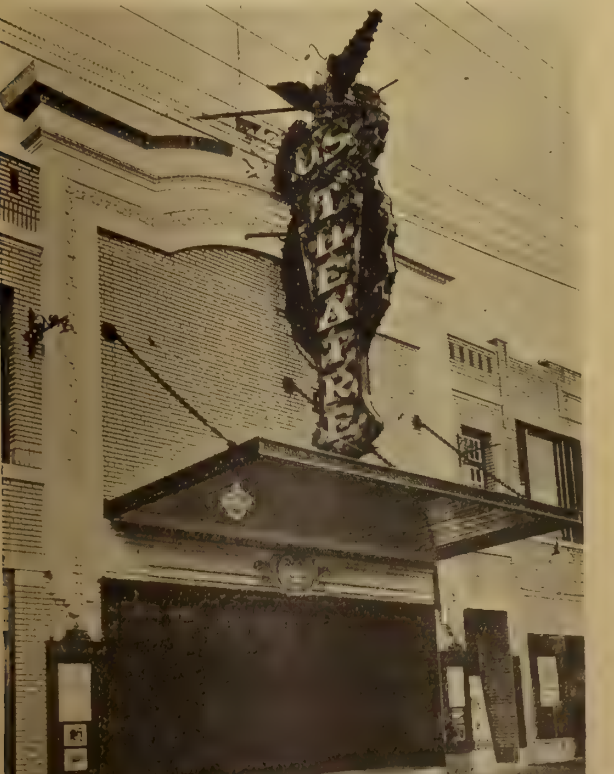
ON December 2, 1916, when the U. S. theater, on Webster avenue, near 195th street, Bronx, New York City, was opened a creditable addition to the list of motion picture theaters in that borough was made. The new house is owned by Fleischman & Goldreyer, and as the accompanying illustrations portray it is a photoplay house that does considerable toward elevating the tone of the exhibiting end of the fifth largest industry in the United States.

A number of innovations deserve mention. First, the absence of posters; second, the use of painted announcements containing the titles of the pictures forming the programe; third, the artistic display of portraits of players on the auditorium walls, and fourth, the printing in the programs of the starting time of the feature for each day. In conversation with Jules Sarzin, manager of the U. S., a representative of the Moving Picture World learned the scheme of announcing the time when the feature will be shown is making a big hit. Mr. Sarzin explained that many patrons have expressed satisfaction over this idea, as it enables them to leave their homes in time to reach the theater before the feature is projected.



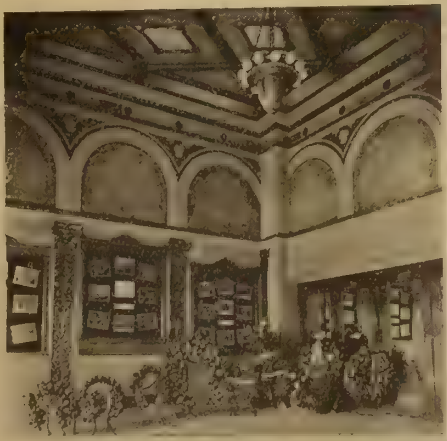
U. S. Theater, Bronx, N. Y.

The establishment of the U. S. is the result of the business acumen, coupled with the application of ardor and zeal displayed by Fleischman and Goldreyer in the conduct of their previous enterprise—the Garden—which they operated for several years. The Garden is situated near-by, and when the new house was opened the old one was closed. The ever increasing paeronage of the Garden necessitated the building of a bigger and better house, and the "birth" of the U. S. is the result.

The opening day of the U. S. was marked by big business. It was impossible to accommodate all who tried to gain admission. The location of the new house is very desirable. The building covers a full city block and is the property of the owners of the U. S. Several hundred thousand dollars was spent in the building of the theater and the business block. The front is a glazed terra cotta brick and tile. The electric sign which extends from the roof to the top of the glass canopy and which blazes forth the name of the theater can be read clearly for a long distance in either direction. The sign is done in the national colors, and bears a figure of an eagle.

Four wide doors, veneered mahogany, lead into the lobby which is most attractive. It is 29 feet long by 27 feet wide, and about 25 feet high. The general color scheme is gold, gray and cream, and the walls for a height of about 15 feet are of material resembling marble. Surmounting this is a frieze about eight feet high consisting of a series of arches, the recesses of which contain plaster relief work of a floral design. This in turn is surmounted by another frieze of gold and gray which extends to the ceiling. The ceiling is done in big squares with a heavy broad moulding in gold, and inside of each square is a smaller one of cream and gold. From the center of the ceiling an electrolier of art glass and trimmed in gold is suspended by stout bronze chains. The doors leading into the auditorium are bronze in color with a full length mirror set in each.

The general color scheme of the interior is gold, cream and red. The seating plan is divided by two wide aisles running lengthwise and by one across the middle. The floor is made of concrete, and this has been laid with thick red carpet. The walls are done in stucco with fluted gold panels at regular intervals. Alternating in the spaces between the panels are portraits of prominent photoplayers. These are flush with the wall and are ornamented with artistic scoll work. In the alternate panels are shaded electric lights, which are also surrounded with artistic scroll work. The ceiling is beamed, and is 35 feet in height. The auditorium is 67 feet wide and 200 feet long, and has a seating capacity of 2,400. The seats are upholstered in leather with the frame work in mahogany. The foyer is 20 feet wide, and the central decorative article here is a mahogany table upon which stands an artistic electric lamp. Programs can be found on the table.



Lobby of the U. S. Theater, Bronx, N. Y.

The location of the boxes, of which there are just two, is unique. In the front part of the parquette floor on each side of the auditorium at a respectable distance from the screen so as to obtain the proper sight lines one of the boxes has been placed. Each contain 15 chairs, and the seats here sell at 20 cents each. The boxes are decorated with flowers, and are draped with heavy velvet curtains. A three-dimmer indirect lighting system is used. When a picture has been projected the lights are turned on. First they are sky blue. This dissolves into red and then into orange when they slowly die out. The effect is pleasing. The only lights left burning when the additional lights have been extinguished are those which illuminate the auditorium during the entertainment.

The operating room, which is located in the back of the balcony, is up-to-date. Two Power's 6b machines are used, a spot light and a transverter. The projection surface is a seamless Atmospheric screen, 17 by 22 feet in size. It is one of the largest of this manufacture in use in the country. The size of the picture is 16 by 20 feet, and the projection is perfect at a 200 foot throw.

A symphony orchestra of eight pieces under the direction of Jules Kirkvoorde furnishes the accompaniment, and the renditions are commendable. Much time is devoted to securing the proper selections, as the management realizes that the musical end of a picture entertainment is as important as securing the most suitable program. Vocal selections add diversity to the bill.

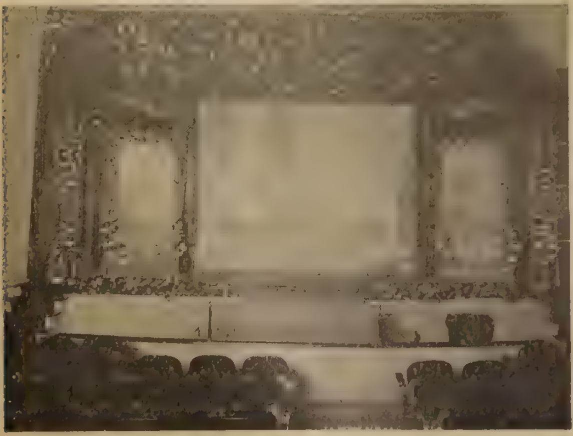
The U. S. is opened at 1:30 and gives a continuous show until 11 p. m. There are 1,800 names on the mailing list, and a program is sent to each name each week, giving the entertainment for the week with the name of the leads in each feature. A short description of each featured picture is also given, and as mentioned before, the starting time of each. On the last page of the program can be found a list of coming attractions.

Interior of the U. S. Theater, Bronx, N. Y.

Pictures are changed daily. Prices for matinee performances are 10 and 15 cents, while evening prices are 15 and 20 cents. Fleischman & Goldreyer also operate the Majestic theater, New York City, which was opened a year or so ago by Jules Sarzin.

FAMILY THEATER, JACKSON, MICH.

One of the most popular motion picture theaters in Jackson, Mich., is the Family Theater, which was formerly a vaudeville house, and was converted into a picture theater when motion pictures began to grow popular.



Family Theater, Jackson, Mich.

A unique feature is the stage setting illustrated in the accompanying photograph, constructed from the scenery already belonging to the house, by the addition of decorative trellis work, embellished with flowers and foliage. This work was performed entirely by the theater staff, the only cost being for the lumber used in making the trellis.

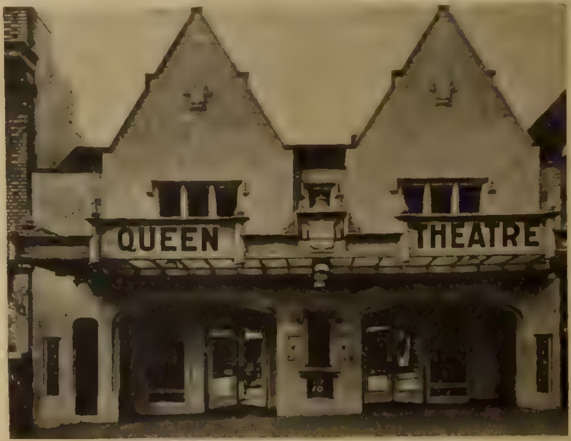
The seating capacity is approximately 700, the house having a spacious auditorium and one balcony.

QUEEN THEATER, SAN FRANCISCO, CAL.

Keen Competition Does Not Affect This Photoplay House With its Programs of Paramount Pictures and Features —Opened in 1910 and Has Undergone Extensive Improvements Since.

IN SPITE of the tendency toward moving picture houses of large capacity and luxurious furnishings, with the usual accompaniment of long programs, there is still an excellent opportunity for the small theater, properly conducted. The truth of this is illustrated in a striking manner by the success that is being achieved by the Queen theater in the Polk street district, San Francisco, Cal. Competition in this district is keen, there being a half a dozen houses within almost as many blocks, with the downtown district within walking distance. In spite of this and the further fact that a house with four times the capacity of the Queen theater was opened directly adjoining it but a few months ago, business has been steadily increasing.

This theater was one of the first to be opened in the Polk street district, having been opened on April 16, 1910, and has been conducted steadily since that time, even during extensive rebuilding operations. A little over a year ago extensive improvements were made, including the building of an entirely new concrete front, a marquis covering the sidewalk the full width of the house, the construction of a new stage and the addition of a fine Wurlitzer organ, this work representing an investment of about $10,000. The new front is not only distinctive in appearance, being the work of a designer of note, but is in perfect accord with the name of the house, being in the interesting style of Queen Anne. This theater has a seating capacity of 400, with wide aisles and space where late comers may be accommodated until seats are available.



Queen Theater, San Francisco, Cal.

The Queen theater is conducted by the Pacific Amusement Association, of which Henry Frohman is president, and is under his direct management. Mr. Frohman is to be ranked among the oldest exhibitors here, having had the Star theater on Fillmore street following the great fire of 1906 until this house was swept away in a disastrous conflagration. He also had a house on Market street, but conducted this for but a short time. Before entering the moving picture field he was in the dry goods business, and he attributes much of his success to the amount of newspaper and other forms of advertising that he has done as a result of earlier experiences in merchandising.

In the Polk street district the Queen theater is known as the "feature house that quality made and maintains," also, as the Paramount House. Mr. Frohman is proud of his record as a Paramount exhibitor, and states that he has shown every picture put out under this trade mark. For months at a time Paramount pictures have been shown every day, without a break, and it is a rare case when these are not featured more than five days a week. Whenever another picture is shown here it is only after a very careful selection, as the patrons of this house include some of the best families in San Francisco, its location in the hill section making it easily reached by the owners of fine homes.

The appointments of the Queen theater are simple, but substantial, comfort being the keynote. It enjoys but little transient trade, most of its patrons living in the immediate vicinity, and the surroundings are made as homelike as possible. The screen was moved back several feet when the house was remodeled, and the front seats are in almost as great demand as those in other parts of the house.

Next to the Paramount pictures and Pathe News, which have been shown here steadily for years, the distinguishing feature of this district house is the projection. Patrons frequently comment on its excellence, and experts pronounce it the equal of any to be found in this city. The projection is in charge of W. G. Reinhardt, who has been with Mr. Frohman ever since the opening of the house, and who was also with him on Fillmore street. The equipment consists of two motor-driven Simplex machines, with a number of controlling devices made by Mr. Reinhardt. These include an automatic changing device that works to perfection, an automatic stopping device, where the film breaks or backs up, an automatic stopping rewind and other improvements of a similar nature. The operating room is an unusually large one, with an abundance of natural light and direct ventilation, and is fitted up with a lathe, drill press and other light machine-shop equipment. It is known among the relief operators as the "Spook House," on account of its many unusual automatic devices and unique improvements in connection with projection. A special system of lamp ventilation has also been installed by Mr. Reinhardt, which reduces the amount of carbon dust in the operating room to a minimum.

Three complete changes of program are made each week at the Queen theater, the change days being Sunday, Tuesday and Thursday. The program consists of a feature, almost always a Paramount picture, and either a Pathe weekly or a short comedy. It has been found that longer programs are not desired by the patrons of the house, and are not necessary to attract the trade. The price of admission is 10 cents for adults and 5 cents for children.

YEAGER THEATER, PORTLAND, OREGON.

Has Thoroughly Modern Equipment—With Large Projection Room—Uses Concealed Lighting System.

THE Yeager theater in Lents, a suburb of Portland, Ore., is classed among the big suburban theaters of the city. The location is forty-five minutes from the center of the city, and the people of the district who seek amusement go to the Yeager rather than to the downtown shows; therefore the Yeager prospers. The building is of brick and concrete and was built in 1914. The theater was finished in April and in July of that year was taken over by Guy Robinson, who now conducts it.

Yeager Theater, Portland, Ore.

The auditorium seats 500, is very roomy, is lighted by the latest system of concealed lights and is heated by hot water. It is reached through a photo-decorated lobby 40 feet long, the entrance to which is by no means indicative of the size and splendor of the theater proper.

Manager Guy Robinson is particularly proud of his operating room. This is 7 by 12, and Mr. Robinson claims it is the best equipped suburban operating room in the city. There is not a stick of wood in it and the portholes, except those used for projection, are fitted with glass. Union operators are employed.

The program is changed every day, with four features a week. Mr. Robinson believes in meeting his patrons and he tends to the door himself. Mrs. Robinson acts as cashier.

CASINO THEATER, HALIFAX, N. S.

R. J. McAdam Completes $100,000 House—Has Own "Topical" Imported from England.

HAND in hand with the motion picture industry, aware of its every improvement and advancement, Halifax, N. S., has been abreast of the times, and has, to crown the happiness of the Yuletide, a permanent source of pleasure and enlightenment in the new Casino theater, just completed at a cost of $100,000 by R. J. McAdam, a pioneer of the picture business in Canada. It embodies every improvement in theater equipment up to the present time, and probably is the largest and best equipped theater in Nova Scotia.

The theater was designed by A. R. Cobb, who is considered one of the best architects in Halifax. It has a frontage of 80 feet on Gottingen street, the businest thoroughfare in the North End district of the city. The building itself is 136 feet long, and contains in addition to the auditorium, a splendidly equipped cafe, pool rooms and a confectionery store. One thousand, one hundred and sixty seats have been installed, 560 of these are on the main floor and 600 in the balcony.

Casino Theater, Halifax, N. S.

One of the striking features of the interior, which has a rich and beautiful color scheme of green, gold and pearl, is the stage. This measures 56 by 25 feet, with a height to the gridiron of 48 feet. The stage setting, which was built and painted by Storey Scenic Studios of Boston, is quite in keeping with the other appointments of the house. Without exaggeration it can be said to be a creation of rare beauty. Competent critics unhesitatingly declare it to be the most beautiful and artistic stage setting ever seen in a moving picture theater in Canada.

One distinctive feature of the Casino is the operation of the "Thermo" system of heating and ventilation. Fresh air is brought into the building by a five-foot intake fan. The air passes into the "Thermo" heating chamber in the basement and is heated, after which it passes into the auditorium. In warm weather the ventilation can be changed to a cooling system. With this equipment it is possible to give a complete supply of fresh air to the auditorium every three minutes.

The main entrance, attractive, unpretentious and radiating an atmosphere of refinement, measures 20 by 40 feet. Two foyers, 10 by 80 feet, are at the rear of the orchestra and balcony, and adjoining these are large dressing rooms for men and women. The operating booth is 12 by 16 feet, and is equipped with two of the latest type motor-driven Simplex machines and two Hallberg Economizers.

Three complete changes of program are shown each week. The theater has its own war topical, imported from London each week. A ladies' orchestra of nine pieces furnishes the music. Three of these musicians are concert artists or reputation, and the musical part of the program is a feature of interest.

Mr. McAdam, proprietor and manager, was one of the first to be attracted in Canada by the possibilities of the industry. For over a decade he has been actively engaged in the management of picture theaters and his ventures have always proved successful. He is popular among his associates and men of the trade. Halifax as a community appreciates his efforts to give it the best the countrv affords, and there is no doubt that the capable management that is assured will make the Casino an unqualified success

The Max Linder Comedies

Special Meeting in Chicago of K-E-S-E and Essanay Representatives to Discuss Exploitation.

A SPECIAL meeting of branch managers, traveling salesmen and others connected with the Kleine-Edison-Selig-Essanay service, was held in Chicago, Jan. 28, at the office of George Kleine. There were also present representatives of the Essanay Film Manufacturing Co., who will work with the representatives of the K-E-S-E service in the exploitation of Essanay's Max Linder comedies, which will be released through the service mentioned.

It was decided sometime ago by George K. Spoor, president of Essanay, that twelve of these two-reel comedies should be released in a year, at the rate of one a month, the first release to be made Monday, Feb. 26, and the following releases on the fourth Monday of each month thereafter.

The meeting was called to order at 11 o'clock by George Kleine, who presided, and after a very spirited session during which the handling of the comedies was viewed from every angle and carefully discussed, a recess was taken for luncheon.

After lunch those assembled viewed Essanay's fine five-reel production, "Skinner's Dress Suit," featuring Bryant Washburn, a review of which will be found elsewhere in this issue.

Then Max Linder's first new comedy, "Max Comes Across," was shown. The comedy deals with the humorous adventures of Mr. Linder on his trip from Europe to America and it won great favor from all who viewed it, as it showed fine possibilities for winning wide popularity.

On Monday, Jan. 29, the representatives were invited to the Essanay studio by George K. Spoor, where a very interesting and enjoyable time was passed by all. The representatives left for their respective cities the same evening.

The following K-E-S-E representatives were present: George Kleine, M. E. Smith, general branch manager, Chicago; J. J. Thompson, special representative for Mr. Kleine, Chicago; C. J. Meegan, advertising manager K-E-S-E, New York; R. D. Marson, manager, Boston; J. T. Ezell, manager, Atlanta; W. H. Jenner, manager, Chicago; H. Wellington, assistant manager, Chicago C. C. Whelan, R. C. Florine and R. H. Fox, salesmen, Chicago; C. Lindau, booker, Chicago; Chas. Hoffman, photograph department, Chicago; J. P. Gruwell, manager, and P. E. Krieger, salesman, Cincinnati; Mr. Oldfield, assistant manager, Cleveland; C. H. Wuerz, manager, Dallas; W. H. Irvine, manager, Detroit; H. H. Buckwalter, manager, Denver; W. A. Ratz, manager, Indianapolis; J. E. Storey, manager, Kansas City; Harry Graham, manager, Minneapolis; A. W. Larento, manager, Montreal; B. M. Moran, manager, New Orleans; H. A. Raynor, manager, New York; H. A. Bugie, manager, Philadelphia; M. J. Gibbons, manager, Pittsburgh; J. E. Burhorn, manager, St. Louis; D. Cooper, manager, Toronto, and R. Berger, manager, Washington.

The following representatives of Essanay were present: George K. Spoor, president; E. R. Pearson, in charge of sales for Max Linder comedies; H. C. Chandler, manager advertising department; W. F. Lynch, manager sales department; L. J. Scott, Joseph Gilinisky, J. E. Ryder, B. Bedell, A. W. Eisner and H. E. Stahler, salesmen, of Chicago.

The executive committee of the F. I. L. M. Club of Chicago met in special session, in Parlor B, Hotel Morrison, Tuesday, Jan. 30. One of the chief subjects of discussion was the proposed raise of the exchange license by the city council of Chicago. The present license for the storage of film per year is $25, and the city council has announced its intention to raise it to $200 per year.

The executive committee of the F. I. L. M. Club passed a resolution to protest against and oppose such action, on the ground that the figure is exorbitant and also unjust. The members expressed themselves as being unable to see any reasonableness in the proposed raise, while they could distinctly see an unfair attitude in the classification of larger distributing concerns with smaller ones. While granting that the larger distributing organizations might be able to stand the proposed raise, they were of the opinion that smaller establishments, handling only one or two features, would be taxed away beyond their means. This is plain, as a firm handling many thousands of films in a year would be better able to pay the increased figure than firms only handling one or two hundred subjects.

A committee was appointed to take the necessary steps to have the matter adjusted equitably. On this committee were I. Van Ronkel, Bluebird Photoplays, Inc.; J. L. Friedman, Celebrated Players Film Co., and David T. Alexander.

The next subject that engrossed the attention of the members was the creation of a national association of F. I. L. M Clubs throughout the United States, and a national convention of such clubs in the near future. After considerable discussion a resolution was moved and passed that a national organization should be formed, and that the business connected with its formation should be conducted by the Chicago F. I. L. M. Club's publicity committee, of which Wm. H. Jenner, Chicago manager of George Kleine's branch office, is chairman.

It was agreed that the national convention should be held in Chicago some time within the next 90 days.

It was proposed that two representatives of each of the organized F. I. L. M. Clubs throughout the country should attend the convention, so as to form a close co-operation between the distributing concerns in the various cities of the country. It was also advocated that each of the producers should have a representative at this national convention in order to co-operate with the national organization.

It was then reported that a committee of two, comprised of I. Van Ronkel and C. C. Plough, had already interviewed a number of producers in New York and that they had promised to co-operate.

F. I. L. M. Clubs have already been formed in the following cities: Chicago, New York, Pittsburgh, Minneapolis, Des Moines, Omaha, St. Louis, Kansas City (Mo.) and Cincinnati. The cities in which F. I. L. M. Clubs are expected to be organized within the next 90 days include Boston, Philadelphia, Cleveland, Atlanta, Dallas, New Orleans, Indianapolis and Denver.

"Look On This Picture and On This."

The Chicago Tribune, which usually has been a strong champion of pictures in the past, departed recently from its customary attitude in an editorial headed, "Movies As Art." Here it is:

> It is hard not to be pessimistic about the movies. After ten years of headlong development they are stalled. Directors say so themselves.
> The comedies occupy about the position "A Slow Train Through Arkansas" occupies in literature. The problem movie is Bertha the Beautiful Cloak Model come to life again. The spectacles are about as consequent and logical as a three ring circus. They do not divert, they simply tire.
> Censorship is not entirely to blame. It only makes worse a rather dreary product. The movies are the windows through which most urban Americans see the world and experience life. Censorship simply clouds the already distorted glass. If the public is less fascinated with the motion picture than it has been it is because it recognizes the distortion and wants an unimpeded view.

But this fling at the great popular amusement did not pass unnoticed. It was answered by a reader, Warren K. Wait, whose reply was published in a following issue of the Tribune:

> Allow me to take exception to your editorial, "Art in the Movies," wherein you make the sweeping statement that "producers have learned > to photograph scenes but not to tell stories," I think you are entirely wrong.

> There has never been any medium of expression through which stories of all kinds, humorous, grotesque, tragic and epic, have been so lucidly portrayed as producers of pictures portray them today. Producers may produce the wrong variety of entertainment, but the art of telling the story is at its zenith.
> Because producers have learned really to tell stories and visualize the very heart of the story, making an epic of all their enedavors, countless thousands of men and women, who would otherwise remain in ignorance of the classics, are as well informed as many a studious reader.
> The vitality of theme in literature, to retain which incipient details are necessary, but which are so tiresome and bewildering unless written in a masterly manner, are in pictures entirely obviated. The working of the human mind is clearly and concisely shown. We first see the "close up" of the human face in a rage; then the knife on the floor—the incentive to kill is established—the man picks it up, drops it, and flees. Ten laborious pages of Balzac unfold such an incident; the movie shows it in thirty seconds, concisely, clearly, forcibly, perfectly. We can't mistake the story or the man's caliber; his soul is bared to us; and his every movement and facial expression are vivid finger posts in lucid denouement.

But there is still a stronger champion of the moving picture in the person of J. B. Kerfoot, "a distinguished literary critic, who not only pays the moving picture admiring tributes, but explains the secret of its universal appeal," according to the accompanying editorial in the Chicago Herald:

> From the beginning of time to the advent of the moving picture, says Mr. Kerfoot, "no man ever lived who could tell another man a story. Moses couldn't. Homer couldn't. Chaucer couldn't. The minstrels and minnesingers couldn't. Dante couldn't. Dickens couldn't. Even Conan Doyle couldn't. The best that the very best of them ever succeeded in doing was to trick, or to coax, or to compel their readers or hearers into telling stories to themselves."
> And, on the other hand: "Everyone of them (the literary lights of the ages), from the least to the greatest, has but written for the movies. Not the movies of the photo theater, but for the movies of our minds. For a novel is nothing but an elaborate scenario. And each of us is a moving picture concern.
> When we examine a book at a bookstore, when we look at the opening sentences, and read a snatch of conversation on page 247, and turn back to the last page to see how it all ends—a scenario has been submitted to the manager. And when we pay our $1.35, or present our library card to be stamped, we have purchased the local rights in it. And when we switch on our electric lamp, and stretch in our favorite chair, and open the book at the first chapter, we turn the tale over to our producing department.
> And when to this "remarkable establishment" a story-teller's scenario is submitted the "human moving picture concern," consisting of memory, imagination, sympathy and intelligence, proceeds to present the finished film by retelling "the author's story in the collective and imaginative and emotional terms of its own equipment." In other words, the printed page is turned into a moving picture by mental machinery and before the mind's eye.
> This being so, it is easy to see why artless children and tired adults alike find rest, refreshment, diversion in the movies. In the present age of high pressure and specialization few prefer indifferent personal to excellent proxy performance. The good moving picture, lifting motor delights to intellectual level, provides mental, artistic and emotional enjoyment without mental, artistic or emotional exertion. To sit at ease and watch a story unraveled is like listening in the dark to rare music or dreaming out a romance.

The art of criticism is an intellectual effort more or less controlled by physical or mental conditions at the time the effort is made. An attack of indigestion, disappointment or annoyance from whatever cause, and the numerous other ills that flesh is heir to, all conspire to disturb the delicate intellectual and mental equilibrium required for just criticism, granting, of course, the ability to criticise at all.

The Tribune editorial quoted is so pessimistic, so peevishly fault-finding, that one must sympathize with the writer rather than condemn.

The drama is over two thousand years old, yet the moving picture in ten years is pressing it hard for first place in public favor! Even if the moving picture were stalled at the present time, which it is not, one could easily find excuses for its being out of breath.

Let adverse criticism proceed; the moving picture will steadily go its onward way, submitting to the inevitable law of evolution.

Chicago Film Brevities.

Regarding the proposed increase in the license of moving picture theaters in Chicago, the only action taken up to the time of writing has been to refer the matter to a sub-committee of aldermen by the city council. A committee of leading exhibitors has already consulted with this sub-committee and action will be probably taken at the Council meeting on Monday night, Feb. 5. It is expected that a reasonable view will be taken of the proposed raise of licenses, and in all probability the present figures will be retained.

It has been given out that "Stan" Twist will make a tour of the world with the Williamson Brothers' pictures. Mr. Twist is scheduled to leave New York for London on Feb. 10. From London he will proceed to Africa, Australia, New Zealand, China, Japan and the Philippines. The titles of the pictures he will take along have not been ascertained. "Stan's" numerous friends wish him bon voyage and a prosperous tour.

Mrs. Slusser, who achieved great popularity some time ago as organist at the Parkway theater, N. Clark and Diversey Boulevard, is now filling a similar position at the Rose theater, on Madison street near Dearborn. She made a great hit recently by her playing at the presentations of the Mary Pickford features shown at this house.

William N. Skirboll, formerly manager of the booking department in Metro's Chicago branch office, has been appointed manager of Metro's branch office in Des Moines, where he succeeded Wallace Meyer last week. Harry Skirboll, a brother, is traveling representative for Metro in Illinois, while Joseph S. Skirboll, another brother, is district manager for Metro in the Middle West, while still another brother, Jack H. Skirboll, is the Cincinnati representative of the same company. The Skirboll brothers, who are all enterprising and good business men, hail from Homestead, Pa.

Fred R. Martin, who is handling "The Great Secret" (Metro) for Illinois, was seen at the Hotel Sherman one day last week. He reported that the business of exhibitors throughout the state has been affected considerably by the poor weather. He stated, however, that he had met with success in his bookings of the serial mentioned.

Jones, Linick & Schaefer have purchased the exclusive rights to Illinois and Indiana for "Joan the Woman." Geraldine Farrar is the star in this Lasky super feature picture. It is the intention to show this super picture at the Colonial immediately following the run of "Intolerance." Judging from the success of the Griffith spectacle at the Colonial, the initial showing of "Joan the Woman" is still a long way off. Mr. Jones also announces that the third of the Clara Kimball Young series, "The Price She Paid," will follow Robert Warwick in "The Argylle Case" at the La Salle.

William N. Selig announces for release through General Film Service, in the near future, the one-reel comedy drama, "A Strange Adventure." In this fine short subject Jack Pickford, Miss Bessie Eyton and Harry Lonsdale will be seen. The photoplay was written and directed by Marshall Neilan. The story, lighting effects and photography are described as most unusual. This is the first production in which Jack Pickford and Miss Eyton appear playing opposite each other. "A Strange Adventure" has to do with the princess of a mythical kingdom who is traveling incognito, and of the young hero (Jack Pickford), who falls in love with her at first sight. Miss Eyton is seen in several exciting swimming scenes in the photoplay. She was formerly the woman champion amateur swimmer of California.

Harry Davenport Joins Metro Forces

HARRY DAVENPORT has been added to the directing staff of Metro Pictures Corporation, and will direct Lionel Barrymore in his next five-part screen production, a comedy drama by June Mathis. Mr. Davenport is a member of the famous Davenport family, being a brother of Fanny Davenport and of Edgar L. Davenport, his father having been the celebrated E. L. Davenport, and Metro's new director finds a number of relatives under the roof of the Rolfe studio, where he is directing Mr. Barrymore, the Davenports, Drews and Barrymores being closely related by marriage.

Harry Davenport.

Mr. Davenport recently went into motion picture work as an actor, having appeared on the speaking stage in a number of Broadway successes. He spent a year with Pathe, then going to Vitagraph first as actor and then as director. In Roy McCardell's "Jarr Family" series he both directed and acted, but for some time has given all his attention to directing. One of the best-known pictures to his credit is "The Island of Regeneration." Mr. Davenport has a charming home at Garden City, Long Island. One of his four beautiful children retains the traditional family name of E. L. Davenport, being named Edward after the director's father.

Joe Farnham With Sherrill

PRESIDENT William L. Sherrill of the Frohman Amusement Corporation, is sponsor for the interesting news that there has been emblazoned on the door of an inner office of his organization the name of Joseph W. Farnham with the comprehensive titles of Business Manager, Assistant to the President and Director Plenipotentiary in Exploitation of Super-Feature Productions. Arrangements were definitely concluded and a contract executed between Mr. Sherrill for his company and Mr. Farnham during the early part of the week.

Joe Farnham.

In speaking of the acquisition of Mr. Farnham's services, Mr. Sherrill said: "This is but the beginning of the—ding sdamocu cod shlurdhrda nanon tnaa blank! tsah! or!ad! iséd Doggonit, the printer got the rest all balled up, but what he meant was that Joe Farnham is just the kind of a big man he needed to handle the big plans of the Frohman Amusement Corporation and that he knew how to do the job on original lines.

"Joe" Farnham's career in the motion picture industry has been —but what's the use of repeating all the harrowing details; everybody who is anybody in screendom knows "Joe" from the time he wrote the "Gordon Trent" stuff in the Morning Telegraph, all through his eventful occupancy of the post of publicity and advertising man for the All-Star Feature Corporation; his adventure into the great war zone of Europe for the Carnegie Peace Foundation, for which he took many thousand feet of pictures; finally a place in the sun with the Lubin company of Philadelphia and then his own publicity and film selling enterprise, the Amalgamated Photo-Play Service, which he now relinquishes to take the position offered by Mr. Sherrill.

WILL S. DAVIS TO PRODUCE ART DRAMAS.

Will S. Davis has been engaged by the Van Dyke Film Production Corporation to produce the features of that company, which are released on the Art Dramas program. Mr. Davis will shortly commence the production of a picture starring Jean Sothern, which is as yet unnamed.

The making of this production will mark a reunion between Mr. Davis and Miss Sothern, as both have worked together for the Fox Company. Mr. Davis directed the youthful star in "Dr. Rameau," the Fox picture in which she and Fred Parry were featured. Besides this production, Mr. Davis has produced some of the most successful of the Fox productions, including "Destruction," "The Fool's Revenge," "The Family Stain," "The Straight Road," "The Tortured Heart" and many others. Among the stars whom Mr. Davis has directed are William Farnum, Theda Bara, Valeska Suratt and practically all of the others in the Fox Company.

MARGARET ILLINGTON DEPARTS FOR LASKY STUDIO.

Margaret Illington, announcement of whose engagement as a Lasky star was made recently, is now en route for the Lasky studio at Hollywood, Cal. Immediately upon her arrival at the Lasky plant, Miss Illington will begin work on the adaptation of Basil King's successful novel, "The Inner Shrine," which has been chosen as the vehicle of her first appearance on the screen. While in Hollywood, Miss Illington will occupy the same bungalow which housed Geraldine Farrar when she was engaged at the Lasky studio.

EDGAR LEWIS SIGNS UP MITCHELL LEWIS.

Mitchell Lewis, who recently jumped into the limelight as one of the foremost film actors in this country through his work in Rex Beach's "The Barrier," has left the company of Mme. Nazimova in "'Ception Shoals" to go with Edgar Lewis, who directed "The Barrier," and who is at present at work on a new picture.

News of Los Angeles and Vicinity

By G. P. VON HARLEMAN

David Horsley Returns to the Coast

Has Signed New Contract With Mutual—Will Increase Production at Local Studio—Sells the Bostock Menagerie.

HIS pockets bulging with signed contracts negotiated during his six weeks' stay in the East, David Horsley has returned to his studios in Los Angeles, prepared to proceed with his production activities on a greater scale than ever before.

While in the East Mr. Hoarsley closed a number of important deals. He arranged for the release of his Cub Comedies and Wilbur features, sold his collection of Bostock animals, marketed his Cub Comedies in all foreign countries, and also completed arrangements for distributing facilities to cover further production activities aside from the Cub and Wilbur companies.

David Horsley.

Mr. Horsley made the following statement to the Moving Picture World upon his arrival in the West:

"Through contracts I signed while in the East, David Horsley productions are again marketed through the exchanges of the Mutual Film Corporation. These productions are the Cub Comedies and the Crane Wilbur features.

"The Cub Comedies are already on the Mutual market, the first release having been made January 4. My contract with the Mutual calls for a new subject in one reel for fifty-two weeks following the release of the first picture.

"The Crane Wilbur features comprise a series of six five-reel subjects starring Mr. Wilbur. The general title of the series is 'The Morals of Men.' We have already completed three of the six pictures, namely, 'The Painted Lie,' 'Love Everlasting' and 'The Single Code.' 'The Eleventh Commandment' and 'The Eye of Envy' are titles of two others. Production of one of these will begin immediately. No release date has been set for the first picture, but that information will be forthcoming shortly."

A Wilbur picture is to be released every four weeks following the first release date until the series is completed.

Mr. Horsley has sold his Bostock animals. Of the one hundred and fifty animals only those which are especially trained for motion picture work have been retained. The remainder go to the United States Circus Corporation, of which Frank P. Spellman is the head.

The world rights to Cub Comedies, except in those territories granted by Mr. Horsley to the Mutual under the terms of his contract with that distributing organization, have been bought by Chas. F. Pope, who has been Mr. Horsley's representative in New York.

While the production of Cub Comedies and Wilbur features will occupy Mr. Horsley's attention for the present, he will in a short time prepare to make other pictures. One of these will be a spectacular production of "Aladdin's Lamp," which will be made in its complex scenes by the aid of Mr. Horsley's double-exposure camera and in which will be featured a young actress whose name is being kept a secret, but whom Mr. Horsley considers a rare "find."

With the Cub Comedy company now working, the Crane Wilbur organization starting next week, and with arrangements going on for additional production, the David Horsley Studios will be an exceedingly active place in a short time.

At the Balboa Studios

FROM the Balboa Studios this week we have the announcement of the discovery of a new baby star.

Recognizing the import of the popular success of the Little Mary Sunshine plays, the Balboa company has diligently searched for other child talent in the hope that another Little Mary Sunshine might be found.

One child can do only so much and the Balboa "Baby Grand" has been carefully guarded and has never been overtaxed, but the demand for the Sunshine pictures had grown insistent and there was only one baby to make them, so it was up to the Horkheimers to find another baby star.

After months of search, a baby was found who looked promising. She was tried and "went over" with a smash. So remarkable was her showing that a trial run of the film, photographing her first efforts, when shown in New York, brought forth an offer of the largest sum of money ever put up for a series of pictures starring a child.

The result was that a contract was made with Balboa to deliver six pictures featuring the new baby star, and work will be started at once under the direction of Henry King, whose success with Little Mary Sunshine won commendation from the entire film world.

Dan F. Whitcomb, the author of the plays "Little Mary Sunshine," "Shadow and Sunshine," "Told at Twilight" and "The Weed and the Rose," all Little Mary Sunshine plays, filmed by Balboa, will write the plays for a new baby star.

All Balboa baby pictures are to be known henceforth as "Little Mary Sunshine" productions, that being the brand-name.

Balboa's new $20,000 sunlight stage is rapidly nearing completion. It will be used exclusively for the production of "The Twisted Thread," the forthcoming Balboa-Pathe serial which will serve to introduce Kathleen Clifford to the screen.

This stage involves several brand-new ideas in studio construction. The floor is of hard wood. It is all wired so that when electricity is needed, it can be plugged in at any point, thus eliminating the use of cables.

On one side are eight offices for the Balboa directors, fully equipped. Opposite stand a series of scene-docks. A new system has been devised for operating the diffusers, by simplifying the overhead rigging. All of this construction work has been done under the personal direction of H. M. Horkheimer, president and general manager of Balboa.

With the completion of the stage, which doubles the sunlight producing capacity, work will begin on the new glass-in studio, which is to be the largest in Southern California, the estimated cost of which is $50,000.

WOMAN'S CITY CLUB DISCUSSES MOTION PICTURES.

To make the city of Los Angeles essentially clean-minded in its demand for motion pictures and to raise the standards and ideals of advertising were the topics of Mrs. R. J. Atchley, chairman of the Motion Picture Committee of the Woman's City Club, at the Public Affairs Day, held recently at Blanchard Hall.

"Every mother in the City Club," said Mrs. Atchley, speaking of the motion pictures, "should co-operate for the enforcement of the law which provides that no minor under 14 years of age shall attend a place of public amusement unless accompanied by an adult responsible for his care."

She pointed out that the people of Los Angeles are spending more than $83,000 weekly on motion pictures, and insisted that the people want a better grade of films than those presented for their view at many of the amusement houses.

"It is a minority that demands the objectional films," she said, "but this minority is very active, while those of us who desire something better have contented ourselves with turning away and declining to patronize them."

Mrs. Atchley gave the number of picture houses in the city as 106, which makes a seating capacity, she said, of 53,505. More than $83,000 weekly is spent, she said, in attending picture shows in Los Angeles, and of the audiences 93 per cent. is men between the ages of 19 and 38.

City ordinances, said Mrs. Atchley, are violated by all picture houses, and many cases in the juvenile courts are proved according to her inquiries to have had their origin in the semi-darkness of moving picture houses.

Mrs. Atchley blamed the public for its indifference and lack of interest in the matter of raising the standard of pictures. The majority that desires the better type of play should make it clear, she said, to the producers, and this can be done only by co-operation with the theater managers and by creating a demand for clean films, and then standing behind the effort to give them.

Mrs. Atchley particularly mentioned the gross cruelty that is permitted to animals in pictures, and explained that if there is no cruelty to horses and animals, as the film makers declare, there is at least an excellent imitation of it which never fails to impress the audience with horror and disgust.

Finally she recommended familiarity with the city ordinances pertaining to picture houses, an enforcement of those ordinances when their violation is observed, and the steady refusal on the part of women to let their children attend shows which they themselves have not seen.

She advised that all churches and schools make pictures a part of their recreational period, and wishes that plays for young people might be produced in this way.

Author Advocates Special Picture Entertainments for Children

In a lecture before the Ebell Club Thursday afternoon, this week, L. Frank Baum, author of the "Wizard of Oz" and other modern fairy tales, urged the women to undertake to provide proper motion picture entertainment for the children of Los Angeles. Mr. Baum proposed that the women's clubs divide the city into sections and arrange with theater managers, through rental or on sharing terms, to take over their theaters on Saturday forenoons and present, under their own auspices, such pictues as a central committee of club women had approved. The speaker declared that with the backing of the women's clubs these morning entertainments would be not only self-sustaining but profitable, and that the time is now ripe for such a venture.

"The theater managers," said Mr. Baum, "are not generally interested in children's features, as their regular patrons prefer dramatic and more sensational films. The fact that theaters are known to be largely devoted to problem and sex pictures and the lurid drama would render cautious parents suspicious even if the managers announced programs especially for children. Some of them, earnestly desirous of giving the little ones suitable entertainment, have already made the attempt, only to meet with financial disaster. But under the management of the club women a feeling of confidence would prevail and the Saturday morning shows be well patronized. It seems to me this work is as important a philanthropy as any club could undertake, for children love pictures and need amusement as much as do their elders, but unless they have special programs their attendance at the picture theaters is likely to prove injurious."

Business Drops Off When Picture Theaters Close Sundays.

From Orange, California, we learn that the recent closing of motion picture theaters on Sundays has not proved entirely successful. At any rate, the churches of the little city, at least most of them, are determined to nip in the bud the efforts of the Merchants' and Manufacturers' Association to keep the motion picture theaters of the city open on Sundays and holidays. Several of the churches passed strong resolutions condemning the movement and expressing in no uncertain terms their opposition to putting the matter to a vote of the people.

The Merchants' and Manufacturers' Association intends to petition the Trustees and induce them to have the people decide at an election whether or not there shall be Sunday shows in Orange. The business men contend it is impossible to make a good show pay here unless it is allowed to run seven days in the week. Since the showhouses have been closed, merchants have been losing business, which has gone to near-by towns, and the drop has been so great that the business houses have felt it on all sides. The merchants believe the Sunday opening of the theaters to be one of the solutions to better business for Orange and are working to this end. A strong and stubborn fight seems to be on the tapis.

Mrs. Warrenton Starts Children's Photoplays.

Work was started this week at the new studio of the Frieder Film Corporation at Lankershim on Mrs. Lule Warrenton's five-reel photoplay to be entitled "The Birds' Christmas Carol." It is Mrs. Warrenton's adaptation of the story by Kate Douglas Wiggin.

"Mother" Warrenton is now the first and only woman producer with a studio and company all her own. She has gathered together a company of about fifty people, most of whom are children. Mary Louise Cooper, of Chicago, is the star. Mary Louise is five years old.

The big idea "Mother" Warrenton has had ever since she quit directing pictures for Universal is to produce photoplays with children as actors for the most part, the plays to present the comedies and the tragedies and the dramas of child-life, just as they appear to the child mind. She has studied the proposition deeply, and believes that by writing her own scenarios and directing her own scenes, and supervising the entire production, she can produce photoplays that will be intensely interesting to both old and young, and entirely suitable for children.

Mrs. Lule Warrenton.

The first of these Warrenton productions will be finished about the middle of March, and then will have a try out in Los Angeles. Others of a similar character made by Mrs. Warrenton will follow as fast as she can produce them. She will put out nothing over five reels or one hour and fifteen minutes, believing that this is as long as the interest and attention of the young folks can be held by any one play.

J. A. Quinn Rushing Work on His New Theater.

Construction work is being rushed on Broadway's newest photoplay palace, Quinn's Rialto, which is to be erected on the east side of the theatrical highway just south of Eighth street. A large corps of workmen have begun demolishing the store buildings on Broadway, just below Eighth, where the new picture house is to be erected.

J. A. Quinn has been busying himself during the past week with the purchase of seats, lighting features, lobby decorations, and he is planning to secure an organ that will rival all others now in use in picture houses.

In order to obtain a suitable production with which to open his house, Mr. Quinn will comb the market. The great Fox feature, now in the making, a picturization of Charles Dickens' "A Tale of Two Cities," may be the premier production at the Quinn theater. The opening will take place in about ninety days.

A special generating plant will be installed to produce light and heat, and a feature of the theater will be a large restroom for ladies and children. There will be 900 modern leather upholstered seats, while a giant ventilating plant that will give a complete change of air every three minutes will be installed.

Mr. Quinn paid a visit this week to the Los Angeles offices of the Moving Picture World and spoke very enthusiastically about his new theater project.

Pollard Players Refused Permanent Park Site.

The Pollard Motion Picture Company, which has a studio on the Exposition grounds at San Diego, was given notice, this week, to vacate. A representative of the Merchants' Association appeared before the park board and asked that the company be given a permanent location, but the commissioners decided that commercial enterprises could not legally be given sites in the park. All of the buildings on the Isthmus.

with the exception of the Painted Desert, will be wrecked.

The local branch of the Montessori school also was refused the right to use one of the Exposition buildings for school purposes. It was held that the buildings are not adapted to such work. Moreover, all the buildings on the Prado have been engaged for other purposes.

It was announced that bids for the wrecking of the New Mexico building will be opened today, but Superintendent Morley was instructed not to allow wreckers to start work on the ground until the park commission had given permission.

The park board voted to hold an early meeting with the Exposition directors to decide on numerous matters concerning the Exposition buildings and grounds heretofore uncovered.

DIRECTOR KABIERSKI STARTS WORK ON GREAT PLANT.

From San Diego we learn this week that preparations are being made to start work on the studio buildings for the Empire Feature Film trust of San Diego, at Grossmont.

Henry Kabierski, who will direct the 10-reel features to be made there, is in San Diego getting all details in connection with the production into shape.

The first pictures to be staged will be "The Conquest," "Ten Commandments" and "The Silver Arrow." For months the preliminary work on the features has been carried on at the Los Angeles offices of the Empire Trust, and Mr. Kabierski's staff is well prepared for a successful start.

Tracy E. Shoults, H. B. McKean and S. H. Woodruff, officers of the company, arrived in San Diego Monday this week.

The cast has been selected for the first production, and filming will be started on open-air scenes during the period while the studios are being erected.

Kabierski's last 10-reel film, "The Daughter of the Don," written by Winfield Hogaboom, and played for seven weeks at the Majestic theater in Los Angeles, will be shown in San Diego soon.

ESSANAY TO PRODUCE GREAT PICTURES ON THE COAST.

V. R. Day, special representative of the Essanay Film Company and manager of the Chicago downtown office, arrived in the city Saturday last week. Essanay is to produce a picture on the coast. The old studios of the Culver City Film Company have been temporarily leased and David Hartford, formerly with Ince, will direct the production. Among the players selected for the cast is Frank Borzage, formerly with the American. The Essanay has been preparing for this picture a long time and some of the scenes were filmed here last fall at the Selig Zoo with Senator J. Hamilton Lewis as the leading man. The picturesque Illinois senator was then in Los Angeles on political business. The production will be about eight reels. The scenario was written by Blair Cohan, and the filming will be supervised by Mr. Day, who intends to stay in the city for several weeks.

Los Angeles Film Brevities.

Carl Laemmle, president of the Universal Film Mfg. Co., did not arrive in the city on Friday this week as anticipated, but will probably be here Tuesday, January 30.

James M. Colwell, the new publicity director of the American Film studios in Santa Barbara, paid a visit to the Los Angeles offices of the Moving Picture World Friday this week. Mr. Colwell stated that he was in the city to meet Gail Kane, the new American star. Miss Kane will start rehearsals on her first picture Monday next week under direction of Rollin S. Sturgeon. President Freuler, of the Mutual Film Corporation, is also expected in Santa Barbara this week. Mr. Colwell would not say, but much speculation is expressed both here and in Santa Barbara whether Mr. Freuler is planning to locate one of the new Empire companies in California and produce Charles Frohman's pictures at the Flying A. Studios in Santa Barbara. President S. S. Hutchinson will arrive to the coast in the first part of February.

Adele Farrington, who is in real life Mrs. Hobart Bosworth, has returned to the silent stage again and signed a contract with the Morosco Photoplay Co. to appear in George Beban's next big picture.

Rosalie Ashton and Beatrice Morris, magazine contributors, who have been writing under the pen-name of Ashton Morris, have been engaged by Isadore Bernstein of the Bernstein Film Production Company, to write a series of eight multiple reel feature stories for his organization. Their first story will be issued under the title "Humility." Among the best known stories written by Miss Ashton and Miss Morris are "Brigadier General," "Rounding Off Corners," "The Undertow," "The Trail That Leads Nowhere," and others.

Monday this week we made a flying trip to Universal City. It was early in the morning and we found everybody on the lot reading the Moving Picture World. Monday morning Director Publicity Jonas said is Moving Picture World's Day and almost everybody can be seen with a copy of the paper.

Moving Picture World Day at Universal City.

In a secluded corner we found a bunch of Universalites reading their freshly arrived copies. Friend Jonas quietly beckoned to a photographer and had them all shot. They are, in our picture, from left to right, Frank Whitson, Eugene Gaudio, Ella Hall, Jack Mulhall, Claire McDowell and W. W. Beaudine.

Our exotic friend, Nicholas Dunaew, was the recipient of columns of praise from the local dramatic critics upon his reading of the third act of Ibsen's "Ghosts" at a benefit which "Nich" produced at San Gabriel recently for the Russian war sufferers. Dunaew is at present being featured in Director Rex Ingram's Bluebird productions.

We are informed that H. M. Horkheimer of the Balboa Film Company has signed the following new people for his features: Director Burton George, formerly of the Universal Company; Kathleen Kirkham, who made a great hit by her characterization of Mrs. Taine in the Clune multiple reel feature, "The Eyes of the World." Miss Kirkham will appear exclusively in five-reel productions for the Balboa.

Frank Mayo, who has done notable work with the Balboa Company, has been placed in the Universal stock company and henceforth will be seen in that company's features.

A. L. Erlanger is in the city and much speculation is offered whether the famous play producer is contemplating any motion picture enterprises.

In all probability J. Farrell McDonald, one of the oldest and best known directors in the industry, will have his own feature film company at Huntington Park, California. Negotiations to that effect have been opened between Mr. McDonald and the Huntington Park Chamber of Commerce.

Vivian Rich, one of the old stars of the American Film Company, and who has recently been seen in Fox and Selig productions, has signed a two-year contract with Julius Frankenberg of the Redlands Beauty Films, to be featured with Mr. Frankenberg in that company's comedy series.

The cut following features Frank Lloyd, who has attained great renown with his Fox Film productions featuring William Farnum. Lloyd is the chap with the intense look holding a perfecto; at his feet is his smiling assistant Harry Weil; in back of Lloyd stands Billy Foster, his camera man, and on the other side of the tripod George Richter, another camera man. When this picture was taken Mr. Lloyd was engaged in filming what we believe will be his greatest achievement, the filmization of Charles Dickens' immortal story, "The Tale of Two Cities," in which William Farnum will be starred.

J. Barney Sherry and Charlotte Vermont, of Thos. H. Ince's forces at Culver City, were the stars at a recent vaudeville performance for the benefit of the Pasadena Chamber of Commerce, as well as Baby Marie Kiernan of the Fox Studio, who gave a classic dance. The film actors were the recipients of rounds of applause from the appreciative audience. Mr. Ince also provided his friends on the Chamber of Commerce with an unusually fine drama featuring our old friend Bill Hart.

While strolling along Broadway today, we noticed a very attractive display arranged by our friend Jimmy Anderson, manager of the Clune's Broadway Theater. The attraction drawing the crowds was Mary Pickford in "The Pride of the Clan," and the display featured the tartan plaid quite extensively.

B. C. Steele, who gained quite a reputation with his management of the Mall theater at Cleveland, Ohio, has been appointed manager of the Symphony Theater of this city. Mr. Steele will have entire charge of the theater while Mr. and Mrs. Du Bois are on their 40-month travel trip. We dropped in there the other afternoon to see the first run of the Bushman-Bayne serial, "The Great Secret," which drew enthusiastic applause from the appreciative audience. We noticed the many improvements that Mr. Steele has made throughout the house, and welcome him as a distinctive asset to the local colony of exhibitors.

Doctor H. B. Brechweile, the courteous owner and manager of Palace Theater, is now using Paramount features and L-Ko comedies. We consider the Doctor's theater one of the best located in the town, which, coupled with the attractiveness of his house and the excellence of his program, is greatly responsible for his lucrative patronage.

Our hustling friend, Irving Lesser, of the Golden Gate Film Exchange, has just returned from a trip to San Diego, relative to the run of "Civilization" at the Pickwick theater of that city. Mr. Lesser informs us that following the present run "Civilization" will start on a sixty-day tour of this state.

T. K. Seeger, of the Electric theater at Winslow, has sold his interest to W. J. Daze, Jr., who will be associated with R. G. Dalzell in the management of the theater.

From San Bernardino comes the announcement that Carl Ray, a theater owner of Los Angeles, has purchased the Auditorium theater at San Bernardino from D. F. Eselin. Mr. Ray will completely renovate the interior of the house and expects to spend ten thousand dollars for that purpose. Both Fox and Metro features will be shown upon the re-opening of the theater. Mr. Ray will maintain headquarters in Los Angeles for his chain of theaters and will employ a local manager for each individual house.

L. E. Butler, the former manager of the Coliseum theater of Phoenix, Arizona, has consummated a deal whereby he becomes manager of the Empress theater of that city.

"Enlighten Thy Daughter"

Increasing Attendance Marks the Showing of the Production at the Post Theater, New York.

THE current attraction at the Park theater, Columbus Circle, New York, "Enlighten Thy Daughter," seems to have caught public fancy. A constantly increasing patronage from the opening night, January 28, shows a daily increase (remarkable!), with the advance sale continuing to grow. The Enlightenment Photoplays Corporation, of which Henry J. Brook is the head, is sponsoring the production at the Park.

There has been an unusual amount of attention on the part of the daily press to the engagement of this picture at the Park. Early last week the Birth Control Society issued a request that its members refrain from attending. Later in the week a showing was given the society and it withdrew its objections.

The criticisms of the daily reviewers were generally good. One paper took exception to the fact that the subject was a propaganda picture. Later Ivan Abramson, author and director of the feature, convinced the journal he had made no pretence that "Enlighten Thy Daughter" was a propaganda and admitted that he produced it as an entertainment solely and the fact that various people considered it an excellent propaganda was no fault of his.

The picture opened at the Park to $900 Sunday, January 28. Monday, an especially inclement day, proved an exception, and Tuesday the business took a jump and on Thursday, with five shows, the gross receipts exceeded $1,600.

The engagement at the Park Theater will probably be for a period of eight weeks. Already managers from Boston, Brooklyn, Philadelphia and Chicago have sought the picture for first-class presentation in their cities. Mr. Brock has not committed himself, but will probably begin the selling of the feature on a state rights basis at once.

One of the novel advertising stunts to be sent to exhibitors to aid in their work in behalf of the picture will be a huge sheet containing the indorsement of three hundred clergymen.

"Skinner's Dress Suit"

Exhilarating Essanay Comedy Drama Featuring Bryant Washburn Supported by an Excellent Cast.

Reviewed by James S. McQuade.

HENRY IRVING DODGE'S story, which made hundreds of thousands of readers of the Saturday Evening Post purr with pleased satisfaction and indulge in hearty laughter of the most approved type, has been done in moving pictures by Essanay. The result is a success not only in moving picture art, but one that is bound to bring to the faces of exhibitors who book the subject that particular smile which only healthy box office receipts can create.

Scene from "Skinner's Dress Suit" (Essanay).

It is a pleasing task to review "Skinner's Dress Suit." It has a beneficent atmosphere throughout. When one is not smiling inwardly or laughing outwardly at the situations, his heart is stirred by some trait of character that shows the best in human nature. The worst never comes to life in these films, yet they reveal only what we feel might have occurred in ordinary, everyday business life.

I believe everyone who sees "Skinner's Dress Suit" will agree with me that the subtitles are right to the point, crisp and catchy, and that Charles J. McQuirk, who made the adaptation, has set a pattern that might well be followed by others who engage in the very important work of writing subtitles.

Director Harry Blaumont has told the story perfectly. I cannot recall a spot where I might have suggested a change. No gaps that might leave the spectator in doubt for a moment are observable. In the matter of settings Mr. Blaumont has exercised his customary painstaking care.

In my opinion Bryant Washburn has done his finest work before the camera in the role of Skinner. Who can forbear to laugh at the changing expression on the cashier's face while on the morning train on his way to the city, as his courage gradually sinks from the point of "demanding" a raise of salary from his employers to "asking," and finally to "suggesting." And when the dreaded interview with the senior member of the firm takes place, and we watch the unconscious tap, tap, tap of the nervous cashier's shoe on the foot of the boss, we feel like exploding when worm-like he wriggles out the words: "I came in to see how you felt about giving me a raise."

Or in that interview afterward with his wife "Honey," as he endearingly calls her, when he has made up his mind to tell her that he has got a raise, and to draw on his small bank account for the extra money that she intends to spend, how brutally one inclines to laughter as he tells the lie seemingly with as great physical pain as if he were swallowing a sword. Then he looks up at a portrait of George Washington on the wall and winks, and strange to say the revered George winks back in commiseration.

Miss Hazel Daly's "Honey" is a very worthy opposite to Mr. Washburn's "Skinner." It is the first opportunity I have had to see this woman in moving pictures, and I venture to state that she will share everywhere in the honors of the picture's star.

Harry Dunkinson is seen to advantage in the strong character part of Willard Jackson, whom Skinner succeeds in bringing back to the firm of McLaughlin & Perkins. The members of the firm are well represented by James C. Carrol and U. K. Houpt, while the parts of Mrs. J. Smith Crawford (a leader in the social set that finally takes Skinner into its exclusive favor), Mrs. Jackson and Mrs. McLaughlin are ably portrayed by Florence Oberle, Frances Raymond and Marion Skinner.

The release will be made February 5, through the K-E-S-E service.

"Each to His Kind"

Lasky-Paramount Picture of Indian Prince and English Flirt —Hayakawa and Aoki Rescue an Unconvincing Plot.

Reviewed by Hanford C. Judson.

THERE is some excellent acting in this Lasky picture, "Each to His Kind," and it is done respectively by Sessue Hayakawa and Tsuru Aoki, two talented Japanese players. The former has the role of an East Indian Prince being educated in England and the latter plays his betrothed left in India. He meets an English flirt and lets her make a fool of him. His English tutor—a rather foolish character, needed by the plot—takes a snapshot at the two talking. This photograph gets to India and is made use of by conspirators. The Eastern girl sees it and the prince's kingdom and love are both put in jeopardy. The story rises to a very good situation.

In every scene played by these two Japanese the story holds and pleases the spectator with its dignity; but this can be truthfully said of few other scenes in the picture.

These two players truly keep the offering's head up before its spectators.

Their work carries the other scenes, notwithstanding the rather unimaginative direction which could permit the tutor to come into the prince's room and make him a bow of respect with his fedora hat on. The English colonels—there are two of them and both are weakly played—uncover before royalty in the house. The director let the Eastern girl talk with her Eastern lover without her veil, yet made her cover when a white man came near. In life, the reverse would more likely happen. It was a false play to intrude the veil at all.

Scene from "Each to His Kind" (Paramount).

The picture is full of beautiful backgrounds, has many finely acted passages, a few unnecessary scenes and a few that fall flat. The story interests, but should have been shorter. As a whole it is pretty good and will be liked by many.

Director Joseph De Grasse in a few days will commence the picturization of a five-act drama, "The Flashlight," featuring Dorothy Phillips.

"The Red Woman"

Five-Reel World Film Western Melodrama Shows Gail Kane as an Educated Indian Girl.

Reviewed by Edward Weitzel.

THE pictorial aspect of "The Red Woman," a five-reel western photomelodrama released by the World Film Corporation, is of considerable merit. Scenes showing striking exteriors in New Mexico are frequent, and the phases of western life are reproduced with commendable fidelity. The story is a fairly good example of its class, but a situation that is intended to be taken seriously is turned into farce by its absolute impossibility, and the play ceases to be impressive from then on.

Scene from "The Red Woman" (World).

The situation referred to is where one of the actors poses as the statue of an Indian god and the Chihuahua heroine is supposed to take a club and knock him to bits and place her white lover in the statue's place. This is done to hide the hero from a revengeful Mexican who, later in the drama, stands within two feet of his rival and fails to detect that he is alive.

Maria Temosach, the Indian heroine, has been educated at an eastern college, but returns home to resume the dress and customs of her people. A Mexican cattle thief tries to win her, but she favors a young American who has been sent west by his father to make a man of himself. Maria saves him from being murdered, and the two fall in love. A child is born to the Indian girl, and the American then marries Maria. The picture is not wanting in action, but the incidents do not always dovetail smoothly.

Gail Kane is a handsome Indian maiden, and Morton Dean cannot be blamed for falling in love with her, but her eastern education must have made radical changes in her nature; she has all the characteristics of a white woman when she returns to New Mexico, and exhibits the grace, mental alertness and volubility of the race.

Mahlon Hamilton is a consistent representative of the young American, and Ed. F. Roseman looks and acts the Mexican bandit with equal success. June Elvidge in an adventuress role is a stunning figure in riding breeches and plays the part excellently. Charlotte Earlcott is well cast as the mother of the adventuress.

"Rosie O'Grady

Five-Reel Art Drama with Viola Dana in the Title Role.

Reviewed by Louis Reeves Harrison.

HIGHLY interesting as a character study and for artistry of presentation, "Rosie O'Grady" depends heavily upon the exceptional performance of Viola Dana and her admirable support. With no great amount of opportunity, Miss Dana infuses her role with such decided personality that her interpretation surpasses any work she has hitherto done. She shows a decided improvement over anything she accomplished in the company with which she was long associated, possibly from that clearer conception of what is to be done which comes only through ripened experience as an interpreter of screen stories. She puts life and feeling into a role that is almost colorless by itself in the wornout story of the innocent girl betrayed under promise of marriage. In this effort she is happily seconded by an admirably chosen support and well chosen settings.

To the director goes high praise for the effects accomplished by artistry of light and shade, of emphasis and contrast, and for much that makes the releases of value, and to him must be debited its faults. Naturally romantic, he has attempted realism of a story of the "East Side" of New York, but the characters he presents are not of that locality to-day, nor do little girls go into bar rooms for a can of beer—that is theatrical, not realistic. There are other little errors of minor importance, completely overshadowed by his romantic handling of a supposed realistic drama. Director Collins has not yet found the medium he deserves, but he is showing what he could do with it if he had the chance. He has made a rather commonplace story interesting, sympathetically so, and that is what will serve to make it popular.

"Greed"

Nance O'Neil in the Third Number of "The Seven Deadly Sins" Series, Presented by McClure Pictures.

Reviewed by Edward Weitzel.

THE third number of the McClure "Seven Deadly Sins" series is called "Greed." The picture, however, is in no sense a preachment. A dozen other titles would have suited it as well. The greed exhibited by the characters is but slightly above normal. A successful stock gambling deal on the part of a young woman named Eve and her fiance leads them into unexpected danger, and the young man is convicted of murder and sentenced to death. The main thing about the screen play is the fact that it contains an interesting story; the "man in front" will care a great deal more about the fate of the people in the play than he will for any moral lesson to be derived from the story. The material used is not startlingly original nor of transcendent power, but it is assembled with skill and will furnish a good quality of entertainment for the major portion of any body of spectators—a condition not easily attained and one that calls for the congratulation of everyone concerned. At the risk of being accused of harping on one string, the writer is impelled to once more emphasize the value of real drama to the screen.

The big situation in "Greed" is where a young girl is lured to the apartment of the villain and forced to struggle in defense of her honor. Her lover learns where she has gone and follows her. The villain is killed accidentally, but circumstantial evidence points to the girl's lover as the guilty person.

The part played by Nance O'Neil is that of a stenographer who accepted a large bribe not to betray a crooked stock gambler for whom she worked. She makes good use of the money and at the opening of the play is being received by people of position. The stock gambler turns up and forces her to assist him in his schemes. She desires to lead an honorable life, and is made to pay dearly for yielding to temptation. The role gives Miss O'Neil considerable scope for her wide range of dramatic expression and she has no difficulty in meeting every demand made upon her personal fitness for the character. Shirley Mason and George Le Guere are the pair of young lovers. Miss Mason is an engaging bit of femininity and knows her dramatic p's and q's. George Le Guere puts warmth and vigor into the role of the lover, and Harry Northrup, Robert Elliott and Alfred Hickman are able members of the cast. The direction by Theodore Marston, the photography by Charles Gilson and the general production of the entire picture are to be commended.

Four Kalem One-Reelers

"The Trap," One of the "Grant, Police Reporter" Series; "The Side-Tracked Sleeper," Another of "The Hazards of Helen," and "Ghost Hounds" and "The Model Janitor," a Pair of Ham, Bud, Ethel Teare and Henry Murdoch Farces.

Reviewed by Edward Weitzel.

"The Trap."

THERE are a number of live thrills in "The Trap," the latest episode of the "Grant, Police Reporter," series. The Kalem picture in which George Larkin has the title role tells how the newspaper chap prevented a gang of crooks from disgracing a police officer, the father of the girl he loves. Grant performs some interesting stunts in a dumbwaiter shaft, while on the track of the gang, and winds up by taking a flying leap from a third-story window to a distant telegraph pole. Ollie Kirkby, in the person of the police officer's daughter, gets into a boy's suit of clothes and has a lively set-to with one of the crooks.

Scene from "The Trap" (Kalem).

"The Side-Tracked Sleeper."

The human touch in "The Side-tracked Sleeper" is unusually effective. This episode of "The Hazards of Helen" has the customary risk for the operator at Lone Point, but the situation is brought about without the assistance of any of the bad men that so frequently plot to cause a wreck on Helen's road. Careless switching almost wrecks the sleeper in which the wife of the superintendent is resting with her newly born infant. Helen follows a pair of runaway freight cars in an auto, does a flying leap to the side of the rear car and averts the danger. George Routh and G. A. Williams are Helen Gibson's main support. E. W. Matlick wrote the scenario.

"Ghost Hounds."

The high cost of hens' eggs prompt Ham and Bud to rob a hencoop in "Ghost Hounds." The owner of the coop is the sheriff of the county. He captures the pair, tries them himself and sentences them to pass the night in a haunted house. The ghosts are a band of thieves that make the old mansion their headquarters. Ham and Bud are given a large-sized scare. With such material the big fellow and the little 'un, Ethel of the smile (in spite of the teare in her name) and Henry Murdoch, who sits up nights inventing new and facetious facial adornment, register their usual grade of comic entertainment.

"The Model Janitor."

Ham obtains a position as model for a sculptor and poses as an Indian, but Bud spoils the effect of his partner's posture by jabbing him from behind with a sharp stick. The sculptor, his daughter and her young man take a hand in the doings, which are characterized by quick and amusing movements on the part of the interested parties. Ethel Teare and Henry Murdoch are in the picture.

Clara Kimball Young is making rapid headway with her fourth Selznick-Picture production, a film version of Eugene Walter's powerful drama, "The Easiest Way." Albert Capellani, who directed Miss Young in "The Common Law" and "The Foolish Virgin," is also in charge of this picture. The cast includes Joseph Kilgour in the part of Brockton, the role he played in the original Belasco stage presentation of the drama.

"The Wax Model"

Pallas-Paramount Picture With Good Cast, Story Just Sentimental Enough to Be Popular and More Than a Touch of Poetry in Direction.

Reviewed by Hanford C. Judson.

THERE are so many pretty scenes and so much that is nothing but charming in this Pallas-Paramount picture, "The Wax Model," that it is safe to grade it pretty well up on the list. It is entertainment and entertainment only. In the story there is little that is new and the best parts of it have been pictured in many plots and stories. So much the better.

Vivian Martin plays a most engaging little model in London's bohemia. Her mother, an "unfortunate" creature, has finished her part of the child's education by committing suicide and telling her in her last breath that all men are false. The child tries to be a nursegirl, but is too pretty. By necessity she becomes a model, but she doesn't let any of the artists take liberties and becomes known as the city's most charming vixen.

Thomas Holding plays a rich English student, rather prudish. His sister (Helen Eddy) is having a statue made by an artist (George Fisher). This man is married, but is goatish. Julie, the model, has taught him his place, but his society patron, Helen, is fooled. The student feels the stir of spring and takes a walk. He stops to look at some ladies' lingerie in a window (this is unfortunate at this juncture and a false step artistically) and from it he is attracted to a wax figure. The student learns of the model from the proprietor of the shop and has soon made her acquaintance. Meanwhile his sister is falling under the spell of the artist. There are many pretty scenes and the student begins to think that the model is not a "good girl." He is so broken up over this that he makes a second visit to the woman's wear shop and forthwith breaks the plate glass window and then the wax model. The rest, even to the happy ending, is melodrama, artistically presented and surely pleasant to watch. Whether this picture will make a strong three-day run or not will depend on the audience. With many an audience it probably will. Barring the unconvincing ultra-sentimentality of the scenes in the woman's wear shop, it is a beautiful picture.

Three Pathe Releases

"Her Life and His," Five-Reel Thanhouser Photoplay Starring Florence La Badie; "The Island God Forgot"; Fifth Number of "Patria," the International Serial with Mrs. Vernon Castle, and the Tenth Instalment of "Pearl of the Army," Featuring Pearl White.

Reviewed by Edward Weitzel.

"Her Life and His."

PHILIP LONERGAN is the author of "Her Life and His," a five-reel photoplay produced by the Thanhouser company. The picture belongs to the propaganda order of screen dramas, the subject being prison reform. Every class of fiction that attempts to make a special plea for the betterment of any of the social evils is bound to sacrifice something of the steady development of its story; also, its intimate human side. "Her Life and His" is no exception to the rule. It starts off in a promising manner and much which follows is the logical outcome of the resolve of Mary Murdock, the heroine, to live down a prison record and to help those who are the victims of a vicious political system. The interest around her private life is sufficiently strong to maintain its position as the main thread of the plot; but perfect drama cannot be achieved if the mind of the spectator be diverted at frequent intervals by object lessons and short preachments, however much they advance the moral purpose of the play. It is the opinion of the writer that people go to the theater because they want drama, and the nearer a screen play comes to supplying this demand the better it will fulfill its mission. Narrative fiction and works that betray their didactic nature sacrifice a portion of the emotional appeal that is so great a factor in the drama's power to sway and to captivate an audience.

Frederic Sullivan has directed the production of "Her Life and His" with excellent judgment, and Florence La Badie brings real feeling and a well-schooled method to her acting of the part of Mary Murdock. Ethyle Clarke is an admirable contrast to Miss La Badie, as the revengeful Mrs. Nan Travers, and H. E. Herbert, Sam Niblack and Justus D. Barnes play the leading male roles with skill.

"The Island God Forgot."

The fifth installment of "Patria" shows that the heroine, after being thrown from the Fall River boat, floated to an island where the Japs have stored a large amount of glycerine. Patria is taken ashore, but Haku finds this out and attempts to secure her. Donald Parr also discovers where she is and goes to rescue her in an aeroplane. Patria is forced to take to the water again and is seen and picked up by Donald. Haku pursues them in another flying machine, but is brought to earth by a shot from the American and lands on the dynamite storehouse. The picture ends with a terrific explosion. This number of the International serial has been made with the same care as that bestowed on the former releases.

"The Silent Army."

In the tenth number of the Pathe serial "Pearl of the Army" the Government Chemical Building is the scene of another attack during an effort to obtain possession of the wafers by the enemies of the United States. Two aeroplanes figure largely in the action, and while a duel between them is going on in midair Pearl is forced to take to a parachute. The two machines fall to the ground and are wrecked.

"Me an' Me Pal"

Reviewed by Robert C. McElravy.

THIS production, written by Richard Ganthony and produced by Harold Shaw, draws once more upon the entertaining English costermongers for its material. The number is a reminder for former successes of this type, including "My Old Dutch" and "The Heart Of A Child."

An English company appears in this story also, including Hubert Willis as Labby, a vegetable hawker. This character is the owner of an amusing burro, which appears frequently throughout the story and provides much of the humor. Gerald Ames portrays the part of Harry Masterman, a young artist, whose career is closely followed. Edna Flugarth plays Kitty, a young actress, with whom the hero falls in love.

The production is quite strong in general atmosphere and the manner in which it depicts the manners and customs of the costers. The Covent Garden market scenes are particularly pleasing.

The young artist has some very hard struggles in the early days of his profession, but endures them with the fortitude to be expected of a real one. He is forced to look for other work to keep himself afloat. He falls in with Labby, the vegetable hawker, who recognizes him as the young man who already owes him money. In spite of this he gives the young fellow employment, and the story then goes on in an entertaining way to show how the artist finally makes good. The love affair is followed in an enjoyable manner.

"The Courage of Silence"

Vitagraph Blue Ribbon Feature Written by Milton Nobles—Alice Joyce and Harry Morey in the Star Roles.

Reviewed by Edward Weitzel.

SHAKESPEARE'S famous remark on frailty put the stigma on woman alone. "The Courage of Silence," the Vitagraph Blue Ribbon photoplay written by Milton Nobles, makes one of the male sex a member of the frailty class and shows him to be a worse offender than the woman in the case. An American business man, married to a beautiful woman and the father of two fine youngsters goes over to London, and while there meets the wife of the Spanish Ambassador. She is unhappily married and is attracted by the American. In a moment of passion they imagine they have fallen in love with each other. The American returns home, decides he cannot live without the other woman, deserts his family and elopes with the wife of the Spanish gentleman. When she learns the truth about the American's family affairs she leaves him, enters a convent and is the means of bringing Bradley and his family together again. Mercedes had never loved her husband and had been treated cruelly by him. The American hadn't the shadow of an excuse for his misconduct.

So much for the moral aspect of the Milton Noble photoplay! As a piece of craftsmanship it is a credit to its builder. The story unfolds skillfully and is made doubly entertaining by the completeness of the production. The locations include scenes in the United States, London and the South of France. All have been carefully selected and the illusion is complete.

The cast is proficient. Alice Joyce satisfies the eye in the character of the Spanish woman, and although somewhat restrained in her expression of feeling, succeeds in winning sympathy for her belief in her better nature. Harry Morey's personality stands him in good stead as the American. Bradley is a cad at heart, but actor makes one almost forget the fact. Anders Randolf is an imposing figure as the Ambassador, and Robert Gaillard is equal to the requirements of Hammond. Cleo Ayers makes an attractive wife for Bradley. Willie Johnson and Mildred May are clever as his two children. William P. S. Earle directed the picture.

"Princess in the Dark"

Five-Reel Ince Feature With a New Star, Enid Bennett, in the Title Role.

Reviewed by Louis Reeves Harrison.

IN a special showing at the Strand Mr. Ince presented a new star performer in Miss Enid Bennett, an Australian beauty and a recent discovery. Miss Bennett has the physical promise. She is a girl of unspoiled sweetness and natural loveliness, and there are many signs that she has intuitive perceptions of what is required for the interpretation of character. A star is, however, both born and made. It is visible to those called upon to critically examine the work of performers, whether or not known to producers, that star performers are more or less evolved under intelligent training at the studios. Many have gone along for years almost unnoticed, faithful and dependable interpreters of roles assigned to them, taking their share of the minor parts as their particular type and the play requires and have won popular favor by hard and intelligent work. It is a question of time for them to fully grasp the subtleties of screen interpretation.

Almost the first tendency shown in a star-to-be is surplus energy and enthusiasm, but Miss Bennett has been too well handled for that natural tendency to obtrude. Then, it is hardly fair to pass judgment on her capabilities from what can be deduced from a single performance. The role of an imaginative blind girl who idealizes a hunchback as her Prince Charming has been shown before, even in a recent release, where the cripple was cured that all might end happily. The play has been done before, but never more consistently. It is a figurative treatment of human illusion about life. Under the guise of a blind girl is blind youth, idealizing the ugly, imagining beauty and charm, only to be disillusioned when sight is given of the true state of things. The Ince story has preserved most consistently the idea that it deals only with material persons and events. Though designed as an exposition of what is purely spiritual, the analogy is not thrust upon the audience; it is felt rather than seen—the right way to make a motion-picture impression.

"The Man Who Took a Chance"

Reviewed by Edward Weitzel.

FORTUNATELY for "The Man Who Took a Chance," a five-reel Bluebird photoplay, in which Franklyn Farnum is the central figure, the story need not be taken seriously. It relates the adventures of a young chap who falls in love with a girl's photograph, meets the original and is made the subject of a scheme to test his courage. The heroine's mother has a weakness for titles and the hero passes himself off as an English nobleman; hence the girl's reason for testing his fighting blood. Ranch life and glimpses of the better grade of western society are mingled throughout the picture. During the test the action becomes strenuous, but, for the most part, more attention has been paid to developing bits of quiet humor than to keeping the story moving ahead with any noticeable degree of speed.

William Worthington, the director in charge, has been consistent to the material at hand, and a number of the scenes have much pictorial merit. Many screen patrons will find the picture fairly entertaining.

Franklyn Farnum enters into the spirit of his part as if he enjoyed playing it, and makes the young fellow who wins the heiress an ingenuous mortal who is easily excused for not suspecting that his fight with the cowboys is a put-up job. Agnes Vernon offers sufficient reason for her admirer's infatuation, and Lloyd Whitlock, Countess du Cello, Marc Fenton, Charles Perley and Arthur Hoyt give a good account of their several allotments.

"The End of the Tour"

Reviewed by Edward Weitzel.

MANY of the scenes in "The End of the Tour," a five-reel screen story of stage life produced by the Columbia Pictures Corporation, are authentic pictures of the joys and sorrows—mostly sorrows—experienced by the members of the small time theatrical companies. Earle Mitchell, the author of the story, and George Baker, the director of the production, have evidently secured their information at first hand. As a consequence nearly all the "stage business" is true to life and will amuse that large portion of the general public that looks upon the actor as a being apart, and has an insatiable curiosity concerning him and his private affairs. The usual vicissitudes of a traveling company in hard luck are shown in "The End of the Tour," and a romantic story is woven about the leading man of the organization. He gives his last dollar to help the women of the troupe out of town when the company strands, and stays behind with the property man. The two assist the local fire company to put on a benefit performance, in which the daughter of the leading man of the town takes part. Her father objects strongly, and discovers that the actor whom he does not want to associate with his daughter is his own son.

Scene from "The End of the Tour" (Metro).

The studies of stage and rural types are the best feature of the picture, and have been intrusted to a competent cast. Lionel Barrymore plays the leading man of the Chicago Ideals Theater Company with excellent judgment and makes him human and likable. Walter Hiers, Richard Thornton, Maud Hill, Kate Blancke, Mary Taylor and Hugh Jeffery are the other members of the troupe, and Frank Currier, Ethel Dayton, Charles Eldridge, J. Herbert Frank and William Harvey represent the people of the town. The production has been given careful attention.

A Couple of Mutuals

"Easy Street," One of Chaplin's Best, and "Where Love Is," Six-Part Adaptation of William J. Locke's Novel, Featuring Ann Murdock.

Reviewed by Margaret I. MacDonald.

"Easy Street."

IN "Easy Street," Charlie Chaplin's latest and best, if we may venture to obtrude so decided an opinion, an original key has been struck. At any rate, it is Chaplin at his funniest; and nothing much more entertaining, by way of comedy, could be imagined than his adventures with the street bully, when on occasion he has been placed on patrol duty in wild and woolly Easy street, after having changed his profession from tramp to policeman. It is useless to try to describe the antics of the little policeman and the giant bully, whose superior strength made the rubbing of the nose of a lamppost on the ground appear but a mere trifle. And it would be equally useless to try to picture the turn of the tables when the bully, overcome by the gas turned on him by the little policeman as a finale to his post-twisting demonstrations, lies unconscious in the street, and the lawless throngs, now in awe of the policeman instead of the bully, disappear as by magic at the flaunt of his coattail.

With all this excellence of entertaining quality the picture presented a couple of points which would require elimination. One of these occurs in the suggestive handling of an overturned baby's bottle in one of the scenes in the Easy street mission, and the other where the dope fiend makes a too free use of the needle in one of the East street tenements.

"Where Love Is."

Ann Murdock's first appearance for the Mutual Film Corporation brings us a six-part adaptation of William J. Locke's novel "Where Love Is." The theme of the story is a good one and could have been worked into an interesting production with more care on the directing end, as well as in the making of the scenario. Ann Murdock succeeds, despite these drawbacks, in doing some pleasing work. She has been able to meet the camera with a nonchalance not easily acquired. The interpretation of the role of the artist is less pleasing than any; the tendency in this case is to overact. The production's main weakness lies in the fact that side issues have been brought too much into prominence. At times the plot seems somewhat obtuse, and the identity of some of the minor characters is often obscure. And while the picture will be found on the whole entertaining, we have to admit that its arrangement is not altogether professional.

Country Life Stories

Novel and Artistic Series of One and Two Reel Pictures Conceived by Mrs. Paula Blackton, to Be Released by the Vitagraph Company.

Reviewed by Edward Weitzel.

ON FEBRUARY 2, at the Rialto theater, New York, an unusual series of one and two-reel motion pictures was shown by the Vitagraph Company, under the title of "Paula Blackton's Country Life Stories." These pictures were conceived by Mrs. Blackton, and were taken on the Blackton estate, "Harbourwood," L. I. The author also appears in the pictures, six in number, which have been given the titles of "The Little Strategist," "Satin and Calico," "The Collie Market," "A Spring Idyl," "The Fairy Godmother" and "The Diary of a Puppy." The two Blackton children and prominent Vitagraph actors, including Charles Richmond, Marc MacDurmott, Charles Kent and Jewel Hunt, also take part in the comedies—not to mention the domestic pets, live stock and household servants of the estate.

Scene from "The Little Strategist" (Vitagraph).

The result is a number of highly artistic and charmingly intimate stories of life in the open, that are assured a hearty welcome from men and women that can appreciate real merit. To go further, these pictures have opened up new possibilities for the art of the screen, and possess something of the fascination and fresh viewpoint that have attracted gratified audiences to the theaters devoted to the production of the short plays of Dunsany, Shay and other leading creators of the spoken drama. Not that they are an intellectual feast, but there are flashes of humor, bits of real sentiment and touches of natural beauty running through the five pictures first mentioned, that are uncommonly well expressed. "The Diary of a Puppy" is a study of animal life which could only have been obtained by exercising much tact and patience; it well repays all the time spent on it, and will delight and amuse every spectator.

The acting in the comedies, which were produced under the direction of J. Stuart Blackton, is in keeping with the care given to the pictorial features of the pictures. Mrs. Blackton, by no means a novice at the work, sets a keynote that insures the qualities in the acting best suited to her grade of photoplays. The efforts of the Blackton children are beyond art. Surrounded by familiar scenes and objects and loved faces, they perform their part with a reality which does not betray the amount of labor necessary to catch and record their moods at the right moment.

The lighting of the outdoor scenes and the aptness of the sub-title are two points of excellence that should not be overlooked. This series of "Country Life Stories" was originally intended for private and semi-professional showing. The resolve of the Vitagraph Company to give the series to the general public means a distinct gain for the followers of the screen.

Announce "Is Marriage Sacred" Additions

Essanay Company Names the Five Subjects That Will Extend the Original List.

"Is Marriage Sacred?" Essanay's series of dramatic photoplays dealing with problems of matrimony, as was announced in these columns last week, has been extendeed to seventeen, one of which is being released each week.

"The Pulse of Madness" will be the first of the added photodramas. It is a tensely dramatic offering, hinging on an inconsequential quarrel between a man and his wife which developed into home-destroying proportions.

"The Pallid Dawn," the second, depicts the awakening of a young bride to her terrible mistake of marriage.

"The Wifeless Husband," which follows, shows a man who remains true to his wife, even after she has deserted him.

"Meddling with Marriage" takes up the problem arising from the interference by relatives in a young couple's marital affairs.

"The Tomb of Romance," the last of the additional photodramas, asks the question, "Should a young couple let marriage end their romance?" The answer is "No."

These productions, as has been the case with previous units of the "Is Marriage Sacred?" series, will have a screen time of approximately thirty minutes. They will be released through the General Film Service.

Elaborate Settings in Pickford Film.

Seldom is such a continuous display of luxurious settings and furnishings required as in the case of Mary Pickford's newest Artcraft picture, "A Poor Little Rich Girl," the well known Eleanor Gates subject now being completed under the direction of Maurice Tourneur.

In keeping with the subject, which tells of the extravagant display of wealth, many costly scenes were built for this photoplay, including one of particular lavishness disclosing a beautiful conservatory with its lily pond, fountains, rare birds and immense botanical display. This set alone occupied the entire length of the big stage at the Mary Pickford studio in Fort Lee, most of the costly furnishings then being totally destroyed in an exciting fight scene.

In addition to these unusual sets Director Tourneur and his technical staff have succeeded in greatly enhancing the artistic value of the picture through rare lighting and new effects in the photoplay art, presenting in all a fitting background for the beautiful little star. To anyone familiar with the story it is readily apparent that it contains a wealth of opportunities for novel effects which are only possible through the scope of the motion picture.

New Date for "Royal Pauper."

A change in the date of the release of "The Royal Pauper," a five-reel Edison production in which Francine Larrimore, the Broadway star, appears, has been made. First announced for release through the Kleine-Edison-Selig-Essanay Service on February 12, this picture will not be distributed until a week later, February 19.

No Limit on Kalem's New Series

Popularity Only Will Determine Number of Episodes of "The American Girl" and "A Daughter of Daring."

FOLLOWING close upon the announcement enamating from the Kalem offices that a new two-part series called "The American Girl" and a new single reel series to be known as "A Daughter of Daring" are in the making, comes the news that no limit has been placed upon the number of episodes of either to be produced.

This is in line with Kalem's policy of the past, and means that if its new series of productions meet with the reception accorded "The Girl From 'Frisco," "Stingaree" and "The Hazards of Helen" exhibitors can count upon a continuance of "The American Girl" and "A Daughter of Daring" as long as the public may determine. In other words: the Barometer of Popularity will be consulted from time to time and its readings will be relied upon to determine the number of episodes to be released.

Judging from Kalem's record as a producer of series pictures there will be at least twenty-five episodes of each new series before the two are brought to a close.

Frederick R. Bechdolt, author of the stories for "The American Girl," calls his intital episode "The Black Rider of Tasajara." It tells a dramatic tale of a respected Westerner who finds himself drawn into the life of a highwayman almost subconsciously. His unmasking by the American girl, Madge King, provides an episode of splendid dramatic value.

During the week which has elapsed since it became known to the exhibitors that the Kalem Company would shortly release two new series productions—a two-part and a single-reel series of railroad dramas—the various General Film exchanges have received a large number of inquiries. Many of these inquiries come from theater men who have decided to eliminate costly features and return to a mixed program of short length subjects.

The Kalem organization, it is understood, will furnish several of the General exchanges with additional prints of its new productions so that there will not occur any disappointments when two or more houses set aside the same day of the week as Kalem day.

Complete advance information regarding its releases is now furnished by the Kalem company to the head office of the General, that is a more complete service along publicity lines than has heretofore been in effect. Exhibitors are urged to make use of this service to increase their receipts.

"The Accomplice" (Art Dramas).

Jack Sherrill and Dorothy Bernard are the two stars who are featured in this week's Art Drama, "The Accomplice," which is to be released on February 15. "The Accomplice" was produced by Ralph Dean for the William L. Sherrill Feature Corporation, from the story written by Anthony P. Kelly. It is described as a picturization of the manner in which New York's smart set, or a portion of it at least, spends its time and money. The story is located in the metropolis, and it is said that the author has introduced into his story counterparts of a number of Broadway celebrities.

Jack Sherrill and Dorothy Bernard play the parts of Thomas and Alice Harcourt, a brother and sister. They are the children of a wealthy and influential New Yorker, whose greatest pride in life is his untarnished family name. Alice, having more time and money than she knows what to do with, takes to attending tango teas at the Broadway cafes. She becomes involved in an affair with Antonio, a professional dancer. Tom, too, is a frequentee of the white light district, but falling in love with Miriam Collins, his father's secretary, he reforms.

Upton Sinclair's Work Picturized.

Herbert Blanche, president of the U. S. Amusement Corporation, announces two important acquisitions of that company. The first is the securing of the picture rights to Upton Sinclair's well known novel, "The Adventurer," which was one of the most successful novels of a few years ago. It was first published serially in one of the prominent national magazines, and later put out in book form. Marion Swayne has been engaged especially to portray the central figure of the story. Supporting Miss Swayne in this production will appear Pell Trenton, Kirk Brown, who appeared in the last U. S. Amusement Corporation Art Drama "Whoso Findeth a Wife," and Yoland Doquette. The picture is being produced under the direction of Madame Blanche at the U. S. Amusement Corporation's studios in Fort Lee.

Billy West Signs with New Company.

Billy West has signed a contract with The Caws Comedy Corporation for a period of five years at a salary approximating $25,000 per year. The Billy West comedies will be distributed by The Caws Comedy Corporation on the state rights basis. While there has only been three pictures of Billy West Comedies put on the market thus far, the demand for them has been so great that a special company was formed to promote these pictures exclusively.

The Caws Comedy Corporation is composed of Arthur M. Werner, N. H. Spitzer, Charles Feature Abrams and Samuel Cummins.

These pictures will be released in single reels, two a month. The first release will be put on the market about March 1.

Comments on the Films

EXCLUSIVELY BY OUR OWN STAFF

General Film Company.

THE NET OF INTRIGUE (Kalem), Serial No. 21693.—Episode No. 16 of the "Grant, Police Reporter" series. George Larkin's stunts in this reel consist of a flying leap to the rope ladder hanging from the stern of a steamer, and a later jump from the steamer into the water. Action throughout is fast. The story tells of the reporter's search for Panama Canal plan stolen by Oriental spies. It is in pursuit of these spies that the thrills are registered. A review of this reel was printed in last week's issue, page 870.

THE LUCK THAT JEALOUSY BROUGHT (Selig), Serial No. 21677.—An elementary one-reel Western with Tom Mix in the leading role. The story tells mostly of the love affair of the daughter of a miner, upon whose mining property a corporation has designs. A tool of the mining company makes advances to the girl, which arouses the jealousy of a young miner. He discovers a rich lode of gold on the girl's father's property and immediately tells her about it, thus proving his worth over his rival. In the cast with Tom are Louella Maxam, Sid Jordan and Pat Chrisman.

THE SELIG-TRIBUNE, NO. 9, 1917 (Selig), Serial No. 21681.—Mrs. Ethel Byrne, birth control advocate, arrested, New York; General Funston arrives to review troops, El Paso; Du Pont Powder Company builds homes for employees, Penngrove, N. J.; Six-million-dollar bridge connecting St. Louis with East St. Louis opened; French women make boxes—other views in Paris; Unloading bananas by machine, New Orleans; Vocational training at Carlisle Indian School; International ski jumping contest, Cary, Ill.; Funeral of Col. Thurston, New York; Aviators search for missing airmen, Calexico, Cal.

THE PRIMA DONNA'S SPECIAL (Kalem), Serial No. 21717.—An episode of the "Hazards of Helen" railroad series. Helen Gibson furnishes a thrill when she leaps from a speeding automobile to a fast-traveling train. In this manner she is enabled to avert a collision between the "wild" train and the special. There is a certain amount of heart interest in this reel. The prima donna is none other than the daughter of an old man who has been a hobo for some time. The thrill gets over well.

General Film Company Specials.

THREE WAYS OUT (Essanay), Serial No. 21682-23.—One of the "Black Cat" features. This release is an interesting two-reel drama with several humorously entertaining touches. The story tells of a banker's daughter who wants to marry the son of an old Irishman. The banker has speculated and lost the funds of his bank. He doesn't want his daughter to marry the son of the rich, but "low class" Irishman. He contemplates suicide, but the way out of his difficulties comes when the two young people elope and the old Irishman lends the banker enough to cover the shortage. In the cast are Harry Dunkinson, Gertrude Glover and John Cossar.

THE DOMINION OF FERNANDEZ (Kalem), Serial No. 21686-87.—Action is the keynote of this latest two-reel episode of "The Girl from Frisco" series—episode No. 25. The two reels are crammed with wild riding, gun fighting, fist fighting and other exciting elements. The story tells of a Castilian who rules over a little kingdom of outlaw Mexicans in the California mountain fastnesses. Barbara Brent (Marin Sais) and her retinue once more prove themselves superior fighters. An exciting Western. Reviewed on page 870 of last week's issue.

LOST AND FOUND (Selig), Serial No. 21678-79.—George Fawcett is the leading player in this two-reel drama. He heads a good cast, which ably plays the story of the old sea captain who mixes in his daughter's love affairs. There is some amusement to be found in the film's lighter moments. The girl's choice turns out to be the long-lost son of her father's lawyer-friend. Interest is added to the plot when it develops that the girl's lover has unknowingly killed his own brother in protecting the girl from assault. Included in the cast are Vivian Reed, Charles Le Moyne and Thomas Guinan. Reviewed on page 866 of last week's issue.

THE MAGIC MIRROR (Essanay), Serial No. 21671-2.—Seventh of the "Is Marriage Sacred?" series—a two-reel drama of worth. In this unit of the series we see the girl who makes playthings of men's hearts. She is finally brought to a realization of the fact that she is facing spinsterhood. This comes about through her sister, who marries one of the fickle girl's beaux. The subject has power and gets its lesson over forcefully. In the cast are Marguerite Clayton, Edward Arnold, Lillian Drew, Sydney Ainsworth and Thomas Commerford.

Bluebird Photoplays, Inc.

THE MAN WHO TOOK A CHANCE (Bluebird), Feb. 19.—The comedy element is the stronger in this five-reel Bluebird picture, the dramatic scenes being the result of a practical joke played on the hero. Franklyn Farnum and Agnes Vernon have the leading roles. The cast and production call for favorable comment. A longer review is printed on another page of this issue.

Creative Film Corp.

THE GIRL WHO DIDN'T THINK, January.—A six-part problem play vizualizing the difficulties of the path of the thoughtless young girl who allows herself to be led away by a fascinating man and promises of fine things to wear. The picture features Jane Gail, who does excellent work, and has been made artistically by W. Haddock. A full review appeared in our issue of Feb. 10.

Greater Vitagraph

THE COURAGE OF SILENCE, Feb. 12.—This five-reel Blue Ribbon Features, written by Milton Nobles, is a well-put-together photoplay and is excellently played by Alice Joyce, Harry Morey and the rest of the cast. The scenes are laid in United States, London and the South of France. The picture is reviewed at length on another page of this issue.

COUNTRY LIFE STORIES, February.—A series of one and two-reel comedies written by Mrs. Paula Blackton, these pictures are of exceptional merit. A longer review is printed on another page of this issue.

Kleine-Edison-Selig-Essanay.

SKINNER'S DRESS SUIT (Essanay), Feb. 5.—A mirthful comedy drama without a dull spot in it. Bryant Washburn in the part of Skinner has done his best work before the camera. The support is strong and includes Hazel Daly, Harry Dunkinson, James C. Carroll, U. K. Houpt, etc. Brilliant subtitles add to the mirth and pleasure of the spectator. Directed by Harry Beaumont. An extended review appears on another page in this issue.

Metro Pictures Corporation

THE END OF THE TOUR (Columbia), Feb. 5.—The ups and downs of the traveling actor are the subject of this five-reel photoplay, in which Lionel Barrymore acts the hero. Humorous characterization is a feature of the picture. A longer review is printed on another page of this issue.

BLACKMAIL (Metro-Drew), Feb. 5.—Once again are the Sidney Drews pitted against each other in a one-reel comedy and their disagreements a source of much amusement to the fellow out in front. The picture has the merit to be expected from this brand of comedies.

Mutual Film Corporation

MUTUAL WEEKLY 109, Jan. 31.—Interesting items of this issue are the launching of the dreadnaught "Mississippi," a view of a large concrete grain elevator at Hegewich, Ill., scenes on the Serbian battleline, Mr. and Mrs. Samuel Gompers celebrating their fiftieth wedding anniversary, and the "Milwaukee" ashore on the Pacific coast trying to save submarine H-3.

JERRY AND HIS PAL (Cub), Feb. 1.—An amusing farce comedy that will please children as well as adults, inasmuch as the pal referred to in the title is a wise young elephant, who obeys Jerry's dictates in an astonishing manner. Much of the story centers about a poor woman, whose husband spends in drink the money that should pay the rent. Jerry and his pal come to the rescue and work reform and reconciliation.

REEL LIFE NO. 40 (Gaumont), Feb. 4.—This issue contains articles on "Making Lace by Machinery," "The Toddle," "New York's latest dance craze"; "Raising fresh water fish" and a short fashion exhibition. These subjects which will be reviewed in the Educational Department of Feb. 24 are all nicely illustrated.

MUTUAL TOURS AROUND THE WORLD, NO. 14 (Gaumont), Feb. 6.—This number leads off with picturesque views taken along the rocky coast of Dalmatia, on the Adriatic sea. Fine views are then shown of the great temples of Luxor, Egypt, ruins of ancient Thebes and statues of Memnon. The landscapes and folk life of Holland make an entertaining closing feature. A good number.

Pass Christian, Gulfport, Beauvoir and Biloxi are the principal cities visited and various industries and spots of interests are pictured. The reel closes with an animated cartoon by Harry Palmer, entitled "Old Roue Visualizes." The number is quite entertaining.

Mutual Film Corporation Specials.

EASY STREET (Chaplin), Jan. 22.—This is one of the best of the Chaplin comedies. It is distinctly and artistically funny, with only two points of objection. The first of these occurs in the mission on Easy street, when the overturning of a baby's bottle is made rather suggestive, and the second is where the dope fiend in one of the tenement scenes on Easy street, makes free use of the needle. Chaplin as the little policeman sent alone to Easy street, and battling with its giant bully is one of the funniest things that the screen has ever presented.

WHERE LOVE IS (Mutual Star Production), Feb. 1.—A six-part production featuring Ann Murdock. The story on which the film is based is taken from the novel of William J. Locke. The picture would have been considerably improved if the main issue of the story had been followed more closely. It has to do with the love story of a young woman of aristocratic family and a poor artist. A full review of the picture will be found elsewhere in this issue.

STICKY FINGERS (Vogue), Feb. 4.—This is a moderately entertaining two-part farce comedy, in which two young men without money steal from the purse of a young woman whom they have never met before. Some rather amusing incidents follow in which the fathers of the young men get mixed up in the affair. The chief objection to this comedy is the fact that bare-faced stealing is made rather too prominent an item in the comedy.

Paramount Pictures Corporation

THE WAX MODEL (Pallas), Feb. 1.—An unusually pretty picture with a marked imaginative atmosphere due to careful direction. It is a pleasing picture, though there are two or three scenes where the illusion of real life goes thin. Vivian Martin has the lead in a role that fits her perfectly. It is a picture that will be liked by most of those who see it. A longer review will be found elsewhere in this issue.

EACH TO HIS KIND (Lasky), Feb. 5.—A picture in which two Japanese players by sheer ability put human dignity and real interest into what is, though intentionally romantic, not powerfully convincing. The story could have been edited down to four reels without losing much. It is a good picture as it stands and is worth seeing. The two leading players are Sessue Hayakawa and Tsuru Aako. For a longer review see elsewhere in this issue.

Pathe Exchange Inc.

LONESOME LUKE, LAWYER (Rolin), Feb. 8.—This one-reel farce is one of the best of the series. The courtroom scene contains an unexpected amount of new business, and speedy action keeps everyone on the run.

FLORENCE ROSE FASHIONS, NO. 19 (Pathe), Feb. 18.—"Play-Day in the South" discloses a lot of fetching costumes for warm weather wear. The young ladies who exhibit the creations understand the art. "Picturesque Algeria" is on the same reel.

PAPER, HOW IT IS MADE (International), Feb. 4.—The process of making paper is shown in all its different branches, from felling the trees to turning out the finished rolls. A "Crazy Cat" cartoon, "Throwing the Bull," is one long laugh.

Pathe Exchange Inc., Specials.

HER LIFE AND HIS (Thanhouser), Feb. 18.—Florence La Badie assisted by a good cast, makes this five-reel photoplay interesting. It deals with prison reform. A longer review is printed on another page of this issue.

Triangle Film Corporation

PRIDE (McClure), Feb. 5.—The second of "Seven Deadly Sins" series. This production gives fairly convincing proof that pride is sometimes a sin. It is moderately interesting, and at times borders on melodrama. Reviewed on page 866 of February 10 issue.

GREED (McClure), Feb. 12.—Nance O'Neil, Shirley Mason and George Le Guere head the cast in this number of "The Seven Deadly Sins" series. An acceptable story, a good production and capable acting by the entire cast are features of the picture. It is reviewed at length on another page of this issue.

PRINCESS OF THE DARK (Kay-Bee), Feb 18.—The allegorical story of a blind girl who idealizes a hunchback as her Prince, only to know bitter disillusion when her sight is restored. A consistent presentation with a new star, Miss Enid Bennett, in the title role.

Universal Film Mfg. Company

ANIMATED WEEKLY, NO. 57 (Universal), Jan. 31.—A diversified and entertaining number, picturing the opening of a new bridge over the Mississippi, wreck of a locomotive, winter sports, a cowboy funeral, and other subjects.

AVARICE (Imp), Feb. 9.—This number, by E. M. Ingleton, features Claire McDowell as an old rag-picker. The name, John Williamson, on a cast-off coat, recalls an early love affair, when she refused "love in a cottage." The number is a sermon against the desire for gold, which leads to poverty and despair. The subject is naturally unsympathetic, but is handled with a fair degree of strength and enforces its point.

A HASTY HAZING (Nestor), Feb. 12.—A college comedy, featuring Eddie Lyons, Lee Moran and Edith Roberts. A freshman at college is being hazed and manages to escape. In his place a young business man, just married, is captured and put through the hazing mill. An old subject, revived. This contains plenty of action and is quite amusing in plot.

UNIVERSAL SCREEN MAGAZINE, NO. 7, Feb. 16.—This issue contains some interesting subjects, among them "Raising Silver Fox," showing scenes on a silver fox farm; "What We Eat," showing the inspection of meat, grapes and oranges by the New York Board of Health; the stabilization of a bicycle, and an animated clay cartoon.

Universal Film Mfg. Co. Specials

ME AND M' PAL (Red Feather), Feb. 5.—A five-reel offering produced in England by Harold Shaw from a story by Richard Ganthony. Costermonger types prevail in this character production, which is strong in atmosphere. The Convent Garden market scenes are particularly pleasing. The plot itself concerns a young man studying art, his actress sweetheart and a vegetable hawker and his burro. Humor and heart interest are well developed in this offering, a successful one of the type. Hubert Willis, Gerald Ames and Edna Flugarth are in the cast, not to mention the burro. This replaces the Red Feather known as "The Scarlet Crystal."

THE TERROR (Red Feather), Feb. 12.—This five-reel offering, written and directed by Raymond Wells and Fred Myton, features Jack Mulhall, Grace MacLean, Jean Hersholt, Virginia Lee, Hugh Hoffman and Gertrude Messenger. It is a story of the slums and abounds in characters from low life. The atmosphere is fairly good, but there is no very compelling plot, giving a mechanical turn to the situations. Gun-fighting occurs in several scenes, the hero being known as "The Terror." Jack Mulhall has done some excellent work recently in comedy, but hardly looks the part. This production as a whole is one of about average interest.

THE PURPLE MASK, NO. 8 (Special Universal), Feb. 12.—Patsy, in possession of the jewels stolen from Phillips, to be returned to the woman he ruined, is pursued by Detective Kelly. She smuggles the pearls through the custom house in a candy box. The next scenes occur in Patsy's new home, which has a disappearing fireplace and other mysterious equipment. The number is slower in action than previous episodes, but sustains the interest.

THE INDIAN'S LAMENT (Gold Seal), Feb. 13.—This three-reel number, by Noble Johnson, makes a lively return to the Indian story. The scenes are laid in a picturesque mountain region and the action includes hard riding and much gun fighting. The plot is reminiscent of former productions of the type, but the work of the actors is so spirited that it gets over nicely. Marie Walcamp, L. C. Shumway and Leo Hill make a strong trio in the leads.

THE LOSING WINNER (Victor), Feb. 15.—A two-reel subject, by H. C. Warnack, featuring Carter De Haven, Flora De Haven, M. K. Wilson, Eileen Sedgwick and Jessie Arnold. The plot concerns a young man who wins at gambling and then loses. Two of his feminine admirers go back on him, but the third, a poor stenographer, remains true. The treatment of this is a mixture of humor and drama, which rather weakens the production as a whole. The gambling scenes, as shown, were realistic but too long and will probably be cut down considerably. As a one-reel subject this would be stronger.

THE FOURTH WITNESS (Laemmle), Feb. 16.—A two-reel drama, by Harvey Gates, featuring Chas. Mailles, Louise Lovely, Lee Hill and others. The plot centers about the supposed murder of an irascible invalid, whose wife loves the young family doctor. The investigation of the death proves interesting and is well-constructed, but the close is rather weak. This is not exceptional, but is above the average in spots.

JOHN OSBORNE'S TRIUMPH (Bison), Feb. 17.—A two-reel number by Burton Wilson, featuring Murdock MacQuarrie, Arthur Moon, Edna Payne and Albert MacQuarrie. Merrill, the villain, corners Osborne in the stock market and crushes him. He then tries to gain the hand of Osborne's daughter, by buying in a note. Osborne pays off the latter by mortgaging his land. He becomes completely paralyzed and Merrill tries to make out that the note has not been paid. A bolt of lightning restores Osborne's power of speech. There is some old plot material in this, but it tells a good story. The scenic effects are particularly good in places.

World Pictures.

THE RED WOMAN (World), Feb. 12.—There are some picturesque western scenes in this five-reel photoplay, Gale Kane taking the principal character. The story deals with an Indian girl who is educated in the East, and then returns to the customs and dress of her people. The picture is given a lengthy review on another page of this issue.

LOS ANGELES SHOWN IN GAUMONT RELEASE.

Manufacturers' Advance Notes

Thanhouser's March Releases

Two Delightful Novelties in "Her Beloved Enemy" and "Pots-and-Pans Peggie," Gold Rooster Plays.

FOR March the Thanhouser Film Corporation has two attractive releases in "Her Beloved Enemy," starring Doris Grey and Wayne Arey, and "Pots-and-Pans Peggie," with the world famous little Gladys Hulette featured. The issuance will be through Pathe exchanges.

Scene from "Her Beloved Enemy" (Thanhouser).

"Her Beloved Enemy" is a light story of romance and a substantial story of mystery. To add to its interest is the novelty of offering Doris Grey and Wayne Arey as stars for the first time. Miss Grey will be remembered as the young woman chosen as the most beautiful in New England, who won a place because of this distinction in the Thanhouser studios, and developed into such competency that after a year of bits she was considered able enough for starring in features. Mr. Arey has been a leading man in Thanhouser productions for a long time.

"Her Beloved Enemy" was written by Lloyd Lonergan and directed by Ernest Warde. Supporting Miss Grey and Mr. Arey are Joseph Gilmour, Gladys Leslie, Ernest Howard and Carey Hastings. The cameraman was William Zollinger.

The story opens with the introduction of Miss Grey as a pretty boarding school heiress whose mother is dead and father has been "away on important business" from her childhood. She occasionally receives loving letters from him, dispatched from different parts of the world. Finally, after her finishing, her father appears and conducts her to her mansion home. One day while out motoring her father observes a man in another car and recognizes him as his bitter enemy whom he would like to kill. The father dies a short time later without disclosing the reason for his hatred. The girl had not had a good look at this enemy but discovers that a man she met at a girl friend's house—and whom she had grown to worship with all the fervor of her impressionable heart—is her father's mysterious foe.

The remainder of the drama is exceedingly moving as the girl follows the man through a tensely exciting episode wherein she learns his real identity. It is a sadder and wiser girl who tries to have her lover arrested—and a radiant one who finally accepts him.

"Pots-and-Pans Peggie" is written by the authoress of Miss Hulette's famous series of screen successes, Agnes C. Johnston. Miss Hulette has more opportunities for acting as Peggie than in any other of the "lovely girl" roles, and it has been her acting as well as her prettiness and "million dollar smile" that has won her her place in the estimation of theatergoers. She is a 17-year old ingenue with 14 years of acting experience.

The direction of "Pots-and-Pans Peggie" is notable. Eugene Moore was responsible. George Webber was photographer.

Peggie, in an employment agency, is sent out to a certain home badly in need of a competent housekeeper. Despite her size she flies into the reorganization of the household, and has her place in order in marvelously short time. She conducts certain reforms in the male members of the household, and finally is pressed into service as a dinner guest, where she distinguishes herself with a bang. The children in "Pots-and-Pans Peggie" are delightful, especially little Helen Badgley, and her baby brother Gerald, whose conduct under camera fire was spoken of so favorably in reviews of " 'Her' New York."

"Her Beloved Enemy" is to be released March 4, "Pots-and-Pans Peggie" on March 18.

"TOURS AROUND THE WORLD" (Gaumont).

The Gaumont Company will give some idea of the territory coveted by Italy and promised that country by the Allies in case of final success, Dalmatia. The pictures will show the rock coast of that land to the east of the Adriatic sea. They will be a section of "Tours Around the World" No. 14, released Feb. 6.

BUTTERFIELD IN STATE RIGHT FIELD.

It developed this week that the state rights' purchaser of "Civilization" for Michigan, as announced with some mystery a few days ago, is the new State Film Company, of which W. S. Butterfield is president. The State Film Company opens its career auspiciously, having secured in addition to "Civilization," the state rights to the six-reel feature, "The Libertine," starring John Mason and Alma Hanlon, and directed by Julius Steger. Another acquisition is the five-reeler, "The Mormon Maid," a dramatization of life in early Utah, starring Mae Murray and Hobart Bosworth.

The offices and sales organization of the State Film Company in Detroit are now completed and W. S. Butterfield left for New York on February 5 to review new releases which are contemplated for purchase.

BOX OFFICE VALUE IN "WHERE LOVE IS."

Scene from "Where Love Is" (Mutual).

"Where Love Is," six part Ann Murdock feature, released by the Mutual Film Corporation, the week of February 5, presents a special opportunity to the exhibitor for advertising to his feminine patronage. Miss Murdock, quite incidental to the dramatic factors in the piece, conducts a rare display of gowns—a regular motion picture fashion show runs through the picture. The gowns are the latest and costliest of the garb studios of New York and Paris.

"Where Love Is" presents Miss Murdock in the role and attire of the debutante, the young society miss, the horsewoman, the bride-to-be and the bride—to remark nothing at all about flocks of evening clothes, morning clothes, afternoon clothes, traveling suits, etc. "Where Love Is" is good copy for the house program and advertising.

Mutual Offers "Damaged Goods"

New Edition of Bennett's Famous Play and Other Good Releases on the Program for Feb. 12.

A NEW edition of "Damaged Goods," one of the most successful dramas with a moral ever produced for the screen, will be released on the Mutual schedule for February 12. Richard Bennett, who is responsible for both the stage and screen production, has personally supervised the revision of this picture. The new issue is in seven reels. A new introduction has been made and the entire production has been carefully re-edited to make the second edition perfect. The film version of this stage success has proven one of the biggest drawing cards of the screen and the business-getting qualities of the second edition will be further enhanced by the welcome which greeted its first appearance.

Appearing with Mr. Bennett are Adrienne Morrison, playing the role of the girl of the streets; Maude Milton as "Mrs. Dupont," the mother of "George Dupont" (Richard Bennett); Olive Templeton as "Henrietta Locke," George's fiancee and wife. "Mrs. James Forsythe," the first siren to enter George's life, is played by Josephine Ditt. Jacqueline Moore appears in the role of a little seamstress. Florence Short plays "The Nurse"; John Steppling, "Senator Locke"; Louis Bennison, "the Doctor"; William Bertram, a "Quack Doctor"; and George Ferguson, the "Quack's Assistant."

The eighth chapter of the Mutual series, "Perils of Our Girl Reporters," will be released this week under the title "Birds of Prey." Helen Greene and Earl Metcalfe have the principal roles and are assisted by Edith Sinclaire, and Arthur W. Matthews.

In this story Helen Greene, as Claire Bristow, the girl reporter, in search of a story answers an advertisement as companion to Mrs. Durkee, an eccentric and very wealthy widow. In this position Claire unearths the plot of two foreign crooks, posing as friends of Mrs. Durkee, to get possession of her almost priceless jewels. The foreigners very quickly learn of the widow's great love for champagne and make the most of this discovery to carry out their schemes.

Claire Bristow gets her "story" and also, with the assistance of her lover, a detective, regains the jewels for Mrs. Durkee and causes the arrest of the plotters.

The fifth of the "Adventures of Shorty Hamilton" series, "Shorty Turns Wild Man," will be released on February 12. In this story Shorty, in another attempt to assist Anita Keller in her Secret Service work, makes up as a wild man and attempts to frighten thieves away from a radium mine. Shorty had no intention of continuing to be a wild man, however, but news of the terrible man loose among the hills is carried to the managers of a circus and they start out to capture the unusual specimen. Shorty has lost his voice and cannot explain that he really is a very meek and mild person, so he is carried off, placed in a strong cage and exhibited as one of the most interesting sights of the side show. Even Anita, who is looking at the freaks, does not recognize him and come to the rescue, but Shorty is finally liberated by his horse Beauty kicking the cage to pieces.

David Horsley presents George Ovey in a Cub Comedy on February 15 under the title "Jerry's Big Mystery." Supporting Mr. Ovey appear George George, Claire Alexander, Goldie Colwell, Jefferson Osbourne, M. J. McCarthy, Arthur Munns, Ray Lincoln and Tom Riley.

In "Jerry's Big Mystery" the trouble all starts because Jerry has not paid his rent and the landlord throws him out so forcibly that he lands in the apartment across the way in the lap of a most bewitching woman.

On February 18, Vogue Films contributes "Lured and Cured," in which Lillian Hamilton and Paddy McGuire create the principal laughs. The story revolves around a country girl, dazzled by the tales of wealth, lured to the city by the "Gentleman," who is head of a gang of badger gamesters. Her rural lover starts to her rescue in true Don Quixote style, his charger being a rebellious donkey that causes him no end of trouble ere he finds the girl of his heart. The play is of the Vogue "slap stick with a reason" type.

Mutual Tours Around the World, ready February 12, takes the travelers to three countries. First Mount St. Michel, in France, is visited, the Lake Iseo, Italy, and then a jump is made to Africa, where views of Morocco of yesterday and today are shown.

Mutual Weekly No. 111, with its many items of interest, will be released on February 14. On this day also appears "See America First," which this week shows views in and around Los Angeles, Cal. The usual Kartoon Komic completes the reel.

Reel Life, issued February 18, is made up of five subjects, "Oysters on the Mississippi Coast," "Properties of the Water," "Making an Individual Dress Form," "Trained Man Hunters," and "The Dance of the Rainbow.'"

"CIVILIZATION IN PORTO RICO.

"Civilization," the Thomas H. Ince spectacle, had its first Porto Rico presentation last week. It was offered simultaneously at the two principal theaters of San Juan, the capacity of which equals thousands, and yet so great was the interest in the spectacle that crowds were unable to obtain admission. The presentation was made by the Metal Film Corporation, a local organization handling the picture in Porto Rico.

Paramount Announces Coming Releases

Productions Cover Months of March, April and May—Twenty-seven in All.

TWENTY-SEVEN productions, those to be released in March, April and May, were announced by Paramount Pictures Corporation last week. The list comprises another array of dramatic attractions of high caliber in which more than twenty of the most popular of the stars in Paramount Pictures will appear. The productions are well balanced as to stellar and production strength and represent the highest collective standard ever included in a Paramount three month period.

During these three months Pauline Frederick will make three appearances, while Marguerite Clark will make two appearances. Other players featured are Mme. Petrova, Mae Murray, Marie Doro, George Beban, Blanche Sweet, Jack Pickford, Kathlyn Williams, Wallace Reid, Myrtle Stedman, Vivian Martin, House Peters, Margaret Illington, Fannie Ward, Lou-Tellegen, Mary Fuller, Sessue Hayakawa, Theodore Roberts and others.

In the list of stars for this period there appear the names of three of Paramount's latest additions. in Mme. Petrova, Margaret Illington and Mary Fuller. Mme. Petrova will make her debut in "The Mysterious Miss Terry" on May 7.

Margaret Illington will make her first apperance on April 2 in "The Inner Shrine" by Basil Kink, dramatized by Channing Pollock, which was one of the most successful books and plays of its day.

Mary Fuller, one of the best known stars on the motion picture screen, will appear in support of Lou-Tellegen in the production of "The Long Trail" in April, the production to be directed at the Famous Players studio by Howell Hansel.

The list to be presented during the three month period begins with "Those Without Sin," and ends with "The Love That Lives." Among other subjects are "Sapho," in which Pauline Frederick will appear; "The Dummy," the wonderful dramatic success in which Jack Pickford will be starred; "The Inner Shrine," "The Valentine Girl," "The Conflict," and others of like importance.

Preceding the March productions Paramount will release during February "The Wax Model," in which Vivian Martin is starred; "Each to His Kind," with Sessue Hayakawa in the leading role; "Her Own People," with Lenore Ulrich; "The Black Wolf," with Lou-Tellegen; "The American Consul," with Theodore Roberts; "The Fortunes of Fifi," with Marguerite Clark; "On Record," with Mae Murray. and "The Winning of Sally Temple," with Fannie Ward in the leading part.

Adolf Zukor, President of the Famous Players-Lasky Corporation, in commenting upon the new schedule of releases, called particular attention to the introduction of two new important stars on the program. "So much has been said and written concerning open booking and the possibilities of special productions as against the program," he said, "that I wish particularly to emphasize the fact that two of the greatest names on stage and screen have been added to the Paramount Program in Madame Petrova and Margaret Illington.

"The one has scored great personal triumphs on the stage and on the screen, and the other, having won her wey to the very top among her contemporaries of the stage, is being introduced to the photoplay public for the first time. The significance of the addition of these two distinguished names to the Paramount roster is twofold. In the first place, it means the strengthening of the intrinsic value of the program and in the second place, it proves absolutely that the efforts of our organization are directed toward the building up of that program to a point even further than its present strength."

PAULINE FREDERICK TO STAR AS "SAPHO."

Pauline Frederick is to be starred by the Famous Players in an adaptation of Daudet's great story, "Sapho," one of the most picturesque characters in fiction. In making the photoplay adaptation of the story of "Sapho," Hugh Ford, who directed the production for the Famous Players, has studiously avoided the darkest side of the tale and has lightened the treatment of the entire picture from start to finish, taking great care to introduce a great deal of humor into the story, so that it is not in any sense oppressive in its effect. Among those who are playing important roles in support of Miss Frederick in this photoplay are Frank Losee, as Caoudal; John Sanpolis, as Dejoie; Pedro de Cordoba, as Flamant, and Thomas Meighan, as Gaussin.

HIRSH SELLS "SOUL OF A CHILD" FOR SOUTH.

Nathan Hirsh, president of the Pioneer, closed with the Golden Eagle Film Company of Waco, Texas, whereby that concern will become exclusive distributors of "The Soul of a Child" for Texas, Louisiana, Oklahoma and Arkansas. The states of North and South Carolina, Georgia, Mississippi, Tennessee, Florida and Alabama have been acquired by the Queen Feature Service, of Birmingham, Alabama.

The Pioneer is at present concluding the filming of another picture featuring Em Gorman, and in this the eminent child tragedienne has the greatest acting role of her career.

Many Activities of Metro

Several Companies Working at Jacksonville and New York on New Production.

B. A. ROLFE, president of Rolfe Photoplays, Inc., made a flying trip from Jacksonville, Fla., to New York the other day to consult with Richard A. Rowland, president of Metro Pictures Corporation, and Maxwell Karger, general manager of the Rolfe and Columbia studios. Various important details were arranged regarding the activities of the producing companies of Rolfe Photoplays, Inc., and Columbia Pictures Corporation.

Mr. Rolfe went South to superintend affairs at Metro's winter studios at Jacksonville. Ethel Barrymore's seven-act special release, "The Voice of Her People," a picturization by June Mathis of Edward Sheldon's play, "Egypt," in which Margaret Anglin starred on the speaking stage, is practically completed. John W. Noble is the director of this production. As soon as she is through with her work in this great feature, Miss Barrymore will go to Palm Beach, Fla., for a vacation. "The Voice of Her People" is the first of three great productions completed by Miss Barrymore within a short time, the other two being "The White Raven" and "The Awakening of Helena Ritchie."

Director Noble will remain in Jacksonville, where he will begin work on a new feature photoplay with Mabel Taliaferro as star, a five-part dramatic screen play by Harry Chandlee called "A Magdalen of the Hills." Miss Taliaferro, who has been resting in northern New York, will leave in a few days for the South, with her supporting company. Several members of Miss Barrymore's company will be retained in the Southern studios to take part in Miss Taliaferro's next picture, the cast of which is now being chosen by Mr. Rolfe and Mr. Noble.

Emmy Wehlen and her suporting company, under the direction of George D. Baker, will leave for Metro's winter studios in a few days. Miss Wehlen's next picture, which will be filmed at Jacksonville, will be called "The Duchess of Doubt." It is an unusually attractive five-part feature by John H. Clymer.

Daniel Bertona, head property man of the Rolfe and Columbia studios, will take to Jacksonville the buildings of the entire East Indian village for Miss Dana's picture, "The Purchase Price," and these will be set up in the winter studios. Edward Shulter, technical director, had completed the buildings and some interiors had been taken before the company's departure, but as all the scenes had not been taken, it was necessary to arrange the settings of the entire village for packing and taking them South for the company's use.

The departure for Jacksonville of so many of the Metro companies leaves space in the Rolfe studios for Mme. Petrova's company, which was recently "burned out" at the fire of The Popular Plays and Players studios. All the belongings and paraphernalia of the Popular Plays and Players company have been brought to the Rolfe studios, and Mme. Petrova and her company have returned from Jacksonville, Fla., to make interiors, having finished in the South the exteriors of "The Soul of a Magdalen," "To the Death," and "The Waiting Soul." Returning with Mme. Petrova are Robert North, general manager of Popular Plays and Players; Burton L. King, director; Edward James, assistant director; Mahlon Hamilton, Wyndham Standing, Violet Reed, Wilfred de Shields, Mrs. L. Ford, George W. Hill, cameraman; Philip Whalen, assistant cameraman, and James Hussey, master of properties.

The presence of so large a Metro colony in Jacksonville has greatly interested the residents of the city, who have outdone themselves in entertaining the visitors. Ethel Barrymore and B. A. Rolfe were recently the guests of honor at a dinner of fourteen covers given by Mr. and Mrs. Mason, owners of the Mason Hotel, Jacksonville, where a number of the company are living during their stay in Metro's winter studios.

BURTON HOLMES TO GO TO ORIENT.

At the end of his lecture tour of the East Burton Holmes will leave on a six months' trip to the Orient and Australia, where he will take a new series of pictures, to be released next fall and winter. His trip last summer through Canada are the subjects of his present Paramount releases. These great scenic pictures carry the inimitable and personal touch of Mr. Holmes.

McCLURE'S "SEVENTH SIN" A MYSTERY.

"The Seventh Sin," last of the Seven Deadly Sins, McClure series, contains a mystery. McClure Pictures has announced no details of this last feature and only admits some of the more important features of the climax to the series of seven five-reel photoplays.

George Le Guere is billed as the star of "The Seventh Sin," but Mr. Le Guere is not the only star therein. Ann Murdock, Holbrook Blinn, Shirley Mason, Nance O'Neill, H. B. Warner and Charlotte Walker complete the astonishing cast.

Scene from "The Seventh Sin" (McClure).

The theme of "The Seventh Sin" is being kept a secret. It is described as being "the biggest sin of all—the sin that incites all other sins." It is expected that exhibitors will find a strong box office value in the mystery element in the final photoplay, as well as in the all-star cast.

McClure Pictures is holding its biggest "punch" for the finish. Shirley Mason has conquered the other six sins, one by one, and her battle with them is strengthened for the final contest. A novel method is used in presenting "The Seventh Sin" and the mystery is withheld until almost the last turn of the fifth reel.

JUSTICE COHALAN UPHOLDS IVAN CONTENTION.

Justice Cohalan of the Supreme Court has handed down a decision in the case of the B. S. Moss Motion Picture Corporation against Ivan Film Productions in which the justice dismisses the contentions of the Moss concern and upholds the Ivan Film Corporation.

The litigation arose out of the alleged similarity in titles of the Moss play "The Girl Who Doesn't Know" and the Ivan photoplay "The Girl Who Did Not Care." The Moss company contended that the Ivan corporation was seeking to trade upon the advertising of the B. S. Moss Motion Picture Corporation, and sought an injunction to restrain the Ivan Film Productions from producing and exhibiting its photoplay "The Girl Who Did Not Care." This motion was vigorously opposed by the Ivan Film Corporation through its attorney, Simon H. Kugel, Esq., and after hearing arguments and reading the briefs submitted by both sides, Justice Cohalan handed down an opinion denying the action of the Moss corporation on the ground that the Ivan play was totally dissimilar and for the reason that the Ivan Film Corporation had in no wise simulated the Moss picture.

LENORE ULRICH IN A WAR-WHOOPLESS INDIAN DRAMA.

In the early days of motion pictures no Indian drama was officially considered complete until the plains had been strewn with dead redskins and cowboys, who invariably got together and discussed their respective deaths at lunch. A new note in Indian stories has been struck in the Pallas picture "Her Own People," in which Lenore Ulrich is the star. This photoplay is scheduled for release on the Paramount program on February 8.

The peaceful side of Indian life, with its sports and games, is depicted in this story, and never a warwhoop re-echoes on the screen, so to speak, to mar the beauty of the scene. The story is, in fact, a contrast between our so-called civilized life and the habits of the red man, in which the former suffers by comparison. Among those who appear in support of Miss Ulrich in "Her Own People" are Colin Chase, Howard Davies, Joy Lewis and William Winter Jefferson.

A Red Feather Tops Universal

An Underworld Story Entitled "The Terror"—Strong List of Comedies and Subjects of Interest on Program of February 12.

BALANCE in production story and acting marks the Universal program for the week of February 12. This week's releases attain an unusually high standard and every release fits in its proper niche in the program assuring interesting pictures to the public. Topping the program is the Red Feather five-act feature "The Terror," a novel and exciting photoplay of the underworld. The story was written and produced by Raymond Wells, from the scenario of Fred Myton. The leading role is played by Jack Mulhall. His interpretation of the young gunman whose finer qualities are brought out by the love of a Salvation Army lassie is by far the best bit of acting of his career and is a superb characterization. In the cast supporting Mr. Mulhall are Malcolm Blevins, Noble Johnson, Jean Hersholt, Virginia Lee, Grace McLean and Hugh Hoffman. "The Terror" will be released Monday, February 12.

The comedy element of the program is as usual staunchly upheld by the Nestor, L-Ko and Joker brands. "A Hasty Hazing," the Nestor of February 12 featuring the popular trio Eddie Lyons, Lee Moran and Edith Roberts shows the manner in which a bridegroom gets all the hazing rightly due a freshman. It was produced by Louis Chaudet from a scenario by Bess Meredyth. "The End of a Perfect Day," a two-reel L-Ko, released on Wednesday, February 14, starts the two popular players, Hank Mann and Gertrude Selby in a picture in which laughs and thrills of the customary L-Ko brand predominate. Another L-Ko, "Brave Little Waldo" featuring Fatty Voss, the hundred-weight favorite of comedy comes on Friday, February 16. The Joker aggregation headed by Gale Henry and William Franey appear in another uproarious picture entitled "Mules Mates" released on Saturday, February 17. This offers something decidedly novel in the way of comedy owing to the presence of Fred Woodward in the cast. Mr. Woodward is the famous animal impersonator and is seen in the garb of a donkey in "Mule Mates." The animal persists in chasing Franey home to Bar and back again. Jack Cunningham wrote the scenario.

The Gold Seal of Tuesday, February 13, entitled "The Indian's Lament" lends three reels of heart interest drama to the week's program. Marie Walcamp, the popular star of the serial "Liberty" and many other Universal releases, is featured with Lee Hill. The one reel Victor picture released the same day, "The Girl of the Hour," is a strong dramatic subject starring two renowned artists Herbert Brennon and Vivian Prescott.

"The Girl Reporter's Scoop," a two-reel Imp drama of newspaper life issued on Wednesday, February 14 has Irene Hunt and Roy Stewart as principals. The story tells of the clever manner in which the girl reporter fathoms a mystery for her paper. Miss Hunt has long been a favorite in such roles and her reappearance in a typical sob-sister part will doubtless be awaited with great interest. Roy Stewart has the opopsite role.

Carter De Haven and Flora Parker De Haven appear in "The Losing Winner," a two-reel Victor of Thursday, February 15. This is a comedy-drama of many delightful complications in which the De Havens appear to excellent advantage. "The Half Breed's Confession," a Big U western drama, is the companion picture for the same day.

"The Fourth Witness," released Friday, February 16, as a two-reel Laemmle is a novel dramatic picture with a touch of mystery. It is replete with engrossing situations from first to last and its denouement carries a big surprise. Louise Lovely and Lee Hill are the featured players, the former giving one of the telling characterizations of a difficult part for which she is famous. The interesting Universal Screen Magazine comes on the same day. This is the seventh issue of it and contains many novelties and innovations never before shown on the screen.

"Of special interest to all exhibitors is the release of the three-reel picture "Robinson Crusoe" based on the well-known work of Daniel DeFoe. Robert Leonard and Margarita Fischer aro starred. Mr. Leonard who produced the picture has caught the atmosphere of the printed work admirably well. All the high lights are faithfully reproduced with a remarkable degree of illusion. "Robinson Crusoe" is in three reels and will be released as a Special Feature the week of February 12. Special advertising, including a variety of paper and window card advertisements have been prepared for this subject.

The Bison of February 17 is a two-reel melodrama entitled "John Osborn's Triumph." This is a story of Wall Street and the story presents a big financial battle of the most thrilling sort. Murdock MacQuarrie and a strong cast of Universal favorites appear.

"Broken Hearted," a one-reel Laemmle released Feb. 17 starring William Shay and a "Mr. Fuller Pep" cartoon "Mr. Fuller Pep—He Does Some Quick Moving," which is split with a Dr. Dorsey educational released under the Powers brand on Sunday, Feb. 18, add variety to the program.

"THE SMITE OF CONSCIECE" (Mutual).

A woman fights for her self-respect. A man undergoes untold agonies of conscience, believing he has convicted an innocent man to the gallows in trying to shield the women he loves. These are the two dramatic situations upon which are built the story of "The Smite of Conscience," seventh of the Mutual stories "The Perils of Our Girl Reporters."

Helen Greene portrays one of the most convincing roles in which she has been seen for some time in the character of Helen Girard, who seeks employment on a big city newspaper in order to be away from home and escape the insults of her drunkard husband and his ribald friends. Earl Metcalfe, as Exton Manley, a New York lawyer, demonstrates his versatility first as the thoughtful friend trying to make life more pleasant for Helen Girard by his fostering care. W. H. Turner, as Girard, the drunken husband, a queer millionaire insanely jealous of his pretty wife, is one of the finest things this capable actor has done for some time.

SOUTHERN RIGHTS FOR "CIVILIZATION" SOLD.

J. Parker Reed, Jr., general manager of the Harper Film Corporation, announces that the All Star Features Company, Jacksonville, Florida, has acquired the state rights of the Thomas H. Ince spectacle "Civilization." This is one of the biggest deals consummated by Mr. Reed in the state righting of the picture. The territory disposed of includes the states of Kentucky, Virginia, Tennessee, North Carolina, South Carolina, Georgia, Alabama, Mississippi and Florida. The price paid for the state rights constitutes a record in the commercial history of "Civilization."

Messrs. Randolph and Davis, who are at the head of the All Star Features Company, came to New York to personally close the deal. The offices of the All Star Features Company are in the Realty Building, Jacksonville, Florida.

BARRYMORE BEGINS WORK ON NEW METRO.

Lionel Barrymore's new five-part comedy drama, which will follow "The End of the Tour," has been placed in production at the Metro-Columbia studios. This feature screen play is being directed by Harry Davenport, a new member of Metro's directing staff, and will be released on the Metro program. He will be assisted by P. Thad. Volkmann. June Mathis, who has adapted many Metro subjects for the screen, is the author of both the original story and the scenario of Mr. Barrymore's present picture, which is as yet unnamed.

Evelyn Brent plays opposite Mr. Barrymore. H. S. Northrup, one of the most celebrated "villains" of stage and screen, will have the male part next in importance to that of the star.

"A STRANGE ADVENTURE" (Selig).

William N. Selig announces a meritorious short length subject for forthcoming release in General Film Service. The production is entitled "A Strange Adventure," and was written and directed by Marshall Neilan. An all-star cast of unusual drawing power, including Jack Pickford, Bessie Eyton and Harry Lonsdale is featured. The Selig company asserts it is doubtful whether such an attractive cast was ever before presented in a production other than three or more reels in length. It is also the first occasion in which Jack Pickford and Bessie Eyton have played opposite leads, and both do full justice to their opportunities.

The plot is a delightful one, having to do with a princess of a mythical kingdom traveling incognito in the United States. When Mr. Van Horn (Jack Pickford) sees the beautiful maiden he is immediately attacked by "loveitus." The action then carries the two through a succession of exciting episodes. Bessie Eyton is known as the lady amateur swimmer of California. In several of the scenes of "A Strange Adventure" she displays her skill as a swimmer.

Scene from "A Strange Adventure" (Selig).

The photography, lighting effects and scenes in "A Strange Adventure" are also said to be excellent.

Paramount Program

Lou-Tellegen in "The Black Wolf" and Theodore Roberts in "The American Consul," Features for the Week of February 12th.

TWO of Paramount's most popular male stars, Lou-Tellegen and Theodore Roberts, in two Lasky productions, "The Black Wolf" and "The American Consul," respectively, will be the main features on the Paramount program for the week of February 12. "The Black Wolf" is undoubtedly the best production that Lou-Tellegen has ever made.

The stirring tale of "The Black Wolf," which is laid in sunny Spain, is the greatest romance in which this romantic actor has ever appeared. This production marks the actor's last appearance on the screen this season, as he will return to the stage for several months during the remainder of the theatrical season. During the course of the production the star, who is one of the most expert swordsmen in the country, has an opportunity of giving an exhibition of his skill. In this Paramount picture Mr. Tellegen is seen in a character entirely different from anything in which he has heretofore appeared and in a role to which he is exactly suited.

For his leading woman in this photodrama Mr. Tellegen has Nell Shipman, the clever photodramatic star, who is well known to the lovers of the photoplay. Others in the cast are James Neill, Paul Weigel and H. J. Herbert. The production was made for the Lasky company under the direction of Frank Reicher and abounds in lavish settings, beautiful exteriors and splendid photography.

It is not to be doubted that Theodore Roberts has appeared in more characters than any other screen artist. He has given probably the most wonderful characterization of unusual characters, and in his latest Lasky photoplay, "The American Consul," he is given an opportunity of displaying his inimitable characteristics, and proves in an even more conclusive manner than ever before that his characteristics are without equal on the screen.

Surrounding the program for this week, there will be three single-reel features, the fifty-third edition of the Paramount Pictographs, the magazine-on-the-screen; the fifty-fourth of the series of "Little Trips Around the World," personally conducted for Paramount by Burton Holmes, and a Klever Komedy, in which Victor Moore is starred.

In the fifty-third edition of the Paramount Pictographs there are three very interesting magazine subjects, together with a Bray cartoon, and this week marks the beginning of the production of the magazine-on-the-screen by the Bray studios.

The introductory subject, entitled "Skating a la Mode," shows how in the last few years ice skating has attained such popularity that as a social diversion it is a close rival to the modern dance. In making these pictures such celebrated artists as Norval Baptie, Mlle. Hala de Kosloff, Mr. Paul Wilson, Miss Freda Whitaker, formerly of Drury Lane, London, and others assisted in giving the most complete exhibition of fancy and modern skating ever attempted on the screen. Another interesting subject dealt with is that of "Marking the Mariner's Way," in which there is pictured how the United States Lighthouse Service keeps an ever-watchful eye on 5,000 miles of coastline, while under the title of "Training the Man-Hunting Bloodhounds" there is visualized a method of training bloodhounds to trail criminals.

"Colonel Heeza Liar," in one of his most unusual stories, makes his first appearance in this edition of the Pictographs, and by reason of which adds a wonderful amount of variety to this split reel.

"Beautiful Banff" and its Hot Springs, which are located in the center of the Canadian Rockies, is the place in which Burton Holmes takes his fellow journeyers in this, the fifty-fourth of the series of weekly trips which he has been conducting for the past year for Paramount. These pictures lead you to points from which may be seen sights which are only rivaled by the Alps, the Himalayas and the Andes, and show that here at Banff twenty Switzerlands are literally rolled into one. This beautiful picture is conceded to be one of the best that Burton Holmes has ever assembled, and which has been the subject of his leading lecture for his 1917 season in the ten largest cities in the United States.

Victor Moore will be starred in an exceptionally clever comedy for this week.

Special publicity and advertising aids, together with special lithographic paper, has been arranged for all the productions for this week and will be distributed by the exhibitor's aids departments to all Paramount exchanges.

SUBMARINE DESTROYED IN "PEARL OF THE ARMY."

The spectacular destruction of the Foreign Alliance is shown in the twelfth episode of Pathe's military mystery serial, "Pearl of the Army," in which Pearl White is scoring a big success, and which is announced for release the week of February 17.

This chapter shows the emissaries of the Foreign Alliance in a submarine pursued by a United States cutter. A shell from the United States boat shatters the conning tower and the water rushes in, catching them all.

There are big thrills and a delightful love interest, with Pearl White's beauty and charm a dominant box office factor.

Censors Praise "One of Many"

First of Arthur James' Metro Offerings Will Be Released Lincoln's Birthday.

METRO announces the release date of "One of Many," the feature screen play which is the initial offering of Arthur James, head of Metro's scenario, publicity and advertising departments, on February 12 (Lincoln's Birthday). An unusually enthusiastic report has been received from the National Board of Censorship, members of which reviewed the film recently at a private showing.

It was due to the strong moral lesson taught in "One of Many" that Arthur James chose the picture to mark his debut as a producer of feature films. William Christy Cabanne, now directing Francis X. Bushman and Beverly Bayne in Metro's fifteen chapter serial, "The Great Secret," is both author and director of "One of Many." Frances Nelson is the star. In the role of Shirley Bryson she has one of the greatest opportunities of her career.

Niles Welch plays opposite Miss Nelson in "One of Many." He is well known to Metro patrons through his work in "Emmy of Stork's Nest" and other Metro wonderplays. Harold Entwhistle is seen in the exacting role of the older Templeton, the wealthy roue. Others in the well balanced cast are Adella Barker, Mary Mersch, Richard Dix, Caroline Harris and Walter Worden.

GAUMONT RELEASES FOR WEEK OF FEB. 18.

The Gaumont Company opens the week of February 18 with its ever-entertaining "Reel Life." This issue, No. 42, is worthy of praise for the diversity as well as the interest of the subjects it contains. There are comprehensive pictures of "Oysters on the Mississippi Coast." The "Properties of Water" is an amazing revelation to those unacquainted with its power and possibilities. On the same reel are "Making an Individual Dress Form," "Training Man-Hunters" (bloodhounds), and "Dance of the Rainbow," an esthetic, open-air dance.

The second release of the week is "Tours Around the World," No. 16, reaching the screen February 20. It provides pictures of the Scottish Highlands, Heidelberg, Germany; Monte Carlo, Monaco and the neighboring watering place, Mentone, France. The pictures from Scotland are of the northeastern part of the Highlands, in County Cromarty.

February 21 Gaumont will release its split-reel, "See America First," and the Gaumont Kartoon Komic. The scenic, No. 76, is Vicksburg, Miss., and the Military Cemetery there. The humorous contribution from the pen of Harry Palmer is "Polly's Day at Home," revealing chapters in the life of a mischievous parrot.

On the same day the Mutual Weekly is issued from the Gaumont laboratories.

"ASHES ON THE HEARTHSTONE" (Essanay).

This is one of the most tensely dramatic units of the "Is Marriage Sacred?" series yet produced. A young wife, succumbing to the lure of a rich youth of evil intentions, deserts her husband and baby. Upon her terrible disillusionment she returns to find her husband mourning her infant's death. No stronger lesson in woman's disloyalty to her husband has ever been screened. The drama is enacted by Essanay's stock company, including Marguerite Clayton, Edward Arnold, Lillian Drew, Thomas Commerford and Sydney Ainsworth. Elaborate stage settings and excellent photography characterize this, as well as all productions of this series. The screen time is approximately thirty minutes. "Ashes on the Hearthstone" will be released through the General Film Service February 17.

Fox February Releases

Offers Four Big Features with Four Big Stars and Good Supporting Casts.

FOUR of the very biggest stars in the notable galaxy under William Fox's management will appear in the group of photoplays which Fox Film Corporation offers for the first three weeks in February. Those who have the stellar roles in the announced quartet of releases are the incomparable Theda Bara, in a magnificent photoplay of international scope; Stuart Holmes, in a part never before associated with the famous villain; Valeska Suratt, in a role which calls for the most gorgeous raiment on which the camera's lens has been trained, and June Caprice, in a delightful story of hill life.

This is the order of the four films:

February 5, Valeska Suratt, in "The New York Peacock"; February 12, Stuart Holmes, in "The Scarlet Letter"; February 19, Theda Bara, in "The Tiger Woman," and June Caprice, in "A Child of the Wild."

Miss Suratt's picture has many startling effects in scenic settings. Harry Hilliard is chief in support of the sirenic star. Others in the company are Eric Mayne, Alice Gale, Claire Whitney, W. W. Black, John Mackin and Frank Goldsmith. Mary Murillo is the author of the scenario and Kenean Buel the director.

"The Scarlet Letter," which will be presented by Fox Films on February 12, gives Stuart Holmes an opportunity to do the most vivid piece of acting of his long career. Mary Martin is seen as Hester Prynne and Kittens Reichert as Pearl. Carl Harbaugh made the picturization of Hawthorne's novel, and he is now preparing a new starring vehicle for Mr. Holmes.

Miss Bara's characterization of the Princess Petrovitch in "The Tiger Woman," her second super de luxe photoplay, outdoes even the sensational role the fascinating vampire had in "A Fool There Was." J. Gordon Edwards, master director, filmed the 'script, which was written by Adrian Johnson from the story by James W. Adams, a young University of Pennsylvania student. The principals include E. F. Roseman, Louis Dean, Emil De Varny, John Webb Dillion, Glen White, Mary Martin, Herbert Heyes and Kittens Reichert. Florence Martin, George Clarke, Kate Blanke and Edward Holt are also in the feature.

"A Child of the Wild," which is released simultaneously with "The Tiger Woman," tells the story of a girl of the mountain who will not go to school—until the right schoolmaster happens along, and he does, in the person of Frank Morgan.

Many of the exteriors for this subject were taken in the Lookout Mountain district around Chattanooga, Tenn.

VICTOR MOORE IN "KLEVER KOMEDIES."

Victor Moore's "Klever Komedy," released February 12, is called "He Got There After All," and was written by Carolyn Wells. This story gives Moore an opportunity of displaying everything that made him so popular in the Lasky pictures. It starts off with the birthday party of Vic's sweetheart, who is celebrating her twenty-first. She receives a letter at the party that in order to inherit her uncle's estate she must marry before midnight of her twenty-first birthday. Vic has been begging her to marry him, and this sudden change of affairs brings the answer to Vic much quicker than he anticipated; so Vic, in order to lose no time, announces to the party that they will be married at 10 o'clock that night. He immediately starts out to get the license and prepare for the happy event. The manner in which obstacles are placed in Vic's way by his rival, to prevent his reaching the wedding on time, are worked out in splendid fashion. The birthday garden party lends nice atmosphere to the comedy by showing a pretty garden scene with a bevy of pretty girls. Besides this a tennis scene gives the touch of youth and life and helps to round out a real classy comedy.

Scene from "He Got There After All" (Paramount).

Moore, who is noted for his slow style comedy, now and then adds just a little touch of pathos which always guarantees a nice, clean little story. Probably no screen artist today has the knack that Moore possesses of being able to make you laugh and cry at the same time. His comedies are as hilarious as the best made, with as many laughs and more in them, yet he can in a second do a little thing that makes you feel so sorry for him you don't know what to do; but you do, for you turn right around at his next movement and laugh your head off at him.

The comedies are now being directed by Harry Jackson, who has long been associated with comedy on the screen as well as on the legitimate stage. Mr. Moore is ably assisted in this picture by Emma Littlefield (Mrs. Moore), D. L. Don, Harry Semels, Mary Kernan and Carl Fleming.

TRIANGLE RELEASES OF FEBRUARY 25.

Dorothy Gish and William Desmond are the stars of the Triangle feature releases for February 25. Miss Gish will appear in a Fine Arts comedy drama entitled "Stagestruck," written by Roy Somerville and directed by Edward Morrisey. William Desmond will have a vehicle well suited to his personality in "The Last of the Ingrams," an Ince-Kay Bee production, written by John Lynch and directed by Walter Edwards, under the supervision of Thomas H. Ince.

Scene from "Stagestruck" (Triangle).

In "Stagestruck" Dorothy Gish is given unusual opportunities for displaying her versatility in acting satirical comedy roles. She plays the part of an orphan in a small town, where she lives with a crusty old uncle and aunt. Her soul yearns for an artistic career and she answers an advertisement in a newspaper to study drama by taking lessons in a school for acting. How she indirectly causes the expose of the school swindlers, exposes the bigotry of a narrow-minded, shallow society woman, and incidentally makes a man out of the loose, shiftless son of this society woman, is well brought out in the play. Frank Bennett plays the leading masculine role opposite Miss Gish. The other principals in the cast include Kate Toncray, Jennie Lee, Spottiswoode Aitken and Fred Warren.

William Desmond plays the title role in "The Last of the Ingrams," an appealing story of two tempest-tossed souls who fought their battles and triumphed over hearts as hard as the rock-bound coast of their native New England. It concerns the regeneration of a young ne'er-do-well, through his meeting with the village Magdalene, and of his conquest of the narrow-minded bigots who strove to drive the two from their altar of sacrifice.

ARTCRAFT ISSUES PHOTOGRAPH FRAMES.

The Artcraft Pictures Corporation has just issued to its exhibitors and exchanges unusually attractive photograph frames for lobby display. A large space is left for the exhibitor at the top of the frame in which can be inserted the name of the theater and other matter of local interest. Three styles of frames have been prepared, accommodating eight 8x10, six 8x10, and two 22x28 photos. They have been gotten up in a most artistic manner and are of the double folding variety.

"THE CODE OF THE KLONDYKE" (Universal).

Universal Director Lyn Reynolds will begin filming in a few days a five-act Alaskan drama, "The Code of the Klondike," featuring Myrtle Gonzalez and George Hernandez. Reynolds wrote the story.

Bluebirds Ready for Spring Flight

Violet Mersereau in "The Boy Girl" Announced for March 6—Ella Hall and Myrtle Gonzalez for Same Month.

ALTHOUGH dates for March Bluebirds have been definitely set in only one instance (Violet Mersereau, in "The Boy Girl," March 6), there is plenty of material ready for release. Fixing the schedule and applying permanent titles remain to be accomplished before the exact line-up can be announced. But there are plenty of good subjects awaiting release, as will be observed in the perusal of the following paragraphs.

Two of the March attractions will introduce Ella Hall and Myrtle Gonzalez in their accustomed appearances as Bluebird stars. "Polly Redhead," being shown at the Rialto, will return Ella Hall to the program after an absence of two months. The tentative date is March 19, but this may be changed. Jack Conway produced "Polly Redhead" from E. J. Clawson's scenario, based on Edgar Jepson's "Pollyooly" stories.

March 12 will bring another Lynn F. Reynolds picture to the Bluebird card. Its temporary title is "The Cruise of the Alden Besse," and Myrtle Gonzales is starred with Val Paul and George Hernandez featured. This is another feature booked for the Rialto.

Subsequent releases will be chosen from productions made by Jack Conway, Rupert Julian, Lois Weber, Lynn F. Reynolds, Rex Ingram, William Worthington, Fred A. Kelsey, Joseph De Grasse, Bruce McRae and Charles Swickard—their works all produced and ready to be scheduled. There are more than a dozen five-reelers in the lot, and exhibitors of Bluebirds are promised a series of attractive offerings for many weeks to come.

Mary MacLaren figures in two releases made by different directors. One is "Whispering Smith," prepared by Bruce McRae, and the other one was directed by Charles Swickard, who will introduce the heroine of "Shoes" and many other favorite Bluebirds, in "The Plow Woman," a feature adapted from a story by Eleanor Gates.

Rex Ingram has completed "Flowers of Doom," a play done in Chinese settings, and "Humanity," a melodrama of sociological timber. In preparing "Flowers of Doom" the advice of R. H. Gubbins, of Universal City's executive staff, was available to supply correctness of scenes and atmosphere. Mr. Gubbins lived for eight years in China. Wedgewood Nowell, Nicholas Dunaew and Gypsy Hart will have prominent roles in "Flowers of Doom."

Franklyn Farnum and Agnes Vernon, stars of the Bluebird for February 19 ("The Man Who Took a Chance"), have been directed by William Worthington, in "The Clock," the scenario having been written, by Maie B. Havey, from Aaron Hoffman's story. Rupert Julian has directed "The Gift Girl," in which he will be co-star with Louise Lovely. Jack Conway has finished "Pawned," a play in which Ella Hall will star, and "The Code of the Klondyke" will be another Lynn F. Reynolds contribution to Bluebirds.

Ben Wilson and Mignon Anderson will be featured in the next Lois Weber production, with Maud George, Priscilla Dean, Bertram Grassby, Harry Carter, Hayward Mack and Earl Page having prominent roles. This will be an allegorical subject, entitled "Even As You and I."

GERTRUDE ATHERTON'S NOVEL, "MRS. BALFAME," PICTURED.

Frank Powell has finished the production of "Mrs. Balfame," Gertrude Atherton's noted novel—the first of that writer's works to be transferred to the screen. "Mrs. Balfame," in which Nance O'Neil plays the central character, is the first of the series of Nance O'Neil feature pictures now being produced by the Frank Powell Producing Corporation, to be distributed through Mutual.

In the picturization of the Atherton novel Miss O'Neil is said to have an admirable vehicle for her initial appearance as a Powell-Mutual star. As Mrs. Balfame, opportunity is hers in abundance for the portrayal of that dynamic emotionalism of which, in the American theater, there is no more gifted exponent.

Miss O'Neil is supported by an excellent cast. There are Robert Elliott, who appears opposite Miss O'Neil as Dwight Rush; Alfred Hickman, who has excellent opportunities in the role of Broderick, the newspaper man; Agnes Eyre, who is the Alys Crumley; Anna Raines, who is the Dr. Anna Steuer, and Frank Belcher, as the bibulous Mr. Balfame.

DENVER AND SPOKANE SHOWINGS OF "PATRIA."

Two more society showings of "Patria" were held during the week of January 21, one in Denver and the other in Spokane. In Denver prominent military men attended the showing in the Brown Palace Hotel. The pictures were greeted with applause and the occasion was a great patriotic demonstration, the audience rising and cheering as the orchestra played "The Star-Spangled Banner."

The Spokane showing was held in the Davenport Hotel. More than twelve hundred people were present, and it was found necessary to hold two showings.

"The people simply went wild over the first episode," reports F. C. Quimby, manager of Pathe's Seattle branch, who arranged the showing.

METRO FILM CUTTERS DON OVERALLS.

When William Christie Cabanne, who is directing the Metro serial, "The Great Secret," strolled into the film-cutting room at the Quality studios the other day he halted abruptly, rubbed his eyes and whistled in surprise. Four young women employed there were wearing overalls.

"We've decided to wear 'em every day after this," declared Miss Bessie Stitch, one of the overall workers. "The women working in the munitions factories in Europe are doing it, so why shouldn't we?"

"You must agree with us that this is the only common-sense costume for a woman to wear when she's working with chemicals and what-not," said another.

MUTUAL STARS IN BIG STORIES.

A list of literary masterpieces has been secured as screen vehicles for Nance O'Neil and Marjorie Rambeau in the series of pictures they are making at the Powell-Mutual studios. To the literature of the screen will be added the classics of such writers as Ibsen, Charles Dickens, Gertrude Atherton, Algernon Boyesen and Frederick Arnold Kummer.

"Mrs. Balfame," the first vehicle chosen for Nance O'Neil, is an adaptation of the novel of the same name by Gertrude Atherton. "Hedda Gabler," on which Miss O'Neil is now working, is a picturization of the Ibsen play. "Bleak House," the third of Miss O'Neil's productions, comes from the pen of Charles Dickens.

"The Greater Woman," chosen for Miss Rambeau's first appearance on the screen, is a picturization of Algernon Boyesen's play, which was presented extensively on the stage in Europe. "Motherhood," the second production on which Miss Rambeau is now working, is a film version of the play by Frederick Arnold Kummer, author and playwright. "The Debt" will be the third offering featuring Miss Rambeau. "The Second Wife" is an original story by Caroline I. Hibbard, which was written especially for Miss Rambeau. Another of Ibsen's plays will be given to the public in "The Doll's House," in which Miss Rambeau will portray the character of Nora.

COHAN TAKES JACKSONVILLE BY STORM.

George M. Cohan has taken Jacksonville, Fla., by storm. Since his arrival there in connection with the production of his initial Artcraft photoplay, "Broadway Jones," he has become one of the important topics of the day. Many invitations and messages of welcome from prominent organizations and persons, including the Mayor, the Chamber of Commerce and the Jacksonville Tourists' Association, have been tendered to the popular George M., and cabaret orchestras and singers are featuring Cohan music and songs each night during his stay in the city. American flags are floating from every staff on the hotel where he is stopping

Large crowds are attracted to the "location" which has been secured for "Broadway Jones," and in some of these scenes over 500 people are being used, depicting factory strike views, etc. Hotels, stores and the railroad station have consented to have their signs changed so that "Jonesville," the town in the story, appears prominently on all signs.

EAST VS. WEST, THEME OF HAYAKAWA STORY.

One of the most striking productions in which Sessue Hayakawa has yet been starred by the Jesse L. Lasky Feature Play Company is "Each to His Kind," in which the well-known Japanese actor plays the role of an Indian prince. When Kipling said "East is east and west is west, and never the twain shall meet," he spoke with the knowledge of many years spent in India, during which he imbibed the spirit of the Hindoo and the Brahmin. "Each to His Kind" is a development of that racial antipathy along a most startlingly dramatic line.

"Trooper 44"

DIXON BOARDMAN, president of the E. I. S. Motion Picture Corporation, announces that "Trooper 44," the new six-reel feature, in which for the first time in the history of the screen the famed "Black Hussars," the Pennsylvania State Mounted Police, figure prominently, is now practically complete. Following the return of the "Trooper 44" company from the Pennsylvania mining regions, Mr. Boardman and Roy Gahris, who directed the picture under Mr. Boardman's personal supervision, have been busy day and night cutting and assembling.

During the past week Major John C. Groome, superintendent and founder of the state police, through whose courteous cooperation the troopers were allowed to appear in the most thrilling scenes of the feature, visited New York and, as the guest of Mr. Boardman, witnessed several of the scenes in which his dashing troops appear run off upon the screen. He expressed himself as greatly gratified with the results, and declared that he had never before realized the wonders of the motion-picture camera. Major Groome will in all probability be a guest of honor at the premiere private showing of the picture, which will take place shortly, and to which the most prominent men of the country will be invited.

The plot of "Trooper 44" deals with the adventures of Trooper Jack of the Mounted in breaking up a gang of outlaws. He falls in love with the daughter of one of the desperadoes and exciting events follow thick and fast, culminating in the girl's arrest by Jack. The scenes show the famous troopers in all sorts of dashing evolutions and thrilling attacks. George Soule Spencer plays Trooper 44. June Day is Ruth Moreland, the girl he loves. Others in the long cast are Roy Gahris, Walter Lewis, W. W. Black, Roy Sheldon and last, but not least, Captain Adams, the famous commander of Troop A of the "Black Hussars," who has made more than two hundred daring arrests and has stamped out anarchy and lawlessness all through the wild regions where the Mounted range. The scenes enlist the services of practically the state police force and are packed with thrilling adventure.

"THE PRICE SHE PAID" (Selznick).

"The Price She Paid," which will be the next Clara Kimball Young production for Selznick-Pictures, is a call to women to achieve independence. Miss Young plays the part of Mildred Gower, a young woman whose early life in luxury has seemingly made it impossible for her to exist without leaning upon some man. She marries for money, and is so humiliated that she leaves her husband. She borrows money from another man, in an attempt to fit herself for an operatic career, but again meets with disillusionment. What she did not understand is at length forced upon her attention by a third man, who shows her that her need is not money, but strength of character. She hesitates to adopt the Spartan rules which he lays down for her guidance, but at length is convinced that life will mean nothing to her until she stops coddling herself.

Scene from "The Price She Paid" (C. K. Y.).

In the story of Mildred Gower Miss Young finds one of her most engaging and delightfully human roles. This character is no tinsel heroine, but a girl who is actuated by impulses and desires common to her sisters in every stratum of society and in every part of the world. While her career is in the making, however, there is a fascinating love story, three men of contrasted characters being enamored of the girl. Charles Giblyn is directing.

Vaudeville Bookings Will Help Industry

THE showing of "Patria," the International serial, by leading vaudeville houses in seventy-five of the important cities of the country will be, in the opinion of a number of prominent exhibitors, a direct benefit to the motion picture industry. First and most important, it is pointed out that a new class of patronage will be created for pictures from the ranks of those who in the past have supported only the vaudeville and the legitimate theater. Reports from all parts of the country show that increasing crowds are viewing each episode of "Patria" in the big first-run houses. This, according to J. A. Berst, vice-president and general manager of Pathe exchange, demonstrates there is no audience in the country too "high class" for the right kind of picture.

"Patria" is being extensively advertised through billboards and newspapers by the Keith, Proctor and Orpheum circuits, each episode being announced as one of the feature "acts." This, it is pointed out, will establish the serial in the minds of the public as a high-class production.

Many vaudeville managers in the past refused to show pictures, with the possible exception of the news reels, because they thought there would be little or no interest in the screen productions.

"This might have been true a few years ago," stated Mr. Berst, "but it certainly is not true today. The success of 'Patria' in the greatest vaudeville houses demonstrates this."

All of the vaudeville publications have devoted large space to the fact that a motion picture serial has been made a part of the bill of high-class vaudeville. The vaudeville performers in particular are disturbed and are concerned as to what this move portends. Prominent managers, as well as some of the vaudeville publications, have stated that the booking of "Patria" will have an important bearing on the present agitation for closer relations between vaudeville actors and managers.

LEA-BEL COMPANY SECURES WORLD RIGHTS TO "MODERN MOTHER GOOSE."

State rights have been announced for sale on the five-reel production, "Modern Mother Goose," by the Lea-Bel Company of Chicago. The states of Illinois, Indiana, Wisconsin and Michigan will be reserved, but all other territory can be purchased, as has been announced in an advertisement of the company appearing on another page in this paper.

Scene from "Modern Mother Goose."

"Modern Mother Goose" is based on the famous fairy tale of that name, and was produced in Chicago by the Fort Dearborn Photoplays, Inc., which concern specializes in the production of children's stories. The subject is indorsed by the Illinois Parents and Teachers' Association and the Illinois Congress of Mothers. It is interesting alike to young and old. The Mother Goose rhymes are brought to life on the screen, nicely interwoven with a short modern story.

J. M. Leaverton, president of the Lea-Bel Company, states that it is his intention in the future to secure pictures along educational and religious lines. A. E. Derr, D.D., Ph.D., who has been in this field of moving picture work for the past eight years, will have charge of that department for the company.

Harlequin Comedies Coming Soon

To Be Made by Famous Stars Pictures Corporation—Company Also to Produce Features.

THE slogan that has been adopted by the Famous Star Pictures Corporation for their forthcoming productions of two-reel comedies is "Harlequin—the Comedies with the Counterplots!" Harlequin comedies are guaranteed by the "powers that be" to be real human laughter inspirers. By the "powers that be" reference is made to Hynson, Derr & Co., a New York banking firm, the financial representatives of the Famous Stars Pictures Corporation.

"You can take our indorsement of the Famous Stars Pictures Corporation for all it may mean—financially and otherwise," said Mr. Derr.

"Of course, the firm is primarily interested in the financial success of its clients. To be successful in any line of endeavor, whether it be that of the manufacture of films, clothing or automobiles, one must take the kind of product that will give complete satisfaction—first to the middleman, then to the consumer or the public. It is for that reason we have such unlimited faith in the men who comprise this new film company. They have set out to make the very best comedies that time and money can produce. Famous stars who are real actors, famous authors who can really write, and famous directors who can really produce results will combine to make screamingly funny comedies—the kind of comedies that will build good will and come-back patronage for the exhibitor."

Harlequin comedies will not depend upon slapsticks and vulgarity. Their comedies, several of which are ready for making, are the works of expert writers of comedy, who based their plots upon plausibly funny situations.

Aside from the Harlequin comedies, the Famous Stars Pictures Corporation intends to produce a number of super features.

CHARLES A. TAYLOR WRITES PATHE STORY.

Charles A. Taylor, well-known dramatist, author and producer of "The King of the Opium Ring," "Queen of the Highway," "From Rags to Riches," "The Female Detective," "Queen of the Jungle" and many other prominent dramatic successes, is responsible for the excellent screen interpretation of Eyodor Dostoevsky's "Crime and Punishment," which has been picturized by the Arrow Film Corporation for distribution on the Pathe program. Mr. Taylor used four separate translations of this famous Russian novel in the preparation of this Pathe Gold Rooster play. "Crime and Punishment" is a strong offering and features Derwent Hall Caine, son of Hall Caine. The picture will be released February 25.

WINTER SPORTS IN PICTOGRAPHS.

In a forthcoming release of the Paramount-Bray Pictographs there is shown to what extent the sport of snowshoeing and skiing has grown in America, and the subject is handled in such a manner that it is both instructive and amusing. Besides demonstrating the way to use both snowshoes and skis, the proper way to attach them, how to turn about on a pair of skis, and several other little tricks, there also are shown many interesting contests in ski-jumping and snowshoe-racing by novice and professional.

PARAMOUNT SHOWS ASTRONOMER'S WORKSHOP.

In a forthcoming edition of the Paramount-Bray Pictographs a series of pictures of an unusual caliber, taken at Wesleyan University's great observatory, will be shown. In this subject is demonstrated the giant telescope and the ease with which it is handled. The mechanism is so constructed that one man can with ease swing this instrument in any direction and to any desired angle, and as he does so by pressing a button he can cause the entire floor of the observatory to rise or fall.

ADVERTISING MATTER ON "DEEMSTER" READY.

A special and complete line of paper and advertising matter has been prepared for the Arrow Film Corporation's state rights picture, "The Deemster," featuring Derwent Hall Caine, son of the author, Hall Caine. Two styles of twenty sheets, two styles of six sheets, three styles of three sheets and three styles of one sheet have been prepared for this attraction by famous artists. In addition to this, spcial press sheets, lobby displays and other material have also been prepared.

EDUCATORS SEE "OLIVER TWIST."

An exceptional amount of interest was created in Lasky's "Oliver Twist" by Charles F. Oldt, of Easton, Pa., when he issued special invitations to all the educators in the community, inviting them to the performance of the picture. The idea was instrumental in getting all of the teachers and other people to talk about the high quality of the photoplay taken from the Dickens classic and for the rest of the week breaking his house records.

WINTER SPORTS FIGURE IN MUTUAL WEEKLY NEWS.

Despite wars and rumors of wars the people of the north still have their winter sports, their carnivals and races. Being a faithful transcript of the world's news, the Mutual Weekly carries in its issue No. 110 pictures of two of the leading events of the week north of the snow line. These are the great Red River Derby for dog sleds from Winnipeg, Canada, to St. Paul, Minn., and the gorgeous winter carnival held at St. Paul under the direction of Louis W. Hill.

The aquatic section of the news reel shows the double launching of two large steel merchant vessels at Oakland, Cal., and the visit of the first submarine that ever entered the harbor at Havana, Cuba. These were American vessels, convoyed by a mother ship.

From Washington, D. C., come pictures of the New York suffragists who are picketing the White House in an effort to secure Federal recognition of votes for women.

The fashion section this week shows "What the Men Are Wearing," authoritative pictures of Fifth avenue styles.

MISS BERRI TO MAKE MORE PICTURES.

Miss Maud Lillian Berri, the comic opera star and prima donna, who has retired from the stage and is now producing pictures, is being congratulated on her first production, "Glory," which was recently released by the Unity Sales Corporation.

Miss Berri will confine her efforts to clean, wholesome stories. She states her belief it is only a question of a few months before the exhibitor will openly revolt at all productions that are not of this class. Miss Berri is confident she can make subjects which will be a credit to the motion picture business.

JIU-JITSU IN MAGAZINE-ON-THE-SCREEN.

In a forthcoming release of the Paramount-Bray Pictographs there will be contained an unusual series of pictures on the science of jiu-jitsu.

How to break a strong hold, how to ward off an attack, how to ward off an unexpected attack from the rear, how to disarm the gunman and a very exciting exhibition of the manner in which the jiu-jitsu expert would handle a trained boxer are all demonstrated.

An extraordinary setting was erected last week in the Selznick studios by Director Leonce Perret for Robert Warwick's second Selznick picture production, adapted from the novel "The Court of St. Simon," by E. Phillips Oppenheim.

The scene occupies the entire floor of the glass-roofed studio and represents a street in the Montmartre section of Paris, with a full panorama of the city in the background. The houses in the foreground are replicas of the haunts of the night prowlers of Paris, known as "Apaches." Montmartre is on an elevation, which enables the spectator to look down upon the embankments of the river Seine and across to the vast expanse of the city.

Scene from "The Court of St. Simon" (Warwick).

This being his first American production, Director Perret is ambitious to make it a sensation. The story of "The Court of St. Simon" is unique. It embodies an original theme. The locale of the story is partly in France and partly in America. A feature of the story is that it necessitates the employment of two leading women in the support of Robert Warwick—Anna Little and Olive Tell.

QUACKY DOODLES HOOKS UP WITH PARAMOUNT.

Patrons of Paramount theaters have a brand new laugh in store for them when they see the Paramount-Bray-Pictographs to be released February 17. On that release will for the first time be shown a group of little characters which have heretofore furnished unending amusement to hundreds of thousands of children and parents from between the covers of books and as life-like toys. This is the Quacky Doodles family, made up of Quacky Doodles, Danny Doodles and the little Doodles.

The "Quacky Doodles" Family.

Johnny B. Gruelle, who attained international fame some few years ago when he won the thousand dollar prize offered by the New York Herald for the best comic, is the creator of these funny little creatures, and he has been engaged by the Bray Studios, Inc., to animate them for Paramount patrons. They will therefore appear at regular intervals, together with Col. Heeza Liar and Bobby Bumps and his famous dog, Fido.

Easily the characters that strike the average person as being funniest are birds and animals humanized. In the pages of comic weeklies and supplements and the Sunday supplements of newspapers we laugh heartiest at the antics and expressions of such humanized animals, and so the Quacky Doodles family have gained their tremendous popularity among children of all ages because they are so truly comical and do such excruciatingly funny things.

"THE SAINTLY SINNER" (Bluebird).

Ruth Stonehouse returns to the Bluebird program February 26 in "The Saintly Sinner," a sensational melodrama, scenarioized by Eugene B. Lewis from L. H. Hutton's story of the same title. Raymond B. Wells directed the play and has introduced a number of exciting episodes that furnish a round of sensation.

Frederick Montague, Raymond Whittaker, Jack Mulhall, Dorothy Drake and Ailda Hayman will play the principal supporting roles. "The Saintly Sinner" has been introduced to the Bluebird program to provide variety. In this feature the producers turn to good old melodrama, bringing it up to date by modern methods of presentation, while retaining the "grip" and sensation that so many "fans" desire in their photo entertainment.

Scene from "The Saintly Sinner" (Bluebird).

ARTIST LIFE SHOWN IN "THE GREATER WOMAN."

A glimpse into the bohemian life of the artists of the Latin Quarter of Paris is given in "The Greater Woman," the first of the Marjorie Rambeau pictures to be distributed through Mutual. The scenes are taken in the rendezvous of the artists, a little cafe with sawdust-covered floor and battered walls decorated by the hands of the habitues. Here the members of the colony gather each night for good fellowship and merrymaking.

The walls of the room are profusely decorated with sketches of all kinds. In one corner is a clever cartoon of one of the well-known members of the profession. Directly under it appears an impressionistic drawing in colored crayons of the sweetheart of the dance hall. In another place appears a little profile sketch of one of their feminine contingent. Here an artist has contributed his idea of the cook expressed by means of his brush, and next to it a hungry man has drawn a picture of the waiter advancing with two trays heavily loaded.

Into this cafe with its light-hearted merrymakers comes Auriole Praed (Marjorie Rambeau) and her party to see the sights of Paris. Very laughable are their efforts to make the waiter understand their order, given in their Americanized French, and their ineffectual attempts to discover how to secure the wine from the castor supporting the bottles above the table. It is in this bohemian atmosphere that Auriole meets the artist Otto Bettany, who later becomes her husband.

"THE WHIP" FOR STATE RIGHTS.

Inquiries from states rights buyers are coming in for the rights to "The Whip," the big melodrama Director Maurice Tourneur has adapted after months of work. Only those on the inside know that as far back as January, 1916, "The Whip" was purchased. The play originally was produced at the Drury Lane theater, London, and packed the auditorium for the greater part of two years. Brought to this country by William A. Brady, it was in all the large cities.

Replete with suspense of the tense, irresistible thrill, Director Tourneur in "The Whip" is said to have bunched a great number of successive and harmonized realisms. One of these effects is a head-on collision of two railroad trains, with their subsequent submersion. The taking of the scene took Director Tourneur and his organization to many sections of the country. Four hundred and twenty-eight scenes are included in the picture entirely, the units requiring eight reels.

Snitz Edwards, the veteran comedian and character player, will be seen in a principal part in the Clara Kimball Young forthcoming Selznick picture production, "The Price She Paid," adapted from the novel of the same name by the late David Graham Phillips. The cast also includes Alan Hale, one of the best known screen players in America. The picture was directed by Charles Giblyn, formerly of the Triangle forces, and is ready for release.

The Pennsylvania board of censors finally has passed Henry B. Walthall's Essanay superfeature, "The Trunat Soul," after holding up its presentation in the Quaker state for two weeks. The Ohio board previously had reconsidered its objections to the film and passed it in that state. This action opens the door to this picture, which Walthall says is his greatest throughout the country. At the headquarters of the Kleine-Edison-Selig-Essanay service, which is handling its release, the report was that the big feature is doing a record-breaking business wherever it is being shown.

Harry Carey is being featured in a two-act drama, "Their Holdup," many of the scenes being taken in the mountains near Los Angeles. Carey is supported by a number of the Universal cowboys.

The Universal Joker Comedy company, under the direction of William W Beaudine, is filming "A Perfect Day," featuring Gale Henry and William Franey. The antics of a mule create considerable fun in many scenes.

Al E. Christie has begun producing "Sauce for the Goose," the first of the Epes Winthrop Sargent series of comedies. Betty Compson, Ethel Lynn, Neal Burns, Eddie Barry and Stella Adams are awaiting the inspiration of the sun.

Trade News of the Week

GATHERED BY OUR OWN CORRESPONDENTS

Portland, Me., Theaters Raise Admissions

Two Moving Picture Houses Announce an Increase in Price of Seats—Had Been Ten, Will Be Fifteen Cents—Plenty of Five-Cent Houses.

John P. Flanagan, 147 Park View Avenue, Bangor, Maine.

PORTLAND, Me.—Two Portland moving picture houses have announced an increase in admission from 10 to 15 cents and give as a reason impossibility to continue these amusement enterprises at the long prevailing prices. The demand of the public for more and more expensive pictures has increased the fixed charges or overhead of the business so that they feel compelled to have an increase in their prices. Other Portland houses have not made any announcements.

In Bangor, three houses charge only five cents admission, the Nickel, Palace and Graphic. The Park charges 10 cents. Admission to the Bijou, pictures and vaudeville, varies from 10 to 35 cents.

Mutual Closes Bangor Branch.

Bangor, Me.—The Mutual Co. has discontinued its Bangor branch and will hereafter distribute its films from Boston. The Mutual branch has been in charge of Reginald Borroto, a popular and energetic film manager who has made a host of friends. The Mutual is said to have been the first company to establish a film exchange in the state of Maine, in Waterville, later at Portland.

Borroto to Become Benedict.

Bangor, Me.—Congratulations are being extended to Reginald Borroto, retiring Bangor manager of the Mutual, on his engagement to Miss Abbie Constantine of Bangor. Marriage intentions have been filed with the Bangor city clerk and Mr. Borroto will soon figure in a wedding scene. News weekly men this way!

Waterville to Have $50,000 Picture House.

Waterville, Me.—It is reported that ex-Governor William T. Haines has decided to build a $50,000 moving picture house for Alfred Black near Main street, Waterville. Mr. Black manages houses at Biddeford, Westbrook and Rockland. Work will begin in the spring, it is said.

Cold Weather and Prosperity.

Bangor, Me.—Manager Charles M. Stern of the Bangor Universal exchange has just returned from a trip through central Maine, where in conversation with a great many exhibitors he gathered the impression that business is satisfactory and most of the picture men have nothing to kick at. The extreme cold of the month of January has made exhibitors' coal bills high, but it has also driven people into the moving picture theaters and managers are happy on that account.

Caribou, Me.—Though the temperature has been as low as 30 under zero in Caribou this winter, the moving picture theaters are prospering, thank you. Manager Powers of the Caribou Opera house has recently contracted for full Universal service six days in the week.

Presque Isle Strand Changes Hands.

Presque Isle, Me.—The Strand theater has been acquired by manager Ferguson and will henceforth be known as The Photoplay. Universal service will be used.

Baltimore News Letter

By J. M. Shellman, 1902 Mt. Royal Ter., Baltimore, Md.

B. Depkin, Jr., Booking for Strand.

BALTIMORE, Md.—According to the latest reports, the Strand theater, 404-6 North Howard street, has again changed managers and Bernard Depkin, Jr., who has successfully managed the beautiful Parkway playhouse since it was opened, has now been booking the pictures for the Strand since January 29. Mr. Depkin is still acting as manager for the Parkway.

Arrests by Censors.

Baltimore, Md.—The developments which were awaited last week by this writer in regard to the censorial activities in the police line have come to a head and decisions have been rendered. Two of the most prominent exhibitors were caught in the dragnet. Guy L. Wonders, manager of the Wilson theater, was arrested, but when his case was tried, it is reported, he was dismissed. Thomas D. Goldberg, manager of the Goldberg and Gordon theaters, was also hauled up on a charge of exhibiting a picture without the seal of the Maryland Board and was fined $5 and costs before Justice Shaw in the Southwestern police station.

New Film Service.

Baltimore, Md.—The American film service, 151 North Gay street, is now under way with Arthur D. Gans, a live wire film man, as its manager. In a recent trip to Philadelphia and New York Mr. Gans contracted for the agency for the Coles and Stern machines. Among the features being handled by this company are a three part Buffalo Bill production and Charles Chaplin in "The Musketeers of the Slums."

Organ for New Theater.

Baltimore, Md.—Through arrangements and transactions made by Lewis A. DeHoff, manager of the New theater, 210 West Lexington street, a great improvement is to be made in this beautiful little playhouse in the form of a large, three manual Moller organ, the cost of which is estimated at about $10,000.

Fire in Annapolis Theater.

Annapolis, Md.—On Wednesday night, January 24, a fire broke out in the Colonial theater in this city. This house is owned by Strange Brothers and is located in the business section of the city. there was no panic in the audience, for as soon as the smoke began to appear in the theater from the stage the people arose and began to leave in an orderly manner, while those in the gallery left by fire escapes. The fire, which was in a corner above the stage, was finally extinguished.

D. A. R. Benefit at Parkway.

Baltimore, Md.—Through the courtesy of Bernard Depkin, Jr., manager of the Parkway theater, 3-9 West North avenue, a benefit was given during all of last week for the patriotic work being done by the local Chapter of the D. A. R. in Maryland. Matinee benefits were held every afternoon and part of the proceeds obtained through the sale of tickets by the chapter members and Mrs. J. F. Sippel, regent of the Baltimore Chapter, went for the funds being raised.

F. H. Durkee Speaks of Theater at Hamilton.

Hamilton, Md.—"We are making out very well with our theater in Hamilton," stated Frank H. Durkee, one of Baltimore's most prominent film men, when questioned on the matter the other day. "That house was opened on December 25, and since then it has been very well patronized. Charles Eyer has been placed in charge as house manager and he attends to everything but the booking of the pictures. The seating capacity is about 250 and on Saturdey, January 27, we had an exceptionally big run on one of the Mary Pickford features. You see, Hamilton is five miles out from Baltimore and is a very small suburb, but we arrange our time of showing to suit the community and open at 6.30 P. M. on every day excepting Saturdays."

Manager DeHoff Won't Lend Screen to Cranks.

Baltimore, Md.—Owing to the picture "The Threads of Fate" being exhibited at the New theater, 210 West Lexington street, last week, a delegation of the logal antivivisectionists visited this house on Monday, January 29, to ask manager DeHoff to run a set of slides which would show their side of the question, as the picture dealt in part with vivisection. Mr DeHoff could not see them. He received a letter from Mrs. Minnie Maddern Fiske, president of the national body, urging him to meet the local delegation. On Wednesday several packages containing 400 calandars and a dozen slides were received from Miss Bessie Gray, secretary of the local body. Mr. DeHoff, however, decided that he could not inflict the slides that were sent on his audiences as he knew that they came for amusement and not for a sermon.

A. B. Price and "The Great Secret."

Baltimore, Md.—A. B. Price, manager of the Rialto theater, North avenue at Linden, is always looking for "other worlds to conquer" in the advertising line. He worked up three postals. The first said in handwriting, "Who kidnapped Beverly Clarke and why?"; the second, "The Secret '7' stole Beverly Clarke—why?"; and the third stated that "The Great Secret" featuring Bushman and Bayne would be shown at the Rialto on Wednesday, January 24, and the card would admit the bearer free.

Earle E. Reese to Manage Hy Art Company.

Washington, D. C.—George R. Mayo, who has been secretary and general manager of the Hy Art Master Plays company, and his two sons, G. Morrow Mayo, assistant manager, and John R. Mayo, have severed their connections with that company and have been succeeded by Earle E. Reese and E. R. Haas.

G. R. Mayo Resigns.

Mr. Mayo withdraws from the company. When interviewed by the Washington correspondent of the MOVING PICTURE WORLD as to his plans for the future, Mr. Mayo simply said, "I have resigned as manager and my two sons leave the company with me. We do not, at present, know exactly what we are going to do, but it is very possible that we will continue in the moving picture game. It would seem a great pity that the big asset that the boys have worked up in North and South Carolina and in West Virginia by their personal friendship with the exhibitors of these states should be lost by our retiring from the motion picture field, but unless the price of features comes down I think we shall have to find something in another line not quite so speculative." Mr. Mayo and the boys are rated as among the most popular motion picture men in this territory. The former has taken a very active part in the activities of the Washington Exchange Managers' Association, serving on several of its committees, doing excellent work. It would indeed be a loss to the business generally if their retirement is permanent.

Earle E. Reese and E. R. Haas Favorably Known.

Earle E. Reese, like the Mayos, is very well known by reason of his long connection with the motion picture business in this territory. He has traveled extensively for a number of the large companies and was a partner in the business operated under the name of the Exhibitors' Co-operative Booking association in this city. Mr. Haas is a former newspaper man who entered the moving picture busines as a traveling representative of the World Film, later joining the Selznick company. These are young men who are doing very well for themselves in the picure business.

The annual meeting of the stockholders of the Armat moving picture company, according to an announcement of President Thomas Armat, will be held at the office of the company, 42 Hutchins building, at 11:00 a. m., Thursday, February 8, 1917. At this meeting there will be held an election of directors who are to serve during the ensuing year.

District of Columbia Vault Fees Are Due

Tax of One-Half of One Per Cent. on Assessed Value of Space Under Sidewalks Used as Vaults, Must Now Be Paid.

Clarence L. Linz, 622 Riggs Building, Washington, D. C.

WASHINGTON, D. C.—A number of exhibitors of the city are in receipt of tax bills from the office of the assessor of the District of Columbia, covering the rental of sidewalk vaults. Section 7 of the appropriation bill for the District of Columbia of September 1, 1916, provides: "That hereafter the Commissioners of the District of Columbia are authorized and directed to assess and collect rent from all users of space occupied under the sidewalks and streets in the District of Columbia, which said space is occupied or used in connection with the business of said users."

The amount of rental to be charged and collected in each case is to be based on the area of the vault space multiplied by the assessed value per square foot of adjoining land, multiplied by one-half of one per cent.; the minimum rental in any case to be $5 per year. Rentals are to be paid in advance on July 1 of each year, but for the first year the rental is payable from and including September 1, 1916, the date of the passage of the appropriation bill in question, to and including June 30, 1917. The rental for this year must be paid within thirty days after the presentation of the bill.

Prices of Stamped Envelopes Go Up.

The Post Office Department has increased its prices on all sizes of stamped envelopes. The first raise became effective February 1. New prices on other classes will go into effect as soon as the stock is received. The increased cost of paper and the use of better material is held to be responsible for the raise, which will average about 43 cents per 1,000 envelopes.

A new departure will be the supply of post offices throughout the country at an early date with stamped "window" envelopes. These have heretofore been unavailable. The Department has put on sale this class of envelopes as a means of enabling commercial concerns to do away with addressing as well as stamping.

Youthful Hoodlums in Theaters a Problem.

Washington, D. C.—Washington exhibitors are having considerable trouble with boys who look upon it as a joke to create unbearable odors in the various motion picture theaters. It is a violation of the police laws of the city to cause a disturbance such as this, but it is a very difficult matter to apprehend the offenders. Whenever a complaint comes to the police an effort is made to catch the guilty person or persons, and at one of the residential houses a boy was caught redhanded in possession of a bottle of hydrogen disulphid. He had been allowing drops of this very odorous liquid to fall upon the floor in various parts of the theater, and immediately afterward it was noticeable that the audience thinned out.

The continuance of this practice would give to the theater a reputation that would be hard to overcome. The public generally would not be aware of the cause of the odors, but would lay it to improper ventilation, unhealthy location, or something else of a like nature. The exhibitors will carry their complaint to the district commissioners with a plea for greater protection against boys who are vandals of the meanest type.

Griffith Entertained in Washington.

Washington, D. C.—David W. Griffith, the noted film producer, was the guest of honor and orator of the entertainment given by the Arts Club, 2017 Eye street, northwest, last week. He gave a very interesting talk and declared that the future of motion pictures means a triumph for art.

"No such entertainment and no such combination of art and education," he said, "have been given to humanity as will be given in the future by the movies."

The censor and the lawmaker who interfere with film productions came in for his denunciation. He also had a fling at a type of horseplay comedians who figure in motion pictures.

"We are the most enslaved people," he said, "because we make laws against ourselves. We try to make people good by laws, but we don't. They simply jump over the fences we build.

"Throughout the ages you will find the same old story of one group trying to impose its ideals of thought and conduct on another," said Mr. Griffith. "Milton fought for the freedom of speech and press three centuries ago. The movies are going through the same struggle now. We need your help to save us from the arbitrary, dictatorial censorship."

Metro Gets Picture of Dewey Funeral.

Washington, D. C.—The local branch of the Metro service made a record recently in getting out within six hours after the conclusion of Admiral Dewey's funeral, a reel enabling the patrons of motion picture houses to see the entire ceremonies. The last picture was taken a little after three o'clock in the afternoon, and at the conclusion of the first show, patrons of Loew's Columbia theater witnessed the pictures on the screen. Two camera men had been employed to take the pictures. Two reels were made, the second one being sent to New York for exhibition the following day. The pictures were very good, and the demand on Manager Day, of the exchange, was very heavy.

Personal Notes.

Rudolph Berger, manager of the Washington office of the K-E-S-E, who has been spending a number of his days in his old home at Ovaca, Pa., has gone to Chicago to attend the conference of the branch managers of the company by which he is employed.

Union Wages Go Up.

Clarksburg, W. Va.—The moving picture theater proprietors of Clarksburg, W. Va., have granted the demands of the union and announce an increase of 15 per cent in the wages of operators. Other theaters granted an increase of 25 per cent in the wages of stage employes.

Expensive to Censors in West Virginia

State Is Supplied from Pennsylvania, Ohio and From Washington, D. C.—This Will Probably Double and Even Triple the Cost.

Washington, D. C.—The West Virginia censorship law, if adopted, will play havoc with the motion picture business, according to exchange men of Washington. Flatly, it will mean the payment of double, if not triple, censorship fees on each film subject going to the state because of the geographic position of the cities and towns of West Virginia.

West Virginia is divided into three parts in order that the theaters and exchanges alike may secure the best transportation facilities obtainable. Thus, some of the cities are served from Ohio, some from Pennsylvania, while still others secure their supplies of films from the city of Washington, D. C. There is censorship in Ohio, Pennsylvania and Maryland, and the same subject, although represented by separate films in each case, is, therefore, subjected to the payment of censorship fees in each state. If the West Virginia law is enacted it will mean the doubling of these fees or a readjustment of the territory, taking away that part of the state served by Washington and giving it to the other distributing centers or vice versa. That is the way the exchangemen look at it from this end, and in each instance the exchange manager has announced that he would rather lose that share of the territory that has been allowed him than monkey with censorship's idiosyncrasies, to say nothing of additional censorship fees.

The brunt of the whole proposition will have to be borne by the West Virginia exhibitors for they will be subjected to all sorts of delay brought about by this readjustment. It stands to reason that if all the cities and towns in the state could be served from the one exchange the companies would not seek to give each of three exchanges a small slice of the business, but the railroad communications are not such as will permit of the former, and the latter condition arises.

New State Rights Company Opens Offices

New Jersey Company, Civilization Film Corporation Begins Business in the Strand Theater Building, Newark, N. J.

By Jacob J. Kalter, 25 Bradford, Place, Newark, N. J.

NEWARK, N. J.—The Civilization Film Corporation, of which Frank G. Hall, of Hoboken, is president, has just closed a deal by which the first floor of the Strand theater building, 118 Market street, will be utilized as offices for the concern. The new company has been formed to buy state rights on extraordinary features and book them throughout New Jersey. Already the concern has secured the New Jersey state rights for such productions as "Joan the Woman," "War's Women," "Civilization," and negotiations are pending for the purchase of several of the larger features now being produced.

Mr. Hall has been fortunate in securing as the manager of his new enterprise Lynn S. Card, one of the most popular exchange managers in Newark. Mr. Card, while manager of the local Mutual office, won the confidence and good will of every Jersey exhibitors with whom he had any business relations.

As assistant manager, Mr. Card has Louis D. Lyon, who acted in a similar capacity for him at the local Mutual office. Mr. Lyon started in the moving picture business as an exhibitor in Lodi, N. J., where he managed the Star theater. He then came to Newark, where he joined the staff of Pathe. With such a team as Card and Lyon, things may be expected to hum at the Civilization office.

E. I. Church, who comes from the Twenty-third street branch of the General Film, fills the position of cashier at the local office.

Proctor Erects Huge Sign.

Newark, N. J.—F. F. Proctor obtained last week a permit for the erection of a steel sign to cost $500. The sign will be placed on the Palace theater, 116 Market street.

Reorganization at Local Mutual.

Newark, N. J.—With the resignation of Lynn S. Card, C. J. Fitch comes to Newark as manager. Mr. Fitch is a film man of experience, and although this is his first connection with Mutual, his position of manager of the local exchange is evidence of the esteem in which he is held. Mr. Fitch started with the Texas office of the General, from which he drifted to the old Eclectic (Pathe), working out of their New York office. He next was with the International as assistant manager of the New York office. Although a newcomer in the city, Mr. Fitch is personally acquainted with a large percentage of the Jersey exhibitors. Since his coming the local exchange has been turned into a buying branch and will have a supply of film on hand.

C. J. Fitch.

Floyd H. Vogt has been added to the staff as roadman covering the outlying territory. Mr. Vogt was formerly with the World at both the Cincinnati and New York offices. He has done well in the short time that he has been here.

Succeeding Miss Anna R. Pollak is Miss M. Sullivan, who last week assumed the duties of office assistant and stenographer.

Arcade Theater to Go.

Newark, N. J.—The Arcade building has been sold. It will be torn down this spring as soon as the present leases expire. This means that the Arcade theater will be a thing of the past.

Monticello Doing Well.

Jersey City, N. J.—The Monticello theater, Monticello and Harrison avenues, has had one of the best years of its existence during 1916. The lessees of the house are Edward Burns and Harry de G. Robinson, while John F. Haberstroh is the musical director. S. M. Aughinbaugh is the house manager, and G. H. Doremus is in charge of the projection.

New Film Producing Company.

Newark, N. J.—The Erudite Film Manufacturing Company was organized here last week for the purpose of producing industrial, scenic and educational film. The new concern is a branch of the Advertising Film Company, and the offices of both are located in the Ordway building, 207 Market street. The officers of the recently formed company are Harry B. Papier, president; William D. Finkelstein, vice-president; Harold L. Miller, secretary and treasurer.

"The Crisis" at Camden.

Camden, N. J.—The Grand theater, Broadway and Mickle streets, which has been undergoing considerable alterations and renovations, will have its formal opening February 5 when the attraction will be "The Crisis." The house has been completely overhauled and the seating capacity increased to 1250. The manager of the house is Abe Greenberg.

Temple, at Kearny, to Open.

Kearny, N. J.—The new Temple theater, at Kearny and Bergen streets, will open Saturday, January 27, with Olga Petrova in the "Black Butterfly" as the initial attraction. The new house is owned by Maiser & Singer, 306 Market street, Newark. The house manager is Martin Singer.

Clark Handling Art Dramas.

Newark, N. J.—The Modern Feature Photoplays, Inc., which handles Art Dramas in this territory, is under the management of Robert S. Clark. Mr. Clark was formerly manager of the B. S. Moss local office in the Proctor theater building. Mr. Clark is also sole agent for northern New Jersey of the "Mutt and Jeff," "Hans and Fritz" cartoon comedies.

Suit Over Metro in Maritime Provinces

Specialty Import and Standard Film Discussion Deprives Local Theaters of Metro Films for a While—Matter to Be Settled.

By Frederick F. Sully, 68 Lansdowne Ave., St. John, N. B.

ST. JOHN, N. B.—The Maritime Provinces are now without Metro productions as the result of an injunction secured by the Specialty Import Limited against the Standard Film Service Limited, former agents for Metro in this territory. Jules H. Wolfe, manager of the local exchange of the Standard Film, is not releasing any Metro subjects here, with the exception of the Metro Drew comedies, which are booked in St. John, Halifax, Sydney, Truro and New Glasgow. R. G. March, resident manager for the Specialty company, has not so far been able to secure any of the Metro releases, which are going out from the Montreal office, but it is said that the difficulties will be adjusted within a week or two, and that the Specialty people will be the sole distributers for Metro. They have secured the lithographing material for Metro releases, and are waiting only for shipment of the goods before beginning a campaign to recover some of the business that went to other exchanges while the Standard people were unable to supply their regular patrons.

Mr. Wolfe is now handling the Metro Drew comedies, and has closed contracts with the Imperial theater, St. John, the Casino, Halifax, the Roseland, New Glasgow, and the Gayety theater, Fredericton, for first runs for the five-reel Henry W. Savage production, "Robinson Crusoe," which is to be seen here shortly. He is also arranging for the Triumph Film corporation's production, "Would You Forgive?" featuring Holbrook Blinn and Clara Whipple, and the seven-part drama, "The Masque of Life." The war feature, "Alsace," with Mme. Rejane as the star is also to come into the territory. The legal entanglements of the Standard and Specialty people directed from the Montreal offices upset not a few programs in the provinces, but normal conditions have returned.

Summer Resort Theater Closes.

St. Andrews, N. B.—Owing to the big falling off in business due largely, it is believed, to war conditions and the fact that an inactive winter is generally the rule at a summer resort, E. R. Chase has been obliged to close his Bijou theater for the remainder of the season. St. Andrews, as the site of the big C. P. R. hotel, Algonquin, is a thriving and busy center six months of the year, but is scarcely able to support a picture house in the dead of winter.

Wolfville, N. S.—W. M. Black, proprietor of the opera house, is among the Nova Scotian exhibitors who have recently signed up for the new Paramount program.

Liverpool Opera House Opens.

Liverpool. N. S.—Bartling and Mulhall, who overbid J. J. McGarrigle of St. John for the Liverpool opera house for business last week with the special Fox feature, "The Battle of Hearts." Liverpool is a sea-faring town, and the Fox nautical production proved a big drawing card. The new members of the industry got possession of practically a new building, and were not obliged to make any repairs or alterations. They installed a new machine, and are soon to add another to their equipment.

C. N. Powers Buys Gem Theater.

Yarmouth, N. S.—C. N. Powers, formerly of Fredericton, and who has been running the Green Lantern theater in Middleton in addition to other houses in Bear River and Weymouth, has bought the Gem theater in this city and will open here early in February in competition with the People's theater, owned and managed by K. Kelty.

Frank Mack Stops Over.

St. John, N. B.—Frank Mack, booking agent for the Strand theater, Halifax, and an associate partner of J. M. Franklin, the new lessee of the St. John opera house, was a recent visitor in the city while en route to New York to arrange several stellar attractions for the opening program of the local house, which closed for repairs and renovations last week, and will open under new management the middle of February.

Improving the Lyric at St. John.

St. John, N. B.—F. G. Spencer has announced that the Lyric theater will close for several days in February while extensive repairs and renovations are rushed ahead. The seating capacity will be increased from something around 600 to more than 750. A new lighting system will be installed, and general repairs will be made in the body of the theater. It is also to be painted throughout, and new scenery added to the stage equipment. The house will be closed only while work is progressing in the orchestra and balcony. Other improvements can be made without interfering with business.

Local Business Feels Winter Slackness.

St. John, N. B.—R. Allan Christie, of the local Canadian Universal office, was among the motion picture men present at the opening of N. W. Mason's new Roseland theater in New Glasgow. Mr. Christie was present as the representative of the Universal Company, which service Mr. Mason is using in his new house. While in the vicinity he called on W. J. King, proprietor of Alexandra Hall, Lunenberg, N. S., on C. Walfield, at Bridgewater, and S. N. Bartling, at Liverpool. Mr. Christie reports that Nova Scotian exhibitors are experiencing a slight falling off in business since the holidays.

St. John, N. B.—Bert Silberstein, of the local office of the Famous Players, has just returned from a two weeks' trip through Nova Scotia and along the North Shore. He found business to be only fair in the smaller centers. It is evident, he said, that a lull has followed the big holiday rush, which was the heaviest in years.

Maritime Business and Personal Notes.

St. John, N. B.—J. M. Franklin, manager of the Strand theater, Halifax, and lessee of the St. John opera house, which is now closed for repairs, was a recent visitor in the city, directing some of the work on the auditorium. It is expected that the opera house will resume business within two weeks or ten days, as the work is being rushed for an early opening, but no date has been definitely set for a reopening.

St. John, N. B.—Harry Price, representative for the Monarch and Artcraft in Canada, with headquarters in Toronto, has returned to the head office after a thorough canvass of this territory. He said that business appeared to be flourishing, and that houses in Halifax, Truro, New Glasgow and Sydney have signed contracts for the Monarch and Artcraft features.

St. John, N. B.—Frank Spe tron, formerly shipper with the local office of the Standard, has joined the office staff of the Famous Players as assistant to Joe Lieberman, who is assistant manager.

St. John, N. B.—Walter H. Golding, manager of the Imperial theater and president of the Maritime Provinces Motion Picture Exhibitors' League, was a recent business visitor in Montreal, visiting the B. F. Keith theater located there.

Pictou, N. B.—Solomon Soffe, owner and manager of the new Palace theater, has just returned from a business trip to St. John, where he looked over some of the serials now being offered by the exchanges. Mr. Soffe has been in the business but a very short time, yet he is thoroughly convinced that serials are among the best business-getters, and his policy is to keep a good one constantly before his patrons.

St. John, N. B.—R. G. March, resident manager for the Specialty Film, has just returned from a trip to Montreal, where he conferred with L. E. Quimet, general manager for the Canadian offices. Mr. March states that his company at Montreal has taken over the St. Denis theater, the largest in Canada, with a seating capacity of 3,000.

St. John, N. B.—Carl Crawford, St. John manager for Fox, has just returned from Montreal, after making arrangements for a greater number of films to come into this territory.

Davis Will Rebuild the Grand

Definite Plans Are Not Made Public Except That a Finer Structure Will Rise in the Place of the Burned Grand Opera House—Lyric Was Also Consumed—Fire Caused Block That Kept Other Theaters Closed Three Days.

From Pittsburgh News Service, 6016 Jenkins Arcade, Pittsburgh, Pa.

PITTSBURGH, Pa.—The great fire which destroyed half of the central business and amusement block of the city on the morning of January 27, with a loss of over $2,000,000, swept away Pittsburgh's theatrical landmark, one of the oldest and most notable houses in the country, the Grand opera house. Along with the Grand went the Lyric theater, which occupied part of the opera house building. Both were owned and operated by the Harry Davis Amusement Company as moving picture theaters of the highest type. The second heaviest loss by the fire was sustained by the Davis interests, on the Grand opera house building the loss being $300,000, and on the Lyric theater, $15,000. Both were covered by insurance.

During more than half a century of its existance the Grand and its predecessors on the same site, staged the greatest ligitimate productions, later stock, then vaudeville and lastly big feature pictures. Pittsburgh's theatrical history is practically contemporary with the history of the Grand opera house.

Following the fire Mr. Davis, who is head of the Harry Davis amusement company and other Davis enterprises, issued the following statement after a consultation with his associates: "On the ruins of the Grand opera house will rise a finer structure. The walls will be razed at once, and, of course, a new building will be erected just as quickly as our plans can be drawn and the work of reconstruction can be got under way. It is too early yet to discuss the plans in even a cursory way, for with the problem of clearing away the debris uppermost we have not even remotely discussed the details of such improvements as the requirements and our enterprise may dictate when we are able calmly to go into smaller things. At present we are occupied with the infinitely more important problem of taking care of our large clientele and conserving their comforts and interests during the rebuilding process. We shall get to the details with promptness, however, and what we do will be worthy of Pittsburgh and her important present and still more important future.

Cameraphone and Columbia Closed for Four Days.

Pittsburgh, Pa.—Due to the closing of part of Fifth avenue, from Wood to Smithfield street, for three or four days following the fire, the Cameraphone and the Columbia theater, both leading picture houses, were compelled to suspend operations. The Olympic and Minerva theaters, although in the same block, were outside the danger zone and were unaffected.

Frank Lauer Buys Rex.

Barnesboro, Pa.—The attractive Rex theater, Barnesboro, Pa., has been purchased by Frank Lauer, a well-known local business man from the firm of Griest and Clark. Mr. Lauer is making plans for extensively remodeling the Rex during the early Spring. John Wolff, of Ebensboro, is associated with Mr. Lauer at present, and will look after the bookings. The Rex uses Universal service, serials and Red Feather features.

Frankie Mann Gets Hearty Reception.

Pittsburgh, Pa.—Frankie Mann, star of the Ivan production, "The Sex Lure," has been accorded a splendid welcome during the past week at the various theaters in Pittsburgh and surrounding territory, having appeared in person at the Olympic theater, Fifth Avenue, the East End Cameraphone theater and other leading houses. Everywhere Miss Mann and her pleasing talks were received with great display of appreciation. The entertainment for Miss Mann while in the city included a brilliant reception and concert at the Conservatory Studios, McCane block. Miss Mann gave a brief talk on studio life and made a decidedly favorable impression by her beauty and pleasing personality.

National Book "Jockey of Death."

Pittsburgh, Pa.—The National film booking service, 804 Penn avenue, Pittsburgh, the new company handling films on the groupe basis, has just concluded arrangements whereby the firm will have exclusive booking privileges on the International adventure series, "The Jockey of Death," during February, and it is going strongly. The National is also handling with much success 300 feet of film showing the big fire in Pittsburgh, having secured the exclusive rights on the subject outside of Allegheny County.

R. C. Roshon Representing Quality.

Johnstown, Pa.—The Quality film company, 404 Ferry street, Pittsburgh, has appointed R. C. Roshon, of the Roshon photoplay service, Johnstown, Pa., as agent for the Quality's line of features in the central part of the state. The Roshon exchange will also handle the "Yellow Menace" serial.

Harry A. Lande, manager of the Quality Film Company, returned from New York recently, where he closed negotiations whereby the company will release a big feature a month, the first of which will be the Mutual production, "Glory," featuring Kolb and Dill.

Pitt Theater's Big Program.

Pittsburgh, Pa.—Managing Director William Moore Patch, of the Pitt theater, Penn avenue and Seventh street, Pittsburgh, announces that at the conclusion of the run of D. W. Griffith's "Intolerance," which opened about the middle of December and will be concluded either the second or third week in February, a number of strong film attractions will be presented. The first will be William N. Selig's "The Crisis," which will be shown three or four weeks. Following this Mr. Patch has arranged for "The Barrier," and has under consideration two other subjects, "Twenty Thousand Leagues Under the Sea," the great Universal production, and "Joan the Woman," the big Lasky feature.

New Lyric Theater Sold.

Altoona, Pa.—The handsome new Lyric theater, Altoona, Pa., has been sold by W. H. Orr to a prominent Altoona business man, I. Slutzker. The Lyric has a seating capacity of 600, and has been in operation since last May, doing a thriving business.

A program of high-class feature productions will be continued by the new owner.

Charleroi, Pa.—The Palace theater, Charleroi, Pa., which was recently remodeled and the seating capacity increased to 800, has changed its policy somewhat. A program of vaudeville is now being put on in addition to Universal pictures, and Manager R. L. Bernhardt reports that business is very good.

Theodore Mikalowsky Visits.

Arrested for Showing "Purity"

Cleveland Exhibitor Shows Film Passed by Censor and Is Arrested—Mayor Had Given Him Warning Not to Show Any Picture With Nude—Fact That State Board Has Passed Film Complicates Matter.

From M. A. Malaney, 616 Columbia Building, Cleveland, O.

He has caused the arrest of Harry Du Rocher, manager of the Gordon Square Theater, where "Purity" was scheduled to run the week of January 22.

"Purity" was shown two weeks, first run, at the Strand theater. The mayor took his stand during this showing, but did not interfere with the run of the film in that house, explaining that since it had started he would allow the engagement to be finished. But he sent policemen all over town to notify managers not to book any more films showing nude women.

The owners of "Purity," the Masterpiece Film Attractions company, claim that the Gordon Square booking was made before the ban was issued. So the Gordon Square manager started to run the picture. Officers on hand did not interfere at once with the exhibition. In the meantime the parties concerned asked for an injunction to restrain police from interfering with the production. This was at first denied by Judge Gott, but the next day granted. That was Thursday, and that night the police seized the print of film, the injunction as issued, stating that the police could not interfere with the theater's run "other than in the arrest of the manager or confiscation of a duplicate film."

Saturday a warrant was issued for the arrest of Du Rocher, charging him with showing an immoral picture. The warrant further said that "Purity" was "immoral, impure and indecent, tending to corrupt the morals of the city."

Passed by the State Censors.

This unusual situation in a city which is supposed to be protected by the state censors act tends to prove the oft repeated assertion of exhibitors that state censorship is only a bluff and that every city in Ohio has the power, by an old law, regulating photographs, to go over the censors' head.

The exhibitors claim censorship is not needed, because this law is sufficient to give the police the power to stop the showing of indecent pictures.

It is probable that there will be a long fight made by the film owners and Du Rocher and that some very interesting things concerning censorship, of which the public is ignorant, will be brought to light. The Masterpiece Film Attractions company have a certificate issued by the Ohio censors passing the film, and they believe they have certain rights gained thereby, for which they will fight.

I. M. Sacheroff Crushed to Death.

Cleveland.—While running to catch a car, I. M. Sacheroff, an exhibitor, slipped upon the icy pavement on Euclid avenue in East Cleveland, fell under the car and was crushed to death.

Mr. Sacheroff was 28 years old, and was manager of the Lucier theater, in Lakewood, a suburb. He was a relative of S. J. and Sam Deutsch, owners of the Sun theater.

Strand Theater Sold.

Fostoria, Ohio.—The Strand theater has been sold by A. H. Yonker to Harry Earl.

Fire in Booth; No Panic

Alliance, Ohio.—An automatic arrangement in the booth of the Ohio theater, in Alliance, prevented a panic when fire broke out in the booth last Saturday night. The patrons filed out quietly and there was no trouble. Four reels were burned and the loss is given at $600.

Corona Theater Will Be Remodeled.

Cleveland, Ohio.—The Corona theater, in downtown Cleveland, which was damaged by fire a few weeks ago, is being remodeled and will be reopened the first week in February.

Cincinnati News Letter

By Kenneth C. Crain, 307 1st Nat. Bank Bldg., Cincinnati, O.

"Patria" Makes Good Beginning.

CINCINNATI, O.—The widely-heralded International serial, "Patria," released through Pathe exchanges has begun its Cincinnati career, starting at Keith's theater, with subsequent runs at numerous local and nearby houses. The story of the serial is also appearing in the Cincinnati Commercial Tribune, and the popularity of the author, Louis Joseph Vance, is certain to mean that the installments will be eagerly read, with consequent benefit to the exhibitors of the film. The missionary work done on behalf of the serial is perhaps the best that has been seen, extending from largely-attended special advance exhibitions, one of which was held in Cincinnati, to attention by leading magazines; and the attendance at the houses showing the serial has been correspondingly good.

"The Salamander" Draws Well.

Cincinnati, O.—The drawing value of well-made pictures based on successful books or plays was demonstrated in the first run of Owen Johnson's novel, "The Salamander," at the Colonial, the interest which the story attracted when running in serial form in a popular magazine being accurately reflected in the hit made by the photoplay at the Fifth Street house

Splendid Week's Business for "War Brides."

Dayton, O.—The management of the Auditorium theater report a splendid week's business for "War Brides," the film dramatization of Mme. Nazimova's sensational one-act play, featuring the star herself in her original role. The Auditorium booked the production for the entire week of January 14, at advanced prices, and during the entire period of the run full houses prevailed.

Another Colored Man Sues.

Youngstown, O.—The refusal of the Strand moving-picture theater, one of the finest houses in Youngstown, to sell a ticket to a colored man, it is alleged by the latter in a suit filed, is worth $5,000 in damages. The gentleman of color, thus hurt in his feelings, says that he attempted to buy a ticket to the Strand's show, but was refused by reason of his race and color. Several cases of this nature have arisen in Ohio lately, but no recovery is reported in any of them as yet, as the right of an exhibitor to restrict the clientele of his house to any reasonable extent is pretty well recognized.

Canton-Massillon W. C. T. U. Finds Sunday Shows.

Canton, O.—The Canton-Massillon federation of the W. C. T. U. has taken on a large job, according to recent reports. It has resolved, after discussing the matter, to accomplish the closing of moving picture houses on Sunday. Nothing radical in the way of immediate action is contemplated, however, it is understood, quiet work among the public being first on the program. It is a remarkable fact that while it has been judicially determined that moving-picture houses are theaters within the terms of an old Ohio statute forbidding theatrical performances on Sunday, public sentiment is so strongly in favor of unobjectionable amusements on Sunday, theatrical and otherwise, that the old law remains a dead letter.

Piqua's Bijou Puts in Asbestos Curtain.

Piqua, O.—P. F. Sarver, owner of the Bijou theater, which is used for dramatic and vaudeville performances as well as for moving pictures, has installed an asbestos drop curtain, in accordance with the requirements of the state. While the house was closed to make this change, other improvements, including some freshening of the decorations, new scenery and so forth, were made and the Bijou is much brighter in consequence.

Grand at Hamilton Improves Projection.

Hamilton, O.—The management of the Grand theater gave convincing demonstration recently of its desire to give patrons the best that is to be had in pictures by employing Sam Needham, the well-known projection expert, to bring their projecting up to perfection. Mr. Needham spent ten days on the job, installing a Minusa screen, and new lenses and carbons in the projecting machines, the result being pictures whose steadiness and clearness could not be improved upon The new screen was used for the first time in the showing of the great Ince production, "Civilization," with Max Hollender, the special Ince operator, on the job.

New Theater Corporation at Marion.

Marion, O.—The Marion Grand Theater Co. has been incorporated by local interests, with a capital stock of $25,000 to operate a modern moving-picture house. W. D. Clark, J. D. Guthery, N. F. Tilton, F. A. Stengel and Charles L. Justice are interested.

Kentucky News Letter

Ohio Valley News Service, 1404 Starks Building, Louisville, Ky.

"Alice in Wonderland" Makes a Big Hit.

LOUISVILLE, Ky.—"Alice in Wonderland," one of the special children's pictures recently shown at the Strand theater, made such a big hit that the management received so many inquires for a re-showing of the picture that it was brought back and shown again on Saturday, February 3. This is said to be a real children's picture, and one of the best for special children's picture shows that has ever been exhibited in the city.

Big Organ for the Mary Anderson.

Louisville, Ky.—Shortly after taking over the Strand theater, the Keith interests removed the large Wurlitzer instrument from the Mary Anderson to the Strand, and are preparing to install a larger and better instrument in the Mary Anderson. Manager Lee Goldberg has just returned from a trip to Dayton, O., where he inspected a large Wurlitzer instrument which has just been installed in the new Keith picture theater in that city.

May Change Child Labor Law.

Louisville, Ky.—It developed in a trial in the Juvenile Court last week that parents and guardians have been guilty of evading the state child labor law through making false statements as to date of birth. Under the existing law any employer who hires a child of less than sixteen years of age, in any capacity, is held liable, and may be haled into court at any moment, while the parent or guardian is not responsible under the law. Plans are now under way for amending the law at the next session of the legislature. Exhibitors in the future will be very careful in hiring any juvenile performers, as Commissioner Cohen has made the provisions of the law very plain.

Sunday Church Services in Paducah Theater.

Paducah, Ky.—The Paducah Ministerial Association has accepted the invitation of Manager Rodney Davis, of the Kozy theater, to use the house for church services on Sunday afternoons or nights, and has made arrangements to hold a series of union services. As Sunday shows are not permitted in the city Mr. Davis will undoubtedly get the good will of a lot of residents through his action. This is the first time in the history of the city that a theater has been used for such purposes.

James N. Fisher Weds.

Versailles, Ky.—James N. Fisher, proprietor of the Lyric theater, and Miss Alma Lancaster, were recently married at Fort Thomas, Ky., and following a short honeymoon returned to the city. The bride's father, M. P. Lancaster, is one of the leading merchants of Versailles, and is president of the Commercial club.

Theater Notes of Interest.

Louisville, Ky.—Due to bad weather and lack of attendence the Shawnee theater, on West Broadway, was closed for a few days during the snow period, but is back in operation again.

Louisville, Ky.—Following a short run with vaudeville the Hippodrome theater has returned to regular picture programs, finding that most of its patrons preferred pictures.

Louisville, Ky.—"The Crisis" made such a big hit at the Mary Anderson theater, at fifty cents and twenty-five upstairs, that before the close of the first week the management announced that the picure would run a second week at the same price.

Louisville, Ky.—After being dark for a day or two the Gayety theater is again in operation under the management of Hanly C. Ragan, receiver, appointed by Judge Samuel B. Kirkby to take charge of the affairs of the Adger Amusement Co., which is financially embarrassed.

Louisville, Ky.—The management of the Rex theater is figuring on a higher class of pictures, and to make admission prices five and ten cents instead of five cents. If this plan is carried out the choice seats in the house will be reserved at ten cents.

Louisville, Ky.—The Casino theater was fortunate enough to book an old picture entitled "The Life of Buffalo Bill," which was shown for four days at ten cents, shortly following the death of the great plainsman. While the picture was not a new print, it was one that had never before been shown in this district, and went big.

Louisville, Ky.—J. C. Connor, feature representative of the Indianapolis office of the Mutual Film Corporation, and Bill Engelman, manager of the same office, were recently in Louisville.

Louisville, Ky:—William Ratz, of Indianapolis, representing George Kleine and K-E-S-E productions, recently completed a trip through Kentucky extending to the Southern or Tennessee line, reporting excellent bookings. The Kentucky territory which was formerly handled exclusively out of the Cincinnati office has been split up, according to Mr. Ratz, who is now covering a considerable portion of the state.

Louisville, Ky.—Simon Switow, nephew of M. Switow, of the Switow Amusement Co., who was formerly connected with that company, and also manager of the Crystal and Cozy theaters, is planning to go to Arkansas to embark in the moving picture exhibiting business.

Irvine, Ky.—Clyde Gaines expects to break ground before long on a new theater to replace the building recently burned. He reports that the new structure will be fireproof throughout, and considerably larger than the old one.

Colonial Theater at South Bend, Ind., Burns

From the Indiana Trade News Service. 861 State Life Bldg., Indianapolis, Ind.

SOUTH BEND, Ind.—The Colonial theater, 127-129 North Michigan street, one of the prettiest photoplay houses in this section, was destroyed last week by fire, the origin of which has not been determined. The loss is estimated at $40,000, with practically no insurance.

The fire is supposed to have started in the basement of the building, a three-story structure, shortly after midnight, but it was not discovered until nearly 2 o'clock in the morning. The fire had gained considerable headway when the firemen arrived and it was not until three hours later that the flames were under control.

The building was owned by Haines Egbert, of Goshen, and the lease on it was held by G. R. Summers, proprietor of the Colonial theater and the Beyer Floral company, which used the second floor. The third floor was occupied by the club rooms of the South Bend lodge of Eagles.

Frank G. Chapman, manager of the motion picture house, believes that the fire was the work of an incendiary. He said he would not think it was of incendiary origin if the fire had not started in the basement, despite the fact "that this is the third blaze the theater has had in a like number of years."

Only a few months ago Mr. Chapman took charge of the theater, had it remodeled and refurnished and made into one of the coziest, most attractive photoplay houses in South Bend. The seats in the place were all replaced with models of the latest type and so arranged that there were only five seats to a section. Wide aisles and numerous exits were converted, making the theater one of the safest and best ventilated ground floor amusement places in the city.

The lobby and main entrance were beautified with an electric fountain, flowers and shrubs, easy divans, comfortable chairs and resting parlors, with toilet conveniences, were open at all times for the convenience of the women patrons. Handsome framed pictures of the screen stars, oil paintings and artistically grouped photos enhanced the lobby and resting rooms.

A mammoth Seaberg pipe organ and mechanical player which was installed in the theater recently was destroyed in the fire. The organ cost $6,000 and was the only article on which insurance was carried. A number of canaries which delighted patrons of the house as they passed through the lobby into the theater proper, perished.

Potis K. Anton Will Manage the Royal.

Newcastle, Ind.—Potis K. Anton, has arrived here from Mansfield, O., to take up his duties as manager of the Royal theater, owned by J. T. Kaler, who recently purchased the Alacazar theater. Mr. Kaler will devote the greater part of his time to the management of the latter house, which is now known as the Kaler. Mr. Anton has had several years' experience in the motion picture business and is a gentleman of pleasing personality.

Changes in Theaters.

Warsaw, Ind.—B. E. Miller, of Decatur, has purchased the Colonial theater here from J. V. Wingartner and will take possession at once. Mr. and Mrs. Miller have moved to this city and will occupy the flat above the theater.

Swayzee, Ind.—Bert Axline has sold his photoplay house, "The Joy," to Elmer Wright, a local busines man. Mr. Wright took possession last week and announced that he would continue the theater along the lines adopted by the former management. Mr. Axline has returned to his former home at Nobesville.

Circle's Manager a Photoplaywrite.

Indianapolis, Ind.—"Truthful Tulliver," the Ince production featuring William S. Hart, which was shown at the Circle theater last week held more than a passing interest for Indianapolis film lovers, because the scenario for the photoplay was written by S. Barrett McCormick, manager of the Circle. Before Mr. McCormick came to Indianapolis he was a member of Ince's personal staff in California, where, among other plays that have since been produced, he wrote the vehicle for Hart in the picture "The Disciple." "Truthful Tulliver" drew crowded houses during its presentation in this city.

Warsaw's Royal Grand Opens.

Warsaw, Ind.—The Royal Grand Theater, Warsaw's new photo play house was opened last week to capacity houses. New decorations and fixtures and two new motograph picture machines have made a real up-to-date amusement place out of the old Grand. The new theater is under the management of Miss Katharine Deaton.

Evansville, Ind.—The Novelty Theatorium will be closed all week beginning Monday while workmen engage in making extensive improvements on the interior. When the building is opened again a week later there will be a new balcony and the entire interior will be fireproofed with steel. In addition there will be new features in the service, better pictures and a line of popular vaudeville.

Muncie Judge Moves for Sunday Closing

Prospects for Open Sabbath Shows in Muncie, Ind., Are Not Bright—All Kinds of Mercantile Houses Are Affected.

MUNCIE, IND.—Muncie is to be a closed town in the future, at least as far as Sundays are concerned, if the instructions and recommendations made recently to the county grand jury by Judge William A. Thompson, of the Delaware circuit court are carried out.

Judge Thompson, who was elected in the November election on a good government league ticket, was the special prosecuting attorney in the recent so-called city graft cases in Muncie.

He has now advised the grand jury to make crusades against all the motion picture houses, tobacco and confectionery stores and all lines of merchantile houses opening on Sundays and holidays. The method advised by the court was indictments and prosecutions thereof.

Men connected with the motion picture industry say they believe the recommendations will not be strictly followed.

Columbia City's Lyric Now a Beauty.

Columbia City.—The Lyric theater which was recently purchased by Pavey & Reagan from Franklin H. Clevenger, is now in shape for the formal opening which will be held early in February. The place has been remodeled and redecorated and is now one of the prettiest motion picture houses in the city. The new owners say their policy will be to give clean pictures for clean-minded people. The bill at the Lyric will be changed daily and the features will be drawn from the Paramount, Mutual, Blue Bird and Kleine exchanges.

Week Runs at Toronto's Regent

Manager Roberts Finds That It Takes Two Days to Properly Advertise a Good Feature—Says He Can Get Just Enough First Class Films to Keep His House in Week Run Attractions—Mouth Advertising the Best.

By W. M. Gladdish, 1263 Gerrard St., East Toronto, Canada.

TORONTO, Ont.—Manager Roland Roberts of the new Regent theater has decided to run both feature attractions and short subjects by the week, starting at an early date. He believes that the weekly bill will fill the bill to a nicety When the house (one of the largest here) was opened last August the attractions were changed three times each week. It was not long before a two-a-week schedule was adopted and now a once-a-week change. He figures that he can get just enough big pictures to maintain an ultra-high standard on this basis with the ground-floor price running at twenty-five cents.

Mr. Roberts declares that when he has presented an exceptionally good feature for only three days it was only on the third day that the box-office showed big business. In other words, it took two days for word to be passed around about the excellence of the picture. With a good feature running all week, Roberts believes that he will reap the benefit of mouth-advertising, the value of which cannot be placed too high, in his estimation. It is also his belief that if a good attraction is worth three days it is worth a whole week. By running a picture six days a manager indicates his personal faith in a feature.

Manager Roberts anticipates that a weekly schedule will give him an opportunity to see every feature before he books it and to arrange the very best orchestral effects for a booked attraction. He will also book the best comedies and news reels to accompany the features throughout the week.

One of the coming attractions for the Regent will be the first run of a new war picture, "The Canadian Army in Action and the Advance of the Tanks." This is a Government film, three prints of which are handled in Canada by Jule and J. J. Allen. These prints will be released simultaneously in Toronto, Montreal and Ottawa on Monday, February 12. The Regent will, of course, show this picture for a week.

New Theater in the Province.

Toronto.—D. R. McKinnon, late of the Sudbury Opera House, has decided to go into business for himself. He is scouting around Northern Ontario for an opening and will build a theater on a site to be selected.

Toronto.—The Patricia theater, the latest picture house of London, Ontario, is due to open in February. It has a seating capacity of one thousand and it is a brand new structure.

Toronto.—The first of the players to be signed by Canadian National Features, Limited, the new Canadian producing company, with studio at Trenton, Ontario, has arrived in Toronto. She is Sadie Weston. Actual production is to be started by this company on February 15, it has been announced.

Toronto.—The Princess theater, the splendid new theater in Sault Ste. Marie, has been opened by its manager, Mr. Gibson. This theater has a seating capacity of 900 and the cost of construction was $60,000.

Ontario Will Not Change Licenses This Year

In 1918 There Probably Will Be a Readjustment of License Rates to Fit Different Seating Capacities—May Soon Change Ticket Tax Method.

TORONTO, Ont.—Toronto government officials deny that any step is to be taken to provide for the exaction of a tax on the receipts of moving picture theaters of the province. They admit, however, that there is under consideration a rearrangement of the provincial license system so that annual fees will be collected according to the size of the theaters. At present all Toronto theaters, large and small, pay a license fee of $150; theaters in towns of 15,000 or under pay an annual fee of $100, while theaters in centers of 3,000 population or less contribute $75. The adjustment of the fee system, as proposed, would be according to the seating capacity of a theatre and not according to the size of the city or town in which it is located.

Robert Newman, inspector of motion picture theaters in Ontario declares, however, that nothing will be done this year, according to present plans, but that the provincial fee system, starting with 1918, may be altered. In other words, the picture houses may be left alone for a year.

There are indications that tickets for the war tax, collected from patrons of places of amusement, will be abolished within a few months. After this step is taken the people will be called upon to pay the tax without the use of tickets and the sworn statements of theater managers will be accepted as proof of the payment of the special levy.

Pathe to Show No Hearst Films in Canada

Ban Was at First Put on All of the Specialty Import Films on Account of the Objectionable Partner—Agreement Reached.

TORONTO, Ont.—For more than one week the Ontario Board of Censors refused to examine any Pathe picture submitted to it by the Specialty Film Import, Limited, Pathe distributers in Canada, as a result of the announcement of the amalgamation of the Pathe interests in the United States with the International. The ban was raised, however, after L. E. Ouimet, general manager of the Specialty company, had taken strenuous efforts to show that Pathe releases in the Dominion would not be influenced in any way by the amalgamation and that no attempt would be made to place any release of the other maker on the Canadian market through Pathe channels, the said party being not in favor with the Canadian Government.

Ontario Business Notes.

Toronto, Ontario.—Regal Films, Limited, distributers in Canada of World and Educational releases, have arranged to handle Victor Moore comedies.

Toronto.—Manager Bernstein of Loew's Yonge Street theater, Toronto, has booked L-KO comedies for regular release in his theater.

Philadelphia News Letter

From F. V. Armato, 144 No. Salford St., West Philadelphia, Pa.

PHILADELPHIA, Pa.—First run photoplays introduced during week of Feb. 4 will include at the Stanley, Irene Fenwick and Owen Moore in "A Girl Like That,'" for the first half of the week, and Vivian Martin in "The Wax Model" for the remainder. Douglas Fairbanks in "The Americano" will be presented all week at the Arcadia, having been adjudged of sufficient drawing power at a private showing. At the Victoria, Ethel Barrymore in "The White Raven" will divide honors with Viola Dana in "Threads of Fate." At the Regent, Anita Stewart in "The Glory of Yolanda" will be the principal offering. Kitty Gordon in "Vera the Medium" will be presented at the Strand together with Anita Stewart in "The Glory of Yolanda." Mary Pickford in "The Pride of the Clan" is booked at the Belmont for a solid week, and at the Great Northern for three days. Gladys Brockwell in "One Touch of Sin" is listed for one week at the Broadway.

B. Amsterdam Buys Exchange.

Philadelphia, Pa.—Masterpiece Film Attractions exchange, at 1325 Vine street, has been bought by B. Amsterdam, whose activities here both in the exchange and exhibiting line are well known. L. Netter and Sol Lesser were joint principals in the sale, and it is reported that the transaction includes the following features: "Purity," "The Spoilers" (new edition); "Cabiria," "Neptune's Daughter" and others. Several new masterpictures are expected shortly to be added to the releases.

Pennsylvania State Rights Not Sold.

Philadelphia, Pa.—It was announced some weeks ago that a local firm (The Stanley Company) had secured the Pennsylvania rights of D. W. Griffith's masterpiece, "Intolerance." This report appears to have been erroneous, as the local newspapers have since been notified by Mr. Griffith that the rights have not been disposed of, and that the production will not be seen in any other theater in Philadelphia this season except the Chestnut Street opera house, and will never be seen in any theater below the Chestnut Street opera house's standard.

Serials in Philadelphia.

Philadelphia, Pa.—The new serials are meeting with good success in this territory. Mrs. Vernon Castle in "Patria," in addition to being shown at B. F. Keith's big time vaudeville theater, has been booked by Pathe at the Arcadia, where it will be shown all week. Francis X. Bushman in "The Great Secret" has been secured by the management of the Strand. "The Purple Mask," "Grant, the Police Reporter," "Hazards of Helen," "The Crimson Stain Mystery" and "The Lass of the Lumberlands" are the most popular continued photoplays of the hour, and all seem to be doing well.

The Imperial Puts in an Organ.

Philadelphia, Pa.—Recognizing the importance of good music for the proper interpretation of films the management of the Imperial theater, at Sixtieth and Market streets, is preparing to instal in the house a Kimball organ of the latest type. The instrument which will be the last word in organ construction will alternate with the orchestra in supplying musical programs.

Lancaster Theaters to Clean Up.

Lancaster, Pa.—An appeal to all the exhibitors of this place has been made by a letter signed by the officers of many civic improvement associations and by some of the prominent exhibitors themselves. It voices a desire for cleaner and better pictures, and appeals to civic pride.

Buffalo News Letter

By Joseph A. McGuire, 5 Lewis Block, Buffalo, N. Y.

Pathe's New Manager Organizing Office.

BUFFALO, N. Y.—The Buffalo branch of the Pathe is now comfortably established in its new headquarters at 269 Main street. J. W. Fuller, who was recently appointed local manager, and his staff have been working night and day to put the place in first-class order and success has crowned their efforts. The shipping, poster and inspection departments and film vault are centralized on one floor. This arrangement facilitates the efficient handling and shipment of both posters and films. There is a spacious office at the front, and back of the office is a reception room for exhibitors. A projection room may be built later. The exchange is well lighted and has a satisfactory elevator service. The vault has a 6,000-reel capacity and has plenty of daylight.

"Our films are turned out in good condition," said Mr. Fuller, "and according to the reports we receive from the exhibitors, do not have to be inspected before going into the machines."

V. H. Hodupp, who co-operated with Mr. Fuller in reorganizing the exchange, is now making a tour of inspection of the various Pathe branches. "Patria," the Pathe serial, featuring Mrs. Vernon Castle, has been booked for fifteen weeks, seven days a week, at Shea's vaudeville theater.

Ira M. Mosher National Delegate.

Buffalo, N. Y.—Ira M. Mosher, manager of the Palace theater, Buffalo, who attended the Albany convention of the New York State exhibitors, will be among the state delegates to the exhibitors' national convention.

Buffalo Personal Notes.

Buffalo, N. Y.—John R. Childs of the World Film is listed among the new members of the Buffalo Screen Club.

L. T. Rogers, president of the Selznick Pictures of Buffalo, Inc., recently called on A. I. Shapiro, local manager.

F. W. Bettes of Buffalo recently gave a moving picture show in the high school auditorium of Depew, N. Y.

Arthur Lee, representative of the Gaumont studios, recently visited the Mutual, Buffalo. He was making a study of the local territory.

Local 229 Has New Officers.

Buffalo, N. Y.—The Moving Picture Operators' Local, No. 229, of Buffalo is enjoying prosperity, with a membership of about seventy-five members. The officers for this year are: President, Henry DeVernill, Sr.; vice-president, J. Smith; treasurer, Michael Ostroski; secretary, Leo Hager; recording secretary, Clarence Snider; business agent, Arthur Geddes; sergeant at arms, Paul Wenich.

Bushman Aids Sunday Opening.

Buffalo, N. Y.—While in Buffalo to attend the Screen Club ball, Francis X. Bushman was interviewed on the Sunday show question. Mr. Bushman said in part: "Go back a few years and see if the conditions were not worse before the Sunday moving picture shows than they are now. Why, I know a saloonkeeper who used to have three bartenders working for him on Sundays. Then they built a picture house next door to his place, and now on Sundays his business is poor and he tends bar alone."

Two Problems in Michigan

Refusal of Union Operators to Carry Films To or From the Exchanges and the Proposed State Censorship Are Two Special Difficulties to Be Faced—Sentiment for Anti-Censor Mass Meeting.

By Jacob Smith, 503 Free Press Building, Detroit, Mich.

DETROIT, MICH.—Two things still confront the exhibitor of Michigan—the carrying of film in Detroit and the censorship question. Both are still unsettled. The carrying of film is one that will be entirely up to each individual exhibitor, judging from the investigations made during the past week by the writer.

Here is the viewpoint of the film exchange: "In no city in the country do exchanges deliver film; all out of town exhibitors pay express on film both ways; why then should we change the precedent in Detroit by giving local exhibitors preference and paying for the film?" Exhibitors realize that the exchanges cannot be made to pay for the delivery of film, hence are now endeavoring to work out some method to have the film delivered most economically. The union operators will not carry film—that is the ultimatum of the union; the exchanges will not pay for the film—that is the ultimatum of the producers; so it boils down to where the exhibitor must stand the burden. The expense proposition is not as serious as to how to get the film to and from the theater with the least possible inconvenience. That is the big question. In other words, how about some theater way out in the outskirts of the city who gets a one or two-reel subject, both from different exchanges? How is he going to get it back that same night?

Exhibitors Want It Delivered.

On the other hand, this is the viewpoint of the exhibitor: "When you buy anything in the world, you have it delivered free of charge. However, we are willing to make our own arrangements for getting the film from the exchange to the theater, but it is certainly up to the exchange to take it from the theater back to the exchange. In other words, exhibitors feel it is a fifty-fifty proposition; both should stand half of the expense and thus not throw the burden on either side.

Regardless of how the matter is individually adjusted, the union operators will discontinue the carrying of film on February 26.

Sentiment for State Meeting on Censorship.

As for the censorship proposition. A meeting of the president and secretary of the Michigan state association was held at Lansing on January 30, but owing to the lack of the executive committee, nothing could be done. There was sentiment for a state meeting some time the last part of February, but Secretary Moeller does not want to call such a meeting until he is sure that there will be interest enough to get the members to attend. Some of the leading Detroit exhibitors have offered to start a fund outside of the league for the purpose of fighting censorship. John H. Kunsky is willing to contribute for all of his theaters, and others have offered financial aid. During the present week something definite will be decided regarding the matter of getting up a censorship fund, so that by our next issue we hope to make a definite statement in the matter. All of the Detroit exchange managers have written to their offices in New York giving them full information about the bill and the sentiment of Michigan exhibitors and it is believed that at the proper time the producers will send a representative to Lansing to make known the objections to state censorship.

George Weeks Leaves Metro.

Detroit, Mich.—George Weeks has resigned as manager of the Metro exchange, 73 Broadway, Detroit, and has temporarily been succeeded by J. O. Brooks, manager of the Madison exchange. Both exchanges are now practically under the control of John H. Kunsky, so that Mr. Brooks will actually represent the Kunsky interests by managing the Metro business in Michigan. It is the intention later to appoint a permanent manager for the Metro exchange, in order that Mr. Brooks can give all of his time to the exploitation of the big features to be released through the Madison exchange.

As for Mr. Weeks he returns to the Universal company as district manager for the central west, with headquarters at 101 West Fort street, Detroit.

Managerial Shift Announced by Kunsky.

Detroit, Mich.—John H. Kunsky announces the following shift in his managerial department: M. H. Starr, formerly manager of the Washington theater, will go to the New Madison theater, which opens about March 1, and which will be his largest and finest theater.

Thomas D. Moule remains at the Alhambra; M. W. Schoenherr, at the Columbia; Dwitt C. Shook ta the Strand, and L. G. Gardner, as manager of the Empress, Garden and Royal theaters.

Butterfield Opens State Film Co.

Detroit, Mich.—Col. W. S. Butterfield, who recently opened the State Film Co. exchange, 221 Broadway Market building, Detroit, officially announces that he has secured the Michigan rights to "Civilization," "The Mormon Maid" and "The Libertine."

Percentage Basis Planned by Kunsky.

Detroit, Mich.—Regarding the future of bookings of pictures secured for Michigan by John H. Kunsky, it is understood that they will all be played with exhibitors on a percentage basis and not a flat rental. Mr. Kunsky believes it is better for the exhibitor to lease pictures on a percentage plan rather than paying for them at a straight rental. On the percentage plan, if the weather is bad he gets the exchange to share his loss.

To Form a Co-operative Booking Combination.

Detroit, Mich.—There was a meeting held in Detroit last week by a number of state exhibitors for the purpose of forming a co-operative booking organization. Those who attended were Charles Garfield, of Flint; S. A. Moran, Ann Arbor; Lew Barnes, Kalamazoo; D. D. Cady of Lansing and Messrs. Lipp and Cross of Battle Creek.

Notes and Personal Items.

Detroit, Mich.—Will M. Elliott, formerly publicity representative for the Paramount exchange in Detroit, has resigned to become affiliated with the Detroit exchange of Vitagraph in a similar capacity.

Two new Detroit theaters held their formal openings on Saturday, January 27—the Dawn at 1910 Gratiot avenue owned by John E. Niebes, and the Russell at 1145 Russell street owned by Messrs. Hall and Mitchell.

Col. W. N. Selig of Chicago visited Detroit last week on his way east. He called on A. J. Gilligham and the K-E-S-E exchange.

Feature Booking in New Orleans

Saenger Amusement Gets Triangle for Its New Strand to Be Opened This Month —Paramount Goes to Triangle Theater—Artcraft Is Now at the Globe Theater —Pearce Is Sitting Steadily in the Boat.

N. E. Thatcher, 3801 Canal St., New Orleans, La.

NEW ORLEANS, La.—Some new trails have been blazed in photoplay politics in new Orleans in the past few weeks, and the results of the efforts of managers of theaters to entrench themselves behind the best service are beginning to be made apparent. With the announcement of the early opening of the Strand theater and the promise that that place of amusement would offer the best in motion picture presentation, both as regards projection and accessories, for the approval of the best class of photoplay patrons in the city there was naturally speculation as to what service would be presented by the Saenger Amusement company in the Strand. An early report that the Strand would take over the Triangle program proved to be well founded.

Manager Boehringer of the Triangle theater has not been satisfied with service of the Keystone comedies, which were a part of the Triangle program. Frequent delays in the furnishing of new subjects per schedule caused annoyance. Manager Boehringer has secured the Paramount service for the Triangle theater and the change is to be made on February 18.

Changes in the plans of the new Liberty theater threatened to delay the contemplated completion of that structure by the Boehringer Amusement company, for it is the policy of Manager Boehringer to have that theater as near to perfection, when it is finished, as it is possible for human ingenuity to make it. Therefor the contract for the Artcraft pictures which had been held by the Boehringer interests for showing in the Columbia theater, pending the completion of the Liberty, was transferred to Herman Fichtenberg, and the Artcraft pictures are now showing at the new Globe and pleasing large audiences. "The Pride of the Clan," shown during the week of January 21, made an exceptionally good impression.

Meanwhile Commodore J. Eugene Pearce, at the head of the Pearce Amusements, has been sitting steady in the boat. With Metro and World features as headliners in his Tudor and Trianon theaters on Canal street, he has been doing a remarkably strong business. The World pictures have been forging to the front and arrangements are being completed to give them a four and five day, if not a week, run each. Commodore Pearce has weathered many a squall on the local motion picture field and he has never yet passed up the pork, no matter how choppy the sea.

It is expected that the Strand theater will open on February 15 and the event is being awaited with an unusual degree of anticipatory pleasure. Resident Manager Cornelius is on the ground and is looking after every detail that will add to the attractiveness of the theater and to the enjoyment of his patrons when the new theater opens.

Kerrigan Gives Cup to Winning Jockey.

New Orleans, La.—J. Warren Kerrigan made a four-day visit to New Orleans while on his tour of the country. He was the guest of Herman Fichtenberg while here and was accorded many distinctions. He talked daily at the new Globe theater and on Monday, January 22, the Business Men's Racing Association made the Kerrigan Handicap the chief attraction at the races for the day. Kerrigan presented a beautiful loving cup to the winner of the race.

Walthall and Charleson Stop Over.

New Orleans, La.—Henry B. Walthall and Mary Charleson, his co-star, who have been taking scenes for a forthcoming picture for K-E-S-E release at Baton Rouge and Mobile, spent a short time in New Orleans on Sunday and were accorded an exceptionally cordial reception by their friends. His recent showing of "The Truant Soul" here has sent the Walthall stock up rapidly and Miss Charleson has shared the popularity of the Southern star.

Rose Tapley Speaks Here.

New Orleans, La.—Rose E. Tapley, as an emissary of the Vitagraph company, spent Sunday and Monday in New Orleans, where she addressed large audiences at Pearce's Tudor theater, speaking in favor of better pictures. She made her strongest appeal to the ladies in the audience, and did not mince her words in the least when she made reference to the custom of women going to look at pictures that are known to be of doubtful character.

Local Theater Notes.

Donaldsonville, La.—Manager Boston of the Grand theater at Donaldsonville has just about completed the remodeling of his house, and when the work is finished he will have one of the coziest motion picture theaters to be found in this part of the country. The theater has been enlarged to seat 900 persons and all of the appointments have been made of the best.

Yazoo City, Miss.—Manager J. B. Devoto is putting the finishing touches on the new Star theater at Yazoo City and it will be ready for opening with a regular program of the best features on February 6.

How One Exhibitor Made a Marked Success

Julius Scharff.

NEW ORLEANS, LA.—Julius Scharff, manager of the Elk photoplay theater at New Iberia, is a manager who is broad enough and enterprising enough to make a big success of the motion picture business under the conditions as exist today. He wastes none of his energy in the vain attempt to readjust matters so that the exhibitor shall get all of the best of it. What he may think of the existing conditions is another matter, which has no place in the discussion here.

Manager Scharff's first concern in the operation of his theater is to secure and retain the confidence of his patrons. He makes it a point to keep them informed as to the merit of the pictures that are shown at his house. He is an extensive advertiser and he directs all of his publicity to the patrons of his shows. And he tells the truth about his pictures. If he is showing a production that he knows to be only an average one, he lets the show "drift" and get over the best it can. But if he tells his people that a show is worthy of their patronage they may depend upon it that such is the case. The people of New Iberia have implicit confidence in the word of Manager Scharff, and the result is that he has the only theater in a city of 10,000 and various attempts to divide the business with him by the opening of new houses have failed.

Another peculiar thing about Manager Scharff's methods is that he likes to pay what are considered big prices for his features. He never quibbles about the price of a picture and argues that he can make a better profit on a feature that costs him $50 a day than he can on a cheap product that he cannot afford to recommend. He knows pictures and he watches his program. Each week he will pick out the best shows that are to appear at his house and, regardless of what they are costing him, he will put his "steam" behind the good ones, leting the others drift.

It is related of him that a state right concern once wrote for him to return the "paper" which had been sent in connection with a certain release. Manager Scharff replied that the freight on the lumber would cost more than the paper was originally worth, and he wanted them to distinctly understand that any paper sent to him was immediately pasted up in the most conspicuous places. Mr. Scharff has no patience with the exhibitor who wastes his time in trying to get through on the "cheap" plan. He argues that such an exhibitor hurts the business all around, and especially does he injure the exhibiting end more than he does the exchanges or the manufacturer. His remarkable success in a town that is just the average Louisianians' thriving community would indicate that he is right. He promoted and built the Elk theater in 1907 at a cost of $50,000 and it is one of the finest theaters in the state. He has exhibited every feature of consequence that was ever produced and he keeps closely abreast of the show business, besides running a clothing store and being actively engaged in the oil business and other enterprises.

Atlanta Reel Fellows Take Over Screen Club

Club Organized on January 20 Has Remodeled and Refurnished the Screen Club's Quarters—Officers of the New Club.

By A. M. Beatty, 43 Copenhill Ave., Atlanta, Ga.

ATLANTA, GA.—The Reel Fellows' club, a new organization of moving picture and theatrical men in Atlanta, organized on January 20, has taken over the Screen club, which has been in Atlanta for some time. The entire top floor of the Walton building formerly occupied by the Screen club has been remodeled and new furnishings installed by the Reel Fellows' club.

Sam Denbow is president of the club, Carl Rowntree secretary and Joe Marientette treasurer. The house committee is composed of Eugene Winder, chairman, Alpha Fowler, Lew Adler, Leo Garner, Frank Freeman, Walter Price and Chas. Kessnich.

Besides film men of the south, business men of other lines are eligible for membership, and already a good number outside of the film industry have joined. Many features are being planned, the first of which will be an invitation dance in the ballroom of the club.

Atlanta's Lyric Home of Superfeatures.

Atlanta, Ga.—Mr. Wells has personally mapped plans for converting the Lyric into a first class theater. Its comforts and conveniences will make it more than popular with the great mass of people who are partial to pictures for entertainment.

Seats will be reserved for each afternoon and evening performance, just as is the custom in the leading theaters, and reservations can be made for any performance. The prices of admission will be the same for either matinee or night.

The Lyric will be opened on the afternoon of February 5, and the first offering will be "The Crisis." After "The Crisis" will come the Annette Kellerman feature, "A Daughter of the Gods," followed by pictures of this class each week.

Alpha Better Than a Cop.

Atlanta, Ga.—A policeman, in an effort to arrest Charles Jackson, a negro, at the corner of Whitehall and Alabama streets Sunday night, had to call for aid from Alpha Fowler, manager of the Strand and Vaudette theaters, who was passing at that time.

The negro was making an effort to strike the patrolman when Mr. Fowler interfered. The black offered no resistance when he was collared by the moving picture man, who used nothing but his bare fists in the capture. The cop didn't need O'Mega to aid him.

Kerrigan Visits Atlanta.

Atlanta, Ga.—J. Warren Kerrigan, idol of thousands was in Atlanta in person Wednesday, and remained until Saturday. He was at one of the local picture houses.

Mr. Kerrigan is touring the principal cities of the United States, appearing at various moving picture houses, meeting and talking to people from whom he has received letters.

Macon, Ga.—Ralph DeBruler, formerly of Atlanta, but now manager of the Capitol theater, Macon's theater deluxe, was in Atlanta Tuesday looking over some big features and comedies for his theater.

O. K. Bourgeois Takes Over Atlanta Film.

Atlanta, Ga.—O. K. Bourgeois, who was for several years connected with the Unity Film Service, has taken over the Atlanta Film Service, and is now located in the Hirsch building, where he is featuring western pictures.

A. C. Bromberg Opens Exchange.

Atlanta, Ga.—A. C. Bromberg, one of the best known and best liked film managers in the south, until recently manager of the International in Atlanta, has opened a film exchange which is called the Specialty Features Service, located in the Hirsch building.

Tennessee News Letter

J. L. Ray, 1014 Stahlman Building, Nashville, Tenn.

Warren Kerrigan Visits Nashville.

NASHVILLE, Tenn.—With the personal appearance of J. Warren Kerrigan in Nashville on January 29, the Knickerbocker theater enjoyed the busiest day of its existence.

The reception accorded the actor by the Nashville public would have done credit to a great American tragedian, but undoubtedly every ounce of the enthusiasm was warranted through the wide popularity which the screen favorite enjoys. Mr. Kerrigan told the World man that active production through his new company, which will be known as the Kerrigan features, will begin about the first of May.

Tenessee Tobacco Regions on Screen.

Clarksville, Tenn.—According to advices received from western manufacturers, local commercial organizations have been assured that camera men will be dispatched from one of the leading animated weeklies to picturize the agricultural resources of this section, and other interesting subjects.

Haslett Attends Chicago Meeting.

Memphis, Tenn.—Manager W. P. Haslett of the General Film, this city, attended a meeting of branch managers in Chicago, on January 30.

New Road Man for General.

Memphis, Tenn.—Effective January 22, E. D. Kirkpatrick became a member of the General Film road staff, traveling out of the Memphis office. The Memphis branch considers itself fortunate in securing the services of Mr. Kirkpatrick, who has during the past several years been connected with the sales department of Paramount, General (New Orleans) and Southern Metro, and much new business is expected from his affiliation with the Memphis General office.

Jackson, Miss., Theater Burns.

Jackson, Miss.—The main auditorium of the Majestic theater, one of the largest motion picture playhouses in the South, was completely gutted by fire shortly before daylight January 29.

The loss is estimated at $15,000, partly covered by insurance.

The film of "The Crisis," Winston Churchill's historical drama, slated for premier production here Thursday night, was destroyed.

The building is owned by Mr. John Livelar, of Canton, and was leased to a local corporation, of which R. E. Kennington is the president and principal owner.

It was announced that the work of repairing the damage will be started as quickly as possible, and it is hoped to have the playhouse ready for opening within sixty days.

The fire was under good headway before an alarm was turned in. A telephone call was first sent to the fire station, but the department did not respond until alarm was turned in.

One of the most regrettable features of the fire was the total loss of a large stock of music owned by Mrs. Sarah B. McLean, leader of the orchestra, and recognized as one of the most skilled musicians in the South.

It is estimated that Mrs. McLean's musical library was worth fully $3,000, and no insurance was carried. The collection represented the work of nearly twenty years, and much of it cannot be replaced.

The destruction of the Majestic deprives Jackson of a popular place of amusement and recreation for several weeks, which is deeply regretted, but the most unfortunate phase of the fire is the heavy personal loss sustained by Mrs. McLean, the orchestra leader.

Only a musician, or a true lover of music, can really appreciate what the loss of a good musical library means. In this instance, the loss sustained is the painstaking work of years, a labor of love as well as of professional equipment, and it was a fact well known among musicians that Mrs. McLean had one of the finest musical libraries to be found in any theater in America.

Furthermore, no musician ever manifested greater pride in her work than Mrs. McLean. The musical program at the Majestic each day has been one of the chief contributing factors to the popularity of the playhouse.

Missouri Faces Censorship

Expensive Measure Introduced in the State Legislature Calls for Three High Salaried Officials to Be Appointed—Plenty of High Paid Help—All Expenses to Be Allowed Extra—Full Banning Powers.

By A. H. Giebler, 4123 Westminster Place, St. Louis, Mo.

JEFFERSON CITY, MO.—Senate bill No. 79, introduced by Senator McClintic in the 49th session of the general assembly of Missouri, provides for the creation of a board of censorship which will have power to censor all films, slides, stereopticon views, posters, banners and other advertising matter used in connection therewith.

The bill provides for the appointment by the governor of a board composed of two male and one female member; one male member to act as chairman, with a salary of $3,000 a year, the female member to be vice-chairman at $2,500 a year, and the other member to act as secretary at $2,400 a year. The bill further provides for the appointment of a chief clerk and two assistants, four stenographers, four inspectors, three operators, two messengers and two patchers.

The annual salaries of the above-named officers and employes total up to $28,860, and the board will be empowered to spend five thousand dollars in addition to this in employing such other employes as may be necessary.

Each member, according to the bill, will be allowed all expenses of whatsoever nature incurred in carrying out the provisions of the act. The act, if passed, will give the board power to examine slides, views, posters, banners and advertising matter relating to films, and to supervise all films to be shown in Missouri, and the board may approve such films as are considered moral and proper, and disapprove all considered obscene, indecent, and immoral, or such as may tend to debase or corrupt morals.

Any member of the board, or employe, may enter any place where pictures are shown, and all are empowered to prevent the exhibition of any film not authorized by the board. For examination of each set of views, or for each reel of pictures of one thousand feet, a fee of one dollar will be imposed.

All theaters will be charged an annual inspection fee under the act. Houses seating 250 and under will be taxed $25; those seating between 250 and 500, $50; between 500 and 750, $75; all houses seating over 750, $100.

Pageant Theater Changes Hands.

St. Louis, Mo.—The Pageant theater, at 5851 Delmar block, one of the finest and most completely equipped theaters in St. Louis, was sold last week to Charles and Spyros Skouras and Gustave Gallanis. The Pageant has been in operation since it was built in August of 1915, by the Pageant amusement company, of which A. E. Morelock was the active head and manager. The Pageant is one of the largest theaters in the west end district, is very modern and up-to-date throughout, and caters to a high class of patrons. The house seats 1,400 persons, and an all feature program, which will be maintained by the new management, has been the rule.

The Skouras Brothers already control two theaters, the Lafayette, at Lafayette and Jefferson avenues, and the Olympic, at 15th and Market streets. They have been very successful in the amusement business.

Rotary Club Out For Censorship

Flint, Mich., Rotary Club Makes Formal Petition for Local Censorship—Is Against Pictures That Depict "Crime, Indecency, Immorality, Disease or Anything Degrading"—Mothers' Club Attacks Problem in Different Way.

Frank H. Madison, 626 S. Wabash Ave., Chicago, Ill.

FLINT, Mich.—The mayor and common council of Flint were called upon to appoint a local board of censors in a resolution passed by a unanimous vote by members of the Rotary club. This resolution was in accordance with a resolution passed at the last convention of the International Association of Rotary clubs, urging every Rotary club in the world to take similar action. The resolution is as follows:

"Whereas it is the earnest desire of the Rotary club of Flint that the evils attendant upon the showing of certain moving pictures should be remedied to the end that no thought of crime, disease, indecency, immorality, or degradation may be instilled in the minds of the young directly or indirectly by means of moving pictures or vaudeville performances; be it

"Resolved, that manufacturers of films be urged to produce more pictures which can be used for the instruction of the young and for their innocent amusement; and be it further

"Resolved, that the mayor and common council of Flint be requested to appoint a board of censors who shall have power and whose duty it shall be to prevent the display in picture theaters, on billboards or anywhere else within the city of pictures that depict crime, indecency, immorality, disease or anything degrading. Also to prevent vaudeville performances that in the opinion of the board of censors are immoral, indecent and degrading. Be it further

"Resolved, that our president be instructed to appoint a committee of this club to co-operate with other agencies in the city for the accomplishment of this purpose; be it further

"Resolved, that a copy of the resolution be sent to the officers of the various civic clubs in the city of Flint and the secretary of International Assn. of Rotary clubs."

Mothers of the city are going at it in a different way. The Oak Street Mothers' club has gone on record as approving motion pictures for their children, and will seek the co-operation of managers including educational films on Saturday mornings. The Flint Sorosis is working along the same line.

Books Seven Fine Pictures.

Bay City, Mich.—Seven of the George Kleine classics have been booked for seven successive Wednesdays at the Aladdin theater through the educational committee of the Bay City Teachers' club, and will be shown to eighth grade and high school pupils for 25 cents for the entire series. The plays are to be studied in the high school before or after the pictures are shown. The seven pictures booked are: "Quo Vadis," "Spartacus," "The Lion of Venice," "Othello, "Anthony and Cleopatra," "Julius Caesar" and "The Last Days of Pompeii."

Sunday Shows Free in Central City.

CENTRAL CITY, NEB.—No organized effort to combat the Sunday moving picture show has been apparent. Protests against their operation have been numerous, but there is no ordinance forbidding these performances. The only resource is to invoke the aid of a "blue law," but this particular statute is so broad that a rigid enforcement would mean closing the drug stores and other places of business. Attempts to pass an ordinance against Sunday shows may be made. So far two members of the city council have said they would vote against such an ordinance.

Omaha Strand Gives Children's Show:

Omaha, Neb.—In line with the movement for special shows for childen which is conspicuous in Omaha at present, Manager Thomas, of the Strand theater, and the Omaha Bee co-operated for an entertainment for childen under 15 years of age. The subject selected for this occasion was the sunshiny Triangle, "The Habit of Happiness," with Douglas Fairbanks. Mrs. W. S. Knight, of the Omaha Woman's club committee, which has charge of the special programs, suggests children write to her telling what they would like to have shown.

Theater Notes of Interest.

McCook, Neb.—Manager Martin, of the Temple theater, played "The Birth of a Nation" for a three-day return engagement to big business.

Omaha, Neb.—The Monroe theater, 2555 Farnam street, was leased for three days to Rev. Charles W. Savidge, who exhibited a seven-reel feature, "Charity," at 25 cents, and turned the proceeds over to the Omaha House of Hope.

Hebron, Neb.—The Hebron opera house has been purchased by H. G. Wilson.

Medina, N. D.—John Bernett has leased the Langer hall, nad will open a moving picture theater.

Towner, N. D.—Charles Hultman has opened a moving picture theater here.

Napoleon, N. D.—The Pastime theater has been closed.

What Rockford Thinks of Censor Salaries

"Sand Bag the Local Picture Shows to Give Somebody a Job"—"Will Prove About as Popular as a Full-Blown Case of Smallpox."

By Frank H. Madison, 628 S. Wabash Ave., Chicago, Ill.

ROCKFORD, Ill.—Mayor W. W. Bennett, in introducing his "annual message to the city council," says:

"I wish to suggest to your honorable body, that you set aside the necessary amount in your appropriation ordinance to pay for the services of a censor board, consisting of three members, at the rate of $3 per day per member, and amend your amusement ordinance to charge all moving picture houses fifty cents per film for the work of censorship."

The mayor finds no support in the local papers for his plan. The Rockford Star says:

"The clause in his message in which he suggests a censor board for the moving picture shows he has given no thought to that subject and is merely using the picture shows as a political football. If Mayor Bennett or any one else really desires to know about the pictures and the plays to be presented on the local screens the information can be secured without paying out an additional cent. Better critics and more responsible critics than Rockford can produce are already at work. * * * To sandbag the local moving picture shows in order to give somebody a job which is not needed would be an absurdity. This, however, does not mean that the pictures should not be censored, and that, along with public dances, dress on the street, reckless auto driving, flirting, gossiping, bootlegging and all the other ills and omissions of humanity should be stopped immediately. But it would hardly be fair to the average citizen to impose a fine on him whether he is guilty or not. According to the mayor's plan, he would soak the moving picture manager who did not need a censor with the hope that some day he would need one. A self-respecting moving picture manager needs a censor about as much as a total abstainer needs a license drink. To make the manager pay for one whether he needs it or not would be just as fair as to make a total abstainer pay for a booze inspection tag. * * * If Mayor Bennett wants to know what people think about it he should announce himself as a candidate on a straight anti-movie platform. Possibly that is what he had in mind."

"Mayor Bennett's plan to mulct the moving picture theater for close to $10,000 more in taxes," declared the Register Gazette, "will prove about as popular as a full-blown case of smallpox."

The Rockford Republic decries the overloading of municipal government with paid commissions. "The recommendation calling for a censor is an instance, aggravated by the knowledge that Mayor Bennett takes no sympathetic attitude towards the picture houses in Rockford, but insists on treating moving picture managers as criminals to be judged before the fact, and practically to be fined through the shouldering of a 50-cent tax for every film shown, the fine to go to his recommended board of censors who are to be paid three dollars a day for doing what the people of Rockford are perfectly capable of doing for themselves without the aid of censors. * * *

"The Mayor's plan is not an act of faith in the people, it is an expression of distrust of every man, woman and child who enters the picture parlors of Rockford."

Mayor Stops Proposed Sunday Show.

Stonington, Ill.—Steps toward opening the Gem theater for Sunday shows failed to meet the approval of Mayor Irvin and the Gem was dark on what was announced as the opening date. The ad which aroused the storm of protest read as follows:

"'Naked Hearts'—A religious five act Bluebird feature photoplay supreme. Owing to the demands from our patrons for a show on Sunday nights, the management has decided to play high-class Bluebird features on these nights. Plays that teach morals, and having seen them, you will look on the brighter side of life, and strive to be better men and women. Don't censor our Sunday shows until you have seen them. Yours for a clean, high class amusement on Sundays.—Gem Theater Company."

New Incorporations.

Clark Theater Company, Chicago; capital, $2,500; incorporators, Joseph Grein, Andrews J. Ryan, Irvin I. Livingston.

The Dixon Amusement Company, Dixon; capital, $50,000; incorporators, Will H. Hommel, J. H. Adkins, L. J. Stark.

New Theater and Interesting Changes.

Benton, Ill.—Whittington & Cluster have sold the Mars and Auditorium theaters to George Colovos Brothers Company of St. Louis, the change becoming effective Jan. 29. George Colovos will be manager. Cluster retains the management of two houses at Christopher and Whittington, and will devote his time to his duties as circuit clerk.

Weldon, Ill.—Charles E. Costley has purchased a new projector and will resume moving picture shows here.

Joppa, Ill.—Ernest Dye has opened a moving picture theater here.

Sullivan, Ill.—The Jefferson theater has been leased to Frank Smith.

Winder, Ill.—W. J. Huff and Everett

Askins of Hammond have purchased a moving picture theater here. Mr. and Mrs. Askins will be in charge.

St. David, Ill.—Manager Higgins, of the Opera House, has booked ten Paramount features for ten Sunday nights.

Rockford, Ill.—"Intolerance" was booked for seven days at the Grand Opera house starting February 5.

Wisconsin Notes of Interest.

Menomonie, Wis.—The Orpheum theater, managed by W. J. Pierce for four months, has been leased by William S. and Fred H. Smith, owners of the Grand. They will devote most of their time to the Orpheum, using the Grand only on Saturday and Sunday nights. Mr. Pierce has gone to Rochester, Minn., where he will manage several moving picture theaters and the opera house.

Merrill, Wis.—B. F. Gipple and E. H. House have sold the Grand and Cosmo theaters to R. C. Krueger. He has been in charge of the projection for several years. He will operate the Grand and open the Cosmo only three nights a week.

F.I.L.M Club in Minneapolis

Eighteen of the Local Exchange Managers Form a New Organization to Promote Harmony Between Exhibitor and Distributor—Will Adopt the Hoy System of Credits—Hope for a Hundred Per Cent. Organization.

By John L. Johnston, 604 Film Exchange Building, Minneapolis, Minn.

MINNEAPOLIS, Minn.—Eighteen exchange managers of this city organized a local F. I. L. M. Club at a meeting at the General Film exchange, January 23. The new club is formed with an idea of bringing about more harmony between exchange and exhibitor, and, although exhibitors will not be admitted to membership in the organization, the body will do its utmost to aid them in their movements. The Hoy system of reporting will be adopted by the new club in an effort to bring about more efficiency, and the organization aspires to be one of action not merely utterances.

W. K. Howard, manager of the Greater Vitagraph exchange here, was chosen president at the initial meeting of the club and J. B. Levy, manager, World exchange, vice-president; Fred S. Meyer, manager of the General exchange, is secretary- treasurer.

A membership committee made up of W. K. Howard, chairman; Harry E. Graham, K-E-S-E; J. F. Cubberley, Universal, and Manie Gottlieb, Favorite Features, has begun a campaign for a 100 per cent. organization, a possibility and probability. The date for the next meeting of the club will likely be Tuesday, Feb. 6.

Arrest Men Accused of Film Filching.

Minnesota May Put Sunday Lid On.

Bismarck, N. D.—William Langer, new attorney general of North Dakota, has issued a statement that the "blue law" will be enforced to the letter in the future. Exhibitors of the state had hoped they could successfully battle this ordinance which puts a ban on Sunday shows as well as the sale of cigars, et cetera. Although several exhibitors did their utmost to put through a bill in the legislature providing for the showing of films on Sunday, lack of organization cost the Dakotans the defeat. Iowa, according to advises from Des Moines, is about to put a stop to Sunday shows, and it is not unlikely that puritanical Minnesota will do likewise if her sister states make "the lid" tight. The Minnesota legislature is now in session, and if an anti-Sunday show bill is proposed it will take some stiff argument from the exhibitors' organization to "kill" it.

Film Exchanges Get Space in Post Office

Minneapolis, Minn.—Postmaster E. A. Purdy has agreed to give local film exchanges space in the post office building for re-winding, inspecting and shipping films by parcel post. Mr. Purdy has explained the new rules to exchangemen, and if his offer of space is accepted it will save exchanges considerable time, for they can get "returns" as soon as they reach the post office, inspect them "on the spot" and mail them out again within a few minutes time.

What Exhibitors Are Doing.

The New Garrick began a week's run of "Panthea," featuring Norma Talmadge, Jan. 28. This is the first Selznick picture to be run at the New Garrick.

"The Libertine" will make its debut in the Northwest Feb. 4, at the Strand here. A big advertising campaign has been carried on by the Strand for several weeks on this feature. The Strand will shortly run "The Truant Soul."

"The Witching Hour" began a week's run at the Metropolitan legitimate house) here, Sunday, Jan. 28. The American Maid Film Co. controls the feature in this territory.

Bushman and Bayne in "The Great Secret" have proved big drawing cards at the New Grand, where first run of the Metro serial in Minneapolis is being shown.

It is said that Elliott & Sherman are contemplating the purchase of the Unique, Minneapolis' oldest vaudeville house.

St. Paul, Minn.—The Blue Mouse has secured the return of first run Fox features; Theda Bara in "The Darling of Paris" attracted overflow houses each showing the first half of the week of Jan. 28.

Clara Kimball Young in "The Common Law" showed the week of Jan. 28 at the Strand at 25 cents. "The Crisis" is due to begin a week's run at this theater Feb. 4, and "A Daughter of the Gods" will follow about two weeks later.

The Orpheum theaters of St. Paul and Minneapolis have booked "Patria" to run in connection with their high class vaudeville.

The Verdi, St. Paul, has booked "Pearl of the Army."

The Hamline and the Faust have secured "The Secret Kingdom" serial for future showing.

Theater Changes and New Houses.

Malta, Mont.—Raymond Robins, manager of the Orpheum theater here, has purchased the Orpheum theater at Glasgow, Mont.

Butte, Mont.—The Rialto theater will be opened to the public within a few weeks.

Butte, Mont.—Thomas McDonald is the new manager of the People's theater here.

Medina, N. D.—John Bernett will open a picture theater here shortly in the former pool hall.

Dawson, N. D.—The local electric light company is contemplating the erection of a picture theater here.

Employees of the Universal and Bluebird exchanges here were guests at a luncheon at the Vendome hotel recently, given them by Manager E. A. DeBeau, of the Caughn theater, Saux Centre, Minn. Mr. DeBeau told his guests that he appreciated "service," and urged them to eat hearty. And how those Universal-Bluebirds did eat!

Colorado Has New Censor Bill

Unexpected Bill in Both Houses of the State Legislature Would Make Attorney-General Act as Censor—Charge Would Be $2 for Every Reel of Film Viewed—Salaried Chief Clerk—Details of the Proposed Measure.

From E. C. Day, Denver Times, Denver, Colo.

FROM an entirely unexpected source the moving picture censorship bugaboo has bobbed up in Colorado. Two bills were introduced in the State Legislature in as many days providing for the establishment of state-wide censorship.

On Wednesday, January 24, State Representative Houtchens of Weld county presented the first of the censorship bills in the lower branch of the assembly. Senator Knauss of Denver followed on Thursday, January 25, with the second bill of the same character. In both instances the legislators announced that the intended laws were introduced by request. Each declared that he did not know who was back of the censorship agitation.

The Houtchens Bill designates the attorney general of the state as the official censor and allows him to name one inspector at a salary of $1,500 a year. The Knauss Bill calls for the appointment of a board of three, each to be paid a yearly salary of $2,000.

In other respects the proposed new laws are the same. Each imposes a tax of $2 on every film shipped into the state for exhibition and provides a penalty for the showing of any moving picture that has not been passed by the state censor.

Both measures provide that they be put into effect July 1, 1917.

Rocky Mountain Screen Club Takes Notice.

No apprehension is felt among Denver film men over the introduction of the censorship bills, but as a precautionary measure the legislative committee of the Rocky Mountain Screen Club was held January 26 and a campaign of opposition to the planned legislation was outlined. The committee is composed of W. E. Foley, attorney; H. H. Buckwalter, representing the exchanges, and George Killam, representing the exhibitors. President Harry Nolan of the Screen Club attended the session. It was decided to enlist the aid of exhibitors in every city and town in the state in the building up of sentiment that will bring pressure to bear on each of the representatives against the bills.

The Houtchens Bill follows in part:

The Houtchens House Bill No. 132.

Be it enacted by the General Assembly of the State of Colorado—

Section 1. That on and after July 1, 1917, it shall be unlawful for any person, firm or corporation to exhibit or use any moving picture film or reel unless the said film or reel shall have been examined and approved by the attorney general of the State of Colorado, as hereinafter provided for; provided, that nothing in this act shall apply to moving pictures, films or reels used exclusively in institutions of learning in Colorado.

Sec. 2. In addition to the duties now imposed upon the attorney general of this state, it shall be his duty to examine all moving picture films or reels intended for exhibition within this state, and approve such as he shall find to be moral and instructive, and to withhold his approval from such as tend to debase or corrupt the morals. Upon such moving picture films or reels examined by him, and which shall be approved by him there shall be stamped or written a certificate signed by him . . . giving the date of such approval.

Sec. 3. (Says the attorney general shall keep an accurate record briefly stating his reasons for withholding his approval of such bills as are not approved.)

Sec. 4. For each examination made by said officer, he shall receive the sum of $2 or more for each moving picture film or reel. . . . all such fees shall be turned over to the state treasurer. . . . The attorney general may employ one clerk at a salary of not to exceed $1,500 per annum, and one or more clerks at not to exceed $3 per day. . . .

Sec. 5. That the said attorney general shall have full power and authority to supervise and regulate the display of all moving picture films . . . however, in the case he should disapprove of any moving picture film or reel, the person, firm, or corporation offering the same for examination may have the same examined by a commission consisting of the governor, secretary of state and superintendent of public instruction. . . .

Sec. 7. Any person, firm or corporation exhibiting or permitting to be exhibited any unapproved moving picture film or reel shall be guilty of a misdemeanor, and shall be fined not less than $25 or more than $100, for the first offense, and not less than $100 for each subsequent offense. Each unapproved moving picture, film or reel exhibited, and each day the same shall be exhibited, shall constitute a separate offense . . .

Will Test Dallas Censorship Ordinance

Kulp Brothers Retain Attorney W. H. Atwell—A Questioned Picture Is Shown and An Arrest Made and Fine Imposed—Will Appeal.

By M. E. Flanagan, 516 N. Ervay St., Dallas, Texas.

DALLAS, Tex.—Censorship in Dallas will be tested out by Kulp Bros., owners of the state rights for "The Little Girl Next Door." Former U. S. District Attorney W. H. Atwell has been retained. The state law has been held valid, Mr. Atwell points out, and has provided for a review by the courts. The Dallas ordinance makes the decision of the Board of Appeals a finality.

Attorney Atwell divided the contest into two questions for convenience or discussion, the first being the validity of the ordinance and the second the quality of the film. The owners contend that it is calculated to "stem the tide of immorality" and has been commended by the ministerial association of Houston and by the city Welfare Board of Waco.

In discussing the city ordinance, its constitutionality was assailed as a "violation of the liberty of speech and press and also as a confiscation of property without the due process of law." The right of anybody but the legislature to legislate in this respect was also contested.

The picture was run a few minutes at the Hippodrome theater; the proprietors were then arrested and fined in the city court. This was merely a formal proceeding in order that the case might then go as a test case to the court of criminal appeals.

To Attach the "Ungodly Sabbath."

Dallas, Tex.—An organization has been formed in Dallas by ministers and laymen to have the legislature pass a more stringent law forbidding any sort of amusements on Sunday. Rev. J. B. Cranfill was elected permanent president. He was formerly editor of the Baptist Standard, Dallas. Rev. R. C. Armstrong, Fort Worth, permanent general secretary.

Baseball and dances will be attacked. The association especially calls attention to the "ungodly operation of Sunday" movies. A committee was appointed to obtain a rigid state censorship law. It is called Inter-Denominational Lord's Day Commission with state-wide affiliations.

New Theaters Hereabouts.

Austin, Tex.—J. J. Hegman, who owns and operates the New Crescent at Temple, is erecting a $25,000 picture play house in Austin.

Cleburne, Tex.—J. F. Green, of the Yale theater, Cleburne, was in Dallas recently, buying furniture and fixtures for his house, which he is remodeling at a cost of $20,000.

The Strand theater, Dallas, is now in the hands of Mr. Macklehearn, the first motion picture exhibitor in Dallas. He opened with the Dixie many years ago.

San Antonio's Local Managers' Branch.

San Antonio, Tex.—San Antonio has a flourishing local amusement managers' branch. Ed. Ramond of the Majestic is the president; Jack Burk of the Opera house, vice president, C. R. Wyler recording secretary, and W. J. Lytle, treasurer.

New Hippodrome Officers.

Fort Worth, Tex.—P. C. Levy, of the Hippodrome theater, is the new president of the Fort Worth amusement men's organization. Other officers are H. G. Cotter, vice president, W. S. Crisbie, recording secretay, and Jos. Phillipps, treasurer.

R. H. Campbell Back from Organization Tour.

Robert H. Campbell has just returned from an organization tour of the state. He is the executive secretary and organizer for the Texas Amusement Managers' Association, which now has branches in Houston, San Antonio, Waco, Fort Worth and El Paso. The work will be carried on until the entire state is organized.

To Start Suit Over Censor Fees Paid Kansas

Film Men Contend That Films Are in Interstate Commerce and Therefor Should Be Inspected at Cost—Interesting Case.

TOPEKA, KAN.—The suit involving money paid by film exchanges for censorship in Kansas, will come up before the supreme court of Kansas, in the February term. This suit is technically by the attorney general, against the superintendent of public instruction and the film exchanges, to show cause why they should not pay the money, now held in escrow, into the state treasury. If the suit fails, it is believed the present censorship law will automatically die.

The contention of the film men is that the business is interstate commerce; and dependence will be placed on the federal law that any inspection of interstate commerce must be at cost. It is possible that, if the film men win, all the money paid to the state, as well as the $40,000 held in escrow, may be paid back, which will amount to possibly $100,000, the total paid for censorship in the past three years.

Kansas City Metro "Keeps 'Em Working."

Kansas City, Mo.—The Metro exchange at Kansas City has enlarged its quarters by about 1,500 square feet. The new room is 20 feet high, three walls covered with pigeon holes for posters and advertising. The room was specially prepared, a door being cut through a concrete wall into the north half of the Ozark building for the purpose. Charles W. Harden, manager of the exchange, is said to have increased the business a large percentage in the past few months; and one of the ways of doing it was by keeping every film working, with every bit of advertising material for it, easily at hand. At first sight, the big room for the posters looked like a waste—but it was an economy, since each bit was right at hand when needed.

"We haven't a dead subject on hand," said Joe Warner, the Missouri salesman. "When a picture shows wear, we get a new print, and keep it working—and we have just as good paper, slides, and so forth for the old ones, as the new ones."

With the growth has come also a larger shipping force.

A new vault for the films has been built, of concrete, outside the main structure of the Ozark building; and a new inspection room provided.

Local Exchange Notes.

Kansas City, Mo.—"Buffalo Bill" has come with peculiar timeliness into the Kansas City territory, and the K-E-S-E exchange is besieged with applications. Kansas City is Western, quite; and the death of Buffalo Bill hit this district hard. There are all sorts of movements for monuments and memorials in progress and all the kids are plunging more energetically than ever into wild west play. It is not only the smaller theaters, that cater to the children, that want the picture; some of the highest class in the city and territory.

C. M. Hood Now With Universal.

Kansas City, Mo.—C. M. Hood is a new man with the Universal, on the road; he formerly was with Henry W. Savage productions, as business manager, and in the past had been on the stage.

Kansas City Star Show a Success

Big Convention Hall Fails to Hold All Who Come to See "Snow White" at Newspaper's Free Show—In the Two Days 70,000 Attend—Expected to Boost Good Shows Locally and Help "Family Nights."

By Kansas City News Service, 205 Corn Belt Building, Kansas City, Mo.

The Kansas City Star's "Snow White" party at Convention hall, Jan. 27 and 28, set a record for attendance at a moving picture exhibition in two days—and probably also for singe performances. There were about 70,000 persons who saw the picture at the five showings, the largest attendance being Sunday afternoon, when more than 17,000 were in the hall.

The entertainment provided by the Star had been intended primarily as a complimentary holiday gift to the children of the city, and a recognition of the popularity of the moving picture industry. A. F. Seested, business manager of the Star, had some such notion in his mind last fall. "Snow White" was shown, and it immediately appealed to him as the vehicle for the Star's entertainment. The Star secured the assistance of Frank L. Newman, proprietor of the Regent and the Royal theaters, who made all the detailed arrangements.

There were eight machines used, so that there was no interruption; four prints of "Snow White" were rented for the two days, with the machines and operators and assistants. A special orchestra of twenty-five pieces under the direction of Leo Forbstein, director of music for Mr. Newman.

There were no reserved seats. The first show was Saturday morning at 10 o'clock. Long before that hour the 11,000 seats in the hall were all occupied, and four or five thousand were either standing, or sitting on steps or other people's laps. In the boxes, for instance, where there were 8 seats, children were packed tight—usually children from the poorer districts of the city. Saturday afternoon the crowd numbered 16,000—on a conservative estimate. Saturday night there were only about 11,000; it is said that the emphasis placed by the Star on the presence of children had kept down the attendance of adults.

Sunday afternoon, there was a special concert by the Kansas City symphony chorus, directed by Earl Rosenberg, before the picture began. It is estimated that there were 17,000 men, women and children in the hall—and several thousand were unable to get in. Sunday evening the attendance ran to about 9,000.

The entertainment first directed public attention to good films. Also it brought out thousands of people who have never before attended moving picture exhibitions. There are dozens of cases reported, of people who talked to their neighbors of their previous absence from picture shows.

Further, the incident has given a new direction to the question of quality of films—the Kansas City public has got the idea of encouraging good pictures, rather than worrying so much over bad ones. Indeed, the slide shown on which the Collegiate Alumnae announced that 14 Kansas City theaters would show selected pictures, guaranteed of high class, on "Friday Family Night," was greeted with applause at each performance.

Kansas City, Mo.—George N. Montgomery, the new manager of the World Film Corporation at Kansas City, with his entirely new office and sales force, has been "cleaning up" in the Kansas City district. Some twenty theaters in the city are now taking World pictures—fourteen of them advertised World in one issue of the local paper recently.

X. K. Stout Given Farewell Luncheon.

San Francisco, Cal.—A farewell luncheon was tendered at the Tait-Zinkand Cafe on January 19 to X. K. Stout, who has given up the management of the local Mutual office to accept the position of assistant manager of the American company at Santa Barbara. About twenty-five film exchange men and exhibitors were present and speeches were made by M. L. Markowitz, Louis Reichert, B. F. Simpson, H. H. Hicks, Herman Wobber, Fred Peachy and X. K. Stout. Those present included J. J. Unger, Louis Reichert, M. L. Markowitz, H. E. Lotz, William Citron, B. F. Simpson, R. B. Quive, H. H. Hicks, Herman Wobber, W. J. Drummond, X. K. Stout, Sol Lesser, E. O. Childs, Sam Gordon, H. Henrioulle, Mark Leichter, F. R. Rodriques, F. E. McCoy, C. M. Hill, Charles Klopot, Abe Markowitz, J. L. Warner, Frank Eberhart, Walter Preddey and Louis Hyman. At the conclusion of the luncheon Mr. Stout was presented with a handsome traveling case on behalf of his associates in the Film Exchange Board of Trade.

Reviewing Room Proves Popular.

San Francisco, Cal.—The reviewing room in the quarters of the American Photoplayer company, on Golden Gate avenue, is proving very popular and pictures are being shown here almost daily for exhibitors. Sales Manager Edward Baron has just completed some improvements in this room, including the installation of a large shadow box for the screen and the addition of 110 theater chairs. There is room for about 200 persons in the hall. This room has been placed at the disposal of the Motion Picture Exhibitors' Association of California and its monthly meetings will be held here.

Doing Good Carbon Business.

San Francisco, Cal.—F. J. Alberti, who recently opened offices at 100 Golden Gate avenue, is doing a splendid business in National carbons, for which he has the agency in the San Francisco territory, having sold about 100,000 during the past ear. He recently introduced silver tip carbons here and quite a few houses are now using these exclusively. Mr. Alberti is handling a line of deodorizers, in addition to carbons, and secured quarters on Film Row in order to keep in close touch with exhibitors.

Brand New Ordinance Discovered

Writer Accidentally Stumbles Onto City Hall Law Makers Doping Out New Censorship Law—Ye Scribe Talks on the Subject, and the Mayor Calls Him Down—'Twas Real Exciting.

By Abraham Nelson, 601 Journal Building, Portland, Oregon.

PORTLAND, Oregon.—This "story" has a lot to do with the ramblings of ye scribe up at the City Hall and the startling discoveries made by him therein. He humbly asks the pardon of the editor and of the reader for using the pronoun "I" in what follows, but he does it so that the facts will be clear.

I went to the City Hall on January 26 to find out about the proposed civil service examination for the position of secretary of the censor board, having heard a rumor that the matter was again receiving official attention. I was informed it was up for consideration by the City Commission that very morning. So I went into the Council Chamber and sure 'nough there were the five Commissioners threshing out city ordinances to beat the band. I waited a little while and pretty soon Mayor Albee, or Mr. Grutze, at his request, begain to read one about the censorship of motion pictures that repealed ordinance number 30145, or some such number. I had stumbled onto something, all right. The exhibitors didn't know anything about it; I asked some of them afterwards. Anyway, there wasn't an exhibitor present.

The reading continued. The ordinance provided for a censor board of seven members with powers and duties just like the old censor board. The difference was in section two, which provided that the secretary should not be a member of the board. She should receive $100 a month. She is now a member and gets $90. The change was made so the secretary's position could be put under civil service.

There not being any crowd present and everything being quiet like, I asked the Mayor if I could say a few words and he said sure. So I told him about the picture men not knowing this ordinance was to come up and that it was a surprise and that the theater men ought to have a hearing and called the Commissioners' attention to the $10 raise in salary provided by the proposed ordinance. The Mayor replied that no $10 raise was intended and that the mistake was due to the unintentional omission of a couple of words that appeared in the present ordinance.

Then I sat down and the Mayor asked me if I was going to write all this in the MOVING PICTURE WORLD and I said sure and he said to be careful and write only the facts and I said I always did and he intimated that I didn't, either.

Anyway, the ordinance was read the first and second time and the examination was set for February 13.

Up at the City Hall they claim the proposed ordinance embodies suggestions made by the moving picture men at a meeting with the Civil Service Board when an effort was made some time ago to put the secretary's position under civil service. Evidence gathered at the City Hall also tends to show that there really was a mistake in the new ordinance in naming the salary at $100 a month.

Another Sunday Closing Bill.

Salem, Ore.—A Sunday closing bill that was not expected by theater men was introduced in the legislature here Jan. 26 by Representative Gore, of Jackson County, at the request of the Oregon Retail Grocers' Association. It is known as House bill No. 292.

The bill provides for general Sunday closing from 12 o'clock Saturday night until 12 o'clock Sunday night of everything except drug stores, hotels, restaurants, ice cream parlors and automobile and general motive supply houses. It is included that any person or religious faith not observing Sunday is exempt from the act. If the bill carries Sunday theaters. baseball and amusements are doomed.

Long Runs in San Francisco

Features Booked for One Week Are Being Continued Longer—Some of the Recent Hits That Are Playing Steadily to Packed Houses—Dry Weather Has Been the Rule and Business Has Been Good Generally.

By T. A. Church, 1507 North Street, Berkeley, Calif.

SAN Francisco, Cal.—The month of January has been almost free from rain, as far as this city is concerned, and exhibitors generally report a large volume of business, despite the cold snap. In fact, it is likely that more persons have attended moving picture shows here this month than ever before during the first month of the year. There never were more houses in the downtown district devoted to this form of amusement and never in any one month have there been so many large productions shown at advanced prices. Most of the houses featuring the large attractions have done a capacity business and the fact has been proved that the public is willing to pay the advanced prices when the proper subjects are offered in a pleasing way.

The Savoy theater, McAllister street, near Market, for years the despair of exhibitors, opened and closed. a dozen times, is entering upon its fifth week with "A Daughter of the Gods," featuring Annette Kellermann, and a capacity business is still being done twice daily, prices ranging from 25 cents to one dollar. No date has been set for bringing the engagement to a close and the end does not seem to be in sight.

The Alcazar theater, with Nazimova in "War Brides" as the attraction, is ready to enter upon the third week of its period as a moving picture house. It was originally planned to show this production for but two weeks, but the demand to see it has been so great, and the film has created such a furore, that the engagement has been extended. The admission prices are 25, 50 and 75 cents. "Civilization" will follow "War Brides" as the attraction at this fine house.

The Columbia theater is also being given over again to a brief season of moving pictures, "The Crisis" having been put on late in the month for a run limited to two weeks at prices ranging from 25 cents to a dollar. Earlier in the season "Intolerance" was shown here and these two productions will comprise the season's film offering at this house.

During the month the Portola theater devoted one week to "The Foolish Virgin" and two weeks to "The Pride of the Clan," 15 cents having been the lowest price charged. The Imperial theater on several occasions was unable to care for all those who desired to see "Snow White" and two special performances for children were given on Saturday mornings, the house being filled to overflowing at both of these. The Tivoli theater has been doing a record business with its regular programs, a noticeable feature being the great increase in matinee business.

Supply Business Very Brisk.

San Francisco, Cal.—The Breck Photoplay Supply company has been doing a very heavy volume of business of late, the best, in fact, since this concern took over the business of George Breck, more than a year ago. Business in the supply line has been fully as active as in the machine line, indicating that exhibitors are enjoying a good season.

Attending Eastern Conference.

San Francisco, Cal.—H. H. Hicks, manager of the local branch of the General Film, left this week for Chicago to confer with officials of the company and will be away about two weeks.

Warner Moves Back to Film Row.

San Francisco, Cal.—J. L. Warner, head of the Warner Film Attractions, which is handling "The Crisis" and "Purity" in this territory, has removed his offices from the Pacific building, where they have been located for the past two months, to 280 Golden Gate avenue, in the quarters formerly occupied by the International. The fixtures used by the latter concern are in place and the change was made with but little difficulty. The move back to Film Row was made for the purpose of keeping in closer touch with exhibitors.

Iowa News Letter

By Dorothy Day, Register-Tribune, Des Moines, Ia.

Des Moines Film Credit Officers.

DES MOINES, Ia.—D. B. Lederman has been chosen as president, and C. W. Stombaugh the secretary and treasurer of the Des Moines Film Credit Association. This newly formed body has as yet done little and already the exhibitors are becoming most antagonistic toward it. The good paying exhibitors should feel that the association has only their interest at heart when they do away with the exchange losses brought about by the deadbeat exhibitors, of which, sorry to say, there are many, say the exchanges.

Met Revivalists Half Way.

Waterloo, Ia.—W. L. Myers, manager of the Palace theater in Waterloo, had a short but successful skirmish with the Sunday closing sensation last week, when a small time "Billy Sunday" revival was in progress. When a ministerial committee called upon Mr. Myers with a demand that he close his theater on Sunday, the capable manager met them halfway and offered his theater on Sundays between the hours of 12 and 12:45 for evangelistic services. They accepted, and now after the services the show opens Sunday afternoons unmolested.

Another note of interest about this Palace theater in Waterloo is the fact that the door man is a woman. Freda Seidler is a large Dutch woman, standing six feet, and she has complete control over the ushers, ticket sellers and all house employees.

William Skirboll to Manage Local Metro.

Des Moines, Ia.—The Metro exchange in this city has a new manager in the person of William Skirboll, formerly of the Metro exchange in Chicago. Mr. Skirboll has in mind many changes in the affairs of the Des Moines exchange. J. R. Skirboll, brother of the new manager and district manager for the Metro, is making one of his frequent visits to Des Moines, this week.

Eugene Wilson Appointed Manager.

Des Moines, Ia.—Eugene Wilson, formerly roadman out of the Mutual exchange, here, has been appointed manager of a newly established branch exchange for Mutual in Sescanaby, Mich.

Interesting Theater Changes.

Sioux City, Ia.—The Princess Theater in Sioux City, a stock theater, has been taken over by a corporation headed by J. Schlank, who will act as the personal manager of the house. Big features in motion pictures will be shown in the Princess from now on. Schlank was formerly with the Hippodrome in Omaha.

Avery, Ia.—The opera house of Avery, Ia., has changed hands. Murphy is the name of the new manager, and he purchased the place from Youngquist.

Hocking, Ia.—A Mr. Holmes has purchased the Electric theater in Hocking from Mr. Harwood. Manager Holmes will run only two nights a week.

Russell, Ia.—R. W. Rickey has closed his theater in Russell, Ia., and moved back to Des Moines, Ia.

Oskaloosa, Ia.—McConnell and Houser, who formerly owned the Orient theaters in Maringo and in Oskaloosa, have dissolved partnership, McConnell taking the Oskaloosa house and Houser the one in Marino.

Business Notes.

Cedar Rapids, Ia.—A. J. Deibold of the Strand theater in Cedar Rapids has just installed a new $15,000 pipe organ. A. F. Clark, from the American Photoplayer company in San Francisco, made the sale and is covering Iowa with the pipe organs.

Many Operators Fail to Pass

Vancouver Operators Have Had a Very Strict Examination and Many Will Have to Come Back in Three Months for Another Try—Have Provisional Licenses Only—Must Pass Next Time.

By E. C. Thomas, 821 Rogers Bldg., Van couver, B. C.

VANCOUVER, B. C.—The examinations of Vancouver operators, originally scheduled to be held in December, were delayed on account of the non-completion of the elaborate examination room in the Court House here, and did not begin until January 2. They have now been completed, however, and the results will be announced within a short time. Robert Foster, one of the two members of the examining board, informs the World representative that on account of the extreme severity of the test many of the men failed to pass, and will be granted provisional licenses, good only for three months, at the end of which time another examination must be taken. Only those attaining a mark higher than 70 will be granted cards unconditionally, and no operator who fails to pass the second examination, to be held three months hence, will be allowed to work in Vancouver except as an assistant operator. They would be allowed to work in Victoria or any other city of the province, but not in a city of the first class—which is Vancouver.

It is claimed that the examination room in Vancouver excels anything else in the United States or Canada in the completeness of its equipment, and an extended description of it will be published in a future issue of the Moving Picture World.

Mr. Foster and William Oswald, the other member of the board, will leave for Victoria shortly to examine the operators of that city.

Hector Quagliotti's Canaries.

Vancouver, B. C.—Hector Quagliotti, manager of the Colonial theater, has added to his staff of musicians two especially capable canary birds, which have occasioned a great amount of comment by Colonial patrons. The birds trill and sing almost incessantly, and actually seem to follow the changing tones of the organ. The World man stood at the front of the house with Mr. Quagliotti on a recent evening, and of the several people who remarked about the singing of the birds two informed the manager that for a time they were positive that the trilling effect was produced by an attachment on the organ.

Dominion Film Gets Studio Site.

Victoria, B. C.—The Dominion Film Corporation, Ltd., with the assistance of the entire population of this city, has secured a site for the production of films. Following a luncheon attended by members of the British Columbia cabinet and of the legislature, the mayor and councilmen, representatives of local public bodies, and citizens to the number of several hundred, it was decided to loan the company half the purchase price of a 23-acre tract of land adjacent to the city. The city solicitor, however, informed the council that it could not legally do this, so the citizens started a subscription campaign and the required amount was raised within a short time.

J. Arthur Nelson, president and general manager of the company, announces that Marian Swayne has been placed under contract for three years to play leads with the Dominion company.

Musicians' Unions Sign Government Cards.

Regina, Sask.—Although trades unionists in many sections of Canada have decided against signing the national registration cards sent out by the government, and designed to give information to aid in a possible mobilization of the industrial forces of the country, practically all members of the local Musicians' Union decided to sign the cards and supply the data requested.

Less License Fees Received.

Vancouver, B. C.—The receipts from theater licenses in this city for the year 1916, according to a report just issued by License Inspector Jones, show a slight falling off from the total of the year before. In 1915 the receipts were $5,312.50, while in 1916 this was reduced to $4,850.

We Drop in on Friend Kean.

Vancouver, B. C.—The other evening the World man wanted to get some information from A. D. Kean, the cinematograph cowboy. As wife happened to be along, we took her in with us, because the last time we asked her to wait outside "for just a minute," while we talked to Mr. Kean, we kept her waiting half an hour, and she almost froze to death. Well, Mrs. Kean also came in, and her husband ran over some of his good pictures for us on his Victor projector, including his whale pictures, which we hadn't been able to see when they were shown at the Dominion theater. Mr. Kean has sold the Canadian exhibition rights for this fine reel to the Ford Canadian Monthly, and has also disposed of additional copies to the bureau of social economics at Washington, the Canadian Pacific Railway and the British Columbia government.

'Way late in the night Mrs. Kean got out some sandwiches and cake and coffee, all of which were good. While the sugar was doing a dissolve in our coffee cup we had so many retakes on the cake that fears were expressed that our diaphragm would get out of focus. We accordingly flashed the "Good Night" slide and Brother Kean cut off the light, while we projected ourselves into the night and made footsteps toward home.

A very enjoyable evening.

Calgary, Alberta.—The Princess theater is getting the full benefit from Pathe's serial "The Shielding Shadow" by advertising: "If you can't come in the afternoon or early evening, remember you can always see 'The Shielding Shadow' after 10:30 p. m."

Vancouver, B. C.—L. A. Manley, who runs the Granby theater at Granby Bay, was a recent visitor to this city.

America Faces War! Crisis Has Aroused Spirit of Patriotism

From coast to coast every American is thinking "Preparedness" and "War." The entire public is in fighting mood and all that relates to the great conflict in Europe is quickly seized upon. You can show your patrons how the Allies prepared and how America will have to prepare. And you can show them the actual fighting on the battlefields of France.

Official Government-Made Pictures of

"THE WAR"

Never before, in the history of the world, have motion pictures of a war been possible. Never again, in all probability, will there be another such war to be photographed. This is your opportunity to show your patrons the most tragic chapter in human history.

These pictures are unique and exclusive. They are released by the General Film Company for Official War Films, Inc., the corporation controlling the American rights for the Official War Pictures mentioned above. William K. Vanderbilt is president of this Corporation, and H. P. Davison is its treasurer. All its gross profits from the exhibition of these pictures in America will be devoted to deserving war relief funds.

Distributed by GENERAL FILM CO., Inc.

Official Pictures of Real War Will Crowd Your Theatre

They are the only pictures permitted to be taken on the battle fronts. They are uncensored; they show the frightful havoc of the giant guns; the desperate charges through barbed wire entanglements; the terrific explosions of mines underneath the trenches.

Official Government-Made Pictures of

"THE WAR"

In addition to the great Battle of the Somme, they show the brave American aviators in their maneuvers far above the clouds, the splendid work of the American Ambulance Corps in France, and the Grand Fleet in the North Sea—the most formidable assemblage of mighty ships ever mobilized.

Do not fail to show these pictures—they bring before your eyes every thrilling detail of the most tragic chapter in the World's history. And in showing them you will be contributing to the noblest of human charities—the war relief funds. These pictures are now ready. Get in touch with our nearest branch today.

Captain Steve Hendricks, a retired "old salt," and his daughter, Vivian, are happy in their home. Joseph Morgan pays court to Vivian, much to the disgust of the old sea captain.

Charles Brooks, the ne'er-do-well son of an old friend of Hendricks, arrives at the Captain's home to recuperate. He meets Vivian Hendricks and is smitten by her charms.

Despite the fact that Joseph Morgan has been forbidden the house by Captain Hendricks, he manages to see Vivian, and they plan to elope. As Vivian that night is preparing to leave with Morgan, Charles Brooks attacks her. Morgan, hearing sounds of a struggle, enters the house just in time to overcome Brooks and save the girl.

Morgan is arrested. He is visited in the jail by the father of Brooks, who has been summoned to the scene. The father recognizes the bracelet worn by the prisoner.

"That bracelet was given to my other son by his mother now long since dead. The boy has been missing from home for many years. You are undoubtedly my long lost son," he exclaims.

The boy is found not guilty of any crime, and Captain Hendricks gives his blessing when his daughter announces that she and Joe are soon to be married.

Mr. Exhibitor:—You will get more helpful information by carefully reading one trade paper weekly than by skimming over three or four. The MOVING PICTURE WORLD is the one paper you need.

THE SADDLE GIRTH (Serial—No. 21701).—The cast: Mary (Louella Maxam); Tom, a cowpuncher (Tom Mix); Jim, his rival in love (Sid Jordan). Written and produced by Tom Mix.

In Arizona when the rodeo is held, the boys of the Diamond S Ranch capture the majority of awards in almost all the feats of skill peculiar to the western plains. Particularly does Tom, a cowpuncher of the Diamond S Ranch, prove his skill in riding and roping, an added incentive, perhaps, being the fact that Mary Johnson is an eye-witness.

Jim Owens is a rival for the love of Mary, and is also a cowpuncher without principle. He is consumed with jealousy when he sees Tom copture prize after prize, and he resolves that any means are worthy to put a stop to Tom's triumphs. He secretly severs the girth of Tom's saddle, and when the cowpuncher is performing a dare-devil feat of horsemanship, the saddle breaks and he is flung to earth and rendered unconscious.

The cause of the accident is discovered and a search is made for the guilty one. Mary suspicions Jim, and Tom's accident finally causes her to make up her mind between the two men, and she promises Tom to be his wife.

KALEM.

THE NET OF INTRIGUE (Episode No. 16 of "Grant, Police Reporter"—No. 21693).—Cast: Grant, "Chronicle" reporter (George Larkin); Major Russelle (Harry Gordon); his wife (Ollie Kirkby); Mordkin, a spy (Robert Ellis); Carter, city editor (Cyril Courtney). Written by Robert Welles Ritchie. Directed by Robert Ellis.

Grant is detailed by his city editor to interview Major Russelle, just returned from Panama, about an attempt made by foreign spies to steal from him the plans of the canal's fortifications.

The spies ingratiate themselves into the favor of the Major's wife and tempt her with a gorgeous necklace which she desires but is unable to pay for. When Grant calls for his interview he has an opportunity to see which way the wind is blowing, and the next day when he sees the Major's wife descend in the hotel elevator and learns from the clerk that she has visited the spies' apartments, his suspicions are aroused.

He returns to the Major's home and insists that the Major open his private safe to see if the plans are still there. They are missing. Calling a taxi, Grant rushes to the dock in time to see the boat well on its way down the harbor. Jumping into a gasoline launch he gives chase and as the speedy little craft runs alongside the giant liner he makes a leap for the rope ladder that has been lowered, boards the ship and finds the pootfolio of plans hidden in the spies' stateroom. Leaping into the sea he is picked up by the motor boat and returns in time to save Major Russelle's wife from harming herself in remorse over having betrayed her husband's honor.

Helen, the telegraph operator at the Lone Point Station, shields Miguel, a greaser, under suspicion of having stolen some horses, until the real thieves are caught. Miguel is, nevertheless, told to clear out.

Up in the hills the crew of a freight train set out with a lumber car whose load of poles has shifted dangerously. Passing down the mine siding, a premature blast blows the brakeman off the deck and the car runs wild back to the main track. Miguel sees it and, prompted by gratitude to Helen, races his horse to the Lone Point station ahead of the wild car.

Accompanied by Helen, whose horse is tied back of the station, Miguel races down the track and succeeds in lassoing an upright of the lumber car. He circles away from the car, holding the rope taut while Helen leaps from her saddle and pulls herself hand over hand to a foothold. After that nothing is too good for Miguel the Greaser.

GHOST HOUNDS (No. 21708).—'Tis the morning after the night before. Silas Shakaleg, the fearless sheriff of Mushroom Manor, is sleeping after his all-night vigil in the shrubbery surrounding the haunted mansion.

The telephone rings. Thieves are robbing Millionaire Hawkin's hen roost. Hastily donning his hat, fearless Shakaleg hurries out to make his capture.

The thieves prove to be our old friends Ham and Bud. Clapping them into his portable jail, which he hauls with him in his chase after thieves, the sheriff returns to his abode there to hold court and pronounce them guilty of stealing Farmer Hawkin's hen fruit to pay off a debt of $1,000.

Deserted by all save the farmer's winsome daughter, the egg lifters are sentenced to spend a night in the haunted house. Their only consolation is the promise of the Girl to visit them.

What the real thieves, who have made their rendezvous in the mansion, do to our poor unfortunates is a shame. As dawn breaks, after a night of terror, of ghosts and of dancing skeletons, our frazzled ghost hounds may be seen wending their way to the nearest railroad track.

THE TRAP (Episode No. 17 of "Grant, Police Reporter"—No. 21712).—The cast: Grant (George Larkin); Jack Mulhall (Robert Ellis); Carl Letson (M. Cohen); Brandon (Harry Gordon); Myrta (Ollie Kirkby); Benny (Bert Tracey). Written by Robert Welles Ritchie. Directed by Robert Ellis.

Brandon, a police lieutenant, has made it extremely unhealthy for Mulhall and his partner Letson to continue their gambling operations. They plan revenge. Mulhall hires Benny, a gangster, to "plant" his I. O. U. for $2,500 on the person of Brandon. At the gambler's trial, Mulhall accuses the policeman of raiding his place because he was unable to collect hush money. The I. O. U. is found in Brandon's hat and he is stripped of his authority and held for trial.

Grant, police reporter on the Chronicle, suspects that Brandon is the victim of a frame-up and trails the gambler to his quarters. Climbing the dumbwaiter shaft, he overhears Mulhall outline a plot to his accomplice for enticing the disgraced lieutenant to that room and then confronting him with detectives.

Myrta, the lieutenant's daughter, is also afraid that her father is the victim of a hoax and follows him when he starts to keep his appointment, dressed in boy's clothes. Mulhall decides to double-cross his partner and hires Benny the gangster to finish him while the policeman is in the room. How Grant at the risk of his life saves Myrta from mortal injury at the hands of the gangster and brings Mulhall, the plotter, to justice provides a thrilling climax.

THE PRIMA DONNA'S SPECIAL (Episode No. 118 of "The Hazards of Helen"—No. 21717).—The cast: Helen (Helen Gibson); "Dad" Morley (G. A. Williams); Mlle. Gazle (Lillian Lorraine). Written by Herman A. Blackman. Directed by Walter Morton.

Helen, station agent and telegraph operator at Lone Point, is in despair over a broken sounder when Morley, who has dropped off a passing freight, offers to fix it for her. Recognizing in him a man whose skill points back to happier days, Helen encourages him to tell her his story, promising to get him the position of relief operator if he cares to accept it.

Morley's story takes him back several years to the time when he gave up his position as an operator following the death of his wife. He has never seen his little daughter since turning her over to the care of a rich brother.

Later Morley is installed as Helen's relief. While Helen is on duty she sees Morley through the station window talking to some tramps. He shakes his head in an emphatic negative. That same day Helen gets a wire that Mlle. Gazle, traveling on her "special," will pass through Lone Point.

The tramps board the engine of the fast freight and throw the engineer and fireman out in an endeavor to uncouple some cars loaded with silk. Helen receives word that the runaway is headed towards Lone Point. With "Dad" Morley's help she appropriates an auto standing at the station and races down the track to meet it. Morley pilots the car as near the train as he can and Helen, straining every nerve, leaps the gap and brings the engine to a standstill just in time to save the "special" with the prima donna aboard. She proves to be Morley's daughter and there is a reunion.

KNICKERBOCKER STAR FEATURE.

CROSSED TRAILS (Three Parts—No. 21690).—Bob and Dick, gold prospectors, reach the end of their trail, without funds. A short distance away Lula is nursing her invalid father. He has just had a stroke and medicine is needed immediately. Bob and Dick, impressed with her beauty and kindliness, sympathize with her, and both desire to do the favor. They race to the village and Dick returns first with the medicine; but it is too late, the father is dead, and his dying request was that the boys should look after his daughter and some day take her to her native home—Colorado. There follows a campaign for Lula's love in which Dick is successful, but in winning it he loses Bob's friendship. The two men part, each taking a Mexican coin peculiarly marked as a reminder of their trip. Dick is successful, and, carrying out the wish of Lula's father, establishes a home in Colorado.

Years later Bob travels to Colorado on a hunting trip and becomes involves with some bandits, who steal his clothes. One of the bandits, donning Bob's clothes, gets in a poker game, and, when all his money is gone, slaps the Mexican coin on the table, saying it is his last dollar, and that when it is gone he is going to meet a woman. Dick is in the game and he knows only one woman who has a coin like that—his wife. With revolver pointed he commands the bandit to lead the way to his home, where he accuses his wife. Just then Bob appears. He has saved and won the beautiful girl whom the bandit was going to marry by arrangement with her drunken father. Dick realizes his mistake and the two men become pals again and resume partnership.

THE BELOVED VAMPIRE (Three Parts—Katherine, a musical comedy star, is harassed by Billie Vandergrift, a wealthy man. She spurns his false love, and while not engaged in her work, spends her time as a charity worker. While on a visit to the slums she discovers a poor girl, Mary, who has been wronged by Vandergift. She also meets Richard Carter, a millionaire charity worker, who is on one of his annual tours of inspection. He falls in love with her not knowing, however, that she is a musical comedy star.

Mary's brother resolves to avenge his sister's deception. Several nights later Vandergift is entertaining at an after-theater party to Katherine and her friends. Richard Carter is also present, and as Katherine and Carter recognize each other a shot is fired through the window and Vandergift falls dead. Katherine faints and Carter carries her to her apartment. When she is revived she relates a pathetic story of her many trials and tribulations in endeavoring to lead a respectable life, and Carter asks her for her hand. The following day they are quietly and happily married.

John Adair, game warden, and his deputy, Jim Young, admire Bess Conolly. Adair receives a letter that a party of Indians has left the reservation. Bess sees the Indians and advises Adair, who tells the Indians to get back to the reservation, destroys their camp and takes charge of a deer that "Sleepy Horse" has killed. He and Young have an argument over treatment of the Indians, and, later, Young prevents the Indian from shooting Adair.

Bess favors Young and Adair determines to get even with him and win the girl himself. Young resigns and goes to work for a man trapping wolves.

The Indians camp for the night. One of the squaws moving about in the brush is taken for an animal by two amateur hunters and killed. "Sleepy Horse" hears the shot and finds his mother dead. He believes this deed was done by the warden and determines on vengeance.

"Sleepy Horse" has an accident and falls into the roadway. Bess finds him and binds up his wounds. Meanwhile her horse has wandered away. Adair comes up and tries to force his attentions on her. They struggle, and Young, who has found Bess's horse and is looking for her, rescues Bess and takes her home.

Meanwhile the party of Indian braves set out to avenge the deed. They capture Bess and Young. Young is tied to a horse and the horse turned loose, but he is later rescued and goes to town for help. Adair attacks him, beats him into unconsciousness, places him near the cages of the captive wolves and opens the door. The wolves do not attack Young, however, but follow Adair.

The rescue party is whipped by the Indians and they are about to kill Bess when "Sleepy Horse" hears the fighting. He sees Adair thrown from his horse and is about to kill him when the pursuing wolves carry out his revenge. He saves Bess, and he orders the Indians to return home. Young is found and revived. He leads another party to the rescue. They meet "Sleepy Horse," who tells them that the Indians are going back and that the game warden has met his just deserts.

Later, Young is offered the place of warden. He asks Bess if she will be his assistant for life.

RED FEATHER.

ME AND M' PAL—(5 parts—Feb. 12).—The cast: Labby (Hubert Willis); Mammy (S. Fairbrother); Flash Hawkins (Lewis Gilbert); Harry Masterman (Gerald Ames); James Hilliard (Douglas Munro); Mrs. Kingsland (Gwynne Herbert); Kitty (Edna Flugarth). Written by Richard Ganthony. Produced by Harold Shaw.

Harry Masterman, a young artist, does not seem to make much headway. On the day that he receives notice that his picture has been rejected by the Academy his rich uncle, James Hilliard, visits him. Mr. Hilliard tells his nephew he cannot continue making him an allowance, and that he had better get to work. Angrily Harry refuses the offer of a job.

Harry cannot find buyers for his pictures, and things get so bad that at last he decides to look for some employment. He leaves a note for Kitty Kingsland, the young actress with whom he has been on the most friendly terms.

Harry's case gets worse and he is thankful to get any odd job in Covent Garden Market. There he meets the old coster, Labby, who recognizes in him the young artist who used to be his customer and who cleared out owing him five and ninepence. Harry offers to work off the debt. Labby gives him a job. He takes Harry home with him, and, after consultation with Mammy, his "missus," decides Harry shall remain and work as Labby's assistant. Harry is so successful that he captures most of the customers of Hawkins, Labby's rival.

Mr. Hilliard recognized in Mrs. Kingsland his old sweetheart and visited her many times. Through his influence Kitty gets a part in a West End production. The press proclaims Kitty's performance a great success and she goes to Covent Garden to buy flowers.

Just as Harry and Labby are hoisting a heavy crate in a van the revengeful Hawkins passes. He gives a lunge and the crate falls to the ground on top of Harry, badly injuring his leg. From a neighboring flower stall Kitty witnesses the accident. She recognizes Harry. He is lifted on to Labby's barrow, and, Kitty accompanying them, Labby drives to his home. Here Harry is carefully tended and Kitty brings him necessary comforts. Harry pledges her not to divulge his secret to his uncle.

When Harry's birthday arrives he has almost recovered. Kitty gives him a set of artist's materials. Through the persuasion of Kitty and Labby he finally agrees to paint a picture of Labby and his donkey. Kitty sends it off to the Academy, where it is accepted and hung.

Labby drives Harry to the Academy in his little donkey cart. There Harry is surprised to see his picture and to meet his uncle and his new wife and Kitty among the crowd who gather round the picture "Me an' Me Pal." Then Mr. Hilliard learns Harry painted the picture. He hears about his struggles and of Labby's kindness. As a reward, he not only sets up Labby in a regular green grocer's shop, but makes peace with his nephew, who shortly marries Kitty.

John Osborne, a power in Wall Street, is the enemy of David Merrill, a broker. Osborne's daughter, Shelah, is the pride of his heart. Merrill has long desired to win the girl, but she has rejected his advances.

He installs one of his clerks in Osborne's office, as a spy. Osborne plans a coup by which they hope to break Merrill's crowd, but when the trick is sprung, Merrill is ready and Osborne is forced to the wall. When all the debts are cleared, there is nothing left but a small plot of land in the West, and Shelah persuades her father to move out there to live.

Shelah and her father are getting along all right when Merrill learns of their success. He takes up a note of Osborne's. Condon, a mining engineer, previously in love with Shelah, finds oil on Osborne's land. He meets Shelah and there is a reunion. Merrill arrives with the note and threatens to foreclose unless Osborne uses his influence with Shelah. Osborne pays the note, hiding the paper in the chimney. As he goes to place the stone back, he falls, and is paralyzed. Merrill sees the fall and realizes the hold he has over the girl.

Believing he still holds the note, Shelah tells Condon she will have to marry his rival. Osborne tries to communicate with her, but without avail. Merrill discovers the indications of oil. Condon tries to raise money to pay off the note, but fails. The wedding night arrives and the weather is stormy. As Condon breaks in determined to stop the ceremony, a bolt of lightning strikes the house and the shock is so great Osborne is thrown from his chair. He rises and stammers "There, third stone up," pointing to the chimney.

Condon catches his meaning and finds the cancelled note. Merrill is ordered from the house. Osborne has relapsed into paralysis, but his eyes glow with triumph over his defeat of Merrill. As the minister is still present, Condon persuades him to go on with the ceremony.

THE PURPLE MASK (Episode No. 8—"The Secret Adventure"—Two parts—Feb. 18).—When Kelly entered Pat's stateroom, by her permission, he found her curious to know the reason for his call. He told her that he suspected the stolen Phillips' pearls were in her possession and declared that he must search the room. His quest avails nothing, and he leaves after informing Pat that she, as well as all of the other passengers, must be searched upon leaving the ship by customs officials. The ship docks and everybody is searched, but still the pearls cannot be found. Pat goes with her aunt to a hotel, taking with her the woman whom Phillips robbed and betrayed. It is disclosed that Pat has secreted the pearls in the bottom of a box of chocolates.

Moving to a house that the American branch of the Apaches built for the secret purpose of their craft, Pat sends a letter to Phillips informing him that she has the pearls, but holds them for $10,000 ransom, the money to go to the woman he has wronged. Phillips, on Kelly's suggestion, goes to Pat's house, sees the pearls and is also shown the woman he has betrayed. Offering a check, which Pat refuses to accept, Phillips goes to the bank, gets the currency and, because he is too ashamed of his conduct to face Pat again, he sends Kelly with the money to redeem the pearls.

While Kelly is at Pat's, the private detectives Mrs. Phillips sent to recover the pearls arrive. Kelly pays Pat the money and sends the pearls out of the house by one of his assistants. Then he confronts the detectives Mrs. Phillips has sent and tells them that the pearls are not in Pat's house. He has left the girl alone in her drawing-room, while he goes to confer with the other detectives, and when he returns Pat has disappeared. The room is empty.

It is disclosed, however, that Pat has moved aside the mantel and fireplace, exposing an exit from the room. When the girl passes through the secret door, the fireplace swings back into place, and thus is Kelly baffled again by the clever girl.

ROBINSON CRUSOE—Three parts—Feb. 18.—Robinson Crusoe's great desire to cross the seas in search of adventure proves too great for him to remain at home, so he runs away and goes to sea. On reaching the South Seas a terrible storm arises and the vessel is soon a total wreck. Robinson is the sole survivor and he offers thanks to God for his deliverance. That night, in fear of wild beasts, he sleeps in a tree and the following morning swims several times to the wreck and secures supplies and provisions, also a cat and a dog.

Later he builds a well-stocked and barricaded home and finds solace in hard work. The years pass and Robinson adds to his friends in the form of goats, parrots and other animals, and he daily goes to his lookout platform in the hopes of seeing a friendly sail

One day he comes across footprints and sees through his telescope the arrival of canoes containing cannibals. He hurries to the shore and kills several cannibals, who are pursuing one man who has escaped. The cannibals, terrified at the noise and at seeing their companions fall without being struck, hurry away and Robinson makes friends with the man Friday.

For two years Friday is Robinson's constant friend and learns to talk his language. Again the cannibals visit the island, and Robinson and Friday rescue a Spanish castaway and an old native who proves to be Friday's father.

Later a boat arrives, containing Captain Hardy and his beautiful daughter. Their own men have bound and left them. That night Robinson attacks the ship while the men are throwing dice, and defeats them. Many enlist under his command and Robinson and his party set sail. They are attacked by cannibals and Friday is killed. On Robinson's return to his native town he is received as a hero and he marries the captain's daughter.

THE CRIMSON ARROW—(Two parts—Feb. 9).—After many years of peace, the Indians become restless and decide to make war upon the white man. Black Partridge, the chief, goes to Fort Dearborn, to return to the Commandant the symbol of peace which has passed between them, saying that the Indians are crying for white blood.

The Commandant makes light of the warning, and Rawlins, a black sheep among the officers, even attacks Singing Bird, the daughter of Black Partridge, on one of her visits to the fort. The members of the tribe, who are against the whites, stir the feelings of the others by impassioned oratory, and scouts are sent to encircle the fort and watch the movements of the inhabitants. They report that no notice has been taken of the warning, and that the soldiers are not preparing. So they gather their forces and fall upon the whites.

Singing Bird rushes ahead of them to warn the whites that the Indians are upon them. The cunning savages offer safe conduct to the soldiers, who accept it. As they march out of the fort on their way to Fort Wayne in accordance with the orders of their superior officer, the Indians fall upon them. Nearly all are killed, but Singing Bird shows a way to escape to her favorite among the officers and his wife.

She assists them to the river, where they take to a canoe. The remnant of the survivors is finally rescued by soldiers from Fort Wayne, but Singing Bird is fatally wounded in a last encounter with her people. She willingly gives her life for the officer whom she loves, but who has a white wife.

THE HALF BREED'S CONFESSION—(Feb. 15).—Clifford is convicted of the murder of his employer on circumstantial evidence. Alice, Clifford's fiancee, and the dead man's daughter, is drifting down the river, when she observes an Indian who has been swept over the rapids. She rescues the Indian in a dying condition. He, believing he is dying, confesses to having murdered Alice's father.

They are miles from the country town where the execution of Clifford is taking place. She drags the Indian to an automobile and hurries to the scaffold. The black cloth is over Clifford's head, and he is about to be hanged, as she pushes through the crowd, dragging the Indian with her. The execution is stayed a moment, while the Indian confesses to the sheriff. Clifford is liberated, and declared innocent.

Helen Dale, a reporter on a big daily, returns from her vacation to find the office agog with excitement over some daring robberies. Helen discovers that the supposed robber closely resembles a chap with whom she had carried on a flirtation at the seashore. So Helen, with one of the reporters, Dick Bayless, returns to the beach city.

Helen points out her acquaintance, John Howard, to Bayless. He moves a few feet from her and lies down on the sand. According to their plan Helen stealthily makes her way to Bayless' side and lifts his watch. Howard sees this and falls into her trap by offering to put her next to bigger game. She gets an opportunity of telling Bayless what has happened.

Howard introduces her to his gang and they plot to rob a certain manufacturing establishment. Making an excuse to leave them, she phones Bayless, and he, with some policemen, follows. The crooks are taken into custody just after they have opened the safe and started away with the loot.

Helen receives the praise of her staff as well as the reward offered for the apprehension of the thief. We are left to assume that she gets a husband into the bargain, in the person of Bayless.

LAEMMLE.

THE FOURTH WITNESS—(Two parts—Feb. 16).—The cast: Dr. Cameron (Lee Hill); William Bryant (Charles Mailles); Margaret, Bryant's wife (Louise Lovely); Butler (George Berrill); Chauffeur (Malcolm Blevins).

As just compensation for a dissolute life, William Bryant is a hopeless cripple, refusing to be nursed by any one but his wife, Margaret, and endeavoring to make her as miserable as possible by his taunts and sneers.

Dr. Cameron, Bryant's physician, arrives at his patient's home one evening, just in time to intercept a blow which Bryant has directed at Margaret. The men struggle and Bryant is thrown upon the bed unconscious. The doctor makes an examination and assures the wife that her husband is not dead. Margaret beseeches Dr. Cameron to take her away, and he loving her, consents.

Cameron, deciding to drive his machine himself, dismisses his chauffeur, an indifferent fellow who is tempted to make an easy haul, as he is aware that Bryant's house is poorly guarded. He climbs through a front window. Bryant regains consciousness in time to see Dr. Cameron and his wife drive away. Inspired by a malignant idea, he goes to his desk and writes in his diary, after which he draws out a revolver with the intention of killing himself.

Margaret and Cameron are brought to the police court by a country sheriff, who has arrested them on their way from the city. Cameron, to shield Margaret, confesses that he did it, not realizing the seriousness of the charge against them; but when they hear that they are held for the murder of Bryant, they are astounded.

Bryant has made his wife and Dr. Cameron victims of his virulence by writing in his diary: "Doctor Cameron is coming to-night and I am sure that he and my wife are going to attempt my life. They love each other, traitors!" This evidence is now in the hands of the police, who are satisfied in their conclusion that Cameron and Margaret are the murderers.

As the two prisoners are being led to their cells, Bryant's butler confesses to having accidentally killed his master while attempting to wrest the revolver from him to prevent his committing suicide. His testimony is confirmed by the chauffeur, who attests to having seen the whole of the struggle.

BROKEN-HEARTED — (Feb. 17).—Leonard Dare, a producer, finds himself without a player strong enough to enact the part of Philip Dawany, one of the important characters of the cast. His company is temporarily dismissed and he returns home.

Derwent Hall calls for an interview with Dare. Hall's wife is sick; the doctor has instructed Hall to give her better food and medical attention. Hall, desperate, takes the opportunity of urging Dare to allow him to read his play. Spellbound, Dare listens to the most absurd line of talk he has ever heard, but is very much surprised by the magnificent acting of the author. Dare writes out a check for the play, and while the hungry man looks on, calmly throws the manuscript on the fire. Dare says he will make him the greatest actor living.

Hall is cast in the part of Philip Dawany. At first Hall is treated with distinct coldness by the audience, but at last cheer after cheer rolls out as the curtain falls. In this moment—his hour of triumph—a message reaches him from home. His wife is dead.

VICTOR.

THE GIRL OF THE HOUR—(Feb. 18).—William is told by Vivian's father that he can have his daughter if the Varsity crew, of which William is coxswain, wins the big race. Just a few hours before the race Will receives news that his mother is dying. This is a frame-up by some fellows who have a large bet against the Varsity crew. William goes to his mother. On the road he is knocked unconscious by two men who are connected with the frame-up.

Vivian arrives to see the race. She goes to the captain and tells him that she can act as coxswain. Will had often told the boys that Vivian was as capable in that position as he was. William has gained consciousness, and on his way to the club discovers that the missive was a frame-up. He is in time to see the Varsity crew win the big race. Vivian's dad gives them his consent.

THE LOSING WINNER—(Two parts—Feb. 15).—The cast: Jack Bryson (Carter De Haven); Maizie (Flora Parker De Haven); Henry (M. K. Wilson); Penelope (Eileen Sedgwick); Daisy (Jessie Arnold). Scenario by C. J. Wilson, Jr. Produced by Carter De Haven.

Jack Bryson, a young clerk, thinks himself in love with Maizie, one of the stenographers. But when the daughter of his employer, Penelope, calls at the office, he falls a victim to her charms. Henry, the secretary, is also in love with Maizie and seeks to win her; but she is in love with Jack and will not accept the secretary's attentions.

Jack proposes to Penelope, who tells him her father would never consent to their marriage unless he had a certain sum of money. Jack attempts getting this by gambling and has secured the right sum when he chances to meet a chorus girl named Daisy. He falls in love with her. She demands twice the sum that Penelope's father demanded, and he starts gambling again in an endeavor to get that amount.

Henry, who has persuaded Jack to try gambling, brings Maizie to the gambling house that she may see what sort of a chap Jack is. Yet with the perversity of woman, she still loves Jack and scorns Henry.

Penelope is waiting for Jack on the corner with a minister. Daisy is to meet him at the Casino in an hour. Fate turns her wheel and Jack loses every cent of his winnings, whereupon Daisy turns him down. He fears to leave the Casino as he knows Penelope is waiting for him.

Jack is astounded to see Maizie in the Casino. Henry, who now thinks he has won out, assumes an air of possession, but Maizie, taking Jack by the arm, takes him out the back way, leaving Henry a sadder but wiser man.

JOKER.

MULE MATES—(Feb. 17).—The cast: Bill (Wm. Franey); Gale, his wife (Gale Henry); Lillian (Lillian Peacock); The Mule (Fred Woodward); Its Owner (Milburn Moranti). Produced by Wm. Beaudine.

Bill and Gale begin to fight because the breakfast is not to his liking and finally the wife drives him from the house. On the street an Italian is beating a mule unmercifully. Bill becomes enraged at the cruelty and knocks the driver unconscious. So the mule follows him. He hires a policeman to hold the mule while he gets away, but a woman comes to ask the cop a question and the mule escapes, giving the two of them a terrific kick. The animal continues to follow Bill, who has stopped to get a shoeshine. Bill is reading the newspaper when he sees that his shoes are not being cleaned and, looking about, faces the mule. He hides behind a statue, in a barrel, climbs a telephone pole, all in vain.

The man hastens to his office building and slams the elevator door just as the mule enters and begins to climb the stairs. Bill finds his clerk making love to Lillian, the stenographer, and Gale, having repented her treatment of her husband, enters and finds Bill with his arms around his stenographer. The mule saves Bill from the ferocious assault of his wife.

Bill and the animal then go to a saloon and both become so intoxicated that they cannot stand up. They go to Bill's home, but Gale throws them into the street, where they go to sleep.

THE END OF A PERFECT DAY—(Feb. 14)—Gertie is an incorrigible flirt. She is sitting on the bank of a lake, and two of her admirers are contending for her favor. She throws a rose into the water and declares, "Who gets the rose, gets me." There is a wet half hour after that.

Her sweetheart comes along and asks her to go for a ride in his car. She is delighted and goes into the house to change her gown. While he is waiting for her, Hank slugs his chauffeur over the head, takes his cap and goggles and gets into his seat. Reggie and Gertie climb into the tonneau, and spoon, while Hank, as the chauffeur, drives them all over the town. Finally he drives right off the end of a pier and the joy ride ends in the ocean.

BRAVE LITTLE WALDO—(Feb. 16).—Colonel Bingo had arranged with Major Godfrey that his son, Waldo, should marry the Major's daughter. But first Waldo had to be sent to college to cure him of his frivolous habits. The cure was successful and Waldo returns rather effeminate. The Colonel is disgusted and decrees that his son must go west to become a man or die.

He goes to the ranch of his uncle. The cowboys select a "gentle" horse for him to ride. Waldo just manages to survive the ordeal. He writes home what a daredevil he has become and father and mother come out to see for themselves. Their disappointment is so acute that the result lands Waldo at the bottom of a cliff. Then father repents and goes after his offspring.

A HASTY HAZING (Feb. 12).—The cast: Eddie (Eddie Lyons); Lee (Lee Moran); Edith, his wife (Edith Roberts); Her Father (Fred Gamble); Tom (Harry Nolan). Scenario by Karl Coolidge. Produced by L. W. Chaudet.

The one big moment of Eddie's life is when he arrives at college. The registrar asks Tom to let Eddie room with him. Eddie, looking out of the window, is pushed by Tom and lands in a blanket held by the boys below. Eddie escapes.

Lee and Edith have just been married, and as soon as they have rented an apartment they phone to Edith's mother and father to ask forgiveness. They say they will come immediately to see the young couple.

When Edith is changing her dress, Lee decides to buy some cigars for father and hurries out of the apartment. The boys take him for Eddie, and, grabbing him, they rush him out and begin to haze him.

Eddie sees the open window of Lee's apartment and climbs through it. Edith hears him, and, thinking it to be Lee, says she will be there in a minute. Eddie bumps into mother and father, who threaten him for marrying their daughter. Edith comes to the door and says Eddie isn't her husband and then father draws a revolver. Eddie breaks away and runs out of the building. With a policeman they return to the apartment and are arguing fiercely when Lee, having escaped from the college fellows, rushes in, followed by the crowd of boys. The boys grab Eddie and drag him down the hall. Lee explains and father relents.

UNIVERSAL SCREEN MAGAZINE, ISSUE NO. 7 (Feb. 16).—A remarkable device for the stabilizing of the bicycle, particularly useful to military bicycle corps, is the first number in this issue. The second shows the profitable industry of silver fox raising. A pair of skins have brought as much as $2,500. An object lesson for those who spend their working hours in the safety of a modern office is given in thrilling pictures of the handling of dynamite. Then feats of strength are performed for the camera, including the bending of inch gaspipe.

Food inspection by the Board of Health of New York follows, and illustrates the untiring efforts to keep the public foods clean and sanitary. Inspection of meat and condemnation of that which is unfit for use is of interest to all consumers. The selection and packing of oranges for market form an interesting strip.

The wonderful result of persistent endeavor is shown by the skill and strength developed by a man who lost both his legs in a street car accident, and was pronounced a hopeless cripple. The extraordinary feats which he has taught himself to perform are a lesson to the normal.

MR. FULLER PEP—HE DOES SOME QUICK MOVING (Cartoon Comedy—Feb. 18).—Mrs. Fuller Pep decides to move because there is a girls' school across the street which distracts her husband's attention. After a hard day's moving, Fuller arrives at the new house first. He looks out of the window. Oh, joy!—a charmer. Mrs. Pep arrives and decides to move again. After several other changes, we see them established in the middle of the Sahara Desert.

DRAMA OF THE ORIENT (On Same Reel as Foregoing).—This educational is part of the series taken by Doctor Dorsey. It shows unusual views of the native Chinese theater. A pantomime of a servant seeking employment, in which all the actors are male, as there are no actresses in China, begins the reel. Then follows the patomime of the pottery mender, and the street pantomime of the scared lions. Then comes a burlesque on the Ming dynasty, and after that a pantomime describing the Chinese New Year. A novel dance performed on stilts closes the reel.

PERILS OF OUR GIRL REPORTERS (No. 6, "A Long Lane"—Two parts—Jan. 31).—Hope Brandon, reporter for a New York newspaper, is assigned to dig up facts with reference to Count Stratom's meddling in affairs of the American government. Through her fiance, Lieut. Strong, of the Navy, she makes the acquaintance of the Count, who has no suspicion of her mission.

She finds that Strong has been betrayed into the hands of the Count, by one of his clerks; the Count also secures important code information by drugging Strong in his office. Hope witnesses this, and succeeds in defeating the Count's plans, and securing possession of papers necessary to convict the Count; and at the same time recovers the documents stolen from her lover.

BIRDS OF PREY (Eighth of "The Perils of Our Girl Reporter"—Two parts—Feb. 14).—The cast: Claire Bristow (Helen Greene); The Detective (Earl Metcalfe); Mrs. Durkee (Edith Sinclair).

Claire Bristow, the girl reporter, answers an advertisement for a lady's companion, hoping to get a story. She becomes the companion of a wealthy widow, Mrs. Durkee, who has a wonderful collection of jewels and a great liking for champagne. Helen learns that two foreign crooks are trying to get possession of the widow's jewels. The crooks get Mrs. Durkee intoxicated and are on the point of making their escape with the jewels when Claire's lover, a detective, arrests them and regains the jewels.

VOGUE.

LURED AND CURED (Two parts—Feb. 18).—The cast: A Country Boy (Paddy McQuire); A Country Girl (Lillian Hamilton); City Chap (John Oaker); Vampire (Jessie Perry).

Lillian, a country girl, loves Paddy, a neighbor. A chap who is the head of a band of gangsters persuades Lillian to return to the city with him. Lil is placed under the care of a "vampire." Paddy manages to gain entrance to the house where Lil is kept prisoner. He is robbed of all of his money and dropped into a cellar. Lil is told that there will be no wedding and is also dropped into the cellar. They escape and Lil asks Paddy to take her back to the farm.

BULLDOGS OF THE DEEP (Sixth of the "U. S. Defenders" Series—Feb. 9).—Opening aboard the mine layer, the "San Francisco," and a floating machine shop accompanying the ship and making repairs. The "Atlantic" crew is shown in street and battle formation and at a day's target practice. Scene from the stern of a ship, showing the target being towed and fourteen-inch shells dropping within two hundred yards of the camera is also shown.

NEW EDITION OF "DAMAGED GOODS" (New Edition Seven parts—Feb. 12).—The cast: George Dupont (Richard Bennett); The Girl of the Streets (Adrienne Morrison); Henriette Locke (Olive Templeton); Senator Locke (John Steppling); The Doctor (Louis Bennison).

"Damaged Goods" tells the story of a young man who, against his own desires, is forced into circumstances which end in a night of debauchery with a girl of the streets. Later he comes across a college friend, who is a horrible beggar and learns that is the result of the disease ensuing from a life of license. He is seized with the dread that he too may have become a victim. The methods of real specialists in handling the dread disease and the way that the thousands of quack doctors make themselves rich by preying on young men and boys are also shown.

MONOGRAM.

SHORTY JOINS THE SECRET SERVICE (No. 4 of the "Adventures of Shorty Hamilton"—Two parts—Feb. 5).—Shorty's services are enlisted for the government in connection with Kane, a secret service agent, through the ranchman's interest in Anita Keller, who has been detailed on the mail robberies and knowing something of the gang responsible for most of the robberies, is enabled to aid her and Kane in running them to earth.

The leaders and backers of the gang are powerful politically as well as desperate men. Anita is captured by the gang and immured in an insane asylum.

Shorty and Kane bore through a stone wall with parts of an iron bedstead and rescue Anita just as Jim Baxter, head of the gang, has arranged to have her removed to a still more secure hiding place. Baxter and his gang are caught red-handed and are locked up to await trial.

SHORTY TURNS WILD MAN (Fifth of "Adventures of Shorty Hamilton"—Two parts—Feb. 12).—Shorty receives word from Anita informing him that she wants him to go into the Arizona hills and find Professor Wade, who has discovered a radium mine, but is in a bad way as his guide has died. Shorty sets out at once. The professor meets a stranded actor and they set out together to reach town. They are attacked by Apache Bill and the actor is killed, but the professor crawls to a bunch of cacti and secretes a phial of radium in an old skull. Shorty comes upon the actor's make-up kit and makes up as a wild man and scares Apache Bill, who has found the radium mine. The bandits run away and tell the manager of a side show of the wild man. Shorty's horse runs away and he is found and taken to the circus. Here he is exhibited as a wild man and because of a cold is unable to speak. Later his horse helps Shorty escape and he causes the arrest of the bandits.

Jerry dreams that because he has not paid his rent his landlord has fastened him to a fence and has thrown knives at him, which come within an inch of taking his life. He awakens with a start and finds Hank, the landlord rapping at the door.

Not receiving money, the landlord throws Jerry across the hall through a door and across a room into the lap of a woman. The woman's husband finds Jerry in this position and throws a pitcher at the intruder, but misses him. The pitcher strikes Hank, knocking him down. Soon a fight is going on between Hank and the husband. The police take the belligerents away, but they escape by throwing the officers into a pond.

Jerry proceeds to make love to Tiny. When Hank returns and demands admittance to Jerry's room, Jerry and Tiny hide in Jerry's trunk. Hank breaks down the door and, hearing the noise in the trunk, throws it out of the window. It just misses a policeman.

The trunk turns over and proceeds from whence it came. Hank hears the trunk coming back and starts after Jerry, who darts out of a window, pursued by the policeman. He eludes him and hides under a dummy figure in front of a pawn shop.

The policeman stands beside the dummy. Jerry kicks him and the policeman strikes at the dummy and knocks off its head. Jerry, in the figure, runs off. He makes his way into a barroom, where one of the terrified customers throws a hatchet, which lands where Jerry's head ought to be. Jerry then raids a crap game and then returns to Tiny.

Hank is making love to Tiny and dives out of the window when he sees the headless object. Tiny faints, but Jerry revives her and then removes his dummy figure to prove that all is well. Jerry is now free to carry on his love-making unmolested.

GAUMONT.

REEL LIFE, NO. 42 (Feb. 18).—First in this release is a series of views of "Oysters on the Mississippi Coast." The spectator is shown every process from the tonging of the oysters from small boats to the sealing of the cans preparatory to shipment.

"The Properties of Water" is an exposition of the uses to which it may be put as well as pictures of water in an unharnessed state. The separation of water into its hydrogen and oxygen elements opens this section. There are pictures of the ocean, of clouds, of ice, of cascades, and of plants in which power is generated by water.

"Making an Individual Dress Form" shows the method of preparing a model cast from a plaster of paris shell in which the woman desiring the dress form is encased.

"Training Man-Hunters" is a picture of famous southern bloodhounds being trained to pursue fugitives. The manner in which the hounds are put on the trail, how they follow it, and how they act upon catching up with the fleeing man makes this an interesting subject. Hounds from this pack have successfully trailed a man eighty miles.

TOURS AROUND THE WORLD, NO. 16 (Feb. 20).—Scotland, Germany and France are the three countries represented in this issue of "Tours Around the World," to say nothing of the Principality of Monaco. There are picturesque views of the Scottish Highlands, comprenhensive pictures of Heidelberg, and a journey to the fashionable French watering place, and its nearby resort, Monte Carlo.

The Scottish pictures were taken in County Cromarty, showing the rapids of the Druin, the cataracts of Kilmorack, the cascades of Invermoriston and the hills of Inverness. Cromarty is the northeastern part of Scotland, one of the wildest and most beautiful regions of the Highlands. There is an attractive picture of the Highland cattle, the famous animals with their characteristic long, rough hair and long horns.

Heidelberg is seen in a panoramic view, and then the spectator is shown the old bridge across the Neckar, built in 1788. Most of this section of the reel is devoted to the castle which dates in part from the thirteenth century. It is now in ruins, part having been blown up in 1689, and part burned four years later when the French sacked the town. In 1864 fire destroyed most of what had either survived or been rebuilt. The beautiful gardens are shown with the buildings grouped about them.

Mentone was purchased from Monaco by France in 1860. The most attractive picture, perhaps, is that of the pine-covered promontory which shelters the Bay of Mentone, crowned by a great hotel near the villa of ex-Empress Eugenie, wife of Napoleon III. The Monte Carlo scenes include pictures of the Casino, the famous gambling resort, the beautiful gardens, and the open-air cafe.

SEE AMERICA FIRST, NO. 76 (Feb. 21).—The memorable siege of Vicksburg, Miss., by Gen. U. S. Grant, from March 29, 1863, to July 4 of the same year, is recalled upon viewing pictures of this city and the National Military Park there. Coincident with the fall of Vicksburg came the defeat of Lee at Gettysburg, these two disasters marking the beginning of the end for the Confederacy. In the National Cemetery are the graves of 16,892 Federal soldiers, 12,769 of whom are unknown.

There are views of the city with its stately court house built by slave labor in 1858, of the Yazoo and Mississippi rivers, and of the battlefield. Among the monuments pictured are the U. S. Navy Memorial, and those of Mississippi, Illinois, Wisconsin and Pennsylvania.

On the same reel is one of the entertaining Gaumont Kartoon Komics, "Polly's Day at Home." It deals with the escapades of a parrot which creates havoc by answering the telephone and making itself an interloper in other directions with dire results.

OH, FOR A WIFE—(Feb. 12).—The cast: The Girl (Billie Rhodes); The Boy (Harry Ham); His Chum (Nolan Leary); His Uncle (Harry Rattenberry); Substitute Bride (Ethel Lynne). Scenario by H. B. Hagenah. Directed by Horace Davey.

On the eve of their wedding, Harry and Billie quarrel. She gives back his ring and Harry goes home to find a letter from Uncle John, congratulating him and informing him that his uncle's check for five thousand is his the moment the knot is tied. He tries to make up, but Billie declines. His roommate, Nolan, suggests getting a girl from the employment agency and a fake minister to fool Uncle. This plan is adopted.

Next day, Uncle arrives. The girl from the agency, Ethel, starts for Harry's but sees a friend and goes for a ride. The car breaks down, delaying her. The pseudo minister is there and so is Uncle, but no bride-elect. Harry, desperate, compels Nolan to impersonate the bride. Meantime, Billie is remorseful, so she goes for a walk to relieve her feelings. Ethel is now hurrying to Harry's. Nolan makes a passable bride until he has serious trouble with his feminine apparel.

Embarrassed, he runs out determined to get a girl for Harry. The first one he seizes wouldn't do at all, but the second one is Billie and he rushes her to Harry's. Uncle notices only the change of clothing and the wedding is progressing when Ethel rushes in. It looks bad for a minute, but Nolan saves the situation by saying that she is to be his bride. The fake minister performs the double ceremony, Uncle hands over the check and makes his train, while the happy couples get an ordained minister to marry them.

Guido Capanelli is an adventurer, his good looks and courtly bearing helping him through many successes. He has gained entrance to the best society, incidentally making the acquaintance of Princess Dione, whose father, Prince Paul Ragosin, is in feeble health.

Prince Ragosin has expressed a wish that Princess Dione shall marry Feodor Strogoff, and on his death bed gains the promise from Dione that his wish shall be gratified. Feodor allows Guido Capanelli to be Dione's greatest source of sympathy in the hours of her grief, and in consequence, Guido so ingratiates himself with the Princess that she marries the adventurer, regardless of her pledge.

Previous to Prince Ragosin's death Dione became interested in Katerina Vlasoff, a girl who is a street vendor of crude images and daughter of Peter Vlasoff, a drunken beast. When the girl returns home one evening without having made a sale all day Vlasoff sends her into the streets, threatening her with harm if she does not return with money to buy him wine.

Katerina is accosted by Guido Capanelli, and submits to his advances that she may have money to take home. She is so humiliated that she is glad to take her brother's advice to visit Princess Dione, the friend of everybody who is poor and in distress. Touched by Katerina's story, Princess Dione sends the girl to a convent, having gained Prince Paul Ragosin's consent to thus befriend the outcast. After Dione and Guido are married, Katerina returns from the convent to make her home with her benefactress.

Guido, under threat of exposing Katerina, demands a renewal of their relations and the deceitful couple start at once to plot against Princess Dione. When the Princess falls ill, they appoint themselves her nurses and in neglecting to administer medicines properly create a comatose condition that closely resembles death. The Princess is buried and Guido and Katerina establish themselves in control of her lands and fortune.

When Dione had married Guido she received a book from Feodor Strogoff with an inscription in effect that he would always stand ready to befriend the woman he loved, but had discarded him for another. After the Princess is entombed, Feodor visits the sepulcher and discovers that Dione is alive, having simply been in a trance. Convinced, by what she herself witnessed of the treachery of her husband and Katerina, the Princess goes with Feodor to Rome, for the purpose of biding their time for vengeance.

Guido and Katerina visit Rome and Guido becomes enamored of a famous beauty who has become the toast of the town. The woman is slow to accept Guido's advances, but finally tells him that a famous ring that has been buried with the Princess Dione will be the price of her affection. When Guido returns to the sepulcher to rob his wife's corpse, he finds the coffin empty. As he turns away from the tomb, he sees what he believes to be the ghost of the Princess.

The apparition drives him insane and he runs to a nearby cliff and throws himself into the ocean. Katerina returns to the street from whence she came and Princess Dione and Feodor find happiness in marriage.

GREATER VITAGRAPH.

THE SECRET KINGDOM—(Episode No. 8—"Rum Cay"—Two parts—Feb. 19).—Both of the drifting boats are picked up by the same schooner, and so Fate throws the two parties together again.

Ramon attempts to murder Phillip with a dagger. The captain, resentful and believing Phillip's story, sets Ramon adrift again. That evening the schooner is becalmed off one of the West Indies, and is captured by Rum Cay and his band of negro pirates, and all on board are imprisoned in a cave.

Ramon's boat meanwhile has drifted in to shore, and he too is captured by Rum Cay, whom he bribes to slay all the male prisoners, including Phillip, Juan and the mate of the schooner, but to spare the women—Princess Julia and Savatz.

The fugitives, however, escape to the schooner and try to set sail. Finding the pirates coming, Phillip orders the ship, which is laden with dynamite and rum, set afire, and the party casts off in small boats. Ramon, Rum Cay and the pirates, not knowing the fugitives have taken to the boats, board the ship. Smoke is pouring from the hold. Ramon barely manages to leap overboard and swim away when a terrific explosion rends the schooner into pieces and brings to a terrible end the career of Rum Cay and his band.

Later on, Ramon is picked up by Phillip's boat, the fugitives letting their better feelings prevail. And then the boats drift on.

THE COURAGE OF SILENCE (Five Parts—Feb. 12).—The cast: Mercedes (Alice Joyce); Bradley (Harry Morey); Bobby (Willie Johnson); Baby (Mildred May); Alice (Cleo Ayres); Hammond (Robert Gaillard); Saunders (Walter McGrail); Spanish Ambassador (Anders Randolf); French Girl (Dorothy Conroy).

Bradley, who is happily married and loves his family, is called to London on business. There he meets Mercedes, wife of the Spanish Ambassador. The marriage has been forced upon her, and her husband is cruel. Unaware that Bradley is married, she falls in love with him, and he is also infatuated. His better nature finally prevails, and he returns home and is happy until he receives a photograph from Mercedes.

On pretext of business, he again goes back to Mercedes, finds there has been a quarrel, and that the ambassador has struck her. She and Bradley go away together, and while crossing the channel, he inadvertantly discloses the fact that he is married. Mercedes unwilling to come between husband and wife, flees to a convent, and Bradley, unable to find her, joins an expedition to the forests of South America.

Bradley has written his wife that he is a coward. Her health fails and her father takes her and the children for a trip abroad. The children are attacked by an epidemic of fever, and Mercedes, now a nurse, is summoned. She learns the identity of the family, and, when the boy calls for his father, she starts a search for him.

After the crisis, Mercedes who has concealed her identity by use of a veil, wins her fight against a renewal of their relations, and warns Bradley, who has recognized her, to keep his wife in ignorance. Recovering from the fever which has now claimed her, she sees the reunited family depart for America, and knows her heart is empty and closed forever to love.

METRO PICTURES CORP.

ONE OF MANY (Five parts—Feb. 12).—The cast: Shirley Bryson (Frances Nelson); Harold Templeton (Niles Welch); Emma Bryson, Shirley's sister (Mary Mersch); Mrs. Bryson, her mother (Coroline Harris); Wilfred Templeton, Harold's father (Harold Entwhistle); James Lowery, the butler (Richard Dix); Policeman (Walter Worden); Landlady (Adella Barker). Written and directed by Wm. Christy Cabanne.

The home of Mrs. Bryson and her two daughters is happy except for the poverty that prevents the girls from sending their sick mother away to the mountains. Both help to support the household, but it is Shirley who feels the responsibility of her mother's approaching death and her worry is evident to all about her. She is employed in a manicure shop frequented by wealthy men and meets Wilfred Templeton, who invites her to dine with him. He questions her about her dejected air and she tells him of her mother's illness. This is Templeton's opportunity, and he asks her to make a bargain with him. He will give her all the money she needs and in return she is to live with him in an apartment which he will establish for her.

Shirley refuses, but when her mother grows worse she yields and leads her mother and her sister to believe that she has married Templeton and Mrs. Bryson is happy.

When James Lowery, the butler in Shirley's new home, finds that she is not married to Templeton, he forces his way into her boudoir when she is dressing. With the greatest difficulty Shirley repulses him. She informs Templeton and Lowery is discharged.

Everything runs smoothly until Shirley invites her sister to visit her. Emma wants to see this wonderfully generous husband. Shirley is unable to conceal her secret, and Emma wrings a confession from her. The news so preys upon Emma's mind that she is unable to keep it a secret from her mother. Stricken at her child's dishonor, Mrs. Bryson gives up her battle for life.

Shirley leaves Templeton and goes to work as a cabaret entertainer. Lowery again forces his attentions upon her. He openly insults her and a young man at a nearby table comes to her rescue. The man is Harold Templeton, Wilfred's son, who is the "black sheep" of the family, and is living away from home. The acquaintance finally ripens into real affection.

The young people are married, but their happiness is clouded by the girl's fear that her husband will discover the truth about her past life. The expected happens when Wilfred Templeton forgives his son and comes to call on him and his bride. Shirley and her husband's father are brought face to face, and their manner accuses them before either makes a confession.

Harold turns against his wife. Later, however, his better nature asserts itself, and he drives his father away. Realizing Shirley's mistake was made, not for her own sake, but for her mother's, he forgives her and takes her into his arms.

THE GREAT SECRET (Chapter VII., "The Yellow Claw—Two Parts—Feb. 19).—A message from The Great Master halts the assassin just as he is ready to strike. Wee See visits the Great Master, whom he knows only as a prosperous business man, and tells him the story of Strong's fights. He then meets The Shadow. Dr. Zulph happens along for an appointment with one of his hirelings, who gives him a note. The Shadow picks Dr. Zulph's pocket, and hastens with Wee See to Ackerton's office. Wee See translates the note, written in Chinese, and finds it is from Dr. Git Sin, who refuses to carry out Zulph's orders. Zulph finds the note has been stolen, and hastens to Git Sin's place, where an angry scene ensues. Zulph tells him he will send another Chinaman of high degree who will carry out his orders.

The gangsters urge that Beverly be dressed in Chinese garb to prevent her escape. She refuses, and "Bull" Whalen suggests that she be confined in an opium den. They show her the room, and she is so horrified that she yields and dresses as they desire. Git Sin orders that she be brought to his table in the banquet hall, where there is a big celebration. Wee See, who obtained entrance as a musician, signals Beverly. She feigns illness and retires. Wee See escapes and locates her in a cell-like chamber. Lifting a panel he tells her to keep up her courage until he gets help.

He goes back to Ackerton, who takes him, together with The Shadow, to Strong's home. Strong overhears Ackerton say: "It takes this chink to get results. He has found Beverly again," and wants to start at once to her rescue. Strong and Wee See escape through an open window. The doctor and Ackerton decide the pair have gone to the den of Git Sin, and Ackerton at once goes to set the arm of the law into action.

Disguised as a distinguished Chinese, Strong enters the resort of Git Sin, who leaves the room, and Beverly and Strong are alone. He unmasks and a dramatic scene follows. One of Git Sin's helpers peeps through a secret panel and tells Git Sin the supposed Chinaman is a white man. Then the Chinaman whom Dr. Zulph had arranged for arrives. The gang are aroused and, armed to the teeth, they arrive at the door behind which are Strong and Beverly.

THE CLOUD PUNCHER—(Feb. 5).—The cast: The Artist (Hank Mann); The Hermit Inventor (Lynn Staley); The Town Squire (John Lancaster); His Daughter (Carmen Phillips); The Town Villain (Joe Lee); His Henchmen (Mack Wills and Don White).

It hasn't rained for week and there are no symptoms of coming rain to be found. An itinerant artist carrying a huge canvas rambles along a country road. He reaches the hut of a hermit inventor who is dying of thirst. The artist paints a picture of a reservoir so realistically that the water overflows and fills a cup which he holds in his hand. To reward his benefactor, the hermit gives the artist a number of rifle shells which when fired at the sky will produce rain.

In the meantime, Al. K. Hall, the village villain, attempts to kidnap the heroine, but is prevented by the artist.

To try out the invention the artist fires a shell at the sky and brings on a sun shower. The villain steals the rest of the shells, puts them in a cannon and ties the heroine to the cannonball. When this charge is fired, a cloudburst descends upon the village and wipes it off the map.

The heroine who has been carried to the clouds is rescued by the artist who converts himself into an airship by using an electric fan as a propeller.

The villain is foiled and the artist and maiden are wed in the water-soaked village.

BRAINSTORM (Fox comedy—Two parts—Jan. 22).—The cast: Wilson Schlitz ("Smiling Billy" Mason); His Dad, an oil magnate (Louis Morrison); His Son (Joey Jacobs); The Superintendent (Porter Strong); The Secretary (Billie Bennett); The Girl (Ivy Crosthwaite).

Wilson Schlitz is sleeping off last night's accumulation of cheer. His father, the oil field owner, is angry and writes Wilson as follows:

"If you are not in this office at three o'clock today, I will give the property to whoever is here at that time, your son or the superintendent."

The letter blows out the window and against the face of the superintendent. He notes its contents and then it blows away again. He chases it and in turn is chased by father, who gets the letter and sends it to Wilson.

The villainous superintendent tries to keep Wilson and his son from the office at 3 o'clock. The action carries the principals over the oil fields and to the tops of the derricks. The power house is blown up, the oil field catches fire, a dam breaks and other funny incidents occur. When it's all ended the villain is foiled.

HIS TICKLISH JOB—(Jan. 29).—The cast: The Splinter (Hank Mann); Boss Crook (Gordon Mullin); The Girl (Frances Burnham); The Man (Bob Sandberg).

A sweet young thing is celebrating her sixteenth birthday. The hero trims the villain and sends him away roaring for vengeance. The villain is head of a gang of crooks. At the villain's order, the butler, who is his lieutenant, steals the birthday cake. The villain determines to put a bomb in the cake and he chooses a simple-minded youth from a street crowd. The youth objects and doesn't see why they should pick on him. However he disguises as the crooked butler and takes the cake back to the party. The gangsters follow. The bomb is in his pocket and he stalls on planting it as long as he can. Then, still under pressure, he inserts in the cake what he believes to be the bomb. The results bring about a comic situation.

THE NEW YORK PEACOCK (Five Parts—Feb. 5).—The cast: Zena (Valeska Suratt); Billy (Harry Hilliard); Martin, his father (Eric Mayne); The Mother (Alice Gale); Billy's Wife (Claire Whitney); Graham (W. W. Black); Miller (John Mackin); Durrant (Frank Goldsmith). Written by Mary Murillo. Directed by Kenean Buel.

Billy Martin is sent to New York to put through a war contract for his father, a new England manufacturer, and takes $100,000 as a security. The munition broker's secretary, a crook, tells Graham, a gambling house keeper, of Billy's coming. Miller is detailed to lure him to the gambling house.

Miller, posing as the broker's representative, meets Billy and offers to show him New York life. He meets Zena and is so captivated that he consents to try his luck at the roulette wheel. After his first success he loses rapidly. At last Zena drags him away with only $15,000 left.

Zena repentant, tries to comfort Billy. She finds he is determined to win back his losses and is captivated by his pluck. Reluctantly she takes him to the gambling house. Billy loses all. When the mail brings no word from Billy, his wife comes to New York. She enters his room just after he and Zena arrive. Zena hides in a closet. Billy refuses to return with his wife until he has recovered his father's money.

Zeena returns to her apartment. Graham accuses her of double-crossing him. She orders him to leave. Zena sets out to recover Billy's money, and returns to the gambling house. Graham thinks she has repented. Martin comes to New York for Billy. Zena picks him out as the man from whom to get the money. She lures him to her den. Billy calls up, and when Zena recognizes his voice she hangs up. Suspecting Zena has deceived him Billy rushes to the apartment and finds her embracing his father Zena rushes to him. Billy casts her off. Martin tells Billy he did this to show the treachery of Zena's love. Heaping abuse on Zena, who sees her one true love lost, Billy leaves with his father. Zena in remorse leaves her old home and life, a wreck.

Billy asks his father's forgiveness. "I forgive you," says the old man, "but I can't forget that I trusted you."

WORLD-PICTURES.

THE RED WOMAN (Five parts—Feb. 12).—The cast: Maria Temosach (Gail Kane); Morton Dean (Mahlon Hamilton); Sancho (Ed. F. Roseman); Dora Wendell (June Elvidge); Her mother (Charlotte Earlcott).

Marie Temosach, an Indian girl, graduates with honors at at eastern college, but is not received socially, and is glad to return to her old home. She is coveted by Sancho, a cattle thief, but she rebuffs his advances.

Morton Dean, a spendthrift, is trapped into an engagement with Dora Wendell, a society adventuress. His father threatens to disinherit him, and dies within a short time, leaving one will bequeathing only his mines to Morton, and a supplementary will, specifying that the rest of his estate should go to Morton after six months.

Dora refuses to marry Morton, believing him penniless, and he goes to Mexico, where he and Marie become mutually attracted to each other. Sancho becomes jealous, and after being worsted in a fight with Morton, swears revenge. Marie warns Morton, but he tells her to have no fear. Later Morton is wounded and rescued by Marie, who takes him to her cabin. They declare their love, and Marie, telling Morton that he shall henceforth be "her god," destroys the idol she has previously worshipped.

Dora, learning that Morton has not been disinherited, follows him. She meets Sancho, and they go to Marie's cabin. To save Morton, Marie paints him to represent the idol and places him on the pedestal. Sancho and Dora, not suspecting this ruse, search the cabin, but cannot find him.

Marie forces Morton to go back to the white girl, despite his protests. Later, haunted by visions of him, she rises in the night, and goes onward and onward, as in a dream, until she is in the embrace of the man she loves.

Sancho again annoys Marie, who proudly shows him her baby. He tells her he is the child's father—that the night she walked in her sleep

Jim Bludso is engineer of the Mississippi River packet the "Prairie Belle." He has a home in Gilgal, Ill., and a wife and twelve-month-old baby at the time the story opens, in 1861. A call is received for volunteers and he joins the Northern army. His wife is a Southern girl, and she opposes his joining the Union forces The quarrel results in a separation and Jim goes to war.

Ben Merrill, an unscrupulous contractor. meets Jim's wife in Natchez, her home town, and induces her to go with him to New Orleans. She deserts her baby and goes. In New Orleans a levee contractor comes to Merrill with the proposition that they take the contract for a new levee to be built at Gilgal. Merrill accepts and leaves New Orleans without telling the woman where he is going, and she is left to take care of herself.

After the war Jim returns to Natchez and finds that his wife has deserted their little boy, and no one knows where she is. He takes the boy, Little Breeches, and Banty Tim, a negro, who has saved his life during the war, and returns to Gilgal. He is welcomed by Kate Taggart, the daughter of the village storekeeper.

Jim's wife yearns for her baby and returns. Jim forgives her for the child's sake. The high waters are coming on and Merrill is afraid that the levee will not hold. He plans to lay the blame on Jim and the negro. He arouses the suspicion of the townspeople against the negro and Jim is forced to fight for Banty Tim on several occasions. Merrill meets Jim's wife and induces her to loosen the sandbags and leave the water into the village. She escapes in a boat, the bottom of which has been cut by Merrill. In the middle of the stream the boat begins to sink and Banty Tim goes to her rescue.

The negro is accused of breaking the levee and then escaping. Jim offers his life as a forfeit if the negro does not return by sunrise. The next day the village people are at Indian Mound, and the men are about to hang Jim because Banty Tim has not come back. Just then he comes on with Little Breeches, who tells of his rescue by the negro.

A year later Jim is again engineer of the "Prairie Belle." In a race with another boat the engines become overheated. Merrill is aboard and Jim has him locked in the oil room. When the boat takes fire Jim goes and opens the door of the oil room and finds his son there with Merrill. While they are trying to escape the boilers explode. Jim is rescued from the debris by Banty Tim. Some time later Jim's wife having died, he and Little Breeches and Kate and Banty Tim are united in a happy family.

THE CRAB (Kay Bee—Five parts—Feb. 4).—The cast: Ivy Marten (Thelma Salter); Foster Barrum (Frank Keenan); "Warts" Warner (Ernest Butterworth); Mrs. Borrum (Gertrude Claire); Jim Owens (J. P. Lockney); "Doc" Wingate (Thomas J. Guise).

Foster Borrum is the wealthiest man in the town of Norwalk. He practically owns everything. He has won his position by merciless grinding and is regarded by the villagers with fear and contempt. A stern man, with only one softening influence in his life—his wife, whom he idolizes. The wife dies and Borrum turns on the world with added bitterness and hatred.

He is living a life of dreary isolation when one day a visitor steps off the train at the station—a little girl; also alone in the world; who has been tagged to her destination in the search of a relative who has long since disappeared. The villagers are too poor to adopt the child. In a cynical mood Borrum takes possession of the girl, Ivy Marten, and installs her in his home.

Ivy, aching for sympathy, meets with no response from the austere man, whose treatment of her borders on brutality. Exaggerated reports of this reach the authorities, and Borrum is haled before them. Ivy, who loves the old man in spite of his coldness, is the prime witness for the defense and her loyal support of her guardian wins the day.

A change comes over the attitude of Borrum towards the child and the world in general and with a softened heart he strives to make life happier for the orphan and for the hitherto despised inhabitants of the poverty stricken village.

Cliff Hudspeth, the leader of a band of outlaws in Arizona, has won his place by the killing of notorious gun-bullies. At their headquarters, in the Gila Mountains, in consultation with "Ace High," his lieutenant, he plans depredations on the neighboring settlements.

Although Hudspeth is powerful, their rule is disputed by El Salvador, a half-breed, and his following of desperadoes. Desert Pass is the scene of many conflicts between the contending bands.

Rumors of the arrival of miners with gold causes El Salvador to send "Cactus" Fuller, his henchman, to levy tribute by a hold-up, which is successful. Flushed with triumph, he boasts in the "Golden Fleece" saloon of the ignominies to which he would treat Cliff Hudspeth if he ever met him.

Hudspeth arrives and makes Cactus, whom he throws out of the saloon, realize that something must be done to retrieve a shattered reputation. Coming out of the saloon, Hudspeth sees Norma Wright, a milliner, standing at the door of her little store, and waves her inside, as he anticipates trouble. The shooting commences and Cactus is defeated.

As Hudspeth is preparing to leave town Norma denounces him as a cold-blooded murderer. Stung almost to madness by the girl's accusation, he seizes her and gallops out of town. At his retreat he locks the stupefied girl in a room and seeks to drown the memory of her words with whiskey. The whiskey, and his awakened conscience, bring him to review his life, and, half delirious, he sees his victims pass reproachfully before him. The girl, too, becomes aware of the human side of the man and next morning she brings him around to her way of thinking and extracts a pledge that he will never willingly kill another human being.

Soon after there comes from a member of the legislature offer of a pardon and restoration to citizenship if Cliff will undertake to rid Arizona of El Salvador. Hearing of Cliff's new appointment, El Salvador is wild with rage, and burns the town and drags Norma away to the mountains. Cliff Hudspeth rescues her and kills El Salvador, although mortally wounded himself. He places the girl on a horse, which bears her to safety, and passes away consoled that his last killing was in her defense.

THE GIRL OF THE TIMBERCLAIMS (Fine Arts—Five parts—Feb. 11).—The cast: Jess (Constance Talmadge); Francis Ames (A. D. Sears); Bob Mullen (Clyde Hopkins); Cora Abbott (Beau Byrd); Senator Hoyle (Wilbur Higby); Eddie Stanley (Bennie Schuman); Leather Hermit (Joseph Singleton); Jess' Father (F. A. Turner); Mrs. Kiesey (Mrs. Talmadge); A Homesteader (Charles Lee).

Jess Vance and her father are homesteaders in the Northwest. For some time land-frauds "engineered" by a "ring" controlled by Senator Hoyle have been going on. Francis Ames, a lawyer, is sent by the government to investigate. The homesteaders endeavor to see Ames, but by the manipulation of Senator Hoyle are prevented from doing so, and they feel that Ames has double-crossed them. Jess boasts bravely of what she would do if she found one of the "dummies" on her claim.

Ames learns that one of Hoyle's henchmen has arranged to send dummies to the timberland to "establish a residence" and cinch the ring's claim to the township where Jess lives. Ames stating that he is going East, follows the dummies. Jess meets Ames on her claim and orders him off. He refuses to leave and at the expiration of three days Jess again orders him off, and when he still refuses she shoots him, inflicting only a slight wound. Meantime his secretary, Stanley, meets Cora Abbott, a former friend of Ames. She obtains information that Ames is laid up in his cabin and reports to Hoyle. He tells her to "get something" on Ames.

She goes to the woods, and to Ames' dismay insists that she has come to nurse him back to health. In the meantime Jess, feeling sorry for him, has bandaged his wound. He learns of the contempt in which he is held by the settlers. Cora, to get rid of Jess, tells her that she and Ames are engaged. Ames asks Cora to leave, which she does, after a stormy scene, but she bribes two forest scouts to burn Ames' cabin on the night the settlers have decided to burn the cabin of the jumpers. Ames, hearing of the proposed attempt to drive out the jumpers, leaves his cabin in charge of a half-breed.

When Jess is told of the burning of Ames' cabin, and the finding of a charred body, she is broken-hearted, and to forget her own heartache offers to go to Portland to see if anything can be done toward the settlement of the homesteaders' wrongs. She is granted an interview with Ames, and there are two very surprised people when Ames sees his forest girl and Jess discovers that her jumper and the despised Ames are one and the same. Later she gladly gives up her homestead rights to become Ames' bride.

GREED (Third of "Seven Deadly Sins"—Five Parts—McClure—Feb. 12).—The cast: Alma (Nance O'Neil); Eve Leslie (Shirley Mason); Adam Moore (George Le Guere); "Doc" Denton (Harry Northrup); Richard Cole (Robert Elliott); "Jimmie" Hobson (Alfred Hickman). Directed by Theodore Marston.

Eve Leslie and Adam Moore become interested in the stock market. Eve decides to try to add to her fortunes by plunging. Tempted by the sin of greed, Eve becomes reckless. At first she wins, then she begins to lose, and desperately tries to recover her losses.

She meets Alma, who formerly was a party to illegal stock transactions, but who is now living an honorable life. Alma is discovered by the sin of greed, Eve becomes reckless. At formerly was connected and who knows her history. Denton is wanted by the police. He blackmails Alma. Eve and Adam become involved with their friend, Alma, who hates Denton. Denton wants her to marry him and after she refuses, finally turns to Eve.

Denton gives a sensational party, during which the men, as a stunt, put aside all their money and choose partners. Each couple is given a dime and told to go out into the city, spend it as adventurously as possible and return to tell their experiences.

Eve is paired with Denton and Alma with Adam. The novel plan develops exciting incidents. Denton traps Eve. Alma and Adam return to rescue her. In the excitement, Denton is killed and Alma is wounded so that she loses her mind. Adam is arrested. Alma is the only person who saw the crime committed, but she is unable to testify. Adam is sentenced to death.

In the denouement, after Adam seems to have been proved guilty, his life is saved and he returns to Eve, who forever is cured of the sin of greed.

THE SHADOW OF THE NORTH POLE.—Christian Leden, the famous Norwegian Arctic explorer, has taken a series of pictures for this week's release. These were secured during the last dash into the Arctic Circle that this explorer made.

PARAMOUNT-BURTON HOLMES TRAVEL-PICTURES—("From Regina to The Rockies"—Feb. 5).—Scenes: Royal Northwest Mounted Police in action; the commissioner; the prairies of Saskatchewan; glimpses of the Blackfoot Indian tribes; visiting the Bassano Dam Canadian irrigation; Calgary, the metropolis of Alberta; westward toward the Rockies in ideal observation cars; Mr. Holmes introduces you to the Duchess of Connaught at Banff Hotel, a famous Canadian resort, the Switzerland of America.

EACH TO HIS KIND—(Lasky—5 parts—Feb. 5).—The cast: Rhandah (Sessue Hayakawa); Princess Nada (Tsuru Aoki); Amy Dawe (Vola Vale); Colonel Marcy (Ernest Joy); Dick Larimer (Eugene Pallette); Colonel Dawe (Guy Oliver); Mulai Singh (Walter Long); Asa Judd (Paul Weigel); The Maharajah (Cecil Holland).

Rhandah, who is to succeed his father, the Maharajah of Dharpuli, is sent to Oxford to be educated. The Princess Nada, to whom he is engaged, fearful of the outcome of his journey, gives him an amulet to bring him back to her in safety. At the college, he soon becomes accustomed to English customs, but refuses all invitations into society. He meets Amy, daughter of Colonel Dawe, and they become interested in each other. Amy wagers that she can persuade the Prince to give her the amulet and succeeds in having him accept her invitation to a party; she manages to see Rhandah alone and secures the amulet.

Dick Larimer, to whom Amy is engaged, denounces Amy for doing such a thing. Asa Judd, tutor to the Maharajah's son, has taken a snap shot of Amy and Rhandah and sent it to Colonel Marcy, the Resident British Councilor. Mulai Singh, an aspirant to the throne, obtains possession of the photograph. Rhandah, embittered, returns home just as the Maharajah dies. By his bedside he swears eternal vengeance on all the English and is overheard by Nada. He seeks out Mulai Singh and obtains the picture, declaring his intention of leading his people against the English, issuing a command that all captured English be brought before him.

Dick is taken and Rhandah orders him to the dungeon. Amy has come to India with her father and is also taken by the outlaws, but when they see the amulet they release her. Nada recognizes her from the picture, and comes upon Rhandah and Amy as he is contemplating what he shall do with Dick. Rhandah makes advances to Amy which she dares not resent, and tells him she will do anything to save Dick, but he replies there is nothing that will save her sweetheart. Nada, listening, ready to kill Amy with a dagger, overhears and rushes into Rhandah's arms vowing her belief in him. At Amy's solicitation, Nada intercedes and Dick is set free. All the trouble and turmoil is at last ended, and both couples are happy.

HER OWN PEOPLE—(Pallas—5 parts—Feb. 8).—The cast includes: Lenore Ulrich, Howard Davies, Colin Chase, Adelaide Woods, Jack Stark, Gail Brooks, Joy Lewis, William Winter Jefferson.

John Kemp, a wealthy man, after the announcement of his engagement to Eleanor Dutton, overhears her declare her love for another man, at the same time stating that she must marry Kemp for his money. Heartbroken, Kemp goes to the mountain wilderness. Eleanor marries the man she loves and Kemp marries The Morning Star, an Indian. They have a daughter, Alona, whom Kemp idolizes. She meets Frank Colvin, a poor young prospector, and they become attached to each other.

Kemp feels it his duty to return to civilization in order to complete Alona's education. He places her in a fashionable boarding school. Upon learning that she is of Indian blood the girls snub her, only one, Myra Agnew, being kind. Myra takes Alona home with her at Christmas time, that she may meet her brother, Blinn, in the hopes that he will morry her. Alona, by accident, learns that Blinn cares only for her fortune, and upon the death of her father she returns to her people, embittered. She again meets Frank Colvin, who declares his love for her. She decides to test him and buys his mine through an unknown agent. He returns to the city, seeks out Alona, and promises to bring his mother and sister to see her. The mother and sister, however, having been informed that Frank intends to marry an Indian, call on Alona and, when they see her real beauty, tell her they do not wonder Frank loves her, and plan a big surprise for him.

That night Alona sends her car for Frank and, accompanied by his mother and sister, they are driven to Alona's beautiful mansion. Here he finds her transformed from the simple Indian maiden he believes her to be into an heiress. Now that Alona is satisfied he loves her for herself alone, she reveals her real identity and their happiness is complete.

HE GOT THERE AFTER ALL (Klever Komedy—Feb. 12).—During the twenty-first birthday party Doris Page receives a letter from her uncle to the effect that unless she is married by midnight she will lose the title to his estate, so turning to Vic, who has proposed to her, agrees to marry him right away. Vic embraces her and announces that ten o'clock that night will be the hour for the happy event.

Jim Norton, who is also a suitor for Doris' hand, starts out to try to prevent Doris' marriage to Vic. Vic and Doris go to get their marriage license, and then Vic goes home to prepare for the wedding. He takes a bath, and Norton and his friend steal all of his clothes. Vic is in a dilemma until his friend, Bill Morris, who is dressed in his evening clothes, calls. Vic pleads with him to lend him his dress clothes, as it is then ten o'clock. Morris agrees, and though much too small for Vic, he manages to squeeze into them. He leaves his friend dressed in a bathrobe.

He runs for a car and drops his hat near a traffic signal and tries to pick it up; but as the trousers are too tight he finds it impossible to do so. Holding on to the traffic signal, and balancing himself, he finally gets the hat. Norton, who has followed, handcuffs him to the traffic signal, so when Vic gets up and starts to leave he has to take the traffic signal with him. He arrives at a thoroughfare and works the "stop and go" signal. One machine stops, and the occupant agrees to help him, so Vic gets into the motor car. Norton has also secured a marriage license, and tells Doris Vic is handcuffed, and the key which he exhibits is the only one which will open the handcuffs. He drops the key in a mail box, and Doris tries to get it. One of her rings gets caught, and it is impossible to get her hand free.

It is now a quarter to twelve, and Norton offers to marry her, but she refuses.

Vic, with the traffic sign, comes up in the motor car and sends for the minister who happens to be tongue-tied, and who manages to get them married before the necessary hour. The letter carrier arrives and frees Doris, who gets the key and releases Vic.

HEARST PATHE NEWS NO. 10 (Jan. 31).

St. Paul, Minn.—Ten thousand joyful pleasure-seekers, garbed in varicolored costumes, make Minnesota's Second Outdoor Sports Carnival a merry affair. Subtitles: Novel games are a feature of the event. Many risk a fall on the doubtful skis.

Pittsburgh, Pa.—An entire square block of the crowded business section is consumed by a disastrous fire, with a loss of $2,000,000. Subtitles: The cold weather soon covers the burned buildings with an icy mantle. Fire escapes are torn and twisted from their positions.

New York City.—Several freight cars carrying supplies for the belligerents are dumped into the river when the lighter turns over. Subtitle: A diver is sent down in an effort to raise the cars.

In Serbia.—Monastir, recently recaptured by the Serbs, is an example of the unquenchable spirit that animates a nation fighting to liberate its land. Subtitles: Allied troops, who greatly aided the Serbs in their campaign, enter the city. Prince Alexandre returns to his suffering country. General Didericks reviews the victorious troops.

London, England.—"Troops, and still more troops," is the rallying call to which all Britain nobly responds, as the Allies determine to struggle grimly on to victory. Subtitle: Off for the training camp—to be converted into stubborn fighting Tommies.

Park Tower, Wyo.—Herds of bison, which once wildly roamed the Western prairies, are now almost extinct except in captivity. Subtitles: Their friendly way of greeting each other. The bison still retains his ferocious appearance. Mammoth Hot Springs, one of the picturesque garden spots of the United States.

Sourlake, Tex.—Southwestern oil fields receive a boom when a huge new gusher shddenly breaks forth, flooding the surrounding section. Subtitle: The powerful stream has a capacity of 20,000 barrels a day.

Red Bank, N. J.—Airplaning on the ice—a new sport which combines the pleasures of ice-boating with the thrill of the whirling propeller, is now possible for ardent speed lovers. Subtitles: The machine is operated like an airplane and can travel at a fast clip. Crowds at Mill Neck, L. I., are entertained with frequent exhibitions of fancy skating. Miss Margaret Wilson, daughter of the President, enjoys an exhilarating winter hike at Yama Farms, N. Y.

Columbus, N. M.—The American Expedition in Mexico is at an end, and the entire force sent across the border eleven months ago is recalled. Subtitles: Armed guards convoy the transport wagon trains. Mules are used extensively to carry supplies over the rough trails of the Mexican deserts. General John J. Pershing, whose admirable command restored peace on the troublesome Southern border.

Bristol, R. I. (Boston only).—The Memorial High School, presented by Colonel Colt to the children of Bristol, is the only marble school in the country. Subtitle: The $1,000,000 school has seventy-five pupils.

PEARL OF THE ARMY (Episode No. 10—"The Silent Army"—Two parts—Astra—Feb. 4). —The cast: Pearl Dare (Pearl White); T. O. Adams (Ralph Kellard); Major Brent (Theodore Friebus).

Pearl, suspicious of her father's new secretary, follows him and becomes involved in a series of incidents that end in her starting in an aeroplane with T. O. Adams in pursuit of the Silent Menace's "Silent Flyer." She has learned the Silent Army has been secretly mobilizing and intend attacking the Government Chemical Building to secure the wafers which will make legible the canal defense plans now in their possession.

When the henchman who has the Silent Flyer in charge becomes aware of his pursuers he realizes there is but one course—to ram the other machine. With his machine tearing through space at eighty miles an hour, he turns and makes straight for them. Adams forces Pearl to jump with the parachute. She has barely escaped when there is a crash and both machines fall to the ground. Pearl makes her way towards the mass of twisted wreckage. Suddenly behind her she senses a presence, she turns——

PATRIA (Episode No. 5—"The Island God Forgot"—International—Two parts—Feb. 11) —The cast: Patria Channing (Mrs. Vernon Castle); Donald Parr (Milton Sills); Baron Huroki (Warner Oland).

Patria manages to keep afloat by means of the life preserver which Fanny Adair to ease her guilty conscience threw to her. Donald Parr flies in his hydroplane to Newport, where Elaine with her close resemblance to Patria has fooled her hostess. Donald is bewildered by Patria's refusal to see him.

Receiving a suspicious communication, he follows the messenger and learns he is one of a colony of spies inhabiting an island twenty miles from shore, on which are stored munitions. In the meanwhile Patria has floated to this island, where a man named Jaurez finds her unconscious on the beach and revives her. Haku, the commander, announces his determination to kill Patria in accordance with rules regarding all invaders. Jaurez defends her by keeping Haku at bay with a can of nitroglycerine.

In attempting to aid Patria's escape in an aeroplane Jaurez is shot. With no other choice, Patria plunges again into the sea. Meanwhile, Donald, who has followed in his hydroplane, is startled by Patria's cry for help. Sweeping down, he rescues her. Haku pursues in the aeroplane Jaurez had removed from the hangar, taking with him the nitroglycerine. High in the air he exchanges shots with Donald. One of the shots at Haku strikes home—his machine falls on the storehouse of explosives and completely demolishes the "Island God Forgot."

HER LIFE AND HIS (Thanhouser Gold Rooster—Five parts—Feb. 18).—The cast: Mary Murdock (Florence La Badie); Ralph Howard (H. E. Herbert); Mrs. Nan Travers (Ethyle Cooke); Emmett Conger (Sam Niblack); Political Boss (Justus D. Barnes).

Mary Murdock, forced by circumstances to choose between the streets and theft, is caught breaking into the home of Robert Howard. He is inclined to listen to her plea for leniency, but, urged by his cruel and selfish wife, lets the law take its course.

After serving her term she is unable to secure employment, due to her prison record, and seeks the two who are responsible for her plight. She finds Howard despondent over his wife's running away with another man and about to commit suicide. To the man who wanted to die the girl who wanted to live makes a proposition—to use his fortune to better prison conditions and lending those with a prison record a helping hand. She offers her own knowledge as her half of the partnership.

He accepts and the plan proves so successful that Howard is appointed Warden of a large prison. But matters sail along too smoothly and cleanly to suit the corrupt political ring and they start a blackmailing scheme against Howard. Mary's intuition senses a solution to Howard's vindication and she matches her brains against the political boss and his henchmen and clears the name of the man she loves and reaps her first real happiness as her reward.

Yes, it's possible to project pictures on a ghostly, ghastly plain white sheet or on a kalsomined wall—

Just as it is also possible to travel from New York to 'FRISCO today by ox-team as in the days of the Forty-Niners.

But* people aren't traveling by ox-team today, because there are infinitely better methods of travel—

And wise exhibitors are not projecting pictures on ghostly, ghastly plain white sheets and kalsomined walls because there is an infinitely better projection surface called the

A scenario department

Considers only type-written manuscripts—others are too hard to follow.

Your audiences are interested in clear pictures only—for the same reason.

The clearest pictures are on Eastman Film—identifiable by the stencil mark in the margin.

"EASTMAN"

In Every Corner of your pictures, as well as in the center of the screen, the details will stand out sharp and vivid if your projector is equipped with a lens, which transmits a flood of brilliant light and focuses with extreme accuracy because the lens does not rotate.

A Marlux lens gives you an ideal equipment when used with a first class modern projecting machine—and enables you to make the most out of an older projector.

What is Good to Some May Be Poor to Others

Your patrons may have widely different tastes in subjects and performance. You cannot please all with any one film.

But you can be sure there's a pull on one thing and that is projection. You cannot please anyone with a poor, flickering, uncertain light. Poor light will spoil the best of films, but white light will wonderfully improve even a poor film.

And the poor light costs just as much. If it's from alternating current it costs more.

Wagner Quality

Get the pictures on the screen right, help your operator to please your patrons.

Let us tell you what the White Light Converter has done for others. Send today for booklet, "Standing Room Only" and bulletin 10923.

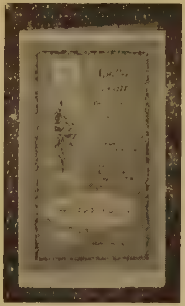
Give Them a Program They'll Keep!



THERE is not anywhere in America a patron of a first-class motion picture theatre who will throw away our beautiful

4-Page Program De Luxe

They'll keep it because it looks beautiful and valuable. It has intrinsic merit. It comes in twelve classy designs and is printed in three colors. On its two inside pages there is ample room for your full week's bill. Patrons will use it as a daily reference, thus stimulating your business. It by giving your business neighbors the privilege of using its back page for advertising. Every house that enjoys a distinctive patronage should use this high-toned program. Territorial protection guaranteed. Send for samples.

Pays for Itself

BIG NEW UNIVERSAL SERIAL

Attention, Exhibitors---Something New Something Different For You and For Your Fans !!

AGAIN the mighty Universal Organization comes to the front for Exhibitors with a powerful money-getting box-office attraction—"The Voice on the Wire"—beyond all question the most notable mystery serial ever conceived or produced.

The mysterious "voice on the wire" gives warning in advance of each one of a series of crimes, and it is the duty of Montague Shirley, the great criminal investigator, to solve the mystery.

Through three stirring episodes, in which the mystery grows deeper and more baffling, BEN WILSON, the popular Universal Star, as Shirley, supported by an immense company in a particularly lavish production, with beautiful Neva Gerber as leading woman, gives a performance that has never been equalled even by the master serial successes for which the Universal is famous.

NOW is the time to book this unusual multi-reel photoplay. An unusually elaborate Advertising Campaign Book has been prepared, is now on the press, and will be sent to any Exhibitor FREE. Write today to your nearest Universal Exchange and ask for a copy of "The Voice on the Wire" Campaign Book. Tells you all you want to know about this great serial, including advertising props, etc.

After Selling Valuable State Rights Territory on this Unusual Production All Negotiations Were Withdrawn Owing to the Insistent Demands of BLUEBIRD Exchange Managers, Who Will Release It as a BLUEBIRD Special Release.

(Not on the Regular BLUEBIRD Program)

BLUEBIRD Considers This Its Most Important Announcement

A picture so big—so unusual—that, even judged by the ultra-critical BLUEBIRD Exchange men according to the high BLUEBIRD standard, it was pronounced one of the greatest pictures ever produced anywhere.

In spite of the fact that after weeks of advertising, valuable State Rights on this remarkable picture had been sold—THE MONEY WAS RETURNED—NEGOTIATIONS FOR FURTHER SALE WERE WITHDRAWN—and BLUEBIRD Exchange Managers prepared to release it as a BLUEBIRD Special—not on the regular BLUEBIRD Program of releases.

Now that it is a BLUEBIRD, we do not hesitate to say that it is the finest BLUEBIRD ever released. "Hell Morgan's Girl" is based on a big story; time—the great San Francisco disaster; place—the famous Barbary Coast resorts of that wonderfully cosmopolitan city. Without fear of contradiction, we pronounce this picture one of the three greatest box-office attractions on the market today.

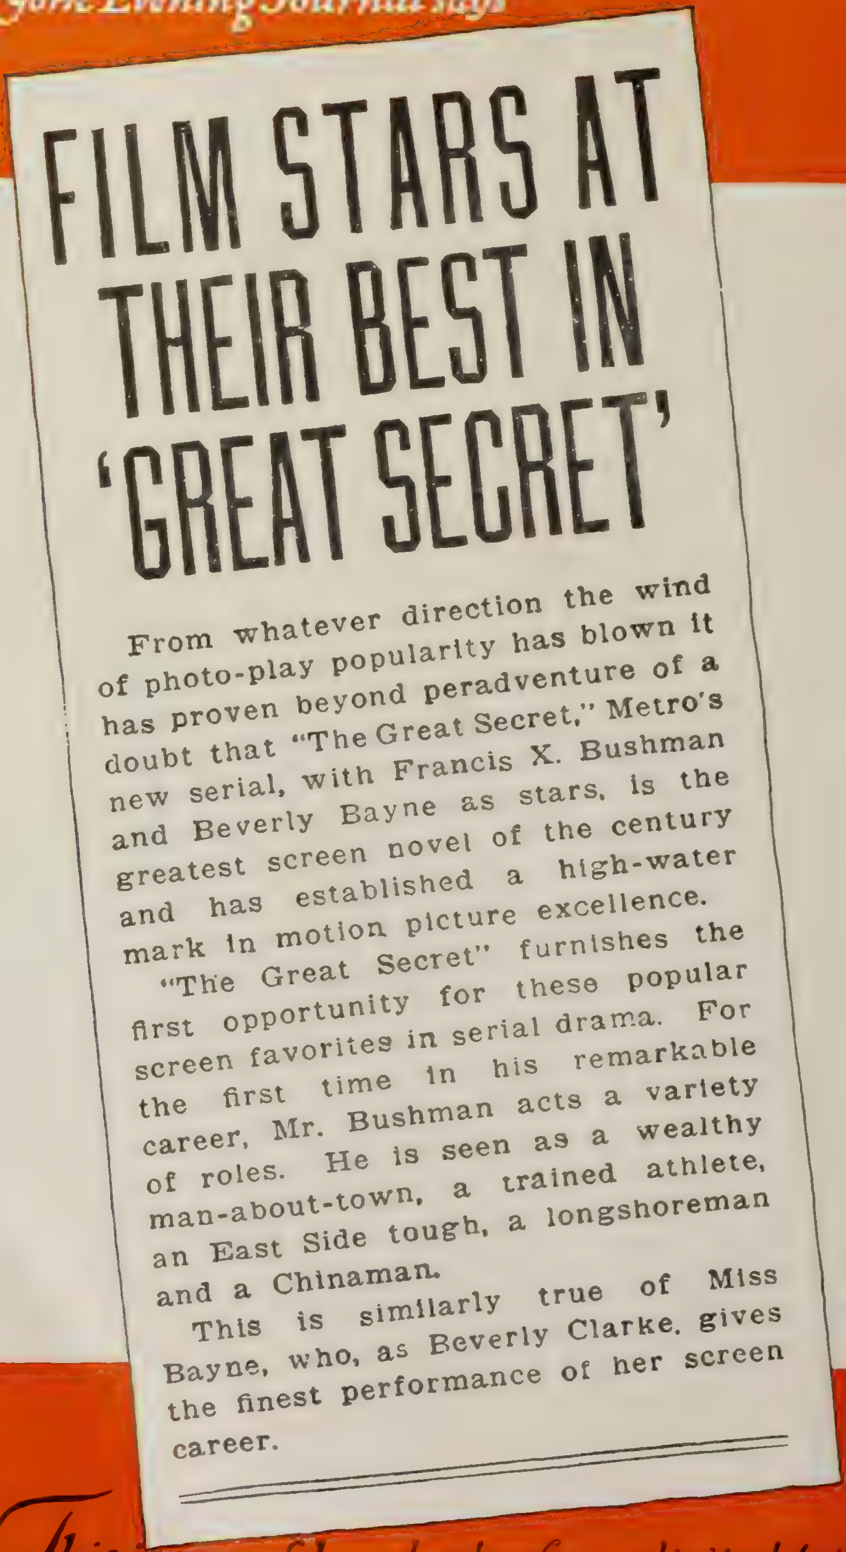
The New York Evening Journal says



FILM STARS AT THEIR BEST IN 'GREAT SECRET'

From whatever direction the wind of photo-play popularity has blown it has proven beyond peradventure of a doubt that "The Great Secret," Metro's new serial, with Francis X. Bushman and Beverly Bayne as stars, is the greatest screen novel of the century and has established a high-water mark in motion picture excellence.

"The Great Secret" furnishes the first opportunity for these popular screen favorites in serial drama. For the first time in his remarkable career, Mr. Bushman acts a variety of roles. He is seen as a wealthy man-about-town, a trained athlete, an East Side tough, a longshoreman and a Chinaman.

This is similarly true of Miss Bayne, who, as Beverly Clarke, gives the finest performance of her screen career.

This is one of hundreds of unsolicited tributes to the box office power of

ADDRESS
ARTPICT

February 7th, 1917.

To the Exhibitors of the World,

Gentlemen:-

In the future, the photoplays in which Mr. Douglas Fairbanks will appear will be released by Artcraft Pictures Corporation in the United States and throughout the world.

It is but natural that I personally should feel deeply gratified at this arrangement.

Artcraft Pictures Corporation was founded for the express purpose of distributing and exploiting photoplay productions that are in universal demand. Many exhibitors because of program affiliations have been denied some of the greatest and most popular attractions. Artcraft is the medium that knows no favorites.

Through such methods of service it has been possible for you to exhibit the Mary Pickford pictures and to arrange for the showing of the nearly completed George M. Cohan picture, "Broadway Jones".

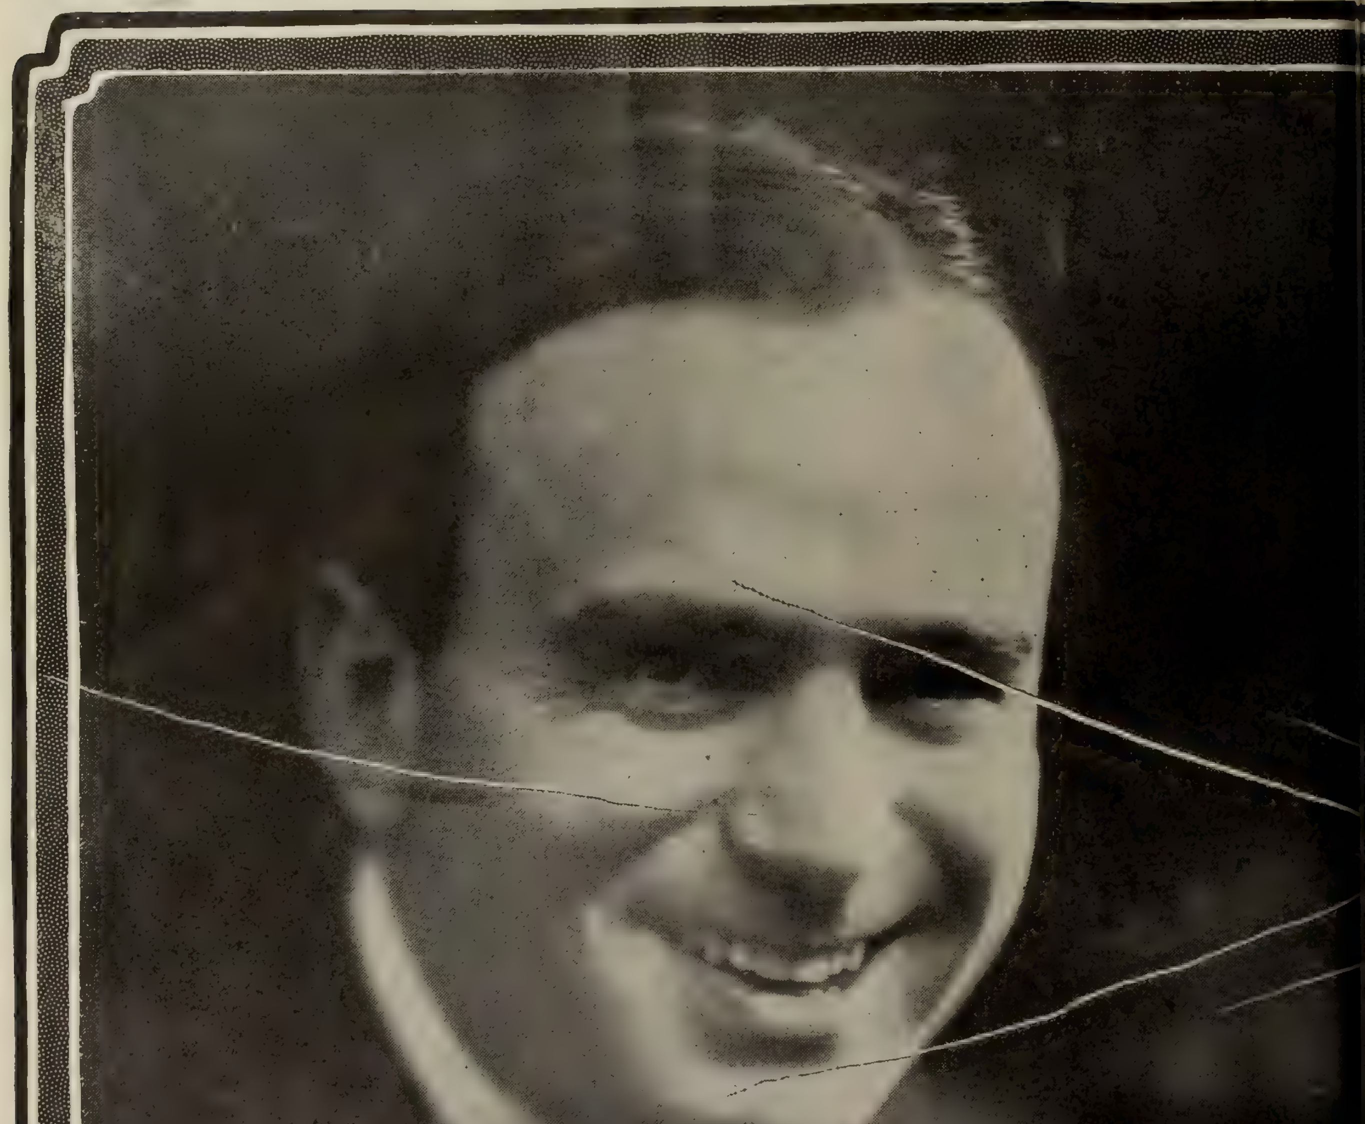
Mr. Fairbanks in selecting Artcraft for the distribution of his new productions says he does so because of its policies of fairness to exhibitors.

I assured him and reiterate the promise to you, that such confidence is not misplaced.

Sincerely yours,

Walter E. Greene

President.



I selected

Gentlemen:-

I thought I would drop you a line and tell you how a live wire serial gets across in a live wire house. We advertised Pearl of the Army strong, featuring Pearl White in the cuts because we knew that the serial was good if Pathe released it.

Even at that we underestimated Pearl White's drawing power, for on the first night the crowd was packed to the middle of the street trying to get in to see Pearl. It is an actual fact that almost everyone in the house stood up and cheered for about half a minute when Pearl was introduced on the screen.

On the second night there was a big crowd, too; and now that we have shown the second episode we know that we have booked the biggest magnet of a serial that was ever released.

We are writing you this because we know that you have always booked us good film, and we want to tell you that we appreciate it.

Yours truly,
John F Greulich

Exhibitors tell us Pearl White is the biggest drawing card in pictures. You're losing business if you don't show her.

EVE LESLIE is young, beautiful, appealing. Wealth, luxury, social success—are within her reach. But they have a price. The men and women who have the power to give Eve her heart's desires are pawns of Seven Deadly Sins. They will give her what she wants but her soul will be stained in the getting.

Adam Moore, her lover, sees this. He follows the young girl to the metropolis. He rescues her from one trap to find another opening for her. Thrill follows thrill. Laughter follows heart throbs, tender love scenes follow tragedy—but love wins!

The fundamental fault with pictures is the DAILY CHANGE.

It is a double-barreled disturber.

Not only does it militate against the making of good pictures, but it also prevents the advertising of them.

The critics who assail the quality of our weekly releases, on one hand; and on the other, those who criticize the advertising of pictures will have to go deeper than the surface.

They will have to go down to the ruinous daily change policy.

This whole problem, like every big economic problem, runs in the inevitable circle.

LONGER RUNS bring more money back to the producer, enabling him to make better pictures, which pictures make possible longer runs.

And into LONGER RUNS—and only through longer runs—enters advertising, the one great and necessary factor to stop a shrinking public and bring it up to maximum strength.

"What's Going On In The Mutual"

WEEKLY NEWS OF THE MUTUAL FILM CORPORATION AND ITS 68 EXCHANGES

FEBRUARY 24, 1917

"GENTLE INTRUDER" NEW MINTER-MUTUAL ISSUED THIS WEEK

"THE Gentle Intruder," sixth of the Mary Miles Minter-Mutual Photoplays, is released the week of February 19. It is in five acts. It was directed by James Kirkwood at the Santa Barbara studios of the American Film Company, Inc. Bookings can be made now at any of the 68 Mutual Film Exchanges.

Is Willed a Fortune.

Dainty Mary Miles Minter is cast in the role of Sylvia Merton, who is willed a fortune. Sylvia, a sweet faced little girl, goes to live in the home of the man who robs her of her inheritance. She isn't aware that she has been wronged. The man carefully conceals from his family the fact that his fortune is in reality Sylvia's. For a time pretty Sylvia is looked upon as an intruder in her new home. Eventually, however, she comes into her own. The unfolding of the story is most capably managed. It will hold audiences spellbound. A splendid cast assists Miss Minter throughout the production. "The Gentle Intruder" is the sixth of the Minter-Mutual Photoplays. The others, now playing, are "Youth's Endearing Charm," "Dulcie's Adventure," "Faith," "A Dream or Two Ago," and "The Innocence of Lizette." All are available at all Mutual Exchanges.

"Easy Street" Sets New Chaplin Record

"Easy Street," the newest of the Chaplin-Mutual Specials, is setting new records for even such popular releases as Chaplin subjects have proven. Every theatre running "Easy Street" has reported satisfactory business. "The best Chaplin yet," writes one exhibitor; "my audiences roared with laughter when they weren't pop-eyed in amazement at the remarkable 'stunts' performed. Just how it is possible to get hit on the head with a red-hot stove tossed from a third story window and survive is a problem that simply staggered them." "Easy street" is already more famous than Fifth Avenue, Wall Street, Riverside Drive, State Street, Pall Mall, Unter Den Linden and the Champs de Elysee put together.

"Turn away" business is being done at practically every theatre running the sequel to "The Diamond From the Sky." To date the bookings on this subject have been phenomenal and they are still pouring into Mutual Exchanges.

MANY GREAT AUTHORS

Gertrude Atherton, Algernon Boyesen, Ibsen, Dickens and Frederick Arnold Kummer

FOR MUTUAL PLAYS

The foremost writers of the land, it was announced, were to furnish the material for Mutual Photoplays. That announcement was made weeks ago. It was based on arrangements which had been effected with novelists of national reputation. Now Mutual is able to announce specific works of certain writers which are already completed in photoplay form, or now in course of production.

"Mrs. Balfame," an adaptation of Gertrude Atherton's novel of the same title, has been completed at the studios of the Frank Powell Producing Corporation. Nance O'Neil is the star of this O'Neil-Mutual Photoplay. It is the first Gertrude Atherton story ever filmed. Miss O'Neil is now working in "Hedda Gabler." This is a picturization of the Ibsen play of that name in which Miss O'Neil starred for years on the speaking stage. "Bleak House," the third of Miss O'Neil's productions, was penned by Charles Dickens. It is one of his most famous stories.

Algernon Boyesen's famous play, "The Greater Woman," is the first Marjorie Rambeau-Mutual Photoplay. It is a story of big climaxes—tense moments—powerful emotional scenes. "Motherhood," the second Rambeau-Mutual Photoplay, is from the pen of Frederick Arnold Kummer, famous American novelist. "The Second Wife," another Rambeau production, was specially written for Miss Rambeau by Caroline I. Hibbard. Another Ibsen play—"The Doll's House"—is known the world over. It will be a forthcoming Rambeau-Mutual Photoplay. Reservations on these Photoplays can be made now at Mutual Exchanges.

WILLIAM RUSSELL TO BE PRESENTED IN NEW MUTUAL SERIES

WILLIAM RUSSELL has signed a new contract with the American Film Company, Inc. He is already at work on a new series of William Russell-Mutual Photoplays. The new series, the first two productions of which are already completed and scheduled for release in the near future, will set new records for elaborateness and attention to detail. William Russell is sure to add to the laurels he has already won.

Elaborate Productions.

Unusual pains are being taken with the productions in the new William Russell series of Mutual Photoplays. Nell Shipman, scenario writer of note, novelist and short story writer, has written the manuscript for the first of the new Russell productions. It's title is "My Fighting Gentleman." It is a story of the South and Mr. Russell is provided with some decidedly unusual opportunities for the display of his ability. It is a picture that theatre audiences will talk about for months and months. It is a production that will enhance the reputation of any theatre showing it. "High Play," the second of the William Russell Mutual Photoplays, is also from the pen of a noted writer. It is totally different from "My Fighting Gentleman." An entirely different type of story. But in that, too, Russell rises to tremendous heights.

Box-Office Value.

Exhibitors who have played previous releases starring William Russell know he is a real drawing card. His portrayal of red-blooded roles—his splendid physique—his undoubted good looks—his versatility and unquestioned dramatic skill have made him a popular favorite. The new series will double his popularity. Bookings on the William Russell-Mutual Photoplays can be made at Mutual Film Exchanges now.

Beauty of Ziegfeld "Frolic" In Gaumont Fashion Poses

Sybil Carmen, the fascinating dancer in Florenz Ziegfeld's "Midnight Frolic," is appearing in fashion poses at the Gaumont studios for the Mutual Weekly. This famous beauty weekly displays the latest frocks, coats, bathing suits, lingerie and other items of feminine wear. WILLIAM RUSSELL

In A New Series of

RUSSELL-MUTUAL PHOTOPLAYS

THIS announcement heralds the coming of a new series of feature photodramas starring the popular favorite, William Russell. It is the intent of the American Film Company, Inc., to present to Exhibitors, in these new productions, a series of plays that should create new standards in the art of cinematography.

These productions will be presented to Exhibitors as Russell-Mutual Photoplays and will be released at stated intervals through all the Exchanges of the Mutual Film Corporation in America. The first two plays in this new series are entitled "My Fighting Gentleman" and "High Play" and are already completed. Release dates will be announced soon. Titles and dates of release for other productions in the series will be announced shortly.

The exceptional versatality and dramatic skill of William Russell are well known to Exhibitors everywhere. Combined with these, in this new series, are plays written by competent authors and produced by leading directors. Nothing is being left undone to make these productions deserving of the adjective, "best." Exhibitors are thus assured an extraordinary group of productions in the new Russell-Mutual Photoplays. Reservations for this series are now being made at all Mutual Exchanges.

ARE YOUR BOOKINGS PROFITABLE?

Many times we have heard an exhibitor say: " 'So and So' was a good picture but it did not draw at the box-office for me!"

Perhaps you, too, have frequently made the same statement about pictures you played. There was no doubt about the merit of your bookings; yet people did not turn out to see them.

Cub Comedies assure you of pictures which are successful not only from the screen standpoint but from the box-office angle as well. They have merit plus drawing power. This is because the producer studies prevailing likes and dislikes and makes his pictures accordingly—the kind of pictures theatre-goers like.

Walking right up to the money —and grabbing it

That's just what an exhibitor does when he shows "Fantomas" and "The Vampires, the Arch Criminals of Paris." Believe us, friend—no, don't believe us, but just ask any exhibitor who has shown these two super-sensational series that throb with the daring deeds of desperate men and thrill with the wonderful witchery of wilful women. Some description, eh? Well, even that doesn't tell you what great smashing hits these photo-novels are. You must judge its success—until you screen it—by what the exhibitors tell you about it as a box-office booster. Ask the man who's run it. And just run this thought through your carburetor: You, too, can walk right up to the money—and grab it.

To Foreign Buyers

If you are seeking super-productions or high average program pictures for the foreign market, I can spare you the needless hustling and consequent price boosting which keen competition with one another is certain to create.

My selections are based upon a knowledge of the actual quality of each production and its special fitness for your market. Consequently I have acquired the very cream of American features and the program material best adapted to foreign conditions and in greatest demand abroad.

The subjects and brands set forth in this advertisement are merely samples to show the quality of my stock:

PARDNERS by REX BEACH, the leading American fiction writer. The gentle and beautiful personality of Charlotte Walker, one of the most popular legitimate stage stars, pervades and ennobles this virile five reel drama. This production was made by the Edison Co., with many of the well known Edison stars in the supporting cast, and cost upward of $30,000 to produce. One of the finest examples of modern photoplay.

WHERE LOVE IS, by WM. J. LOCKE, foremost English author. This pre-eminent six reel society drama features the vivacious, charming and beautiful Ann Murdock, who is regarded as the greatest motion picture actress developed in the last year. The production cost $33,000, was made by the Edison Co., and a view of it will convince you that, in point of elaborate settings, spirited excellent acting, fine technique and gripping interest of story, this picture has never been surpassed.

Both PARDNERS and WHERE LOVE IS were purchased from me and have already been scheduled for release in this country by one of our biggest distributing concerns, and the fact that they have more than doubled their advertising on these subjects is an ample testimonial of merit.

DAVID HORSLEY'S five reel productions featuring CRANE WILBUR—one of the most popular stars the world over. These productions have long been the leading sellers on the Mutual Program. Twelve now ready, with one each month to follow.

CUB COMEDIES, featuring the inimitable GEORGE OVEY, universally recognized as the best comedies on the market today, next to Charlie Chaplin. These one reel fun makers have long been in the front rank of best sellers and are in great demand abroad. One each week.

I have the exclusive foreign rights to all of these subjects and brands and many more of similar quality. The CHAPLIN-MUTUAL series is still open for a few foreign territories—quick action necessary.

I do not deal in second hand film or cheap trash, and can give you prompt service, thorough satisfaction and references which run back to the early days of motion pictures, in association with the greatest companies and biggest men the industry has ever known.

"It Plays on the Heart Strings"

The Girl Who Didn't Think

6 Massive Parts

Mr. States Rights Buyer!

IN your experience in promoting photoplays have you not often observed that the pictures that get the big money are the ones that have that same wide human appeal that goes to popularize the occasional novel from the pen of some gifted writer?

When it's all said and done, the "story's the thing"—and the story of the really successful photoplay must have that same interest which makes the reader of the popular novel finish it before he lays it down.

"THE GIRL WHO DIDN'T THINK" was made with this thought in mind. The story, by Violet Stuart, was selected because it is the kind of story which will interest people in every walk of life—the rich and the poor, the proud and the humble. It is a story of real life as it is being lived from day to day in every city, town and hamlet in the world.

JANE GAIL, STANLEY WALPOLE, MAY SIMON, and their supporting players were chosen as the best possible exponents of this fine type of story.

The production, under the direction of William Haddock, is all that could possibly be desired.

You'd Better Apply Now for Your Territory!

This is Your Golden Opportunity!

The picture is complete with every aid for exhibitors to "get the money"—heralds, slides, newspaper cuts, and pictorial posters in one, three, six, and twenty-four-sheet sizes.

What Mr.Friedberg of the Alhambra East Liberty, Pa. Wrote BLUEBIRD(inc) A Year Ago

Mr. Friedberg wrote under date of September 23rd, 1916:

"Get good titles. Our patrons are getting next to BLUEBIRDS. "THE GIRL OF LOST LAKE" is a splendid production. Allow me to congratulate you on your good, consistent brand."

Still unconvinced that the excellence of BLUEBIRDS and that the good business they drew was due to the BLUEBIRD policy, Mr. F. wrote, under date of October 4:

"BLUEBIRDS will go to 100% if they get stars of national reputation. All BLUEBIRD needs is stars. The production end is there. 'SAVING THE FAMILY NAME' is splendid. Production by Smalleys brought good business."

The biggest news for feature Exhibitors in the world today is the slogan at the bottom of this page—"BLUEBIRDS HAVE ARRIVED." The people are demanding BLUEBIRDS. The Exhibitor who books and shows BLUEBIRDS will travel to success and profit on a wave of

What Mr. Friedberg Wrote BLUEBIRD (inc) Last Week

Finally, convinced that BLUEBIRDS drew the crowds, because they were the finest pictures made, Mr. Friedberg wrote under date of January 27, 1917:

"Do you realize that people are inquiring now for BLUEBIRDS? I played "THE PIPER'S PRICE." It is an excellently acted drama with new twists. Whole cast in this is splendid. Direction was perfect. Paper on this was fine. Please continue to tint your pictures. It enhances a picture very much." (Signed) N. Friedberg, Alhambra Theatre, East Liberty, Pa.

In other words, BLUEBIRDS have arrived on their sheer merit, with no dependence on stars—but on consistently good pictures.

NO greater compliment could be paid to ANY Feature Photoplays than that paid to BLUEBIRDS by S. L. Rothapfel, the greatest showman since the days of Barnum, who chose "The Mysterious Mrs. M" and "Polly Redhead" for the Rialto Theatre right in the face of the fact that more than a dozen competitive features containing stars of supposed drawing power were all offered in the same week.

It proves that Mr. Rothapfel believes with us that after all "The Play's the Thing" and that the Star in a poor play is cheating the public and cannot endure. He endorses our policy of "The Perfect Play plus the Perfect Cast" plus perfect direction and perfection of details.

THAT'S THE TRUE MEANING OF "BLUEBIRD." Mr. Rothapfel's selection of BLUEBIRDS for the RIALTO, New York's finest Picture theatre, should carry tremendous weight with every Exhibitor in this country. Mr. Rothapfel's favorite pastime is "SUCCESS." He has achieved success solely thru his knowledge of what the people want.

YOU can follow the ideals of Mr. Rothapfel and succeed in your territory as does Mr. Rothapfel in his territory. BLUEBIRDS HAVE ARRIVED. Facts and Comments

AT THIS writing indications point to the entrance of the United States onto that stage where is being enacted the greatest drama-tragedy in the history of the world—into what may be in fact as it has been in name the world war. The exhibitors of the United States from now on will assume among their clientele and in their communities a greater responsibility than any they have been called upon heretofore to shoulder. Upon each now devolves the duty of seeing that on his screen nothing is thrown that will tend to a breach of the peace.

FEELING is running high. In many localities there are large numbers of persons of German or Austrian sympathies. Many of these are good American citizens and others are trying to be, to hold fast to their oaths of allegiance. Give them a chance. Bear in mind that if nothing is shown that will afford opportunity for natives of these countries to applaud there will be no equal opportunity afforded to those who will most certainly hiss.

THE responsibility of the exhibitor is greater than is that of the producer. A subject may be put on the screen in one neighborhood without creating antagonism. In another the same subject may precipitate a situation that will require the services of the police—and possibly of the undertaker.

THIS is the time for the display of one flag. It is the time for the display of good judgment as to what goes on the screen. It is the time for an exhibitor to be an American in the best sense—and surely he can find no better example of what constitutes just that than in Woodrow Wilson the man no less than in Woodrow Wilson the President of the United States.

EXHIBITORS throughout the country are not likely to take much stock in endorsements of a privately owned publication with a malodor from its very beginning. Why should they subscribe to any paper started under false colors, attempting to bribe advertising patronage and sailing under the pretense of being the organ of an association when it is really the individually controlled property of less than a half dozen, whose object in starting it was not the benefit of exhibitors, but the "clean up" in the exaggerated profits they anticipated. It is not representative of the industry, but, more than any other publication that we know of, it represents only the ideas and methods of the few who control it.

THE more we come to understand the deal that was put over in Chicago last summer in the election of the National League officers, the more despicable it appears. That the name of a film manufacturing concern was dragged into it by one or more of their employes does not make it any better, but rather considerably worse. It is, therefore, not to be wondered at that an endorsement of the paper "of, for and by the exhibitors" (God save the mark), was played up and passed with a whoop the other day in Chicago. It was to start this same publication that the stage was set and Mr. Ochs placed in the saddle in Chicago last year. Some of those who helped to put through the endorsement of his paper the other day were also helping him last summer.

GROWING dissatisfaction on the part of exhibitors throughout the country with the present exhibitors' National Association is only what might be looked for. When the officers of any organization use their office solely for the advancement of their own personal ends the per capita tax of State branches becomes not only a useless expense, but is actually handing over good money for others to use for their individual benefit. What a contrast to the work that might be done for the cause of the exhibitor. Get the right men next time.

"NO BRAINS are required in the picture business," is said to have been a remark made by a motion picture promoter in his testimony before the New York State Legislative Commission which is investigating the industry with a view to ascertaining its taxabilities. Judging from the exploits of some of the men in the business of making pictures, brains have been conspicuous for their absence in numerous instances. The wild extravagances in almost every department of production and sale can be accounted for in no other way; surely men who have brains and use them could scarcely be guilty of the great waste of energy and money that can be seen on every hand. However we may esteem the author of the remark, he cannot be harshly censured for his conclusion.

A Golden Age

By Louis Reeves Harrison

TO AN extent probably never known before this whole country has been prospering. The inpouring wealth has gone to a fortunate few thus far, but its wider distribution is bound to come. It is already finding its way to those who provide entertainment, and this outpouring is bound to gradually increase. It cannot be without significance to producers and exhibitors of moving pictures that an opportunity has arrived which must be taken by the forelock. The occasion lost cannot be redeemed. The opportunity neglected may not return. Why not divert some of the attention now given exclusively to political matters to brightening the feature releases—some of them are worse than nothing.

As cheerless as the arctic circle are many of the crime stories playwrights are called upon to arrange in scenario form, simply because distributers insist on that kind. I have no objection to a thrilling story of crime—our weaknesses form a very essential part of strong drama—particularly if there is some meaning to it all. It is the significance, the effect, that is of chief importance, the part usually forgotten. We are in a very muddy rut, however, when crime is depicted for the sake of a lurid poster. The red poster has stuck us where we cannot move forward.

Largely due to the fact that certain producers continued to reach out for the patronage of Willie in Short Pants and some of his grown-up friends whose minds were only eight or ten years old is the failure of those old producers, once well established, now only a memory, or on their way to the down-and-outs. Willie grew faster than those unprogressive producers. Their stagnant conservatism cost them millions in profits and did an injury to the whole business that is beyond reasonable estimate.

There are pretty certain indications on the screen that the producer with the red eye is with us yet. Passion as red as the protuberance of a gobbling turkey, rage as red as the naked hand of bloody doom, billboards red with flaming houses and burning ships—one would think that public taste had reverted to Beadle's dime novels and Bowery melodrama. Far from making an impression, a great deal of this stuff is raw. It is usually as raw as a blister and about as entertaining. Flame and red fire may have a great depth of meaning—out of the crucible of human experience often comes wondrous development of human character.

Is it not about time to tincture our presentations with a little common sense? What is the use of portraying the crucible and not what it brings forth? There is a golden shower awaiting exhibitors who can present a program of such power that people will go away with lasting impressions and come again to get more. The excuse is that producers will not furnish plays that make a profound impression on a mixed audience. Producers say that the exchange men will not handle that kind. The exchange men say they are catering to the taste of the exhibitor, and so on.

All have rightly judged public taste for intensity of character in the visualization of stories, but it is lacking in the stories themselves. It has to be put there, usually by one or another gifted star performer. The star simply infuses a role with interesting personality, a role otherwise colorless, hence the demand for actors of striking personality. They are called upon to replace with personal effort the shortweight of characterization. It seems to be a matter of no importance that Nature rarely repeats her composite human effects. There are millions of different kinds of characters, as there are of faces.

Now pops up old man Statistics with his alleged Thirty-six Dramatic Situations, the gentleman who still imagines that he is riding in a surface car whose battery is charged with oats and hay. Take the simple situation of a man in love with a woman—it may have aspects beyond counting. It has been so for thousands of years—it will be so for thousands to come. The question is, What bearing has this or that situation or incident upon the characters developed in a story, with the field spreading out into the infinity of the star-sown skies at night.

In countless number and variety are the stories of love and adventure yet to be written. There is no other than self-limitation imposed on creative genius. As old as the Man in the Moon, who has looked down all these centuries with smile mysterious on romantic young people, is the love of man for woman and of the diviner love of woman for man. A Mighty Spirit, Soul of the Universe, swinging planets and suns in their orbits, signaling a greater intelligence than our own, is the source of human love.

Huge joke is it that there can be any limitation placed upon what is daily presented to our eyes with endless and infinite variety. Obvious limitation is that of the man who can see nothing in the art of producing moving pictures except what he happens to get in the way of financial returns. What matters it if there are fascinating fields for difference of opinion in production—so much the better—the main idea is to push the product up to the constantly advancing perceptions, views, opinions and tastes of our times, even in advance of them when keeping step with great leaders of thought. Old nags are disappearing from our roads and streets these days. Men of imagination and skill come along and lead the way to something better.

No very great diversity of sentiment exists among exhibitors. They are in business to give the public all that they can of immediate interest, all that is vital to the hour and to our happiness. They cannot choose until the product is complete. They can select neither subject nor method of presentation. They are not in the business of supplying what will not bear world scrutiny.. Their condition of dissatisfaction, whenever manifested, is not a morbid one, nor are they fussy. Their main idea is to place the business of exhibition on an excellent footing, attract public interest and hold it by fine presentation of good product.

It is not the exhibitor's fault that there are still old nags in production. I do not dislike those old nags. I go to their studios and find a whole company of actors sitting around in make-up and costume, waiting with professional patience for a scene to be arranged, waiting while salaries and rents are mounting up and up, all of which has to be charged to the cost of production and eventually to the exhibitor. Some of those old nags think I am too critical, but my visits to studios are not at all unpleasant—they are only dull. The same old things are being done in the same old way—all is monotony.

All is monotony, even to the lack of system. A man with a new idea is an intruder—he is in the way. One turns from this manufacture of the commonplace to contemplation of motion picture possibilities and wonders how long we must remain in our mewling and bawling infancy. When shall we grow up to the notable ideals and far-reaching activities of American people? When will we respond to the brimming energies of our times? When will we achieve a proud place in the arts of expression through strength of intelligent effort and tap the Golden Age?

Bull, Bunk and Bluster

By Sam Spedon

"THEM'S harsh words." We might, in different words, say, "In promulgating our esoteric cogitations and articulating our superficial sentimentalities, etc.," but that wouldn't be to the point; that's bunk. We all know what "bull," "bunk" and "bluster" mean. These words are familiar to all who have been associated with motion pictures longer than yesterday.

A man of intelligence who until recently had been occupied with motion pictures for nineteen years and never got further than a shipping clerk and assistant office manager said: "If a correspondence school gave a course in bull I think I would take it; it is the one thing I have lacked to make me a Napoleon of films."

A modest, conservative, self-respecting business man, who considers before he concludes is sorely handicapped in the film business. A good line of bull has been considered more to the point in getting away with it and putting things over. Too many of us have been doing things on the bull, bunk and bluster basis. It is what has helped put us all in wrong.

We know of a man who eight years ago wanted to learn the business, made application for a position with a producing company, and when he was asked how much he wanted he replied: "Nothing! If at the end of the week I am not worth anything it's good-day." He was willing to make good, and stayed with that concern seven years. That man was too honest; he wasn't "smart." He didn't understand the value of bull, bunk and bluster. That man didn't have time to look into these counterfeits, he was too busy doing real honest-to-God work for money received. He understood his business, but he didn't make enough bluster about it. He was too old fashioned; he wore suspenders and didn't do a whole lot of things that entitled him to travel with the "regular guys."

We have been placing a premium on bull, bunk and bluster, until now it is hard to find executive help who are willing to get down to brass tacks and work for a living and a future.

A modest, contented and well-balanced business man doesn't spend his spare time telling how much he gets, or has, to arouse the envy of his less fortunate fellows; generally it isn't worth mentioning. He knows clothes fool a whole lot of people, but he also knows clothes don't make the man. If he owns an automobile he doesn't talk about it or toot his horn to attract attention, because he has nothing on Jack Johnson and a whole lot of others of equal importance.

If we expect to get down to real business we have got to deliver the goods. There is a good living in it for all of us and some profit for real genuine investment, but we have got to deliver the goods.

The bull, bunk and bluster of moving pictures in the embryo has brought within our midst many "B. B. B." artists, who have cast a blight upon the business and attracted a lot of undesirables to it, whom we have got to rout horse and foot before we can command the respect to which the industry is entitled.

Naturally we might come to the conclusion that these plain, unvarnished words of bull, bunk and bluster apply only to the vulgar, who do not know any better. No, they are farther reaching, they apply to the suave, high-sounding phraseologists, who by their oratory and persuasive manners can convince you that the moon is made of green cheese and that they are the alpha and omega of the whole business; they are the bunk artists. Bull and bluster may apply to the vulgar and mentally deficient, but bunk never.

The "Patsy Bollivers" of the High Cost of Pictures

By Sam Spedon.

WE are getting a whole lot of real information through the New York legislature investigating committee, now in session in New York city. We have learned from W. L. Sherrill of the Frohman Amusement Company, P. A. Powers, treasurer of the Universal Company; W. A. Brady, of the World Corporation, and all the other witnesses, that the primary cause of existing conditions is the industry is high salaried stars and the increased cost of production.

If we watch the reports of the New York daily papers and the Moving Picture World we will find the answer to the question, "What's the matter with the moving picture business?"

Mr. Powers also stated that "easy money of 'War Brides' and other profits" are sapping the life of the industry, and while they are losing their millions the producers cannot make any money because the manufacturers who are using these millions are selling their products for less than cost. In other words, they are "cutting the throats" of their competitors.

We must conclude from these statements that while we have high salaried stars we will have high priced features. Why then do we have these stars?

What are we going to do about it? There is but one answer to this question, nothing. If the public want them the exhibitor wants them. But he certainly can't afford them at ten cents admission. The result will be, the exhibitor will have to increase his admission price or go out of business. We wish to contradict ourselves. There is an alternative, he can reduce his admission price to five cents or hold to ten cents and use ordinary pictures. We say this advisedly, because we have heard there is a movement on foot by certain producing companies to make such pictures with well known and popular stars in the casts.

In regard to Mr. Brady's statement that "easy money" has broken into the game and is being used by producers to undersell their competitors, we can see but one result, and that is, they will drive their competitors out of business, or compel them to stick to ordinary pictures.

What then? Up goes the cost of feature pictures, which none but the larger and chain houses can use, and—"good night" to the little ones. It also means week runs, possibly two week runs, or even longer, on percentage or cash basis and increased prices of admission. This would not affect the small houses in suburban or town communities, as it would affect the larger cities.

The statement by Mr. Powers as to the cost of publicity convinces us of the value of advertising. It is also an acknowledgment that producers of motion pictures have at last woke up to the value of advertising. It is no longer a necessary evil in the industry, it is an essential. He didn't say so, but he intimated it is to be counted on for the increased cost of features. Large productions have made advertising not only a local matter, it is now national and international. This is an item to be considered, also the high cost of paper, labor and printers' ink. The "fourth estate" can now sympathize with the "fifth estate," and vice versa.

Looking the whole matter squarely and fairly in the face, we are up against it. "The survival of the fittest" are no idle words.

Legislators Divided on Tax Question

Joint Committee Said Not to Favor Plan Unanimously—Sentiment Against Sunday Shows—New York Hearings Continue

AT THE present time, the Joint Legislative Committee, busy in an investigation as to the practicability of taxing the motion picture industry, is divided in its opinion, reports the Albany correspondent of the Moving Picture World. Whatever may be the ultimate report to the Legislature, it is certain that today at least fifty per cent of the members do not approve adding additional burdens to the industry. While this statement is not made openly by the committee as a whole several of the members, on their return from New York City, said that they believed that in many respects the motion picture industry today was similar to that of the automobile a few years ago and that before long a more or less complete reorganization must be effected in order to get not only the highest grade picture, but also to place the industry in a position where it could not be jeopardized by minor measures.

Members of the committee are loud in their praise of the open manner in which the motion picture men of New York City appeared at the hearings and furnished valuable testimony appeared the necessity of securing same by subpoena. One Senator said this week that from the testimony which he had gathered he was of the firm opinion that nothing had been withheld, particularly by the big ones in the business. The Senator in question asserted that he believed that while many of the larger concerns were making money at the present time, the majority of the smaller ones were not, and for that reason he was of the opinion that the industry should not be hampered and harassed by legislation that would compel the payment of a tax that would add immeasurably to the burdens now being borne.

The committee is keeping away from the question of censorship and Sunday shows as far as possible, although both questions will undoubtedly be submitted to the Legislature before final adjournment. There is not a Senator or Assemblyman today whose mail does not include petitions from this or that place against the legalizing of Sunday motion picture shows.

Senator Charles W. Wicks, one of the leading factors in the upper house this year, made the statement Monday night that there was no question as to the attitude which the Senate would take on Sunday shows when the matter was put to vote. There is strenuous opposition in the Senate toward legalizing Sunday shows and it is said that Senator Elon R. Brown is open in his opposition. Petitions with from ten to a hundred names have swamped the Senate during the last few days, the majority coming from the smaller places, although some cities are represented through church organizations.

The expression among the Senators is that Sunday shows, if permitted, would be merely an opening wedge to a Continental Sabbath. Few, if any Senators, will dare to come out openly for such shows.

The present week is witnessing a careful canvass of Albany's business section in obtaining signatures to a petition against the opening of motion picture houses on Sunday. The canvass was preceded by meetngs of workers in various wards where careful instructions were given out. Petitions were circulated in all of Albany's churches last Sunday. At the services in nearly all Catholic and Protestant churches the pastors spoke of the petitions and on Monday a house-to-house canvass was started in each ward of the Capital City. Each church had previously been assigned certain wards and districts. No child under sixteen years is permitted to sign the petition. For the present the committee in opposition to Sunday shows will confine its work to Albany. The committee is the first in the state of its kind, but it is said that a similar movement will now be carried on throughout the State through churches and women's clubs. Each church in Albany pledged itself to contribute its share of the expense of circulating the petitions and of speakers at the various meetings.

Little is being heard at the present time in either the Senate or Assembly in regard to censorship of films. While the matter is apparently temporarily dormant, it is known that Speaker Sweet of the Assembly has taken a keen interest in the matter and will undoubtedly request some action in his body at least before the close of the present session.

The joint committee now holding its hearings in New York had an initial appropriation of $5,000, practically all of which has now been expended in counsel, stenographic and incidental fees. An extra appropriation will probably be called for in the near future as it is the committee's intention to continue its hearings until the subject has been completely covered.

New York Hearing Continues

Legislative Investigators Question More Picture Men—All Declare Tax Impossible.

THE committee continued its hearings in the Murray Hill Hotel, New York, on Wednesday, February 7. Albert E. Smith, president of the Vitagraph Company, told the legislators of the twelve-year growth of the organization of which he is the head. Testimony was adduced to the effect that the Vitagraph Company had been incorporated in 1904, with a capital of $6,000. Last year, according to Mr. Smith's testimony, the company was reorganized with an authorized capital of $25,000,000. Of this amount, $7,000,000 in common and preferred stock has been issued.

The witness stated that he had been engaged in the film business for the past twenty-one years, and that during that time he had watched its developments closely. Through Walter W. Irwin, general manager of V-L-S-E and counsel to the witness, Mr. Smith declined to answer questions concerning the finances of the General Film Company, of which company Mr. Smith was treasurer in two recent years. Mr. Irwin objected to the questions on the ground that, inasmuch as the General Film Company was at present involved in two suits under the Sherman Anti-Trust Law, it would be manifestly unfair for the witness to answer questions in that connection.

Questioned as to his belief of the ability of the motion picture industry to shoulder a tax at the present time, Mr. Smith said:

"The producers are not able to pay a tax at the present time. If you should place a levy on raw stock, the burden would eventually back up on the producer. To a great extent the distributor is merely an agent of the producer, and I do not think that he would be able to get it back from the public. I can think of no branch of the trade that can bear taxing under present conditions."

During the session the names of Eastman and other manufacturers of raw stock were brought into the discussion on several occasions.

Smith Says Stars Will Put Producers Out of Business.

As to the salaries of stars, the witness declared that he knew of a few who were being paid almost a million dollars a year each.

"In real money, with eagles stamped on it?" incredulously asked Senator Hinman.

"In cold, hard cash," replied Mr. Smith. "And unless some kind Providence reduces the salaries of some of the stars the producers will have to go out of business. Only a few of the stars are worth what they are getting. Recently I bid for the services of a certain star and she demanded a cool million, but she did not get it from me."

The name of the high-priced player was not disclosed by the witness.

Thanhouser Pays no Dividends.

Edwin Thanhouser, head of the Thanhouser Film Corporation, was a witness on Wednesday morning. He verified the financial report of his concern, which had previously been filed with the committee. Mr. Thanhouser, with some little satisfaction, declared that he was going to retire from the film business in about a year.

Mr. Thanhouser was asked if, in his opinion, the film industry should be taxed, and if so, through what source or sources. He said:

"I don't know that any of our competitors are paying dividends. Certainly we have ceased to. The business is so rapidly changing that, to my mind, it would be unfair to tax any one in it. I frankly believe the majority of manufacturers are losing money, and many large distributors are sailing on thin ice. My own contract expires in a year, and then I am going back to my little farm on Long Island. I have had enough of the business."

Business Speculative Says Goldfish.

The most important witness on Thursday was Samuel Goldfish, president of the Goldwyn Pictures Corporation, and former vice-president of the Jesse L. Lasky Feature Play Company. Mr. Goldfish was questioned at length regarding the financial affairs of the Lasky concern during his connection with it. During the course of his testimony the question as to whether or not big features of the past and present could be profitably revived in years to come was brought up. The witness gave it as his opinion that pictures could not be revived with success.

"A picture that was considered great two years ago is not considered much today," he said. "The advance in the art of picture making has advanced so rapidly that pictures are far more artistic and better all around today than ever before. I think motion pictures will advance a great deal further artistically and every other way. But, personally, I feel that the business will have to change a great deal from what it is at present. It must clear itself quite a little before any appreciable amount of money can be made out of it. There is a great deal of room for improvement."

Further questions along this line were overshadowed when, in answer to a question of one of the committeemen, Mr. Goldfish took occasion to say:

"I think that this is a good time to investigate the motion picture business—not to tax, but to investigate and put out of the business some of the people in it——"

"What do you mean by that?" interrupted Senator Hinman.

"I mean," answered the witness, "that any man who is selling worthless motion picture stock to the public, to the poor —widows, and such—should be put out of the business. There are several men like that in the business."

After this outburst, Mr. Goldfish continued in a more calm manner. He said that he believed the industry was, in general, a more or less speculative one, depending for its success to a great extent on the ability of the persons in control. He said that unless a business was carried on under the proper management it would surely fail, this holding good with all lines of endeavor, but especially so with motion pictures.

"The Lasky Company and the Famous Players Company succeeded because it was their own money that was invested," the witness declared. "When your own money is invested, you naturally work harder than you would if the business was being conducted on outside capital. The men connected with the two companies worked eighteen hours a day for a long time. When there is outside money heavily invested, there is not much work done."

Senator Hinman then questioned Mr. Goldfish regarding the affairs of the Goldwyn Corporation. He said that his corporation had already engaged several stars, and that production was in progress. He stated that the method of distribution of Goldwyn Pictures had not as yet been decided.

"I am frank to say," said Mr. Goldfish, "that if it wasn't for the fact that we are a new organization we wouldn't be paying the salaries we are paying our stars. But we had to get them in a competitive market. Even if we don't make money for a few years we are satisfied. We are building up an organization, and when the business is thoroughly sound, that organization is going to give us a return on our investment.

"The story, and not the star, is the most important thing. Exhibitors at present don't play a picture long enough to let the public know that a story is good. Chief interest centers in the story always, but today the exhibitor books a picture for only one day. Consequently, he must have a big star to attract the people every night. When they come to a realization that 'the play's the thing' we will make money. Just now we are looking toward building up an organization that will mean something when that realization comes, as it is sure to do."

Questions regarding outside capital financing moving picture ventures brought from Mr. Goldfish the following:

"Every man from 'downtown' who has financed a moving picture company has lost money—at least none of them have made any money on their investment. Some moving picture concerns, you will find, have been entirely financed by 'downtown.'"

Mr. Goldfish qualified his testimoney with the assertion that "downtown" had invested in motion picture concerns as individuals, but scarcely ever had a banking institution, as such, invested any money in motion picture schemes.

Other witnesses who testified Thursday were Emanuel Heidenheim, treasurer of Klever Pictures, Inc.; Allen Kander, president of Ultra Films, Inc.; Mrs. Margaret Bray, secretary and treasurer of Bray Studios, Inc.; F. G. Bradford, general manager of Gaumont; Isaac E. Chadwick, vice-president of the Ivan Film Corporation, and Elizabeth Huber, secretary and treasurer of Modern Feature Photoplays, Inc.

Selznick Says "No Brains Needed."

Lewis J. Selznick, head of the Lewis J. Selznick Enterprises, Inc., was the most interesting witness heard on Friday. Joseph W. Engel, treasurer of the Metro Pictures Corporation, had been subpoenaed to appear on Friday, but up until the time of adjournment he had not appeared, nor had he, according to Senator Hinman, communicated with the committee in any manner. This led to a declaration that the matter would be brought to the attention of the State Assembly.

Several high lights were struck by Mr. Selznick after he had told the committee of the financial affairs of the companies in which he was interested. During the course of Mr. Selznick's examination along general lines he said:

"First of all I want to state that when I was with the World Film Corporation I had several million dollars to burn up, and naturally I learned something. I learned enough to make me see where things were wrong."

Mr. Selznick then told of the distributing system he had devised, explaining that in that maner he had righted many of the wrongs.

"When I entered the field there was a secret agreement among every organization releasing a program to the effect that if an exhibitor ran my pictures his program contract would be canceled. But the exhibitors paid for my pictures and made money with them just the same, and they kept their program contracts too."

The witness took issue with Samuel Goldfish's testimony of the day before to the effect that the story, and not the star, was the big factor making for the success of a picture.

"It is a combination that makes for success," Mr. Selznick declared. "The combination of star, story, direction and publicity is the winning combination.

"There are too many pictures being produced at present. My own system is to make as few pictures as possible and have them as good as it is possible to make them."

As to the competition, the witness said:

"I have no competition."

"I take it, then, that the Selznick Enterprises are making some money," remarked Senator Hinman.

"Yeah," drawled Mr. Selznick, "I'm making some money every day in spite of the reports of my competitors that I'm going broke."

Later on the witness declared that there was $25,000,000 a year being wasted in the distribution of motion pictures. "There is more attention now being paid to destroying your competitor," he said, "than there is to building up an efficient organization.

Mr. Selznick testified that almost all of the raw stock used in the industry was bought of the Eastman company. "It is a 100 per cent. monopoly," he said.

He told the committee that his experience had been from "peanuts to banker," and had covered almost every line of endeavor. He added that he was experienced in all lines of business.

Another assertion of Mr. Selznick's was:

"It takes less brains to operate a moving picture business than it does to operate any other business in the world. Why, in this business they cut prices and try to kill each other. Only a short time ago Clara Kimball Young was offered $15,000 a week if she would break her contract with me."

Then Mr. Selznick told the committee how good a picture "War Brides" was, stating that the gross rentals in New York City alone had been upward of $40,000. In this connection he again drew attention to Samuel Goldfish's testimony. He drew a comparison between "War Brides" and Geraldine Farrar's "Carmen," which, Mr. Goldfish had testified, had brought in only $45,000.

"Why," said Mr. Selznick without a show of modesty, "with Geraldine Farrar's 'Carmen' I could have brought in $300,000."

With equal frankness the witness told the committeemen that all of his books were open to them "and," he added, "you can publish the figures and everything. I am not ashamed of them."

Mr. Selznick stated that the Selznick Enterprises had started with $1,000 cash and had made $105,000 in ten weeks. "Every company I've got is making money," he said.

Preceding Mr. Selznick's general examination he was asked questions pertaining to the concerns allied with the Enterprises. He told the committee that the Clara Kimball Young Film Corporation had been incorporated for $1,000,000. He stated that $499,000 in common stock had been issued to the actress, but that since then he had acquired much of the stock. He said that he had put $1,000 cash into the Young corporation. He told the investigators that he had a five-year contract with Miss Young for her services, and that she was receiving $1,000 a week in adition to her stock interest. Since the incorporation, the witness said, $100,000 worth of Class B stock had been issued.

"Are there any other stockholders in the Young corporation besides Miss Young, yourself and the Enterprises?" asked Senator Hinman.

"Yes," replied Mr. Selznick, "my wife. She owns half. I always go fifty-fifty with her."

"That's a good idea," remarked Senator Hinman. "You probably live more happily with your wife that way than if you didn't go fifty-fifty with her."

"Who are the officers of the Young corporation—who is the secretary and who is the treasurer?" Senator Hinman queried.

"I am president, secretary and treasurer," answered Mr. Selznick. "I'm practically in charge—I'm the whole show."

"What salaries are being paid the officers?"

"I get $1,000 a week as president of the Clara Kimball Young Film Corporation," Mr. Selznick replied. "I'm in full control of every branch of manufacturing and distributing. The two directors—the directors who produce the pictures—are now getting $500 a week each. They have contracts whereby their salaries increase according to the length of time."

Mr. Selznick admitted that the Young corporation had not yet declared a dividend, but that the corporation was contemplating paying a dividend.

The Herbert Brenon Film Corporation was next under discussion.

"I'm in control of that corporation, too," said Mr. Selznick. "It is incorporated for $1,000,000—$250,000 in preferred stock and $750,000 in common. There is $514,000 of the common and $14,000 of the preferred stock issued."

The witness explained that the common stock had been issued on a contract he had with Mr. Brenon. Mr. Brenon was receiving a salary of $750 a week, and $250 a week advance on the profits. Mr. Selznick said that Mr. Brenon was president of the corporation and that he (Selznick) was treasurer. He added that the officers drew no salaries as such.

Mr. Selznick testified that the Robert Warwick Film Corporation was also allied with the Enterprises. He said that he had no stock interest in that corporation, but that he had a profit interest in it.

"I get ten per cent. of the first ten thousand dollars profit," he said, "and twenty-five per cent. of the profits after that as compensation for my supervision."

"Have you a contract to that effect—is that in writing?"

"Yes. Everything is in writing."

Mr. Selznick said that he believed Mr. Warwick's salary was $1,250 a week for the first year, and that the actor had a five-year contract under the terms of which his salary was to increase to $2,000 per week.

Other witnesses who testified on Friday were Benjamin Goetz, secretary and treasurer of the Erbograph Company, and Britton Busch, secretary and treasurer of the World Film Corporation.

During a short session on Saturday, William Fox and Louis B. Jennings, the latter president of the Standard Films Industries, Inc., and the American Film Laboratories, Inc., were heard. Mr. Fox's examination was very short, Senator Hinman informing Mr. Fox that the committee would probably call him again.

Mr. Fox objected to furnishing the committe with financial data relating to the Fox corporation. One of the "quiz sheets" with the forty-six questions had been sent Mr. Fox. Several questions were unanswered on the list sent the committee. Among the unanswered questions was question number 33, which asks: "What is the average cost per foot of the negative of each picture produced by your company up to and including the making of the negative, and not including special feature pictures nor cost of advertising?"

The witness, when asked by Senator Hinman why he had not answered that question, replied that he did not think it was of interest to the committee. Mr. Fox also admitted that he had not replied with the request of the committee that he furnish them with balance sheets—inventories, trial balances, etc.

Mr. Jennings told in great detail of the endeavors of the Standard Film Industries, and explained that the company was in condition to undertake any branch of the industry on a businesslike basis. He told of the corporate affairs of the organization, and of stock issues, etc. After Mr. Jennings had testified the hearings were adjourned until Wednesday, February 14.

Didn't Vote on Sunday Shows

Press Agent Misinterprets Action of Audience Which Saw "Joan the Woman" at Albany.

AT THE instance of the Better Movies Committee of the Albany Drama Society a special exhibition of "Joan the Woman" was given in the auditorium of the Educational Building in Albany, N. Y., recently. This exhibition was attended by many of the leading citizens of Albany, including a number of state senators and representatives, who had been invited to witness the showing of a really good picture.

Also at the instance of the Better Movies Committee each person present was handed two questions to be answered which read as follows:

> Question No. 1. Would you do us the courtesy of saying whether you like this film or not? Through frankness of expression from this audience we may be able—by memorializing the manufacturers—to present to our local public better films. We ask your aid in this end.
> Question No. 2. If pictures were shown on Sunday would such a film, in your judgment, be suitable to show?

The story of this event published in the Moving Picture World on February 10 on page 859, interpreted the vote on Question 2 as meaning that those who voted in the affirmative were in favor of Sunday shows. This erroneous view of the question has caused considerable commotion in Albany and especially among the members of the Drama Society, who say that questions show plainly that it was the picture which was commended and not Sunday shows endorsed.

This report was also erroneous in the statement that Governor Whitman and his staff were given the courtesy exhibition. The Governor was not present, nor was any of his staff in their official capacity. The exhibition was at the request of the Albany Drama Society, and the attempt to make it appear that the Governor and many of the members of the state legislature favored Sunday shows was clumsy press work at this time.

ACTORS' FUND FAIR COMING.

Actor folk, who are always helping others, this year will ask New York to help them. For the first time in seven years the Actors' Fund, through which needy members of the theatrical profession all over the country are cared for, will hold a fair. It had been planned to hold one two years ago but the outbreak of the war caused Daniel Frohman, president of the Actors' Fund, and other officials to decide upon a postponement.

While it had been hoped to withhold making a public appeal until after the war, so that all of America's charity could go to war relief, the Fund is so imperatively in need of replenishment that it became necessary to raise money by outside appeal. This led to the decision to revive the bazaar. Those at the head of the fund feel that the country will not hesitate to share its prosperity with those on whom it depends for entertainment.

The fair will be held at the Grand Central Palace from May 12 to 21 and it is predicted will exceed in attractiveness all those of the past.

Theatrical and allied interests already are actively at work preparing for the fair. Every prominent producer, manager, playwright and actor has pledged support and co-operation. From among a group of volunteers Mr. Frohman will shortly appoint a plan and scope committe to work out the detailed program for the bazar.

ROLAND E. BLAISDELL AT LIBERTY.

Through the taking over of the releases of the International by Pathe, Roland E. Blaisdell, for the past year purchasing agent and office manager of the former organization, is at liberty. Mr. Blaisdell has had an unusually comprehensive experience in the film industry. Always connected with the business end, he has been an executive in studio, laboratory, distributing office and exchange. With his training and native executive capacity he should prove an asset in the personnel of any film organization. Mr. Blaisdell is one of the early members of the Screen Club and has a large acquaintance in the industry.

Rocky Mountain Screen Club Ball

Saturday Night, February 3, City Auditorium Scene of Brilliant Film Dance—No Screen Stars Present.

THE Rocky Mountain Screen Club ball is now a matter of history. It was held on Saturday night, February 3, and was an unqualified success. The crowd exceeded the fondest expectations of the club's officers. The spacious dance floor of the City Auditorium was crowded from early evening until the wee' hours Sunday morning, while hundreds of spectators watched the merry-makers from the boxes and galleries.

The Auditorium was a maze of light and color. Flowers and toy balloons of varied colors added to the beauty of the decorations. Each of the fifteen or more Denver film exchanges and many of the theaters had decorated boxes and booths, with pictures of leading screen stars displayed in conspicuous places.

The ball was a costume affair and Charlie Chaplins, Mary Pickfords and Theda Baras were the more numerous, although scores of other screen celebrities had their imitators.

One disappointing feature of the ball was the failure of Sussue Hayakawa, the Japanese star of Paramount, to arrive in time to lead the grand march. He left Los Angeles January 31 for the express purpose of attending the ball, but was caught in the snow blockade in Wyoming. He was marooned for three days and did not get into Denver until the Monday after the ball.

This left the Screen Club without a single moving picture star to help entertain the guests, whereas it had been expected, when the event was originally planned, to have at least three of the leading screen performers as guests of honor at the ball. Performers from several of the legitimate theaters appeared in special acts. The Empress theater contributed two baby elephants to the galaxy of performers.

One of the most interesting features of the program was the actual staging of several scenes from "The Truant Soul," a photoplay in which Henry B. Walthall is to appear on the screen. Many of those present had never before seen a moving picture made. Vernon Walker, Denver correspondent for the Selig-Tribune Weekly News, directed the taking of the film. Don Bigelow officiated at the camera. In the absence of Sessue Hayakawa, Cecil Secrest of the Denham stock company took the leading male part.

The dancing program was staged in two parts. The grand march was held during the intermission. It was led by state and city officials and army officers from Fort Logan. Prizes for the best costumes were awarded the dancers, the judging being done as the marchers passed before the reviewing stand.

Marion Sobaske won the grand prize. She appeared in a daring costume representing Annette Kellermann in the "Daughter of the Gods." Cleora Hobson, representing Mary Pickford, won first prize for ladies. James Glendye, as Charlie Chaplin, was awarded first prize for men. Bessie Lee of the Universal Film Company, costumed as Grace Cunard, was declared the winner of the second prize for women.

Following were the committees in charge of the ball:

Arrangements—Harry E. Hoffman, chairman; Harry T. Nolan, Frank Harris, A. E. Fair, W. B. Glasser, Ward E. Scott and James A. Curran.

Reception—Milton H. Cohn, chairman; Dan Lehrburger, George Killam, Harry Lustig, E. M. Erwin, A. G. Talbott, W. S. Rand, H. Bradley Fish, James Curran, William E. Foley, John Thompson, W. G. Barker and H. I. Rosefield.

Occupants of Boxes.

Among the occupants of the boxes were the following—Artcraft: Mr. and Mrs. T. Y. Henry, Miss Mary Glover and Miss Cleora Hobson; Fox: Miss C. H. Stick, Miss R. H. Stick, A. F. Bergan, George Shea, Miss Amy Krause, A. B. Smith and Miss Mary Bottone; World Film: Mr. and Mrs. H. I. Rosefield, Miss Helen Regan, Miss Emma Schattinger, Miss Mercedes Austgen and Miss M. Fishman; Kleine-Edison-Selig-Essanay: Mr. and Mrs. H. H. Buckwalter, Miss Margaret Buckwalter, Miss Maud Leavy, Miss Virginia Crossway, Miss Romona X. Summerville and Mr. and Mrs. Roland K. Goddard; Princess theater: George H. Greaves, Mr. and Mrs. H. Bradley Fish, J. E. Bona and Miss Edith Gilligan; McClure: W. B. Glasser, Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Hewitt, Miss Hazel McGilvary, Dr. Joseph Savage and Miss Ann McGilvary; Metro: Mr. and Mrs. Harry Lustig, Miss Dora Kaplan, Miss Lillian Lustig, H. Minneovitz, R. Berkowitz and Miss Mae Quigley; Paramount: Mr. and Mrs. M. H. Cohn, Dr. and Mrs. Wm. Drexler, Mrs. A. B. Merritt, Miss Emma Merritt, Martin Cohn, Mr. and Mrs. John Hayden and Miss M. White.

Pathe: Charles R. Gilmour and party; General: Mrs. A. E. Fair and mother and party; Mutual: Mr. and Mrs. W. E. Scott, Mr. and Mrs. E. J. Haslam, Miss Ruth McCabe, Mrs. Harriet Brown, Miss Helen Brown, C. H. Small, W. E. Liggett and Guy Hart; Triangle: W. S. Rand and party; Universal and Bluebird: Mr. and Mrs. M. E. Hoffman of New York, Mr. and Mrs. F. Y. Longtree, Edward Amstrong, C. M. Christensen, Eddie Haley and George Burke.

H. S. Northrup in Metro Pictures

H. S. NORTHRUP has been engaged to play Glendon, the arch-conspirator, in Lionel Barrymore's forthcoming Metro-Columbia production, as yet unnamed, which was written by June Mathis and directed by Harry Davenport.

For a number of years Mr Northrup has been one of the most celebrated leading men on the American stage. His first experience in motion pictures was with the Vitagraph company Among his most important screen plays with that company have been "The Test," "The Secret Seven," "The Battle Cry of Peace," "Fathers of Men," "The Christian" and "Vanity Fair." For Triangle he has appeared in "Fifty-Fifty," with Madge Talmadge; for the McClure company in "Greed," and for Famous Players in "The Traveling Salesman."

H. S. Northrup.

Harry Stoboe Northrup was born in Paris, France, of old colonial stock. He attended the public schools of San Francisco, finishing his education at the University of California. He went on the stage immediately after his graduation, his first position being with the stock company of T. Daniel Frawley. Attracting the attention of Eastern managers, it was not long until he was playing in important Broadway productions.

During Mr. Northrup's eighteen years as a Broadway favorite he became known to theatergoers all over the country. He was starred in Clyde Fitch's last comedy, "Girls," previously playing important parts in "The Round Up" and in "The Heir to the Hoorah," and acting as principal support to such well-known stars as E. H. Sothern, Henry Miller, Mary Mannering, William Faversham and Wilton Lackaye.

ADOLPH ZUKOR GOES WEST.

Adolph Zukor, president of the Famous Players-Lasky Corporation, left New York on Saturday, February 3, for an extended tour of the country, during which he will make his first visit to the Lasky studio in Hollywood since the merger of the Famous Players and Lasky concerns. On his way west, Mr. Zukor will stop off at Chicago, Kansas City and several other of the principal cities, where he will confer with exchange men and exhibitors on important questions incident to production and distribution.

Mr. Zukor will also complete the detailed arrangements for the marketing of Famous Players-Lasky productions in Japan, negotiations for which were closed some time ago, prior to the entry of the company into Argentine, Uruguay and Paraguay.

FREULER AND CHAPLIN CONFER.

President John R. Freuler of the Mutual Corporation is in California visiting the Mutual's west coast studios—and incidentally calling on Charles Chaplin at the Lone Star-Mutual studios in Los Angeles. Mr. Freuler is taking up with Mr. Chaplin the completion of arrangements for the new series of Chaplin comedies to follow the series of twelve now being released by the Mutual.

Douglas Fairbanks Signs with Artcraft

Popular Screen Star Forms His Own Producing Company to Release Through the Artcraft Pictures Corporation.

DOUGLAS FAIRBANKS on Tuesday, February 6, announced his film plans for the future which embrace the formation of his own producing company and the release of his photoplays through the Artcraft Pictures Corporation. This sets at rest the many conflicting rumors which have been current for the past few weeks concerning the future activities of the popular screen star. The arrangements for the distribution of the new Fairbanks subjects include the entire world by the Artcraft Pictures Corp., which also handles the Mary Pickford and George M. Cohan pictures.

Mr. Fairbanks is to form immediately his own producing company and will produce himself all the photoplays in which he will appear. Work on the initial production under the new association will be commenced immediately in the East, other subjects being staged in whatever locale best suits the story.

"I have been investigating the motion picture business with the serious intention of making my own productions for some time past," said Mr. Fairbanks shortly after the agreements were signed. "It is as a result of these inquiries that I have determined to operate under my own name so far as the production of the plays is concerned.

"My decision to make my own pictures gives me the chance to build my own producing organization. John Emerson, who has directed several of my most successful pictures will have entire charge of production and scenarios will be written by Miss Anita Loos, who is responsible for most of the best stories I have had in the past. Although our first pictures will be made in and near New York, it is our intention to make our productions in whatever locale best suits the story."

J. C. Graham Completes First Tour

Newly Engaged General Foreign Representative Finds Business Flourishing in Canada.

J. C. GRAHAM, well-known motion picture executive, who was recently engaged by the Famous Players-Lasky Corporation as general foreign representative, returned from Canada, Monday, February 5, after completing his first official tour on behalf of that company. During the course of the trip, which consumed four weeks, Mr. Graham visited the Famous Players-Lasky exchanges in Canada and made an exhaustive tour of all the principal Canadian cities. Mr. Graham reports that to his surprise he found the Canadian motion picture theaters to be doing a tremendous business, apparently unaffected to any great extent by the war. Although the tension throughout Canada is very great, and popular attention is centered upon the war, the motion picture seems to be filling the demand for cheap but universal entertainment.

Though the motion picture business in Canada was set back to a certain degree by the war in 1914, it has completely recovered and is flourishing as it was at any time previous to the outbreak of hostilities.

In Winnipeg, Mr. Graham encountered a temperature of 30 degrees below zero. Not being used to the dry cold which prevails in that part of the country, he had no conception of the actual temperature until he met a motion picture acquaintance on the street who told him that his nose and ears were frozen. Upon the advice of his friend, Mr. Graham went immediately to the Winnipeg hospital where he was held for forty-eight hours pending the thawing out of the frozen members. Mr. Graham says that this is the only incident in his journey which might be referred to as a cold reception.

NEWCOMER IN HORSLEY FAMILY.

David Horsley is being congratulated for two reasons these days. Having just returned to Los Angeles from the East where he closed a number of big and important deals over which he was receiving the congratulations of his friends, there came another occasion for expressions of pleasure in the form of a new arrival at his home, 987 Gramercy Place, Los Angeles. The newcomer is a girl, weighing eight pounds. Mr. Horsley's two other children are boys, Stanley and John.

VOSBURGH TO SUPPORT MARY MILES MINTER.

Jack Vosburgh has completed his first engagement at the American studio as the juvenile heavy lead in William Russell's company making "My Fighting Gentleman," and has been cast in support of Mary Miles Minter in her next production under the direction of James Kirkwood.

Picture Men Try Baseball

Portland, Me., Baseball Team Purchased by Hiram Abrams, President of the Paramount Pictures Corporation. Arch Selwyn and Stanley Mastbaum Also Interested.

HAVING gobbled up most of the stage stars, the motion picture producers are now invading the baseball field and stealing stars by the team-full. The breach in the first line trenches was made when the Portland (Eastern League) baseball team was purchased last week, by Hiram Abrams, president of the Paramount Pictures Corporation, Arch Selwyn, the well known theatrical producer, and Stanley Mastbaum, of Philadelphia, whose motion picture holdings in the Quaker City and New York are legion.

Mr. Abrams, who is president of the newly formed club, declares that he is going to tour with his new club in the summer and the chances are that he will be flanked by movie cameras. At any rate, he states, that before he gets through with it, the Portland team will be the paramount team of New England.

The new baseball magnate is probably doomed to some serious complications on the matter of "releases," as the word has vastly different meanings in the two fields of endeavor. It can be predicted without fear of contradiction, however, that Mr. Abrams will be classing motion picture censors and baseball umpires in the same category before the season is half over.

Zena Keefe in Moss Picture

LENA VIRGINA KEEFE, co-star with Alan Hale in the forthcoming Moss production of "One Hour," sequel to Eleanor Glyn's "Three Weeks" and "One Day," is a product of the Golden West, and one of the youngest and most promising stars on the motion picture horizon. Miss Keefe was born in San Francisco, Cal., on June 26, 1896, and her meteoric career in films makes interesting history. She is an American girl to the core, her father, James P. Keefe, having been a native of Mobile, Ala., and her mother whose maiden name was Allie Turbiville, hailing from Yazoo, Miss. While born in California, Miss Keefe is of Southern type, possessing all the characteristics of the land of cotton and sweet scented magnolias, particularly the soft voice and hospitable manner that is a birthright of every person of Southern heritage.

Zena Keefe.

When but three years old Miss Keefe made her first professional appearance in Palmer Cox's "Brownies in Fairyland." After this engagement she begain her education in a convent in San Francisco, where she stayed until her parents moved to New York.

The latter part of 1914, Miss Keefe returned again to the movies, which forever beckoned to her, and this time she is quoted as saying: "I hope my engagement in moving pictures is for life." The most important pictures in which Miss Keefe has appeared lately include "The Scarlet Runner," "Perils of Our Girl Reporters," "The Island of Surprise," "The Tigress," "Life's Yesterday," "The Esterbrooke Case," "Three Hours of a Woman's Life," etc.

"BATTLE CRY" REPEATING IN BOSTON.

"The Battle Cry of Peace" plays its third engagement and twelfth week in Boston at the Scollay Square Olympia, starting Monday, February 12. This is the largest theater on the Gordon Circuit of houses, seating 2,800. It is probably the first picture ever repeated in the Scollay Square Olympia after having played so long in other houses. The reason for playing this at the present time is the peculiar position the country is in and the possibility of war with central powers.

Advertising for Exhibitors

Conducted by EPES WINTHROP SARGENT

More Ruff Stuff.

RECENTLY we gave considerable space to Ralph Ruffner's newspaper work for his Liberty Theater, Spokane, Wash. Now "Ruff" comes along with more of the same that is perhaps more interesting because it is more within the price limit of the average theater. Not every house can take full pages each week, but here are three "two nines" or eighteen inches of space. Two are for Fairbanks and one for Clara Kimball Young, but these three are worked as a series for each picture. How they run are shown in the second cut, which gives the effect on the page. That black border will fight anything that gets on the same page with it. Heavy black border is no new thing. It has been used time out of mind, but the trouble has been that a black border sometimes suggests a death notice. Mr. Ruffner lifts the curse by making it so black and deep that it serves as a frame and not a border. Mr. Ruffner writes:

Note the little "Iggleteemiggletees" playing around on the letters. There's a couple of folks will see 'em and they'll tell others. It takes the curse off a dignified announcement of a star's name and the title of picture (of course one wouldn't hardly do that on E. H. Sothern) and makes talk.

As the "iggleteewiggletees" do not show up strongly on the cut, it may be well to explain that in the rays emanating from the Fairbanks smile are the words "Romance. Action. Smiles. Speed. Pep. Ginger. Fun in everything." They do not show up strongly, but they are there and will be caught by most readers. For Miss Young he uses the phrase "For the girl who expects to marry and for the man who is to marry her." The hours of performance follow. Whole pages were used for the Young picture and four-fifteens were used for Fairbanks. It is worth noting that the advertising is not on the theatrical page, but is run as general advertising, probably at a much smaller rate. We think that Frank Montgomery was the first to use general space instead of the theater page. Generally you can get twice as much for the same money and you do not have to be on the theater page save in the really large cities, and there it is a simple matter to take an inch to refer the reader to some other page. On the general pages you can take enough space to get a showing no matter where you are placed. This scheme was more recently used by the Stillman, Cleveland, and it worked well there. If you deal with papers having a sliding scale for various classifications, ask for general space and insist upon having it. Then get some scheme that will make your stuff stand out, and you cannot be buried. The Ruffner stuff is specially drawn and then made up with type top and bottom to suit, but if you cannot afford the service of an artist, get a general frame or device and mortise it for cut and type.

Something New.

The Cumberland theater, Brooklyn, offers something new in its program in the shape of a for sale and exchange column. This is a good idea for other locality houses to take up. Christmas week it added special reels for the children at all matinees.

Novelties.

L. H. Rossiter, of the Orange, West Haven, Conn., a suburb of New Haven, sends in quite a batch of novelties. One is a three by six inch card program, brown on white overprinted with four diagonal bands of another color. The effect is striking, but rather detracts from the ease with which the program may be read. For a job of this sort it would be better to use a good black ink instead of brown, as the latter is a little too weak to fight up through the overprinted red or green. The idea is good because it is novel and striking. A cut-out is the familiar derby with merely the house name, location and date and "Charlie Chaplin." Imagination will supply the rest. Cut-outs are expensive unless the dies are found ready made, but printers should have small difficulty in locating a hat cut-out that will serve. A small pay envelope carries two cuttings from a film "just to give you an idea what moving pictures look like" and the advice that to see them properly presented one should go to the Orange. There were special cards for Christmas and New Years in red and green, a Santa for the former and a bell for the latter. The latter also uses Mr. Blanchard's Orpheum bill verse but without the pictures, which give them added point. The verse is useful to any house with a two or three syllable name. The batch is better than anything Mr. Rossiter has sent before.

Just a Laugh.

This is too good to be kept, even though it may not belong to this department in a strict sense. A New Year's Greeting card carries this paragraph.

> May the year of Nineteen hundred seventeen be unusually prosperous to you, and may you feel free to call on me for any service I may be able to offer. Let us cooperate in strengthening both our friendship and our business.

This would be all right for some lines, but this card is put out by an undertaker and the only way the recipient can strengthen his business is to be obliging and die.

Fait in Line.

William Fait, of the Avon, Utica, N. Y., is the latest to announce kid matinees. A local society will cooperate with him in the choice of programs and give tone to the venture. From Mr. Fait's general plan of management we imagine he should be unusually successful with the special matinees. Another departure is the announcement that instead of having regular plays for program changes a picture will run from one to four days, as seems most practicable. This is better than running a light draught picture three days just because a big production will last that long.

A Suggestion.

The last program of the Lehigh Orpheum, South Bethlehem, Pa., is not quite up to their usual standard. It is a small card folder, blue on white and one page is so crowded that there is not sufficient emphasis on the days. A bit of two point rule out to the exact length of the date line will help a lot and is worth trying.

Stillman Stuff.

C. L. Madden is less active in the Stillman press work than he was, but he writes that he will remain in an advisory capacity while giving more of his time to commercial accounts. From a late program we lift this nicely phrased appeal for personal touch. We have used other forms of the same idea, but we like this one better:

> When you especially like—or dislike—something that you see here, won't you take the trouble—please—to tell us? You'll be doing that much to help us please you better the next time you come—for the expressed preferences of our patrons are never carelessly dismissed. We can guess at what the bulk of the audience like, of course; but we could guess better if we had more positive statements from patrons about what each, individually, likes.

You will note in all the Stillman copy—up to now—a certain intimate touch that is worth copying. It is not grandiloquent announcement or braggart self-praise, but just a talk from the house to the individual patron, and this is the proper keynote.

Booming the Crisis.

Captain Stanley H. Lewis, who is booming The Crisis in the Missouri territory, sends in an account of his work that will interest others:

> The Crisis opened at the beautiful new Grand Central Theater in St. Louis December 24, to an audience that overflowed the theater at both matinee and night—the turn-away business prevailing continuously since the opening. An elaborate stage setting was provided by Manager Sievers, including several patriotic drops which ascended one by one following the overture and concluding with a tableau in which two men dressed as Confederate and Union soldiers advanced to the center of the stage, clasped hands and marched off arm in arm, while "The Dove of Peace" flew overhead. The ushers were garbed as soldiers of the opposing sides and the lady attaches of the house attired in costumes of the "sixties." Captain Stanley Huntley Lewis (who has charge of the publicity for The Crisis for the State of Missouri under Mr. Sievers) addressed during the past three weeks the students of the various High and Graded schools of St. Louis, his subjects being "Abraham Lincoln" and the "Crisis," his lectures being illustrated by rapid blackboard sketches. Captain Lewis is the originator of this style of work, having used it successfully with "The Battle Cry of Peace," in Michigan last winter and with the "Fall of a Nation" throughout Ohio. He has also been engaged to address a Federation of Women's Clubs of St. Louis, and various branches of the Y. M. C. A. on "Lincoln," and has also decorated the plate glass mirrors in the lobbies of the Planters, American Laclede and other leading hotels, and the windows of various local business houses with large water color pictures of Lincoln, accompanied by appropriate lettering. His automobile equipped with a rapid fire machine gun, a military bugle blown by the exhaust of the engine and bearing the portrait of Lincoln and the advertisement of the Crisis, is also the center of attention on the streets.
> Captain Lewis obtained lots of publicity in the St. Louis papers last week, by offering the machine gun equipped racer to the Police Department for the purpose of running down the gangs of auto bandits who are infesting the city.

Captain Lewis seems to be an advertising staff all to himself, but the stunts are all good. A great deal more could be done in the matter of window work on glass and on mirrors than is being done. It is flashy and yet not so crude as banner work and it is easy to anyone who can do lettering.

A Rarebit Dream.

B. Day, of the Ideal, Toronto, sends in what he thinks he might get if he telephoned his copy to the printers and did not see proof. He gets it

> Stranded Theater
> Presents
> Theda Bare
> in
> Under Two Rags
> In which the famous Empire Woman rolls a Cigarette

It's funny, but we know some printers who can do almost as bad with written copy.

Secretive.

Someone sends in a program of the Salem theater and asks if we do not like it. We do, but it might tell where it comes from. If we were given three guesses we would suggest Salem, Mass., for the program is printed in Lynn, and Salem, Oregon, has no Lynn near it. Having Sherlocked out the address we would suggest that they put it on the running head. It makes it look more like a magazine. It is intended purely for local distribution, but even at that it is always a good plan to have city and state on your programs, just to make them look "regular." The program is called The Cinema Magazine, and looks like a magazine. It is printed on cream laid paper, in brown, with good cut work. There is plenty of well written house stuff and there are several pages given to a running advertisement of coming attractions, covering the month. Now and then the editorial pen slips as when Mme. Nazimova is announced as the "last" of great stage players to reach the screen. George M. Cohan is even laster and there will be some laster still. Another slip is on a page headed with the announcement that these are "selected Sunday features" and the first is said to contain "no end of laughs." There is no reason why the comedy should not be run on Sunday, but the suggestion of laughs defeats the end in view. We like better this line from the house talk:

> Mr. Vincent, our ticket seller, is informed at all times as to coming attractions and will be only too glad to render any information concerning our future plays, and is willing to give any messages to your friends whom you are expecting to meet at the theater.

That fully carries the idea of service to the patron. It is little things like that that make friends for the house, a willingness to be of help.

Revived.

Louis B. Mayer, of Boston, has taken over Bluebirds for the New England territory, and will work them with the Metro releases. The change revives the house organ edited by W. E. Furber, that was dropped some time ago. We missed the sheet and are glad to see it going again, and we think that New England exhibitors will feel the same way about it. Anyhow, here's a welcome back to Mr. Furber, who has been quiet a long time and therefore should have a lot saved up to say.

On the City Hall.

"Out in Cleveland they are advertising "The Great Secret" with large banners. Five were used in the downtown section. This cut shows one stretched across the old City Hall, which is in process of demolition.

A light streak cut off the boarding in front of the building, so we followed suit. The location of the sign will give some idea of its width, which must be close to fifty feet. The work is done neatly.

Two Ads.

The Mayer exchange, Boston, sends in three advertisements. Two of them are practically the same copy. One is from the Springfield Republican, and was inserted by George A. Whitney, for the Bijou. The other is for the Poli theater in Hartford. Both use practically the same copy, and both use the same stock top and bottom pieces, yet the advertisements are different. In the Bijou advertisement we think the cuts are overplayed. A better display is gained in the Poli advertisement, and in the same way, in the top of the frame the use of a smaller "theater" gives greater prominence to the house name. "To you and your friends" has a broader appeal than that "to the patrons of the Bijou." Even the side rule is more in keeping with the stock pieces. It makes an interesting study in display and one that is worth spending a little time over. Take this over and show your printer and let him study them too. We are always glad to get advertising studies along these lines. In passing, note how these Metro top and bottom pieces work up with stock rule and ornament. This is a matter we took up some months ago in this department. With a set of these for two, three and four columns you can make frames of any size by filling in the sides with rule or ornament as needed. This is much better than a fixed measure frame.

F. S. Workman, manager of the Best, Brainerd, Minn., writes that he has been on the point of sending in one of his programs several times but something always came up. Now he gets it off at last and wants some criticism, but we think he must know it is good himself. It is an eight-page folder, pages 2¾ by 4, brown stock and deep blue ink. He says this V. P. size seems to work as well as a larger eight, and there is no reason why it should not. It is sightly and well planned. The cover carries a cut and there is one page for each day. At the top is the date in full, then the star and title, a brief description of the story, a cutoff rule and the underline for that day of the following week. This is orderly, informative and complete and the printer has done his share of the work well. The only lapse is the setting of the releasing company. This looks rather makeshift. A ten-point italic should work well here. Better still would be a change in the layout that would let the title and star rise to the top and place the releasing company below as:

Emily Stevens
in
The Wheel of the Law
(Metro)

If this is not liked, another good scheme, and one that will let the name rise to the top, is to run it:

Metro Presents—
Emily Stevens
in
The Wheel of the Law

Here the name of the firm should come out to the left hand margin with the rest centered. In either case it should be set as one bank and not with a rule between Metro and the title.

Unless you can get out an exceptionally good eight pager or unless you need the space for foreign advertising, you'll find that a neat V. P. will work as well as a 5 by 8 page loosely set and heavily leaded to save composition costs. It's not the size, but what you say, that counts, and nothing looks worse than a large page too white.

TRUTHFUL TOLLIVER

Gordon M. (100%) Fullerton, publicity manager for the Liberty, Seattle, sends in a set of advertisements for "Truthful Tolliver" that are out of the ordinary. In explanation he writes:

William Hart in "Truthful Tolliver" played at the Liberty Theater, Seattle (capacity 2,200), four days, starting Sunday, January 7. Sunday's business broke all of our past Hart records and all our other Sunday's records. Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday, although not record breakers, were classed as highly satisfactory from the box office standpoint.

The silhouette used in the advertising is from the scene where Hart breaks in upon Deacon Doyle and York Cantrell, just before their thrilling fight in the dark. The silhouette was used to lend variety. Heretofore in advertising Hart, we have used his picture in all moods except smiling and all positions except upside-down. Therefore a silhouette that was typical of Hart in action and recognizable as Hart, was decided upon. The torn newspaper background used in our newspaper advertising was used to suggest Hart's role—that of a newspaper editor—his pose denoted the "fighter."

The cut shows an advertisement four columns wide, but the same thing is also shown in three columns and in one and still stands out well with this test. Characteristic silhouettes can often be used to give a touch of black where black is needed, and if you have a photograph or newspaper cut it is a simple matter to cut out what you want, paste it up, ink in with drawing ink and have a reduction or enlargement made in line cut to the proper size. If the title is not lettered in and you get hold of an exceptionally good pose, you can use it regularly as a trademark for the star whenever you run him in a picture. The idea is capable of extension.

More Change.

The Third Street theater, Easton, Pa., has been out of the department for several weeks, but it swings in line once more with a new program, grey paper with a drawn design in black. It is classy, though probably a bit expensive on the stock used.

Started Well.

The Colonial Theatre Co., operating the Colonial, Opera House and Princess at Winona, Minn., has brought out an eight-page house organ for the three theaters. The first issue starts off well. There are two pages of foreign advertising, segregated on special pages, and the rest is given the program, comment and news. The general program runs on page three. This should be extended somewhat and given dated days. It runs only about two-fifths of a column. It would be better to give it the entire column, employ a larger type face and date all days. As it stands you must take the date from the front page or guess at it from an advertisement appearing just below. The chief value of a program is that it makes it easy to convince a person they need to go and see a show, and dated days will help a lot. It might be well to run more house stuff. That is what pays best in a program. Your house is more important than the stars—to you, at least—and it will pay better to boom that than the productions. With eight pages there is room for both, but the program makes a capital start, and looks like a veteran.

Get a Receipt.

George Editor Carpenter, of Real Reels and the Notable Feature Film Co., Salt Lake City, urges the patrons of that exchange to get express receipts bearing not only the date, but the hour and minute of shipment, that any claims for delay may be made on a sound basis. Any expressman will write in the time if you insist and you have a complete record. The idea is so good that it is passed along. In the same issue George Editor makes joyous mention of a belated box of Christmas cigars, but he does not mention that he got a rhyming dictionary and metrical tape measure in his stocking, and certain it is the paper does not show it. George Editor seems to be a "natural" and not a "book taught" poet. You cannot, for instance, tell whether this is a poem or vers libre:

How doth our busy little Steno
Delight to pound and smite
Her typewriter keys throughout the day
Then view Paramount Pictures at nite?

Fame.

The Paramount Pointers, Philadelphia, has copied one of George Editor Carpenter's "poems."

For Stars.

Here is a little scheme from the Elmwood theater, Buffalo. It can be worked in a variety of ways, and one variant could be the five stars with the numerals from one to five, one under each star, the word "star" being omitted. Most printing offices have these stars in stock and anyone can order them if they have not. The idea works on the same lines as the popular graphs. You can print the fact that you have five stars in one picture, and it may impress, but not so strongly nor so instantaneously as the five stars themselves. And the larger the stars the better. The card reproduced here is 2½ by 4 inches.

Those Kraus Frames.

Did you notice that insert of the Kraus Manufacturing Co. lately? For lobby pictures they are about the best that can be had. When the company was first putting these out, a couple of years ago, we had one made of our kiddie. It is just as fresh and bright today as it was two years ago. They stand up under poor weather conditions and with a minimum amount of care they last long and keep looking attractive. They are worth looking into.

INQUIRIES.

Questions concerning photoplay writing addressed to this department will be replied to by mail if a fully addressed and stamped envelope accompanies the letter, which should be addressed to this department. Questions should be stated clearly and should be typewritten or written with pen and ink. Under no circumstances will manuscripts or synopses be criticised, whether or not a fee is sent therefor.

A list of companies will be sent if the request is made to the paper direct and not to this department, and a return stamped envelope is inclosed.

Don't Forget the Museum.

LATELY Emmett Campbell Hall enlarged his original contribution to the Museum of Photoplay at Columbia University by adding to the script originally promised other material. There are one-reel stories from 1910 to 1913, a fifteen-instalment story in episodes and another in unbroken continuity, as well as some examples of his more recent work. The dated material is of unusual interest as showing the progress made in picture writing from year to year, and there are comparatively few of the scripts of 1910 extant now. What have you got to send in for preservation? Material may be sent direct to Dr. Victor O. Freeburg, Columbia University.

Hope From Hampton.

The president of the General Film announces that that releasing body will pay for film on a basis of its earnings. At first glance that seems to be a mere detail of exchange routine, of interest only to exchange men, exhibitors and producers, but as a matter of fact, it is the best news that has come to the author for many a long day. If the film subject sells well and rents well, the producer will be paid a better rate than if the film hangs fire. This means that producers in that affiliation will necessarily offer better stories for their subjects. They will have to hold the interest to get the money. At first they will turn to the big names, but they'll soon find that this does not work out as they thought it should. Later they will buy wherever they can find good material. And when they find that this not only makes money but friends, the other producers who are not in the General Film affiliation will have to follow suit or lose out, and presently there will be a demand for honest-to-goodness stories the like of which has not been known for the past four years. Mr. Hampton is an old magazine man and possibly he knows that only through this plan can better stories be brought out. More power to him.

In Between.

You have been told that comedies sell better than dramas because the public likes to be amused. If you need confirmation, note that the Paramount is running a weekly comedy in addition to its big reel stuff because other comedies were being used on their programs. Any free lance will tell you that a good one-reel comedy will sell more quickly than the best five-reeler, and there will be a demand for more.

But did you ever stop to apply that fact to drama? By this is not meant comedy dramas, but dramas of any sort. The public likes to be amused. A little sob stuff goes a long ways. Why not write clever and bright dramas? It can be done. There is much that is dramatic and yet away from the sordid and unclean. Some few companies use sex and underworld stuff from choice, but many use this material simply because it is so difficult to get anything else. There are plenty of heart-interest themes that are dramatic and pleasing; there are romances that please and grip. Don't write of the soiled ladies and crooks. Be different and you'll stand a better chance.

Proportions.

When you go to the picture theaters, study the audience. And to get full value, do not always go to the better class of houses. Go now and then to the five and ten-cent shows and study the people there. You can learn much from a study of face; more than can be learned from the screen. If you study intelligently you will get a sense of proportion. You will come instinctively to know what you can and should not do. You can, for example, study cutting back. You can see when too extended a series tires an audience and kills the effect aimed at. On the other hand you can see how really good cutting back can heighten the effect. You can sit with your back to the screen and tell from the expression on the faces of the spectators how the suggestion of rescue tempers their despair over the fate of the hero. You must know how such things affect audiences if you would use these devices intelligently. Sometimes a fourth cut back will kill the effect of the previous three. Sometimes five will be better than three. Learn why and you can sidestep your own errors. Of course at this moment you need not know much about cutting back because you will not be permitted to write the continuity of action; but the day is coming again when the full script will be in demand again, and right now is the time to study technique against the time you will need it. Now it does not matter if your technique of action is a bit faulty, for you can sell on synopsis, and by the time the full action is asked for you will be in a position to write it.

Holding to the Theme.

In his address before the Cinema composers of Columbia University lately Sidney Drew laid particular emphasis upon the need for holding to the story, and declared that no matter how interesting other incidents might be, unless it had a direct and essential bearing upon the story being told, it was valueless. This is one of the secrets of the numerous Drew successes, and it is also a factor in the success of any story. Look at any of the Drew comedies. You will find no padding. There are lots of things which Mr. Drew might do that would be as funny as the things he does do, but they would not be as interesting if they did not hold a direct application to the story, and one reason you like Drew comedies is because the stories are direct and without padding. Padding both distracts and confuses. It interrupts the thread of the story at the moment, and it persists in this interruption after the scenes pass because you are sub-consciously, at least, trying to find its application to the story being told. To drag in a lot of irrelevant incident is not only to spoil what story you have but to confess yourself lacking in authorship since your plot must be bolstered up by interpolated incident to give it even the semblance of humor. To pad is to confess yourself wanting in imagination.

Game Laws.

This is the closed season for comedy custard pies. See if you cannot find something a trifle newer.

High Cost of Leather.

The kicker only wears out shoe leather and the editor's patience. He never gets anywhere in particular except on his uppers.

Advertising Stories.

It might pay to give some thought to advertising stories. Ernest Dench has written a book on screen advertising, and gives some hints, but not many, and it will be better to work out the idea for yourself. It is not going to be easy, for you'll have to fight with the advertiser to get in enough story to carry the argument, but it will pay some few writers to become identified with this work. Write the companies making this sort of thing and ask for a trial. At the start it will probably be necessary to work on speculation, being paid only if your story is found acceptable, so deal only with the established concerns or you'll be badly stung.

How It Goes.

Speaking of a certain make of comedy, one of the men on the inside threw a lot of light on how things go. "We got letters in bunches from the exchanges," he said. "Mostly they were letters from the exhibitors kicking at the vulgar business. We talked and talked to the boys about it, but they would persist in doing the stuff that Keystone dropped a couple of years ago. Finally the big boss gave orders that absolutely nothing of this sort was to be done—and still the film came into the cutting room with the same old stuff in it." In other words, the employee is more important than the boss and though the boss and the exchange and the exhibitor and the patrons all kick, the comedians persist in doing as they darned well please—and some commentators say that there are no clean comedies. It's a shame.

Team Work.

The play's the thing, but the play needs playing and that means good direction, good actors and intelligent cutting. It is seldom that all four go together.

Persevere.

Anyone can slide down hill. It's the climbing up that counts.

To Suceed.

Have faith in yourself if you would win, but don't be too confident.

Sage Advice.

Don't roast editors. They'll get their roastings later. Tear up that kick letter you've written and try and smile.

Manufacturers' Notice.

IT IS an established rule of this department that no apparatus or other goods will be endorsed or recommended editorially until the excellence of such articles has been demonstrated to its editor.

Important Notice.

Owing to the mass of matter awaiting publication, it is impossible to reply through the department in less than two to three weeks. In order to give prompt service, those sending four cents, stamps (less than actual cost), will receive carbon copy of the department reply, by mail, without delay. Special replies by mail on matters which cannot be replied to in the department, one dollar.

Both the first and second set of questions are now ready and printed in neat booklet form, the second half being seventy-six in number. Either booklet may be had by remitting 25 cents, money or stamps, to the editor, or both for 40 cents. Cannot use Canadian stamps. Every live, progressive operator should get a copy of these questions. You may be surprised at the number you cannot answer without a lot of study.

Question No. 175.

Can you make a mechanically-correct adjustment of the ordinary star and cam type of intermittent movement? Explain your answer in detail.

Roll of Honor on Question No. 167.

The Roll of Honor on question 167 consists of W. P. Horn, Pocatello, Idaho; C. E. Linstruth, Carthage, N. Y.; M. M. Moon, Sherman, Texas; John W. Creamer, Chillicothe, Mo.; Edward Marshall, Vancouver, B. C.; S. C. Flood, Chicago, Ill.; William Meany, Syracuse, N. Y.; Gomer Nichols, Muncie, Ind.

I have selected the reply of W. P. Horne, Pocatello, Idaho, as best suited for publication.

Reply to Question No. 167.

By W. P. Horne, Pocatello, Idaho.

The Question:

If you were drawing 15 amperes with two rheostats in series, how many amperes would they deliver if wired in multiple?

The Answer:

It would be difficult to answer the question precisely, because in practice there is a considerable difference between the voltage drop in a 15-ampere arc and the voltage drop in an arc carrying larger amperage. However, neglecting that particular thing, we would have the following: Assuming that we are using 110-volt current, applying Ohms law (voltage divided by amperage gives ohms) we have $110 \div 15 = 7.33$ ohms as the total resistance of the two rheostats and the arc in series. Assuming an arc voltage of 35 (the amperage alternating current projection arc voltage drop) we have $110 - 35 = 75$, which, divided by 15, equals 5 ohms. This is the resistance offered by the two rheostats themselves when connected in series with each other. Now, cutting out one rheostat would halve the resistance, and connecting them in multiple would, to all intents and purposes, again halve the resistance, so that we would now have a rheostatic resistance equal to $5 \div 2 = 2.5 \div 2 = 1.25$. And now comes the stumbling block in this question. In order to know the exact resistance of the arc we would have to know its amperage. A 25-ampere, 35-volt alternating current arc would have 1.4 ohms resistance. Adding this to 1.25, the rheostatic resistance, when the two are in multiple, we have a total of 2.65 ohms resistance for the whole thing, and this divided into 110 gives us a little more than 41 amperes. This is, of course, not exactly what you would get, because, as before said, you could not get the exact result without first knowing the very thing we are trying to find out, since, to get the true arc voltage, we would have to divide volts by amperes.

[I am not quite certain about that proposition myself, Brother Horne, and though, perhaps, you may think I'm side-stepping, I really am not, when I tell you I could hardly figure out the price of sour apples per gallon if I knew they were ten cents a quart this morning. I was up until 5 A. M. at the New York Operators' ball last night. Tomorrow I may have to go to Indianapolis, Ind., and I certainly will have to go to St. Marys, Pa., Wednesday anyhow, and there are five appointments and a lot of mail and other things to be worked in somehow between now and then. My brain is a ball of yarn, so, if there is any error in your reply, I have my alibi all ready.—Ed.]

A New Theater.

Recently with the view to examining into the merits of the "Atmospheric screen," the editor journeyed to 195th street and Webster avenue, the Bronx, and there visited the U. S. theater, a new house owned by the Big Three Amusement Corporation, and managed by Jules Sarzin, who opened the Majestic for the same company at 77th street and the Concourse quite some time ago.

The U. S. theater seats approximately 1,800 on the main floor and 200 in the balcony. The front of the balcony is taken up with loges. The auditorium is 200 feet long by approximately 75 feet wide. It is plainly but tastefully decorated, and with its high ceiling presents an imposing appearance. The ventilation is very thorough indeed. It is accomplished by means of 8-foot typhoon fans. So strong is the air current that, standing in the main entrance door, one almost has to hold his hat to prevent its being blown into the theater. The screen is of the type known as the "Atmospheric screen," concerning the merits of which I will have something to say in another article, either this week or very soon. The screen is 22 x 17 feet. It is in one piece, but lacks a surrounding border of black. Due to necessity for draperies, used in connection with singers, there was no room for a shadow box, and its absence cannot be approved. This is practically, however, the only criticism I have to make with regard to the auditorium.

The operating room is of fair size, and of strictly fireproof construction; also the ports are of ample width, and the front and side walls are painted dead black. The projection equipment consists of two Power's Six B machines supplied current through a transverter using 50 amperes at the arc. Harry C. Kraisman is in charge of projection. There were faults the day I was there, but the theater had only just opened and, as usual, the placing of operating room equipment had been left until the very last thing, with result that while the picture was being projected there were three electricians working at wire connections in the operating and rewinding room, therefore Brother Kraisman was not so much to be blamed for shadows on the screen. Just why the operating room installation is, nine times out of ten, left until the very last minute— ? ? ? ? ?

The 50 amperes give a very briliant picture, which is quite some favorable statement with regard to the Atmospheric screen, the picture being 22 feet wide and the long focal length lens being of very small diameter, thus making for huge light loss.

Oh, yes, and by the way, there is a very pretty ladies' rest room done in old ivory; also a well fitted gents' retiring room. Altogether the U. S. theater and its installation are excellent, though a little more width of operating room would have been acceptable. It is the legal size, but the legal requirement is only a minimum, a point many theater owners do not sem to grasp.

He Thanks Us.

G. W. Hathaway, Leavenworth, Wash., orders a Handbook and says:

> Don't think I, myself, waited this long for one of the books, as I purchased one of them as soon as they could be had; also I have one of the second edition, and a copy of Hallberg's "Motion Picture Electricity," proof, I think, that I believe in study. This book I am purchasing for a young man who is starting to learn the work under me, and the first thing I did was to instruct him to get the "bible," and study it. I have been operating for a little more than three years, and have combined my practical work with a study of both books and the World, which latter I absolutely could not do without. My manager has two houses, one equipped with a Power's Six, where we have road shows and special pictures. The other house has a Simplex. And here is some record for you. We have a G. E. rectifier, which was installed four years ago this fall, and until the first of September, 1915, ran five hours a day, since which time it has averaged four hours a day, and the same tube with which it started is still on the job, never having been changed. I have had to adjust it a time or two, and once in a while clean up the contact points, but aside from that I let it alone as much as possible, and possibly because I have never bothered it, it has never bothered me.
> I wish to thank you for what you have done for me through the World and your invaluable books. Without them I do not see how I could have gotten on as I have. I am proud of the picture I am putting on the screen, for which I give the big end of the credit to our department and to your books, plus study and a little horse sense on my own part. I wish you all kinds of success, and may your shadow never grow less.

Well, Brother Hathaway, it is very pleasant, indeed, to know that our work has benefitted you, and through you has benefitted your manager and every motion picture theater patron in your city. But, nevertheless, all my work would have gone for nothing if you had not yourself had the energy and good sense to apply your mind and study. If you had been one of the self-satisfied, I-know-it-all boobs, you would not have gotten any benefit, nor would any one else. If there is any one thing in this broad, wide world that makes me utterly and completely tired it is Mr. Solid Ivory-Top Boneheado who knows it all. You can't tell him anything. He can't be induced to admit even the possibility of there being anything in any way connected with projection which he could learn with benefit to himself. The only trouble is, however, when you get him cornered and pin him right down, his stock of knowledge fades away like a pound of soap on wash day.

This particular brand of man is a detriment and a draw-back to the profession. He has no real respect for his profession. He has not brains enough to understand that there is anything to operating except getting the greatest possible amount of money for the least possible return. Ask him what bearing the conjugate foci points of the condenser system have on projection, and he would probably remark: "Aw g'wan, y' poor nut, youse are crazy. What th' hell do I want to know about them fool things for?" Or he would stare at you in stupid amazement. There is another brand of this particular "operator," however, who would curl his lip in a sneer, and point to the screen, where you would see a really very good picture. The sneer and the gesture would be his answer. It would be equivalent to saying, "Go chase yourself. Haven't I got a good picture? What more do you want?" And he has got a good picture, too, only he don't know or realize that that picture is costing his manager probably a half more than it ought to cost him. In other words, if he had the proper knowledge he could put the same identical result on the screen for one-half less money, and that is quite some considerable item.

The editor of this department has had opportunities for learning which are probably not equalled by those of any other one man, when it comes to projection and things allied thereto. He is in intimate touch with the whole field, and has been for more than seven years, yet he finds that, notwithstanding this fact and the further fact that he has taken every possible advantage of the opportunities thus presented, there is still very much left for him to study and learn concerning the projection of pictures. That being true, how much more is it true that the average operator, who has at least very few special advantages, needs to study?

I shall be glad to hear from you at any time, Friend Hathaway. You may be a small town man, but you are a live wire, and that is the kind that counts.

Changes Too Radical.

Brother Ralph Martin, Los Angeles, Cal., has submitted to this department his idea of an improved projector optical system. I have promised Friend Martin that I would have this matter tested, and I am not sure but that I will yet. But here is the proposition. Martin asks for a minimum distance of 26 inches between the front condenser lens and the aperture, with a distance of a little more than 13 inches between the apex of the rear condenser and the back surface of the front condenser, with 3⅜ inches from the arc to the center of the convex of the rear (meniscus) lens.

Now from the optical point of view if this thing would work, and Brother Martin swears by the Beard of the Prophet it will, it would unquestionably be the thing if looked at purely from the optical point of view. I have, however, talked this matter over with projection machine manufacturers, and while the testing out of this matter would be interesting, still at the same time it presents mechanical difficulties which I am afraid would render its adoption almost, if not quite, out of the question. First there would be a distance of 26 inches plus 13.15 inches, plus 3⅜ inches, equaling about 42½ inches, from the arc to the aperture, added to which would be approximately 18 inches to the lamp controls, so that the total distance from the lamp controls to the machine gate would be pretty well on toward 5 feet, or at least 6½ feet from lamp controls to front wall of operating room, and this would make it very awkward to handle the lamp, particularly when the pitch is a steep one, because when the operator would be within reach of his arc controls he would be entirely out of sight of the screen; also the back end of the machine would be very high. In addition to this there is the difficulty of maintaining the spot central with the aperture under these conditions. With a 26-inch distance the slightest movvement of the arc up, down, or sidewise would alter the position of the spot quite materially. Then, too, such a machine could not be gotten into more than about one operating room in ten. There are also other objections, but it seems to me these are sufficient.

When I told Brother Martin I would have this matter tested out I did not realize the many objections to such a system. It could, of course, be made to work, but its introduction would be very difficult. As the matter lies it seems to me that we would hardly be justified in having special lenses made and special mounts for them in order to test something which could not possibly be put into practical use.

To Obtain Ham and Eggs.

John D. Moore, Jr., Leavenworth, Washington, says:

> Have decided to enter the sweat box and learn to shoot pictures at the screen as a means of obtaining my future ham an' eggs. I like the work fine, and propose to make of myself an A No. 1 operator. Am studying under a good man, and have already had two months' apprenticeship. We use D. C. with a Simplex projector and A. C. with a Power's Five. The law only requires three months' apprenticeship in Washington.

Well, Brother Moore, with all due respect to you, the law which requires a three months' apprenticeship is a joke—though a VERY BAD ONE. How would you yourself like to ride behind a locomotive engineer who had served a three months' apprenticeship? Or how would you like to have a plumber repair the pipes in your house if you knew he had only served a three months' apprenticeship? Would you hire a brick laying contractor whose men had only served a three months' apprenticeship? NO, YOU BET YOUR SWEET NECK YOU WOULD NOT.

Now, son, you take my advice and don't get excited about becoming an operator too quickly. I suppose that, owing to that fool law, it would be a waste of breath to ask you to serve even as much as a one year apprenticeship, but for heaven sake stick for six months anyway. Don't get the idea that there is nothing more you can learn by remaining in apprenticeship after the three months' period has passed. It may seem to you that you are perfectly competent to take charge of projectors, but remember that thousands of people will be paying an admission fee to view your work and if you are not competent to place the best possible picture on the screen you are not going to be able to return them full value for their money; also remember that when you pose as an operator after only three months' experience you are really very close to working a flimflam game on the public. At the very least it is false pretenses.

Now, Friend Moore, don't feel angry at the foregoing. I am not saying all this just simply to you alone. I am merely using your case to point out to other apprentices certain FACTS. You are not the only one who imagines he can learn a trade,, which amounts to a profession, in a space of three months. Brother Moore, IT CAN'T BE DID. There ain't no such animal. One year ought to be the minimum of apprenticeship, and two years would be far better, although I fully appreciate the fact that you probably think it would be a tremendous hardship to be compelled to serve two whole years to learn the profession of operating, though (whisper) you would not think the serving of a two years' apprenticeship as a hardship if you were trying to learn the plumbers' trade.

Duplicate Slide Projection.

George G. Goodman, Tacoma, Washington, says:

> The inquiry of Mr. Corwell as to the effect of projecting duplicate slides simultaneously from two stereopticons set side by side is easily answered as to the possible stereoscopic effect. The stereoscopic effect of objects standing out in relief would be absent, as it is with so called stereoscopic views made with a single lens camera. In order to get this effect it is absolutely essential that two pictures be made at once with a twin lens camera, the lenses of which are set, preferably, a little further apart than the human eyes. The twin lens, like our eyes, can see on both sides of certain objects, such as a thin board viewed edgeways, and certain objects, such as a slender sapling, does not cut off the view of objects beyond. In other words, two eyes or lenses see more than one and can, to a degree, like the Irishman's gun, shoot around a corner. I have a stereoscopic camera and the idea has often occurred to me, as it has to Mr. Corwell, to make a pair of positive slides from a pair of negatives and see what the effect would be when projected from two stereopticons set side by side, thus blending the views. To insure success it would be essential that the lens of both camera and projection machine be exactly matched pairs, as to angle and focal length, and for the purposes of experiment it might be simpler to use the camera lens in the projection machine. If the experiment was a success it would be a simple matter to couple up two moving picture cameras, or construct a double lens machine, and thus have moving pictures in relief.
> If anyone should experiment along these lines it would be well to remember that the stereoscopic views are always transposed on the card mount, the right camera view being at the left of the mount, the reason being that the negative is made up side down. The double lens camera gets the same view that one would have standing on his head.

All of which is duly submitted for the consideration of Mr. Corwell and others. Information of this kind is both interesting and valuable. We should be glad to have the results of any experiments which may be made along the lines set forth.

Probably a Radiator.

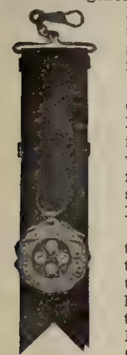
J. W. Latham, Albert Lea, Minn., says:

> This is the first time I have taken direct advantage of your valued department, though I have received many valuable pointers through its columns. The trouble I am experiencing I have never seen treated in the department, and it is also one I have not experienced in ten years of operating. Am using 110 volts D. C., and a late model Motiograph, pulling about 40 amperes with a 98 foot throw. There is a considerable drop in the projection, and I am troubled with what appears to be a heat wave which has much the same effect as water running down a sheet of glass. It appears on one side of the screen only, and varies from the corner down and over to the center of the screen. I may be giving some unnecessary details, but, as I am getting a dandy picture otherwise, I am anxious for a quick solution of the trouble. In closing, I wish you a Merry Christmas and prosperous New Year.

I think, Brother Latham, your trouble is due to a radiator which is shooting hot air up through the light beam. Possibly this comes from a floor radiator, or I might say that probably it does. It is also possible that the heat from a wall radiator shoots out far enough to reach the light ray, provided it be a narrow house. Anyhow I guess there is no question at all but that is the seat of the trouble, and it is up to you to find the offending radiator and squelch it.

Society of Motion Picture Engineers' Watch Fob.

The accompanying cut shows the emblem of the Society of Motion Picture Engineers. The reel is of gun metal. It is mounted upon a handsome gold base, as shown. The fob is of black suede leather, suspended from which is the emblem of gold. This fob is sent, without charge, to all members in good standing.



The transactions of the first meeting of the Society of Motion Picture Engineers, held at the Astor Hotel, New York City, October 2 and 3, 1916, are now published in pamphlet form, and ready for distribution. Copies will be received by every member in good standing, and may also be obtained by non-members by sending the sum of 25 cents to the secretary of the Society of Motion Picture Engineers, 729 Seventh avenue, New York City.

The proceedings contain matters of considerable interest, among which is a paper by W. B. Westcott, Boston, Mass., on "Precision, the Dominant Factor in Motion Pictures"; an article by Don J. Bell, Chicago, well known to the motion picture fraternity, on "Motion Picture Film Perforation." There is also a paper by C. Francis Jenkins, Washington, on 'Condensers, their Contour, Size, Location and Support." These papers constitute the beginning of a series of what it is expected will be valuable technical papers prepared by experts who are members of the Society.

The next meeting of the Society will be held at Atlantic City in the early spring. Just what the organization will be able to accomplish remains yet to be seen, but as I have repeatedly pointed out there is not only room for, but a very distinct need for such an organization, particularly as applied to the standardization of apparatus used in connection with motion pictures, including all branches.

Current to Kill.

A. H. Ruby, general secretary, Australian Theatrical and Amusement Employees' Association. Victoria Branch, Melbourne, Australia, sends in the following:

> I would deem it a favor if you would oblige me with a copy of the letter received from the Governor of Sing Sing prison with relation to the amount of current to kill a person; also any particulars with regard to operators who have become blinded through operating projection machines; also the highest salaries paid operators in the United States. My reasons for asking these questions are that we are having a big fight with the managers with reference to increased wages and better conditions, and are going before the Arbitration Court for an award. Any information you can give with regard to operators and conditions existing in the United States would be very much appreciated, since the more evidence we can get together the stronger we can make our case.

The letter from the warden of Sing Sing prison says that the voltage used in executions is 1,800 or 1,900 volts, with an amperage of 7 — 10. It could hardly be claimed that under ordinary conditions the operator is in danger of death from electric current, except in this way: it is always possible, where current is taken from high voltage lines through transformers, that a defect might develop in the transformer which will charge the secondary line with primary voltage, or that a high tension line might accidentally come in contact with the operating room line, in either of which case a condition of great danger to the operator would obtain, particularly if he be working in a metal lined operating room, the metal of which is grounded. The operator, however, is in very genuine danger from fire, since in case of fire it is often necessary for him to remain in the operating room, and thus literally take his life in his hands. There have been several instances in which the operator has been burned so badly that he died, rather than open the door into the auditorium and make his escape at the risk of creating a panic in the audience.

As to being blinded, while I cannot cite individual instances, still of my own knowledge I can say that it is no very uncommon thing for an operator's eyes to give out under the strain of alternations from the brilliancy of the spot to the comparative darkness of the operating room. Operating is very, very hard on the eyes, and while very few operators are actually made blind, still a large number of them have their eyesight permanently injured.

Here in the United States the highest operator's salary of which I have any knowledge is $50 per week, this being paid in one or two instances in New York City. I believe also that out in San Francisco the maximum of the union scale is $35, though of that I am not sure, and inasmuch as the San Francisco local fails to keep us posted on such matters I cannot give you authentic information. The forty-five dollar jobs are very few, but there are a great many operators in this country receiving thirty and thirty-five dollars per week, though, of course, the great average is very much below that figure, probably being between twenty and twenty-five dollars. There are, of course, a large number of "road jobs" paying $45 per week, but they are with traveling attractions.

As to conditions: in many cities the law requires ample ventilation of the operating room, with fresh air brought in, not from the auditorium, but from the outside air. If you can get hold of the third edition of the Handbook (there have been a large number sold in Australia) you will find the operating room ventilation requirements of Massachusetts set forth on pages 229 and 230. The legal minimum requirement of operating room space in this country is 6 feet wide for one machine, with 3 additional feet for each additional machine. The front and back depth should not, with modern machines, be less than 8 feet, and the ceiling not less than 7 feet from the floor.

It seems to me that your managers ought not to oppose a reasonable demand for increased salaries and better working conditions for Australian operators, remembering that the modern photoplay is a high class proposition, costing in many instances thousands of dollars to produce, and if it is to be placed before the public creditably it is absolutely necessary and essential that there be a competent man in the operating room; also that, within reason, the better the working conditions and the higher the salaries, the higher the grade of ability and intelligence it will secure. I would like to ask the Australian theater managers if it is not a bit out of proportion to place a $25,000 photoplay in the hands of a fifteen or twenty dollar a week man for reproduction before the public, remembering always that it lies in the hands of the operator to present the photoplay in the best possible way, or to present it in a manner which will render null and void all the best efforts of the producer and of the artists.

A New Job.

Ed. L. Walsh, assistant manager, DeGraw theater, Brookfield, Mo., says:

> I have a new job now, as assistant manager of the DeGraw theater. Have two new machines, and can assure you I have had troubles of my own. But I am getting a better picture than the "other fellow" at that, though I am not satisfied and want to get the best that can be gotten out of the equipment. Have a 65 to 75 ampere capacity Wagner White Light Converter and two late models Simplex machines, with a 65 foot throw from the balcony. Have the screen tilted accordingly, but it is only an Indian linen painted. Am using Gundlach lenses, and ¾ inch carbon above and ⅝ inch below—both cored. My objective is working at 4¼ inches back focus. Have a 6½ inch condenser in front and a 7½ inch in the rear, with ¼ inch between the lenses, and 13 inches from the condensers to the film. What combination will beat this? also what do you think is the best screen? How about my carbons, and would you stop down the lens?

Well, Brother Walsh, in the first place I would advise you to use a solid carbon below. It will be considerably harder to handle your light, but you won't have much trouble after you get used to it, and you will get more light per ampere, for reasons which you will find set forth on page 286 of the Handbook, copy of which I would advise you to get at once; price $4 from the Moving Picture World. You will find it worth many times four dollars to you, though possibly you already have it.

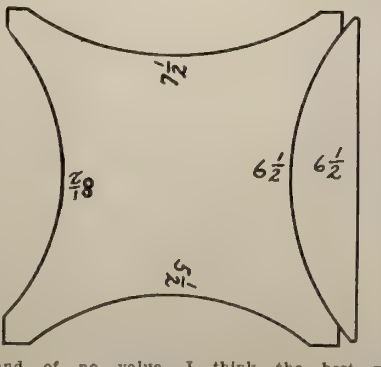
As to stopping down the lens, why you have not told me its diameter, so how can I answer that? Gundlach makes more than one diameter of lens, and the diameter is one of the very important points—very important indeed. Assuming your lens to have a 2 inch diameter, suppose you try the following: Set your condensers as close together as you can get them without actually touching, and move the lamphouse until the front side of the front condensing lens is just a little more than 18 inches from the aperture. If you are using 60 amperes, reverse your lenses; that is to say, put the 7½ in front and the 6½ next the arc. Now, I cannot guarantee just how this will work, but anyhow try it out and report. You see you should have given me your amperage and in addition the exact diameter of your objective lens. If the foregoing don't work, give me those two items, and I will see what I can do for you.

I cannot answer questions as to the relative merits of apparatus in this department. Advice concerning screens will be given on receipt of your check in the sum of $5—see my advertisement as projection engineer in another part of the paper.

Condenser Gauge.

J. R. Kress, New York City, wants to know if there is any accurate method of measuring the focal length of condensers by means of a gauge.

Yes, Brother Kress, there is. A picture of such a gauge was published in March 18, 1916, issue. It is, however, herewith reproduced. The gauge is made as follows: Get a sheet of good, stiff tin, or thin sheet brass, and cut it about five inches square. Fasten it down to a flat board by means of thumb tacks, or wire brads, two at each corner. Now with a pair of compasses set for a 5½-inch circle, scribe the 5½ side. Next with the compass set for a 6½-inch circle, scribe the 6½ side. Then set the compass for a 7½-inch circle and scribe the 7½ side, then for an 8½-inch circle and scribe an 8½ side. The circles then must be cut out, as shown, and this is the really difficult part of the thing since it must be done with accuracy or the gauge will be "off," and of no value. I think the best way would be to rough it out carefully with a sharp pair of tinner's shears, and finish with a fine, half-round file. It would be some trouble to make such a gauge, but once made it is a permanent and valuable adjunct to the operator's tool kit. I think, on the whole, however, I would make it of tolerably heavy metal, so it won't easily get bent.



Wants to Join.

B. Y. Coffman, Providence, Ky., says:

> Here I am breaking into the department again. I want to join the I. A., but up to date have failed to get the address of any local in my neighborhood. I have been operating for three years, only to be discharged that my place could be filled by an incompetent and cheap man. The cities in my vicinity in which there are locals are Owensboro, Paducah, and Evansville. Would you please inform me, through the department, as to the best course to pursue in this matter? If any one belonging to any of the locals above named see this article, I wish they would write me. I wish to express my thanks to yourself and the department for the help it and the Handbook have given me.

The matter of membership is one which is wholly and entirely up to the local union having jurisdiction over your territory, and according to my map, this is Owensboro, Ky. The secretary of the Owensboro Local is A. D. Rodgers, 221 Allen street, the number of the Local being 592.

Now, Friend Coffman, your only course is to write asking for an application blank. The Owensboro local is a Stage Hand Local. Whether it contains operators or not I cannot say, but in any event it does not have to receive you into membership unless it wishes to, nor need it give any reason for rejection.

This is not a policy with which I agree. I have long held, and still do hold, that it is up to the I. A. to receive into membership every operator who can prove his competency, and who is able to supply evidence of his moral fitness to belong to the organization. This is in no way, shape, manner or form designed as a slap at the Owensboro Local, because I don't know but that they will be glad to receive your application and take you into membership if you can prove your competency. The fact remains, however, that in very many instances where small town men have desired to join locals, their application has not only been refused, but entirely ignored, and this is wrong from any and every point of view. If a union does not wish to receive a man into membership the very least it can do is to reply courteously to his application, and refuse it in gentlemanly form. The man who has applied to an organization in good faith, only to have his application ignored, is very apt to become an enemy to organized labor, and there is neither sense, rhyme or reason in making enemies by this sort of procedure.

If a small town man residing within the jurisdiction of a local writes asking to make application for membership, treat him like a gentleman, even if you don't wish to receive him. That is the very least you can do.

Trip Itinerary.

The following is the itinerary of the first part of the trip, as far as Memphis, Tenn.

Arrangements have been made for the lecture in all these cities, with the exception of the following: Columbia, S. C.; Jacksonville, Fla.; Birmingham, Ala.; Louisville, Ky., and Jackson, Miss. I shall, however, stop in each one of these cities. The unions in Columbia, S. C., and Macon, Ga., did not reply to letters, which the secretary unquestionably received, else they would have been returned. Just why this is I do not know, but would respectfully point out to the aforementioned bodies that a union is presumed to be a business organization, and ordinary business courtesy expects a reply to a business communication.

F. H. Richardson.

The itinerary as it here appears may be accepted as official, and organizations can make their arrangements accordingly.

A picture of the editor is printed herewith, to the end that the committees will know what he looks like, and thus be able to pick him out from among the "arriving throng."

Get a Handbook.

Peter H. Smith, Cohoes, N. Y., says:

> I am a moving picture operator, and would be greatly obliged if you would settle the following question, which has vexed both myself and a number of fellow operators. The question is this: Does a small-wire contain more resistance than a large one? If so, why so?

Brother Smith it is very evident that you and the brother operators in question need to study, and I would recommend that you send $4.00 to the Moving Picture World and procure a copy of the third edition of the Handbook, a 720 page work devoted practically in its entirety to projection. On pages 34 to 39 you will find your question answered. Then on page 40 under the heading "Properties of Conductors," and on page 41 under the heading of "Loss Through Resistance," and on page 42 under the heading "Mill-Foot Standard of Resistance," and on page 44 under heading "Figuring Resistance of Circuit," and on page 45 under heading "Figuring Voltage Drop," you will find other data on this particular subject.

And now to answer your question, which you will observe from the foregoing cannot be fully answered in this department, since it would take many pages of space. Increasing the diameter of a wire increases its resistance per unit of length. Increasing the diameter decreases its resistance per unit of length. In other words, a given length of wire made of a given substance, will have its resistance increased as you decrease its diameter, and vice versa. I don't quite know how to explain to you briefly why this is true. However the standard of resistance for wires is based on what is known as the "mill-foot standard of resistance" (see page 42 of the Handbook), which is the resistance of a wire one circular mill in cross-section (one one-thousandth inch in diameter), and one foot in length, made of the same material as the wire it is proposed to measure the resistance of. The resistance of such a wire, when made of ordinary copper, is 10.5 ohms. That is to say, a wire one foot in length and one one-thousandth of an inch in diameter (one mill cross-section) made of ordinary commercial copper, will, at a temperature of 75 degrees F., or 24 degrees C., have a resistance of 10.5 ohms. It therefore follows, since resistance decreases with increased diameter, that the resistance of any piece of wire one foot in length will be equal to 10.5 divided by the area of cross-section of the wire expressed in circular mills, and the total resistance of any number of feet of such wire will be the resistance of one foot multiplied by the total length. The rule is as follows: (page 44 of the Handbook) To find the resistance of a copper wire of any size and length multiply its length in feet by 10.5 and divide that product by its area in circular mills, which amounts to the same thing as I have already set forth, since the result would be the same if you divide 10.5 by the cross-section of area in circular mills, and multiply by the length of the wire in feet.

Now, Brother Smith, I am not trying to force you to buy a Handbook, though I would be perfectly willing to do that little thing if I could, for your own benefit.. It is essential that operators know these things, because it is not only up to the operator to put a good picture on the screen, but to PUT IT ON FOR THE LEAST POSSIBLE COST and he cannot be sure he is doing that unless he is able to figure the resistance of his circuits, and know they are of ample size to prevent loss through unnecessary voltage drop.

Editor and Exhibitor.

I present herewith indisputable evidence that I am now a full-fledged exhibitor, and lemme tell you, you darned operators had better step along lively from this time forward. Huh! Gee it's great to be a boss, even if it is only an "honorary" one.

P. S. There needn't any of you spell honorary "onery" either.

However, lest I do violence to the dignity of the body which issued the card, let me say that I very thoroughly appreciate their courtesy. At the time I attended the Convention, Maurice Costello, Rose Tapley and myself were the "exhibits" extraordinary, whereupon the Convention added an "ors" to the name, which made us exhibitors, for which many thanks, gentlemen, I trust "our" league will prosper, and long continue a power of good in the sovereign state of North Carolina.

Get Hep to Themselves.

Will J. Fallon, Sioux City, Iowa, says:

> Don't know whether you will shoot or merely hang me for bringing up the subject of punch marks in films. However, I am going to take a chance, although I know, Brother Richardson, you must be very, very tired of that particular subject. My solution of the change-over proposition, contained on the separate sheet attached hereto, is not original with me. Credit for the idea belongs to a real operator, viz.: W. B. Larmour, Waterloo, Iowa. I think, however, I have improved on his plan. Have been sending it along with the shows I ship away, and have, up to date, received two letters and one post card complimenting me on the scheme. The letters are from the International Film Service and Blue Bird Photoplays managers in Omaha, and the card from an operator in the Orpheum theater at Menomie, Wis. I would like to see more operators get hep to themselves, and follow out the idea. If they did so I believe it would be only a little while before exchange managers would follow suit.
> Local Union No. 355 has started school of instruction meetings for its members. We held our first meeting December 9, with about half the membership in attendance. Brother Charles L. Bateman was elected instructor, and he sure is some teacher. If you could have heard the brothers talk after the meeting it would have done you good. We propose to hold these meetings every week.

All of which is most excellent. The change-over plan referred to is as follows:

> CHANGE OVER CUE SHEET FOR MARY MILES MINTER IN "FAITH."
> REEL NO. 1. AFTER NOTE IS SHOWN ON SCREEN. LAST SCENE. CLOSE UP VIEW OF OLD LADY READING NOTE. (FADE AWAY.)
> REEL NO. 2. LAST TITLE. GIVE THIS FLOWER TO YOUR MOTHER. LAST SCENE. VIEW OF LONE LADY IN FLOWER GARDEN. (FADE AWAY.)
> REEL NO. 3. LAST TITLE. THERE, THERE, YOU'RE A GOOD GIRL. YOU MAY GO OUT AND PLAY AWHILE. LAST SCENE. VIEW OF TWO WOMEN IN KITCHEN.
> REEL NO. 4. LAST SCENE. VIEW OF LONE MAN WITH HAT IN HAND GOING TOWARDS DOOR. AFTER HE LEAVES ROOM WITH THREE OTHER MEN IN IT.
> CUE SHEET ARRANGED BY WILL J. FALLON, OPERATOR PLAZA THEATER, SIOUX CITY, IOWA. USED AND FOUND O.K. BY CARL GILBERT, RELIEF MAN.

I am not going to comment on its merits, but merely remark that the plan is ingenious and has genuine merit. Still I believe the change-over sign ought to be incorporated in the negative itself, so that it will be automatically placed in every reel that goes out. This is not a criticism, Brother Fallon. Your idea is all right, as far as it goes, and certainly is a big improvement over what we have now, viz.: nothing. But I believe anything that the operator or exchange man can do will of necessity be in the nature of a make-shift. The thing properly belongs in the hands of the manufacturer, and will never be entirely and completely taken care of until Mr. Manufacturer gets busy.

As to the school idea, why it is good, better, best. Rightly followed out it will put the organization in position to advance a very convincing argument when the next salary advance is requested. You can then say we not only want an advance in salary because we need it in our business, but because we are better operators, and can place you a better picture on the screen, or place the same picture on for less money.

I am anticipating the pleasure of meeting the Sioux City men. I have always regarded the Sioux City Local as composed of live wires. Your action in this matter proves that I am correct. Let the good work go on.

From Mexico.

Ivan Bujan, Jr., Cananea, Sonora, Mexico, says:

> Am having lots of trouble with my condensers. Have one Six A and one Six B Power's, using 40 amperes through mercury arc rectifier. Meniscus-bi-convex condensers, first 6 1-2 inch focus; second 7 1-2 inch focus. On the Six A machine the meniscus condenser never breaks, but on the Six B, I have broken three meniscus in two days. On the Six A the carbons are about 5-8 inch closer to the condenser than those on the Six B. I don't understand this matter. Will you please advise me what to do to stop the breakage? I now have a plano-convex on the Six B, and it has not broken yet. Can I use D. C. motors on A. C. current?—Power motors.

No you cannot use a D. C. motor on A. C., but inasmuch as I believe you refer to the Power's motor drive, the secondary of your rectifier produces direct current, or a very good imitation of it, and the motor is made to operate at arc voltage, therefore you are all right on that proposition. Just cut your motor drive into the lamp circuit at the machine table switch, on the "live" end.

With regard to the condensers, you have sprung a hard one. The presumption is that there is some difference in the ventilation of the two lamphouses, or you have a fan in the operating room which is creating a heavy air current around one lamphouse and not around the other, or that there is some peculiarity in the condenser holder itself which is causing the breakage. It is also possible that, due to the introduction of loose joints, poor copper or something else, there is more resistance in one lamp circuit than in the other. I would suggest that the first thing you do would be to get your light company to test the amperage on both lamps. If it is the same, then you are all right there. However, if you are getting the same size spot, and your condenser lenses are all the same focus, and the lenses of both sets are the same distance apart, then you are not getting the same amperage at both lamps. That is point number one. If you find that the Six B lamp gets more amperage than the other, and the illumination from the other lamp is satisfactory, then cut down the amperage by the introduction of a little extra resistance in the circuit of the Six B. If you find the amperage is the same on both lamps, get a little thin sheet of asbestos and so place it that the lenses of the Six B does not come into contact with the metal of the holder at any point. Another thing: be sure that the vents of both lamphouses are open and free, and that there is no strong air current passing over either lamphouse. It is a cinch, Brother Bujan, there is something wrong somewhere, either with the set of your condensers, their focal length or amperage, when one arc is 5-8 inch further away from the condenser than the one which breaks.

Elects Officers.

The Knoxville, Tennessee, Moving Picture Machine Operators' Union, No. 405, writes as follows:

> We are patiently awaiting your arrival in our city. We are all of us constant readers of the department, and very desirous of meeting its editor in person. Needless to say all our members have a copy of the Handbook, and believe that its ownership by union operators should be compulsory.
>
> Local Union No. 405 has elected the following officers for the ensuing year: President, J. W. Johnson; Vice-President, John McLean; Recording and Corresponding Secretary, Manard K. Baird; Financial Secretary, R. R. Field; Treasurer, L. K. Wayland; Business Agent, O. L. Worsham; Assistant Business Agent, George W. Lane; Sergeant-at-Arms, Frank Ellison; Delegate to I. A. Convention, R. R. Field.
> I will be making up the itinerary of the trip, as far as Memphis, Tenn., some time this month, and when it is completed you will be advised. I could go ahead with it now, but don't want to take a chance on changes in railroad schedules; also am holding back because up to date no arrangements have been made either with Macon, Ga., Birmingham, Ala., Cincinnati, Ohio, or Louisville, Ky., all of them important cities, the leaving out of which would be regrettable.

Camera Specifications (Continued).

Lens Mount.—In a motion picture camera the lens is seldom fastened directly to the front board as in the ordinary camera, but is fastened in a mount which serves the same purpose as the bellows in the ordinary camera; that is, it permits the lens to be racked in and out, permitting it to be focused upon objects at different distances. As the different focal lengths of different cinematographic lenses vary so much in size each different lens is generally fitted with a focusing mount of its own, each mount carrying a flange which makes it interchangeable with all of the other mounts used on that camera, each mount being provided with its own focusing scale. The Goerz Optical Company, however, provide an interchangeable lens mount with micrometer adjustments and interchangeable lens tubes, the lenses being mounted in tubes to fit the interchangeable mount. Such a mount requires a table giving the reading of the mount at the different distances required in focusing each lens. In the Pathe camera the shaft of the screw which adjusts the focal distances of the lens is continued through to the rear of the camera where it is provided with a dial carrying three pointers, so that the focusing scales for three different focal lengths of lenses may be engraved, permitting the camera to be focused instantly from the rear. This is a very desirable feature, since it is often necessary to change the focus of the lens while the camera is running as the object comes toward or recedes from the camera. In the DeBrie and some other makes of cameras a rod may be screwed into the lens mount so that the camera may be focused from the rear by moving the rod in line with the scale engraved on the flange at the front of the camera. Almost all mounts depend upon some kind of a screw thread for adjusting the lens backward and forward; the so-called micrometer mount being graduated much the same as the familiar tool for making accurate measurements known as the micrometer. Others using a coarser thread of much greater pitch have a scale of distances engraved directly upon the mount, while the micrometer mount depends upon an interpolation from a table for its setting.

Lens Hood.—It is not desirable that any light except that which goes to make up the image within the aperture plate should strike the lens, especially when this extraneous light is stronger than the light from the objects being photographed. For that reason a hood is generally provided in the form of a tube or box of metal surrounding the lens. This hood may be part of the lens mount or entirely separate and supplementary to the mount. When the lens sets far back within the mount a hood is not always necessary. Many lighting effects require that a strong light shine almost directly toward the camera, but such direct light should never be permitted to strike the lens of the camera except in such rare occasions as where the light is included in the picture itself. An adjustable arm carrying a metal leaf which may be extended a foot or two in front of the camera is a very good and handy attachment to have in one's outfit, especially in taking what is known as back-lighting and Rembrandt effects. The farther it is possible to extend the hood in front of the lens without cutting off any of the image the more effective it is. A very useful form of lens hood is a telescoping one of two or more sections which may be shortened or lengthened at will. The lens hood should be strong and rigid and heavy enough to support an iris diaphragm for circling in and out and such other attachments as the cameraman may see fit to use for vignetting, visions, double exposure work, etc.

Attachments and Mattes.—Attachments for the camera to produce various effects, such as round and square dissolves, curtain dissolves, vignettes, etc., are not usually provided by camera manufacturers but are sold independently and may be purchased as the needs of the camera user require. The most complete line of these attachments is made by the Goerz Optical Company. Manufacturers of cameras, however, generally furnish a certain number of aperture mattes for their cameras, although they are charged for extra. Aperture mattes is the term used in contra-distinction to the mattes which are placed in the lens hood for vignette effects; a matte placed in the aperture plate giving a comparatively sharply defined line in comparison to one placed in front of the lens in the lens hood. The most commonly used aperture plate mattes are the circle and double circle used in views supposed to be seen through a telescope and through opera glasses, after which come keyhole shapes and various decorative designs, such as heart shape, maple leaf, oak leaf, diamond, star, etc., ad infinitum. Aperture mattes were formerly used to a large extent for double exposure and vision work, but have been almost entirely supplanted by lens hood mattes, except where a sharply defined image is required, such as a scene of an audience viewing a picture show supposed to be thrown on the sheet, in which the picture on the screen is inserted by double exposure.

Camera Mechanism.—Types of camera mechanism are as various as the names of the makers. It would seem that an integral mechanism would make for simplicity and rigidity in a camera, and yet a number of the highest grade cameras separate by releasing a catch into two or three separate and distinct parts. The Universal camera, however, has an integral mechanism from which the case may be entirely separated without disturbing any portion of the mechanism. In the DeBrie the front of the camera, carrying the lens, mount and the shutter may be turned up on hinges by pressing a catch. In the Lumiere camera the gate, spring runners, take-up, take-up gear chain and footage indicator are included in the retort and must be duplicated in each separate magazine. In the Pathe Portable the camera is separated into three distinct parts, held together only by hinges. Several other makes of cameras separate their mechanism in various places, becoming complete only by the fastening of connections.

Threading.—The ease or difficulty with which the film may be threaded through the camera has an important bearing upon its usefulness. As a rule, a camera of a straight line threading, that is one in which there are no twists in the film in its passage through the camera, is the simplest and most desirable. On the other hand, the more compact models, in which the retorts are placed side by side, cannot be threaded without a twist in the film. The general rule for threading the camera is as follows: Place the feed retort in position, pull out as much film as is needed to thread the camera, pass the film over the feed sprocket and open the gate, place the film smoothly between the side guides with the emulsion toward the lens, close the gate carefully and latch, leaving a loop of film betwen the feed sprocket and the upper portion of the gate large enough so that pulling the film down in the gate for six perforations will not draw the loop taut between the sprocket and the top of the gate, and yet not large enough so that the loop will strike any portion of the camera mechanism; then leave another similar loop at the bottom of the gate, carry the film around the take-up sprocket beneath the rollers, through the light trap in the retort to the spool in the take-up retort, fastening the end of the film to the spool in the take-up retort; making sure that there is no slack between the take-up sprocket and the take-up spool; fasten the cover of the take-up magazine; give the handle a turn to see that the film is feeding through properly and close the camera. The film in the feed retort must be wound so that when the retort is in place the film is threaded properly the emulsion side of the film in the gate will be toward the lens. In straight line threading the loop is not a true loop but only a slackness in the film to provide for a quick downward movement of that portion of the film within the gate when it is dragged down by the claws. In cameras with the magazines side by side a true, or return, loop must be made in the film between the feed sprocket and the gate and between the gate and the take-up sprocket. Types of the double return loop threading are found in the DeBrie, Pathe Portable and Newman & Sinclair cameras. The Prevost, carrying its magazines side by side on top of the camera, is an exception, the feed magazine being directly above the feed sprocket and gate and feeds downward in a straight line and simple loop into the gate. From the bottom of the gate it goes upward and to the right in a long simple loop, without a twist, to the take-up sprocket, where it feeds directly into the take-up retort. The return, or true, loop is the same sort of a loop as would be formed by wrapping a piece of film once in a spiral direction about a round object, while the simple loop of straight threading is merely a slackness in the film without any other twist or turn. In addition to the simple directions given here there are a number of variations in different cameras which provide rollers for guiding the film in various directions, as, for example, in the old style Gillon a roller is provided which brings the film in a straight line from the feed retort, from whence it passes over another roller before passing to the feed sprocket; the object of the second roller being to engage the film around a greater part of the circumference of the feed sprocket, in which only two teeth would engage the film at any one instance if this roller were not provided to stretch the film around a greater arc of the sprocket's circumference.

The foregoing completes roughly most of the vital points in connection with the construction of a camera which a purchaser wishes to know. The interpolated exceptions take up considerable space, but a comprehensive description of a camera and its parts could be printed upon one ordinary catalogue page if the explanations above were already understood.

Music for the Picture

Announcement.

ANY questions concerning music for the film, suitable instrumentation for motion picture theaters, questions relating to the pipe organ; in fact, any questions, criticisms or suggestions dealing with musical interpretation for moving pictures will be answered by Mr. Stuckey through this department. Inquiries should be addressed to Musical Editor, Moving Picture World, 17 Madison avenue, New York City.

World's Music Center Is Now New York City.

"AT THE outbreak of the war a few wise persons predicted that it would have the effect, temporarily at least, of making New York the center of culture of the world. This high position has now been realized in the field of music at least," says Herman Sandby, the Danish 'cellist and composer.

Mr. Sandby has been coming to this country annually for the past seven years and is able to compare the present New York with the New York that foreigners saw before the war.

"Never were there so many distinguished foreign or native artists in London, in Paris, in Rome, Berlin, Petrograd, or any of the great European cities as there are now in New York," he declares. "The war has sent practically every important artist in Europe to this country, and that means, of course, to New York.

"The public, as a consequence, is able to hear one night, the greatest artists of Italy, for instance; the next, the greatest of Austria; the next, the greatest of Russia, and so on throughout the season. It is, for music lovers, the most remarkable jubilee that history has ever produced.

"The result? New York—all of America, in fact (for most of the artists go on tour through the land)—will have better taste in music hereafter than would have been possible for a century under normal conditions.

"Americans are lovers of music, but never before have they been able to get enough of the sort that appealed to discerning taste.

"However, it will be difficult for any humble artist who might have got along quite well before, to make a 'hit' in America after the war when many of the foreigners will go home again.

"New York by that time will have become so critical that beginners will have a hard time indeed. This, however, may produce real genius in the end."

New York, moreover, will not lose its recently gained position in the world of music. The world's artists will come back regularly. One doesn't visit New York once only.

Clarence Eddy's Tour.

The tour of Clarence Eddy, the famous organist, beginning at the Pacific Coast, has opened auspiciously, and is proving to be a huge success, as may be expected by those who have heard him play.

Some may ask, "Who is Clarence Eddy?" The name Clarence Eddy is known and honored throughout the entire musical world.

He is recognized, by the best authorities, as one of the world's greatest organists, and his reputation extends to every civilized country. His first lessons on the organ were under J. Gilbert Wilson, and Dudley Buck of Hartford.

Mr. Eddy commenced drawing a salary as organist at the age of fourteen. He was for two years organist of Bethany Church of Montpelier, Vermont, and then went to Berlin, where he studied the organ and composition under August Haupt, the master organist of Germany, and the piano under Albert Loeschorn.

After numerous highly successful concert tours covering Germany, Austria, Switzerland, Holland, England and Italy, Mr. Eddy returned to this country where he located in Chicago.

At the age of twenty-two Mr. Eddy gave a series of one hundred recitals in Chicago, without a single repetition. This made him famous, and his reputation rapidly grew, by reason of his numerous recitals all over the country, and he was called to dedicate new organs in nearly every state in the Union. He has undoubtedly opened more new organs than any other living organist.

Mr. Eddy in Chicago gave upwards of four hundred recitals, including in his repertoire practically everything written for the organ, as well as hundreds of manuscripts which have been dedicated to him. His four organ collections, published by Edward Schuberth & Co., of New York, and one by the Oliver Ditson Company, of Boston, are extensively used throughout the United States.

Mr. Eddy has been identified, officially, with every important exposition since the one in Vienna in 1873, namely: those at Philadelphia in 1876, Paris in 1889, Chicago in 1893 with twenty-one recitals, Buffalo in 1901, St. Louis in 1904, Jamestown in 1907 with six recitals, and more recently at our own Panama Pacific International Exposition in San Francisco with forty recitals, where his concerts were among the best advertised attractions of the great fair.

Following a recital given at the famous Saint Cecilia Academy, Rome, Mr. Eddy was made an honorary member, a distinction considered, in musical circles, one of the greatest honors that can be conferred upon a musician in any country, and among the encomiums he received following the recital was this expression from the great composer, Sgambati: "He is one of the greatest organists of the present epoch." Also, this noteworthy expression from E. di San Martino, president of the Royal Academy of St. Cecilia: "Mr. Eddy is the most marvelous and versatile executant of the organ we have ever entertained. We consider ourselves honored in placing his name on our list of distinguished members." August Haupt declared that, "In organ playing the performances of Mr. Eddy are worthy to be designated as eminent, and he is undoubtedly a peer of the greatest living organists."

Clarence Eddy is now organist at the First Presbyterian Church, Oakland, California, where the wonderful organ of this new and costly edifice is being employed, under Mr. Eddy's magic skill, as one of the greatest institutions for the interpretation and inspiration of high class music in the West. His semi-monthly recitals are being enjoyed with increasing attendance and interest.

California should be extremely gratified in acquiring this great master, and may be justly proud in realizing that our matchless climate can overcome the claims that the East and Europe have on this renowned artist, and be able to induce him to bring to us from his many tours of the world, as a great storehouse of accumulated accomplishments and experiences, his great talent, so completely matured and perfected.

Musicians, and especially organists, should not fail to hear this great organist, should the opportunity present itself.

New Rules in Counterpoint.

An English society, known as the Council of the Union of Graduates in Music, has issued an interesting document relative to strict counterpoint.

The musician who has completed his work in harmony and has proceeded to study the text-books of the older contrapunists (Cherubini, Albrechtsberger, etc.), has always wondered at the strict process of counterpoint of their school and probably noticed the inadaptability of these processes in modern writing.

The Council above mentioned had discussed this question. While it disclaims any direct influence on teachers, private or institutional, it expresses its views on counterpoint written against a Cantus Firmus, as follows

1. The parts may cross with reason in counterpoint for more than two voices.
2. While it is preferable that the first note of the counterpoint shall make a perfect concord, the use of the third of the chord is not considered to be an offence.
3. Modulation to nearly related keys may be sparingly used after the original key has been established.
4. Syncopation, in examples of the fourth species, may be occasionally broken.
5. In combined counterpoint, dotted half notes and dotted quarter notes may be used, the latter sparingly.
6. A quarter note should seldom be tied to a quarter note.
7. Two chords may be used in a bar (measure), although it is recognized that the use of one chord in a bar is often stronger in effect.
8. More than two consecutive eighth notes should not be used; and these groups of two eighth notes should occur on the second and fourth beats of the bar in conjunct motion.
10. Changing notes may be used, but except in the cadence they should be rare.
11. A second inversion should not occur on the first beat of any bar, unless the fourth of the chord having been previously prepared, is resolved in the same bar.
12. The objection to consecutive perfect fifths does not depend on the number of notes intervening, but on the character of fifths themselves; for instance, two perfect fifths are always permissable with one or more notes intervening, provided that at least one of the fifths is unessential.

This document is signed by the Professor of Music in the Universities of Oxford, Dublin, London, Durham and Manchester.

This document also advocates essential principles that bring the order of strict counterpoint within the domain of practical writing. Furthermore, it narrows the hitherto existing chasm between harmony as taught to-day and counterpoint as it was taught by Cherubini.

A Well Arranged Program.

Following is a program adopted in many of the larger moving picture theaters throughout the country. At a glance, one realizes the important part music is playing in the making up of perfect program:

1—Overture; 2—Travelogue; 3—Cartoon; 4—Topical Review or Weekly; 5—Soprano or Contralto Solo; 6—Feature; 7—Vocal or Instrumental Solo (Organ or Violin); 8—Comedy.

An Ambitious Educational Series

Pathe's First Combitone Travel Pictures of Interesting Scenes in New Mexico and Arizona.

THE first picture of a most comprehensive and pretentious effort to film the most interesting portions of the United States, have been received by Pathe from the Combitone Company. The film received consists of seven thousand feet of scenes taken in New Mexico and Arizona, representing those places in each state most noteworthy from a scenic, historical or archaeological standpoint. The result is an interesting presentation of two states which are little visited by the tourist except in the one instance of the Grand Canyon of Arizona.

In these pictures the human element receives its proper attention. While the popular tendency is to regard the United States as a "new" country, barren from the archaeological standpoint, these pictures show the dwellings of a prehistoric race whose origin is lost in the mists of antiquity—the cliff dwellers. At the bottom of a canyon near Rio de los Frijoles impressive scenes were secured of the Kiva or Estufa as the native Indians call it. This was the sacred ceremonial chamber of the ancient cliff dwellers where, legend relates, once burned the sacred fire which was never permitted to die out. The Kiva is situated half way up a high cliff and can be reached only after a long ladder climb. The cliff dwellers placed this, their holy of holies, midway between earth and sky to guard it as much as possible against attack from either above or below.

In Canyon de Mortenda, A. L. Westgard, who is directing the expedition, secured some pictures of an old trail worn fourteen inches deep in the solid rock by the moccasined feet of men who perhaps lived hundreds of years prior to the Christian era. This trail is even more impressive than those streets of Pompeii rutted by chariot wheels when it is remembered that the Pompeian streets were worn by iron while these solid rocks yielded to the human foot.

Many striking views were obtained of the Pueblo Indians, whose industry, sobriety and orderliness have been remarked by all who have studied them. Some of the best scenes are those of the Pueblo Acoma. This pueblo is situated on the top of a rock 350 feet high with precipitous sides. The only way to reach the village is by a slope of loose sand which the winds of centuries have piled up in one place against the rock. Up this laborious ascent toil the heavily-loaded natives with their burros. The houses are interesting structures of two and three stories, the roof of the first furnishing the front yard to the second, and the roof of the second acting in the same capacity for the third. Many interesting views were obtained of the natives at their daily pursuits and one cannot help but gain a new respect for this small race who have never asked or expected favors from the government, but only want to be permitted to earn their living in the same way their ancestors did.

In devoting much time to the Pueblo Indians Mr. Westgard did not forget the Navajos, another industrious, self-supporting tribe. They are shown making the blankets for which they are famous—carding, spinning and weaving, and herding their great flocks of sheep or goats, or rounding up their horses and cattle.

Many interesting places were visited which are practically unknown. Each State in the Union will be visited in turn. These pictures are made not merely for the present, but the future, and are intended to be a big attraction not only in the theater but in the schools and colleges as well. As years pass industrial progress will undoubtedly mar or spoil many of what are today the nation's beauty spots. We all remember what was happening to the Palisades of the Hudson when public-spirited citizens stepped in and put an end to the quarrying. The same danger of despoliation threatens all scenes not actually within the bounds of state or national reservations. These pictures will show the people who live under the Stars and Stripes, the Indian as well as the white man, and the landmarks of American history. The first of these pictures will probably be released in early spring.

Film Problem in India

A COMMUNICATION dated at Hyderabad Sind, India, on Dec. 8, 1916, tells of a scheme which is being placed before the local governments of that country by means of a little booklet entitled "The Use of the Kinematograph in Education." This booklet of information and discussion has been compiled by Bulchand Karamchand, B.A. (Bombay), Superintendent of the Nava Vidyalaya High School, Hyderabad Sind, and Morley Dainow, B.Sc. (London), an English educator and psychologist. It covers practically the same line of discussion that is being carried on in America at the present time. Impressions regarding the moving picture, its power and influence, differ not at all from the impressions gained in our own America, despite the fact that little of the best in film reaches the moving picture theaters of India.

The scheme which the booklet presents is as follows: "Each Local Government should appoint a Kinematograph Committee. The members of the Committee should consist of distinguished educationists, headmasters, parents, and social workers of the province. The work of the Committee would be twofold, negative and positive. The negative work will consist of (a) examining all kinema films sent to be displayed in the kinema theaters of the Province; (b) choosing from all these films those which if they entertained, would give wholesome entertainment, and if they instructed, would give useful instruction; (c) seek powers to limit the duration of kinema performances for children. The positive work would consist of:—(a) arranging of kinema performances suitable for children; (b) keeping a stock of approved films at headquarters so as to be able to use them again and again where required; (c) drawing up a list of suitable films so that the kinematograph trade will know on what lines to proceed with future productions."

It is evident from passages contained in this booklet that some thought has been given to the possible use of the educational moving picture in the schools; and we are particularly struck by a thought set forth in a passage concerning the stocking of films, which states that "films which are merely topical today will be good history material a few years hence." There is also a suggestion that a loan from each local government for the erection of suitable moving picture theaters could be paid back in a few years, and also that capitalists might be persuaded to foster the idea and support such an enterprise.

From latest reports it is evident that India's film problem is a serious one, since the majority of films that are exhibited as entertainment for her people are principally of a sensational and not highly elevating class. During the past year an effort has been made to diffuse education among the masses by means of what was known as the Educational Kinematograph which traveled about from town to town exhibiting educational films of various kinds. These demonstrations were largely attended by all classes, and in many cases the proceeds were used for relief or charitable funds.

"Great Temples of Luxor" (Gaumont-Mutual).

A WELL illustrated description of the temples of Luxor, situated 45 miles south of Cairo will be found in "Mutual Tours Around the World No. 14." We see the tourists starting off from Luxor, and the caravan moving through the mountains toward the ruins. Among the temples shown is the Temple of Luxor which, we are told, was erected 1,400 years before Christ. and was one of the monuments of Thebes. The colonade, the doorway and obelisk, and the colossal statues are interesting studies to the student of ancient architecture. The Temple of Medinet-Habu with its remarkable interior, the walls of which are decorated with crude pictures representative of the victories gained by the Syrians over the Hittites, is another fascinating study, as is also the Temple of Rameses with its statues of Memnon and the 57 foot statue of Rameses II who built the temple.

"Picturesque Landscapes of Holland" (Gaumont-Mutual).

One of the most charming of travel subjects is this one which brings us familiarly into the very heart of Holland. It is found in "Mutual Tours Around the World No. 14," and presents examples of the dikes and dams of Holland, its wooden houses built on piles to forestall a sudden invasion by the sea, its canals filled with quaint craft of all sorts, its pasture lands and its grazing sheep. Its picturesque windmills, and its quite as picturesque courting couples, are among the last scenes which film presents, closing with a beautiful sunset on the Zuider Zee.

"The Mississippi Coast" (Gaumont-Mutual).

A good idea of the beauties of the Mississippi coast can be gained from "See America First No. 74." Pass Christian is the first point of interest shown, with its beautiful roads. The Herndon cottage which President Wilson occupies when at Pass Christian, private orange groves, beautiful promenades, and a winter scene in Dixie all present views of unusual charm. Gulfport, from which the largest shipments of yellow pine in the world are made, Biloxi its bay and its lighthouse, Beauvoir the Confederate Soldiers' Home, the home of Jefferson Davis, and other interesting sights are shown.

"The Rocky Coast of Dalmatia" (Gaumont-Mutual).

"Mutual Tours Around the World No. 14" contains some charming views on the coast of Dalmatia on the Adriatic sea. As would be supposed, the film abounds in scenes of great beauty including views of the sea in its various moods. The quaint port of Gravosa, much frequented by commercial vessels before the war, is shown, and attention is drawn to the fact that the vegetation on the mountainsides since the scathing fire of the Balkan war consists only of a few yew trees.

"Making Lace by Machinery" (Gaumont-Mutual).

"Reel Life No. 40" contains this subject which illustrates in detail the making of lace by machinery. We learn hereby that artists are employed to sketch designs which are passed on to other workers who mark the perforation points. The perforating of the patterns is done on long strips of cardboard, after which the thread which has been previously wound on large wheels is woven over the patterns. The lace is finished by hand, starched and dried, and finally pressed and wrapped for shipping. The making of embroidery is also included.

"Raising Fresh Water Fish" (Gaumont-Mutual).

The work of the U. S. Commission of Fisheries in stocking the fresh water streams of our country is illustrated in "Reel Life No. 40." Here we see them setting the nets and catching the fish, after which the eggs are taken from the females, and the hatching of them, 160,000 at a time. When the young fish (trout in the present instance) are 2½ inches long they are carried in tanks to the streams to be stocked. Closeup views show the water in the tanks being mixed judiciously with water from the stream so that the change in temperature from tank to stream will not be too great for the youngsters, and the final planting of them in a shallow part of the stream to insure them against the onslaught of their elders.

"The Evolution of Winter Sports" (Paramount-Bray).

No. 54 of the "Paramount-Bray-Pictographs" opens with an attractive study of winter sports, with suggestions pleasingly reminiscent of the days when the first blanket of snow was greeted with the jingle of the sleigh bells. We are shown in this film how to attach both snow shoes and skis as well as how to use them. Ski jumping and snowshoe racing by both professionals and amateurs present interesting winter sights.

"The Astronomer's Workshop" (Paramount-Bray).

"The Astronomer's Workshop" is the second subject of the "Paramount-Bray-Pictograph No. 54" and presents views taken at the J. B. Van Vlack Memorial Observatory, Wesleyan University. We are shown the giant telescope, and the ease with which it is handled, the mechanism being so constructed that one man can swing it in any direction and to any desired angle, and as he does so, by pressing a button cause the floor of the observatory to rise or fall as required. The method of taking the time from observation of the stars, and the instruments that record the time are also shown. Included are sights as seen by the astronomer such as the great Nebula in Orion, the ring-shaped Nebula in Lyra, a close-up of an eclipse of the sun, and several comets.

"Eruption of Mount Kilauea (Universal).

One of the most remarkable pictures of its kind is a film recently exhibited at the Rialto theater, New York City, which gives startlingly close views of the boiling mass of lava in the crater of Mount Kilauea, on the island of Hawaii. The crater of this volcano, we are told, is eight miles in circumference. At intervals the burning lava spurts through apertures in the hard black lava which lies in the bottom of the crater. One of the most thrilling sights of this picture occurs when the cameraman actually photographs at close range the molten lava as it pours over the rim of the crater.

"Jiu-Jitsu" (Paramount-Bray).

No. 54 of the "Paramount-Bray-Pictographs" contains an interesting, well photographed, and closely viewed demonstration of the science of jiu-jitsu, the Japanese method of self-defense. We learn that the study of this method is being taken up extensively in this country, and that the Federal Police Department is training its police in its practice. The subject as treated in the Pictograph shows the applications of the tricks of jiu-jitsu as practiced by Messrs. Kojima and Tamiye, two of the ablest exponents of the art in this country. We learn that the first essential is to know the vulnerable spots of the body, a knowledge that will enable one to overcome an opponent providing that he too does not possess this knowledge. We learn also that jiu-jitsu also calls for a knowledge of equilibrium, and among other things how to break a strong hold, how to ward off an attack, how to ward off an unexpected attack from the rear, how to disarm the gunman, and also how the jiu-jitsu expert would handle a trained boxer.

Among the Picture Theaters

NEWS AND VIEWS OF PHOTOPLAY HOUSES EVERYWHERE

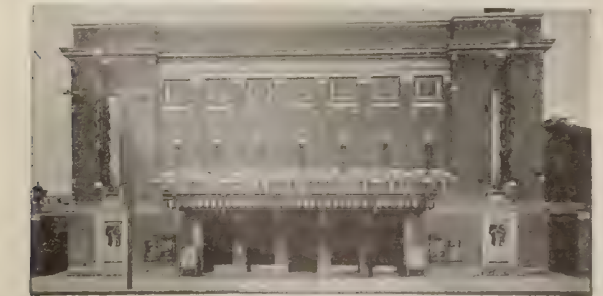
The Avon Theater, Utica, New York

William Fait, Jr., Managing One of Prettiest Photoplay Houses in the East—Music Furnished by Wurlitzer Organ and Symphony Orchestra.

ONE of the most beautiful motion picture theaters in the upper part of the State of New York is the Avon, in Utica. This house was built by the American Motion Picture Company, Inc., of Utica, and was opened on November 25, 1915. The theater occupies the entire building in which it is situated; that is to say, there are no stores at the sides of the entrance and no offices to let on the upper floors. The absence of these enhances the exterior appearance of the Avon considerably, and makes it look more like a structure devoted to entertainment. Many of Utica's elite are patrons of the Avon, which is in the business section of Utica, a most valuable location in that city, as has been established by the excellent business the theater has been doing during its fourteen months of existence. It is a worthy accession to the list of motion picture theaters in Utica, and a credit to the industry as a whole.

Handsome Lobby of the Avon Theater, Utica, N. Y.

The exterior as can be seen from the views herewith is attractive and artistic. The facade has been faced with terra cotta, brick and marble, and there is pronounced harmony in the employment of exterior decorations. Extending over the full width of the five wide entrance doors and reaching to the edge of the sidewalk is a canopy done in ornamental bronze and art glass. This is profusely illuminated with incandescent lights and with tungsten in large frosted globes. To further enrich the appearance of the front there are seven bronze pedestals each containing a big frosted globe with a powerful tungsten inside placed in recesses in the wall above with the canopy. Alternating with the pedestals are panels built of the same kind of brick which is used throughout the exterior. These panels are topped by a stretch of marble running near the coping of the roof. At each end of the structure is a huge electric sign wrought in bronze and running from the coping to a line even with the top of the canopy. The top of each of these signs is ornamented with two large globes while at the bottom one globe the same size as those on the top has been placed. On the outside of each sign writen in electric lights is the name of the theater, while the word "photoplays" is written on the inside, so that one coming from either direction on a line horizontal with the length of the building will read first the word "Avon" and as he comes a little closer the word "photoplays."



Avon Theater, Utica, N. Y.

Between the five-wide entrance doors are marble pillars in which have been inserted glass covered gold frames containing photographic views of pictures shown and to be shown while in the wall space underneath each big perpendicular electric sign at the ends of the building are glass covered frames containing poster views.

As one steps into the lobby he is immediately impressed with the elaborations. The color scheme here as in the auditorium is Quaker gray and gold. Potted plants have been placed in the space between each set of doors leading into the auditorium and in the space between the exit doors leading into the street. The box office and the doors have been outlined in Italian marble, and is in contrast to the big squares of tile used in the floor or the lobby. Adorning the walls of the lobby are large portraits of photoplayers. A number of electroliers made of vari-colored art glass trimmed with bands of gold increases the feeling of artistry about this part of the Avon. These have been decorated with flowers and doves.

The beauty of the auditorium proper is in keeping with the foyer and the lobby. The furnishings and appointments are luxurious. The stage setting is striking and presents a view from the marble balcony of a palace looking across a river to the hills in the distance with its shrubbery, trees and cottages. The gold fiber screen drops down in the middle of this scene between pillars of imitation marble and when the last scene of the picture projected fades from view, heavy plush curtains are drawn across the screen, the lights are turned on, and when the curtains are moved aside again the beautiful vista is seen, the screen being removed meanwhile. Across the stage in front of the footlights is a row of illuminated flowers.

The size of the stage is forty feet wide by forty feet deep. The pipes of the $10,000 Hope-Jones Wurlitzer organ are hidden behind fancy grill work in the walls near the stage. The Avon has a capacity of 1,600, divided between the orchestra floor, balcony and boxes. In addition to the Wurlitzer organ there is a symphony orchestra of six pieces.

The operating room is concealed in the arch over the balcony, and extends across the full width of the auditorium, giving plenty of room for repair shops, etc. It is twelve feet wide and like the auditorium is well ventilated. A part of the up-to-date projection apparatus consists of a battery of Baird machines, and Fort Wayne and Hallberg compensarcs. The throw is 95 feet, and the definition of the picture projected is sharp.

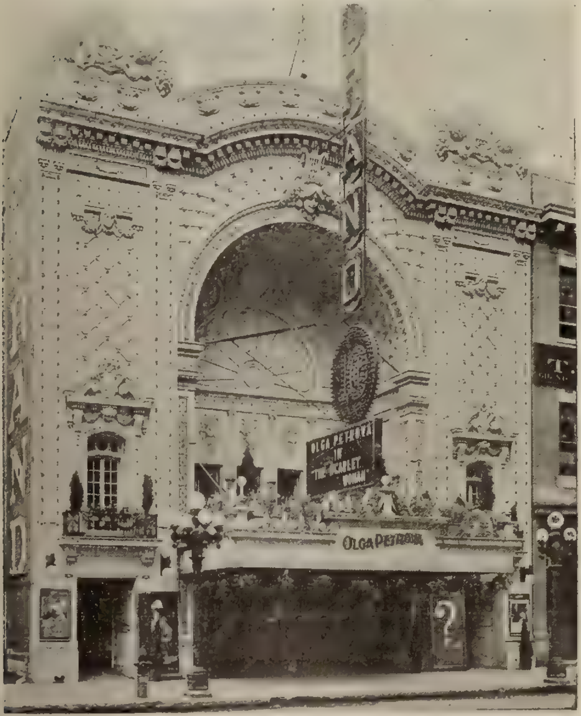
The Avon is devoted exclusively to the exploitation of first class pictures, and the show is changed twice a week. The price for matinees is 10 cents while the evening prices are 10, 15 and 25 cents. The house is under the management of William Fait, Jr., an experienced picture man. The officers of the company operating the house are Perry A. Little, president; George E. Hilfinger, vice-president, and Lewis E. Willet, secretary and treasurer.

Strand Theater, Minneapolis, Minn.

One of the Prettiest Picture Houses in the Twin Cities—Opened in Fall of 1915—Managed by James A. Keough.

"THE STRAND," perhaps the most used name in connection with the exhibition of motion pictures all over the country, seems to be synonymous with "one of the best." At least this is true in New York and other large cities, and the Strand in Minneapolis is no exception.

When Saxe brothers, of Milwaukee, announced that they were to erect a $150,000 theater building at 38 South Seventh street, Minneapolis, for the exclusive showing of motion pictures, several years back, the wise acres shook their heads and were not a bit backward in saying that they believed the Saxes were taking "an awful chance." Minneapolis at that time had over seventy-five theaters, and this was believed to be enough. Nevertheless the Saxes completed a handsome structure in the early fall of 1915, and in December of the same year it was opened with Samuel Newton Robinson, present Minneapolis Fox manager, in charge. General services was first used by the theater, and later when Mr. Robinson left the theater to take up other work James A. Keough, formerly of the Alcazar and Casino theaters, Chicago, took hold of affairs, Fox, Metro and Triangle features and some of the biggest state rights obtainable were played. Mr. Keough was one of the first managers to charge 25 cents admission for a special feature in Minneapolis, also one of the first to book a film for a week's run.



Strand Theater, Minneapolis, Minn.

The Strand covers a space 55 feet wide by 167 feet deep, is as fire proof as it can be made, and twelve spacious exits give the house a "safety first" appearance. The exterior of the theater is artistic yet not lavish in decoration, a flower draped canopy and hundreds of electric bulbs being the most attractive parts of the theater front. The artistic portion of the front is in the arrangements of the bricks used in its construction, not in added ornamentation. The interior of the theater, with the exception of the rest room, is plain, yet it gives the theater a "homey" atmosphere. The 1,300 seats are of the best quality and far enough apart to allow one to be perfectly at ease while watching the pictures. The screen occupies the entire stage with little ornamentation. A $10,000 Wangerin & Weickhardt pipe organ played by Miss Lillian Preston, and a ten piece orchestra directed by Richard Long provides the music for the shows. Two Simplex projectors are used; the throw is 128 feet. An average of eight shows a day is maintained at the Strand. Sunday shows begin at noon, while on week days the first performance commences one hour earlier. Thirty persons are employed to cater to the theater's patrons.

The foyer runs the full width of the theater, and is plain, yet artistic. A broad stairway leading to the upper floors is placed at each end of the foyer. At the top of the first flight one finds the handsome rest room carpeted with rich red material and Persian rugs. In the center of the rest room is an oval shaped opening guarded by a mahogany railing, and a handsome mahogany table on which reading material is placed occupies a place between the railing and the large divans. The lighting of the room is provided by a large electric lamp stand and by indirect ceiling lamps. Large peer glasses in mahogany frames are placed near the top of each staircase in the room. The manager's office is to the right and the women's dressing room to the left of the rest room. Artistic colonial windows between these two rooms open onto the canopy.

Joseph Maxwell is assistant manager of the Strand, Charles G. Branham is publicity manager. Triangle, Artcraft, Metro and state rights features are booked for future showing at this beautiful photoplay house.

SUNDAY ORGAN RECITALS AT REGENT.

G. H. Tooker, manager of the Regent theater, Elmira, N. Y., has adopted a novel policy of pleasing his patrons and the townsfolk of Elmira. He has inaugurated a new system that of giving free organ recitals on Sunday at the theater, accompanied by local vocal talent. The plan is not worked as an advertising stunt and no mention is made of the regular show or the week's program, except the regular lobby display which appears at all times. Mr. Tooker's idea is to get in the house people who are ordinarily not attending the regular shows and let them see what an elegant place it is. These recitals have proven so popular that he is turning people away every Sunday. Indirectly it has proven to be as good an advertising medium as could be planned and it is having its effect as any showman would expect.

Tivoli Theater, Portland, Ore.

Built in 1910, the Tivoli Was the Beginning of the Better Class of Moving Picture Houses in That City.

THE TIVOLI, Portland, Ore., is located at the center of population of Albina, "the home of the common people." The people in Albina are happy to be so called and the theater is proud to be so situated. The Tivoli is owned and operated by H. C. Phillips, who is assisted by his wife as cashier.

The theater is a beautiful one, of brick and concrete throughout and the auditorium seats 400. The house is exceptionally well lighted and Manager Phillips has created a homelike atmosphere that impresses the patron from the minute he pays his dime at the ticket window until the show is over. That is undoubtedly a big part of the reason for the long success of the Tivoli.

The ventilation of the auditorium is excellent and its acoustics made it the pride of the many old-time illustrated song singers that formerly entertained there. Mr. Phillips' programs represent all the well-known features. Power's machines in a modern projection room furnish the projection.

Built in 1910 as one of the thirty-odd theaters of the People's Amusement Company, the Tivoli's competition with the skip-jack store shows at the corners of Russell and Williams Avenue soon put the latter out of business. The Tivoli was the beginning of the better class of moving picture theaters in Portland. When the Union Avenue Theater, a house about equal in size and appointments to the Tivoli, was opened a few blocks away, the People's Amusement Company did not overdo its competitive tactics by putting on vaudeville and the like, with the result that both theaters prospered with straight pictures and are doing so today.

Tivoli Theater, Portland, Ore.

The People's Amusement Company has had many managers in the house. Several of them were illustrated song singers when that art constituted an important part of the show. Among these was Al Sather and the Confer Brothers. When the People's Amusement Company disposed of its outside theaters, the Tivoli was sold to C. E. Minnick, who was succeeded by Mr. Phillips.

Pioneer Suburban Photoplay House Conceded by Local Exhibitors to Be One of Most Progressive Outlying Amusement Places.

THE Union Avenue Theater, owned and conducted by W. B. Graeper, at Union Avenue and Russell Street, is conceded by Portland's exhibitors to be one of the most live-wire suburban houses in the city. The location is only twelve minutes' ride from the center of the city but the community of which the Union Avenue is a part is true blue to Mr. Graeper and his excellent programs, and the theater is crowded any night one may visit it.

The Union Avenue is a pioneer suburban theater, being built about six years ago, when the feasibility of moving picture theaters in the suburbs became apparent. Unlike many of Portland's suburban photoplay theaters, its management has been changed but few times. G. W. Bird opened the house, conducted it about a year and sold to E. T. Pittmon. Mr. Graeper, the present owner soon became a partner of Mr. Pittmon and the two commenced to build up a patronage that now makes the name Union Avenue Theater synonymous with success. Mr. Pittmon afterwards entered the publishing business, selling out to Mr. Graeper.

When the present owner took over the house, it had 375 seats. A few weeks ago Mr. Graeper completed the alterations which had been going on without interrupting the shows since last summer. It was a new Union Avenue theater that our Portland correspondent beheld when he called to interview the manager. The floor had been lowered, the old incline to get to the seats removed and the auditorium lengthened so that it now accommodates 500 dandy opera chairs.

Of course the entire house has been redecorated. A new heating and ventilating system, changing the air every five minutes, has been installed. The projection is faultless. The lamp room has been doubled in size and two Power's machines furnish rock-steady pictures. Triangle and Paramount pictures form the basis of Mr. Graeper's programs, together with open market releases. Paramount has been in the house for three years and Triangle ever since that program was started. Mrs. Graeper is her husband's able assistant in the management of the theater.

Union Avenue Theater, Portland, Ore.

Star Theater, Oregon City, Ore.

W. A. Long Has Done Splendid Business Since Taking Over 300-Seat House in 1913.

THE manager of the Star theater, Oregon City, Ore., is fully justified in being proud of the spendid business he has built up for this little house. W. A. Long is the man who has made the Star a phenominal success and he has done it all by hard work because prior to taking over the house, he had had no experience as a show man.

The house was built in 1912 by Simmons & Ruchonic, who operated it for a year. Mr. Long took the house over in June, 1913, when it seemed the least successful of Oregon City's three motion picture theaters. Mr. Long's house is now conceded to top the list of the Falls City's successful houses. When Mr. Long took over the Star its film service was costing $35 a week; now it usually stands $120. The program is changed every day, features vieing with short subjects for popularity. Amateur acts obtained from Portland form part of the show on Friday nights, and Mr. Long says he would not do without his amateur nights.

Star Theater, Oregon City, Ore.

The building is of brick, well ventilated and nicely finished. It seats 300. The projection is furnished by a Simplex and a Power 6B. The motto of the house is "Good Pictures, Good Projection, Good Screen."

Mr. Long has just completed plans for a new theater which will be erected opposite the Star next year.

Popular Picture Personalities

COMPILED BY THE STATISTICAL DEPARTMENT

McCOY, Harry. Born in Philadelphia, of American parentage. Is 5 feet, 6 inches tall and tips the beam at 160 pounds. Light brown hair and brown eyes. Made his stage debut in 1910 and turned to pictures two years later, starting with the Universal, but changing to Keystone, his present connection. He has been featured in many Joker and Keystone comedies and directs his Keystone stories under the observation of Mack Sennett. Does mostly juvenile and character comedy parts. Is fond of dogs and specializes in Boston terriers, one of which frequently acts in pictures. Is a musician and not only plays the piano and trombone, but is a composer. He is versatile in his amusements, for he adds to music a fondness for prizefights (as a spectator), likes motoring and takes a deep interest in astrology. He was 22 on the tenth of December, 1916.

Harry N. McCoy

HOLMES, Helen. Native of West Virginia. American parentage. Is five feet six inches tall and weighs 135 pounds. Dark brown hair and brown eyes. Miss Holmes is the star of The Signal Film Corporation, but has also been seen in the plays of the Universal, Keystone and Kalem Companies. It was as the original Helen in the "Hazards of Helen" that she won her first recognition, and for a year she played in these daring railroad dramas, later doing the same work for the Signal. She made her debut in 1911 and has spent her time wholly in the vicinity of Los Angeles. Some well known productions have been "The Girl and the Game," "A Lass o' the Lumberlands," and "Judith of the Cumberlands." When she is not engaged in risking her life jumping on and off railroad trains or similar innocent occupations she spends her time with her pet dogs and horses.

Helen Holmes

WALKER, Lillian. Born in Brooklyn, N. Y. Swedish descent. Five feet one and one-half inches tall. Weighs 119 pounds. Blonde hair, blue eyes. Miss Walker has played in stock and vaudeville for a number of years and was a member of Gus Edwards' musical specialties. Some years ago she went to the Vitagraph, starting as "atmosphere" and working up to stellar honors. At first she gained attention because of her smile and her dimples and was cast for romping soubrettes, but she has shown that she has something besides merely physical beauty and she has scored as strong a success in serious roles as in the lighter characters; indeed some of her best work has been purely dramatic, though she will be best remembered as "the girl with the dimples." Recent parts of note have been in Green Stockings and Kitty Mac Kaye. She automobiles.

Lillian Walker

YOUNG, Clara Kimball. Born in Benton Harbor, Mich. American parentage. Is five feet six inches tall, weighs 130 pounds, has brown hair and eyes, and medium dark complexion. Miss Young began her stage career as a child of three, appearing with her parents where a child was needed in a production. Later she played in stock, including engagements in such widely separated points as Philadelphia, Reno and Seattle. Her first picture play was My Official Wife, with the Vitagraph, and this production established her right to recognition as a star. Later she went to the World Film Corp. and more recently established herself at the head of her own releasing organization. Some of her best known features are Lola, The Deep Purple, Marrying Money, Hearts in Exile, Trilby, The Heart of the Blue Ridge, Camille, The Yellow Passport, The Common Law, The Foolish Virgin and The Easiest Way.

Clara Kimball Young

BRUNETTE, Fritzi. Born in Savannah, Ga. American-French parentage. Is five feet three inches tall, and weighs 120 pounds. Has an olive complexion, grey eyes and black hair. Miss Brunette has had no stage experience, and was unknown to fame prior to her connection with the Imp Company in 1910. She made her first appearance in The Lost Handkerchief, and since that time has been connected with various companies, and at present is with Selig. Like a number of other stars of photoplay, Miss Brunette's name is studio made, the same as her fame, and Leon J. Rubinstein is her artistic godfather. The brunette was suggested by her complexion and the "Fritzi" is an evidence of an ingrown sense of humor, but she made her reputation under the somewhat peculiar cognomen and cannot change it now that she is in a better position to dictate her wishes to her employers.

Fritzi Brunette

ARNOLD, Helen Prettyman. Born in Louisville, Ky. American parentage. Is five feet five inches and weighs 121 pounds. Brown hair and eyes, dark complexion. Miss Arnold has no stage experience, her first dramatic work being done for the Frohman company in The Conquest of Canan, in August, 1916. Since that time she has been with the Ivan and World and is at present with the Rolfe-Metro. Her specialty is ingenue leads and includes such roles as Viola in The Witching Hour, Mary in Egypt, and Mary in The Promise. She has unusually expressive eyes, set in a face of remarkable delicacy, and it was her photographic qualities that first gave her a chance to demonstrate her histrionic abilities. She is an ardent student of the drama, not merely as acting, but as history, and is widely read in dramatic literature. She is also an enthusiastic collector of canoes.

The Motion Picture Exhibitor

WRITE US EARLY AND OFTEN

THE MOVING PICTURE WORLD carries the most complete record of Exhibitors' News. This department aims at being the fullest and fairest chronicle of all the important doings in the ranks of organized exhibitors. To keep the department as complete and as useful as it is now we request the secretaries of all organizations to favor us with reports of all the news. Coming events in the ranks of the organized exhibitors are best advertised in this department of the Moving Picture World.

EXHIBITORS' LEAGUE ORGANIZER.

In answer to recent inquiries in regard to the Exhibitors' League Organizations and for the information of exhibitors in any of the States, readers will kindly note that Fred J. Herrington is National Organizer for the Motion Picture Exhibitors' League of America. All correspondence on the subject may be addressed to him at 402 Knox avenue, Pittsburgh, Pa.

Commissioner Bell Talks to Exhibitors

Says Picture Business Is Big, But Not Yet Great—Cautions Them on Advertising.

ON TUESDAY, February 6, the Motion Picture League, New York, Local No. 1, held a special open meeting at its rooms, 218 West 42d street. The primary object of this meeting was to listen to an address by License Commissioner Bell and Deputy License Commissioner Kauffman. The time set for Commissioner Bell's address was twelve noon. He did not arrive until one o'clock. While waiting for him the secretary read the new by-laws and constitution of the league, which were adopted as read. About eighty exhibitors were present and all rose to their feet as Messrs. Bell and Kauffman entered. Samuel H. Trigger in well chosen words introduced Commissioner Bell, who addressed them as follows:

"I am appearing before you this afternoon, not as a commissioner, but as man to man. Just a heart-to-heart talk, giving my views, from my personal observations of motion pictures. The future of the industry lies in the hands of the exhibitors. If you do not handle it with judgment, exercise a careful censorship over the picture you show in your theaters, nothing can be done to improve conditions and prevent local and state censorship. The motion picture industry is not yet a great industry, it is a big industry. It has had a mushroom growth, but it is not yet where it belongs. If it realizes its ultimate value as a power and business, it will settle down to business principles. If it doesn't realize its value, it will never become a great business.

"There has always been a doubt in the minds of the people, they are not sure of the motion picture foundation, it is not defined. Up to the present it has been like a circus, it appeals to all, young and old, but it has had no real value beyond an ephemeral amusement. Motion pictures must be something more.

"The spoken drama differs from motion pictures, it appeals to adults; very few under the age of eighteen attend the spoken drama, while a great many minors go to see the pictures. Therefore you have got to watch carefully the kind of pictures you exhibit; they must be clean, such as you would have your own families see.

"I don't believe in legalized censorship, on general principle; it is not necessary if you will exercise it yourselves.

"Let me say a word about posters of sex-lure and like subjects. Posters of this kind have done more to invite censorship than almost anything else. They are stuck on fences and have had a bad effect on morals. Persons who do not attend the theaters are attracted and influenced by them. These posters effect the standing and character of your theaters and will surely bring censorship upon you. Exhibitors must avoid and prevent the showing of such posters and improper pictures.

"American people do not believe in censorship, but New York officials must exercise censorship if rotten pictures are offered for exhibition. We have never been severe or overcaptious, we have never had but one case decided against us where we have prohibited the showing of a picture. We appealed that case and the manufacturer withdrew in deference to our judgment. It lays in hands of exhibitors to exclude and denounce all sex lure and unclean pictures; cut them out, they have no place in motion pictures.

"It is my experience, that manufacturers are willing, at least the majority of them, to make any changes asked by the commission. Of course we always have offenders in all walks of life, but they are very few."

In conclusion Commissioner Bell thanked the league for the co-operation it had given him at all times in performing the duties of his office, mentioning particularly the infantile paralysis epidemic of last summer.

Deputy Commissioner Kauffman endorsed the remarks of Commissioner Bell and added: "I am a moving picture fan and want all my family to see them, but I want them clean."

He pointed out the importance of the standee and fire laws. He said if these were observed as they should be it would add to the benefit of the theaters as desirable resorts where people could enjoy themselves with safety and comfort and there would be no trouble between the exhibitors and commission.

A rising vote of thanks was given Commissioners Bell and Kauffman.

After the chairman of the laws and legislation committee submitted his report a debate ensued as to ways and means to raise funds to defray the expenses of the laws and legislation committee.

It was stated during the discussion that the National Association of the motion picture industry had retained Messrs. Stanchfield and Seabury as counsel to argue the Sunday closing law before the Court of Appeals and a retainer of $3,000 had been paid them. This precluded the possibility of the league drawing on the three cents per seat contributions which had already been turned over to the National Association.

On motion to adjourn the members dispersed subject to the call of the president.

Oklahoma Meeting Called

Third Annual Convention to Be Held at Oklahoma City, February 12 and 13.

MUCH interest is being manifested in the coming convention to be held at the Lee Huckins Hotel, Oklahoma City, on the twelfth and thirteenth of this month. The call for this meeting was issued several days ago by the president, Ralph Talbot, of Tulsa, in which call he requested that all members of the league that intended to be present at the coming convention, notify L. W. Brophy of Muskogee, the secretary, of their intention to attend. Though the call has been issued but a few days, practically the entire membership have sent in cards, saying they would attend. Also exchange men from Oklahoma City, Dallas, Texas, and Kansas City have responded to invitations sent them, saying they would be present.

Besides the annual election of officers, there is much business to be transacted. The exhibitors of the state are threatened with a Sunday closing law and a censorship bill. Both the exhibitors and the opposition have been laying their plans and working hard each for their respective sides since the last session of the legislature two years ago. The exhibitors have many friends in the present legislature, which is now in session in Oklahoma City.

There is much talk of making a concerted effort to do away with the deposit system in Oklahoma. It is almost certain that the coming convention will do something along this line. However, a good turn-out is looked for, and a good time is assured for all who attend. Much entertainment and a banquet has been provided by the entertainment committee, which consists of B. H. Powell, E. C. Mills, John Sinopoulo, W. H. McCall, Maurice Lowenstein, Thos. H. Boland, all of Oklahoma City.

Tri-City League Meets

Exhibitors of Albany, Troy and Schenectady Hold Regular Gathering at Troy.

AT THE Hotel Trojan, Troy, N. Y., on Wednesday, February 7, the Tri-City Motion Picture Exhibitors' League, comprising Albany, Troy and Schenectady and vicinities, held its regular monthly meeting. These monthly meetings are scheduled for the first Wednesday of every month and the time for starting is announced as 11 p. m. They are generally preceded with refreshments and the eats begin about twelve midnight; there was no departure from this custom at the February session. Each one pays for his own meal and his guests', some of whom are always present.

Among the members who attended were: Maurice Sullivan, Watervliet, N. Y.; Morris S. Silverman, Schenectady, N. Y.; Wm. H. Buck, Albany, N. Y.; Wm. Bernstein, Albany, N. Y.; H. L. Levy, Waterford, N. Y.; J. C. Rosenthal, Troy, N. Y.; J. E. Weidman, Albany, N. Y.; Fred Blumer, Schenectady, N. Y.; John L. Mynders, Schenectady, N. Y.; L. A. Buettner, Cohoes, N. Y.; J. Deitcher, Troy, N. Y.; John F. Heffron, Troy, N. Y.; S. Suckns, Albany, N. Y.; Fred P. Elliott, Albany, N. Y.; Fred R. Billman, Albany, N. Y.; George Roberts, Albany, N. Y.; Kyran A. Fisher, Watervliet, N. Y.; Chas. V. McLaughlin, Albany, N. Y.; Mil Baxter, Troy, N. Y.; Frank N. Barhydt, Troy, N. Y.; Benj. Apple, Troy, N. Y.; W. M. Powers, Albany, N. Y.; A. E. Milligan, Schuylerville, N. Y.; W. J. Powers, Albany, N. Y.

Sam Spedon, of the Moving Picture World, guest of Mr. Buettner, was requested to act as toastmaster. Mr. Lorraine, pianist of Keith's theater, played the "Star Spangled Banner" as an opening ode and everybody joined in the singing, led by Mr. Billings, an entertainer from Keith's theater, who, assisted by Mr. Lorraine at the piano, rendered several of his latest song hits. At the close of refreshment, about 12.30 M., L. A. Buettner, president of the State, Tri-City League and the Troy and Vicinity Local League, was presented, in a few appropriate words, by the toastmaster, with a silver loving cup from the members of the Troy and Vicinity Local. Mr. Buettner was so taken back by this surprise it was some moments before he could come back with an expression of his appreciation. The meeting of the league was then called to order by Mr. Buettner, and immediately went into executive session, after non-members had departed.

The subject of laws and legislation was discussed from its many angles as the subject of most vital interest in the industry at large. The committee appointed to look after this section of the league's work reported its activities in securing petitions and raising funds among the exhibitors for defraying expenses in behalf of the state committee on law and legislations. It also reported the individual efforts of the league members in bringing influence to bear upon the Sunday closing law. There is evidently a keen interest in the importance of counteracting this law and a full realization of the injustice of it to the industry and the public.

There were many matters of local concern brought to the attention of the meeting, all of which showed that the Tri-City League was reaping the benefits of organization in bringing about many remedies and securing redress and considerations they could not otherwise obtain.

It was 4 o'clock A. M. Thursday before the motion to adjourn was made.

MARYLAND LEAGUE ACTIVITIES.

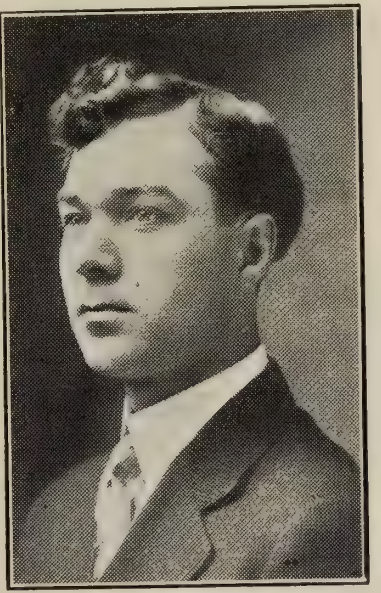
Another special meeting of the Board of Directors of the Maryland Exhibitor's League was held on Tuesday, February 6, at the New Theater, 210 West Lexington street; but the committee which had been appointed to look into the matter of holding a dance for the exhibitors of Maryland, of which Frederick Clement Weber is the chairman, had nothing definite to report. It was asked, however, that they be given until Tuesday, February 13, at which time another meeting had been called, to render their decision. This committee has been given the additional power to appoint whomsoever it feels will be of help, from the league to aid them in making their investigations as to the cost and other details regarding this matter.

State President L. A. Buettner

Head of New York Exhibitors' League a Young Man of Ability and Experience.

THE selection of L. A. Buettner as president of the New York Motion Picture Exhibitors' League is a wise choice. We use the words "selection" and "choice" rather than election, because the office was unsought by him and his election was unanimous, without a dissenting voice.

Mr. Buettner was born in Fort Plain, Montgomery County, New York, thirty-three years ago; has been an exhibitor nine years and is familiar with every phase of the business. He owns two theaters in Mechanicsville, two in Cohoes and one in Glens Falls, all in New York State.



L. A. Buettner.

He is very conservative, almost retiring, diplomatic and extremely fair in the exercise of his judgment. He is the last man in the world whom you would think of as a leader, which confirms our belief that he is sought because of his ability and his effective methods of dealing with motion picture affairs.

He is not only the state president of the league, but president of the Tri-City League as well. At the last meeting of the Tri-City League he proffered his resignation as president of it, because, as he said, "I do not want it to appear that I am trying to hog things." His resignation was not accepted, by unanimous acclamation.

He is a progressive man, as his business career shows. His progress has not been meteoric, but gradual, crowned by well-earned success. We are convinced that he possesses all the qualifications necessary to build up a strong state organization, so necessary for the upbuilding of a strong national body.

We sincerely hope Mr. Buettner as state president will fulfill all the essentials of his office, sustain our predictions and make the New York State League one of the strongest and best of exhibitors' organizations in the industry. Furthermore, we assure Mr. Buettner that the Moving Picture World will lend him its support to the accomplishment of this end.

Brooklyn Exhibitors' Ball

Big Time Promised at Stauch's on Eve of Washington's Birthday.

Practically the entire membership of 110 theaters belonging to the Associated Motion Picture Exhibitors of Brooklyn and Long Island, comprising Local Number 3 of the Motion Picture Exhibitors' League of America, are concentrating their efforts on making a success of their forthcoming carnival and ball which will be held at Stauch's, Coney Island, on the evening before Washington's birthday, Wednesday, February 21.

In conjuction with the carnival the Brooklyn Eagle is conducting a voting contest to select the most popular screen actor and actress as king and queen. During the progress of the carnival many surprises are planned, some of such proportions as to astonish even the most blasé.

Stauch's is noted for having a fine dancing floor and a largely augmented orchestra under the leadership of Baron Von Schoenck, will provide a special arrangement of music. Stauch's also is equipped with one of the finest restaurants in Greater New York, so that the slogan for that evening will surely be "Eat, Dance and be Merry."

Transportation arrangements have been made with the Brooklyn Rapid Transit Company by which they will run special trains every few minutes during the evening from the Brooklyn Bridge Terminal and on the Fourth Avenue Subway from the Municipal Building in addition to convenient street car service. Arrangements have also been made to park fifteen hundred automobiles at Stauch's.

Douglas Fairbanks and Anita Stewart have consented to lead the grand march. This will be the first public appearance of Mr. Fairbanks at a ball since becoming a screen star. Miss Stewart was very appropriately selected, being a very popular Brooklyn girl.

As Stauch's will easily accommodate 5,000 persons, plenty of dancing room is assured, and a most enjoyable evening is assured to all who avail themselves of this unusual opportunity of a midwinter trip to Coney Island.

HERRINGTON GOES TO MICHIGAN.

National Organizer Fred J. Herrington of the Motion Picture Exhibitors' League, started on Sunday, February 11, for a trip through Michigan in the interests of the league. He will make a careful canvass of the state, visiting all the important cities and many of the smaller towns.

HOW ONE EXCHANGE WORKED.

Moving Picture World,
New York, N. Y.

Winters, Texas, January 19, 1917.

Gentleman—In the last issue of your valuable paper I noticed the reproduction of a letter dealing with the advance deposit system of the exchange. While I am in sympathy with this letter, I regret that it did not show just how much advantage the exchanges were taking over the exhibitor under the above system.

In order that you may know just how exchanges carry on their business here in Texas, and that other exhibitors may profit by my experience, I will relate to you two deals with different exchanges that happened to me in the last 60 days.

I booked a feature from an exchange for a certain date at $50 for that day. By the way, the only day on which I thought that I could break even with a feature at that price, as my town is too small. I had to make a $15 deposit on this feature. About three days after making the contract I received a letter from the exchange stating that I could not get this feature for that day as it had been booked, but I could get it sometime later. My answer was that I could not use this feature any other day and to kindly return my check, but my check was not returned, although I had stopped payment on same. A member of the exchange had this check certified a week later by the vice-president of the bank who did not know that payment had been stopped on same. With this trick they secured the money. It took me two months to get my money returned after writing numerous letters, seeing them in person, and about to turn the matter over to an attorney. Then the exchange offered me this feature at $25 any time I wanted to use same.

With another exchange I made a contract for a series of features, one each week, depositing two weeks rental and paying for each feature in advance. On my first feature I received a few sheets of lithos, but nothing else, while I had 6 sheets, photos, heralds and slides ordered. Three letters that I wrote regarding this and requesting the other advertising matter were ignored, and then the feature came C. O. D. The next feature I played I had received all the advertising matter ordered, but it was billed to me for $2.50 more than my contract called for. Then I began advertising feature No. 3, as I had all the advertising matter for same on hand, everything was fine until at noon the day of the showing, when I received a telegram stating that the feature had not come into the office, and they had substituted a comedy feature, but as fate would have it, trains missed connections and it did not arrive here until 8:45 p. m. or so, too late to show. At the same time I received advertising matter for my next week's feature, which was for a two-reel feature, and my contract was for 5, 6 and 7 reel features.

Some system! It is useless for me to make any comment on this as it explains itself.

With best wishes for your good paper, and wishing you much success, I remain,

Yours very truly,

E. BUCHWALD.

McClure Prepairing New Series

Will Follow Immediately The "Seven Deadly Sins" Series Backed By a Similar Advertising Campaign.

SO SATISFACTORY has been the success of "Seven Deadly Sins," McClure Pictures' series of seven five-reel features, that Frederick L. Collins, president of the McClure company, has decided to start within a few weeks upon a new series of similar form. Details of the new series are not to be announced for several weeks.

"In the new series of five-act dramas," Mr. Collins states, "we shall present several stars who are appearing in 'Seven Deadly Sins,' and others with reputations as great or greater. The best actors, the best directors and the best authors we can find will produce a series just as good as, and if possible, better than 'Seven Deadly Sins.'

"As enormous an advertising campaign as we are putting behind 'Seven Deadly Sins' will back the new series, creating for it the same overwhelming demand that now exists for our present release.

"Probably six months or more will be consumed in making this new series and the publicity campaign will not start, of course, until 'Seven Deadly Sins' has completed its run. In the new series, as in 'Seven Deadly Sins,' we shall make each one of the series stronger than the one before.

"I am not at liberty to say at present whether the next series will be shorter or longer than 'Seven Deadly Sins.' We are working now upon a big idea which will form the general play of the new series and we are now proceeding only upon the general assumption that we will portray this idea in the best possible manner, whether it takes fifteen reels or fifty."

As the scenarios for the new series are not yet complete no casting is being done by McClure Pictures at present.

Harold Entwistle

HAROLD ENTWISTLE, who has an important role in "One of Many," a Metro production released February 12, was born in London and educated in England, in Paris and in Hanover. At the age of twenty-two years he joined the company or Henry Irving. Then he joined a repertoire touring company as leading man. After several years, on account of throat trouble, he was obliged to give up acting. He became manager for August Van Beine, the 'cellist. Then for four years he managed the Theater Royal, Sheffield, Yorkshire; in the summer conducting a stock company, producing every play personally. Then he took over the lease of the house and managed in connection with it several road shows.

Harold Entwistle.

After a period in South Africa playing leading character parts Mr. Entwistle took over the management of a London house, following which he became stage director for Mrs. Patrick Campbell. For several years he was in "Peter Pan," under the management of Charles Frohman. In conjunction with Edouard Jose, now managing director of Astra, with whom he shortly will be again associated, Mr. Entwistle took an opera company to Montevideo and Buenos Aires.

Mr. Frohman then called Mr. Entwistle to New York to manage Billie Burke, and at the close of the season sent him to Paris in charge of "Peter Pan." After two more seasons in New York under Mr. Frohman there followed two with Forbes-Robertson and two with the Shuberts.

Three years ago Mr. Entwistle went to the Vitagraph, where he played several roles with the Drews, then going to the California Motion Picture Corporation as producing director. After a year there he spent eight months with Thomas H. Ince. Since his return to the East he has been playing in Peerless subjects.

ARTHUR JAMES GIVES LUNCHEON.

On Friday, February 9, Miss Frances Nelson and a number of the newspaper picture critics lunched together with Arthur James and Director William Christy Cabanne, to celebrate the completion of a picture, "One in Many," the first which Mr. James has made to be released on the Metro program. The luncheon was given at the Claridge Hotel, and beside the host and the pretty young star, were R. A. Roland, Joseph W. Engel, Wm. Christy Cabanne, Robert Huntington, Robert Welch, James Beecroft, Harry Ennis, James Milligan, A. H. Shirk, H. H. Hallett Charles Congdon, Merritt Crawford, James Loughborough, E. M. Saunders, Maxwell Karger, Edward Weitzel and Mr. Quigley.

DRUM LEAVES WORLD FILM.

W. W. Drum, until recently division manager of the World Film Corporation for the western division, has resigned, to take effect February 28. Mr. Drum has been connected with the World Film for the past three years. He does not say what his future plans are.

Edel, in Office, Keeps Tabs on Show

Strand Manager Installs Devices Which Indicate Projection Speed and Convey Sounds from Stage and Auditorium.

HAROLD EDEL, managing director of the Strand theater, declares that he now has his theater in such a shape that he is "almost" satisfied. He has been seeking continuously, since his appointment as the Strand's executive head last August, to get the inside workings of the theater perfect, and, while he admits that he has not as yet reached the 100 per cent. perfection mark, he feels he is so close to it that he has reason to be pleased.

Harold Edel, Managing Director of the Strand.

The latest double innovation and time saving devices which Mr. Edel has introduced into the Strand, enable him to sit at his desk and know exactly what is going on upon the stage, the screen, in the auditorium and the different executive departments. By consulting a speedometer which has been placed upon the wall next to his desk he learns whether the picture which the audience is watching is run at the proper speed, and if he has any instructions to convey to his operators in the booth, he does so from his office desk.

With the aid of a little mahogany box of mystery that sits on his desk Mr. Edel can hear the orchestra and the different soloists and also determine how any particular number pleased the audience by listening for the applause. He can also converse with the different members of his executive staff without the aid of a telephone, in other words he can sit in any part of his office and hear his orchestra play as plainly as if he were in the auditorium, and likewise speak to the different departments of the theater. The little box on the desk is connected by two wires to a small dictagraph transmitter, which is concealed in the footlights.

This is the same Carl Anderson transmitter which has recently been used to gather the music from an orchestra and send it out to the wireless operators throughout the country at 8 o'clock each Friday night. This wonderfully sensitive transmitter is about the size of a watch and yet it gets together and sends along to the manager's desk all the great volume of the orchestra and the pipe organ or the voice of a single speaker.

Geo. M. Cohan is a Real Screen Actor Now

Trip to Jacksonville Enters Him Into the "Inner Circle" of Honest-to-Goodness Filmites.

A TRIP to Jacksonville, Fla., in behalf of the silent art presents the final hurdle for the "legit" star, and after that has been accomplished he automatically and immediately becomes a full-fledged motion picture actor regardless of past career, history or record. Thus when George M. Cohan arrived at Jacksonville in connection with the production of his initial photoplay for Artcraft, "Broadway Jones," it was only to be expected that the famous Yankee Doodle comedian should feel elated over the fact that he had at last entered the very inner circle of photoplay actorism, so to speak.

"Well, this makes me a real picture actor," said George M., as he greeted Joe Kaufman, his director, who has preceded him on his trip South. The famous actor-author-producer, strange to say, expressed keen joy over his temporary desertion of Broadway. The trip marked the first time since little Miss Cohan was born that George M. and Mrs. Cohan had been on a journey alone. "The trip was fine," said he; "good meals, nice people, fine weather and—say, it was like a second honeymoon."

Film Transportation Question

National Association Endeavors to Prepare for Emergencies Which May Disorganize Shipping Facilities.

THE transportation committee of the National Association of the Motion Picture Industry met last week to consider the possibility of the tying up of film distribution all over the country on account of railroad problems. The committee not only discussed the plans for delivering films locally by motor cars working for all the exchanges, through the National Association, but took up the question of using the parcel post for the delivery of films from producers to exchanges, as the only shipments which could get through in case of a tie-up of the railways with war orders and troops. The committee found that the time element of deliveries could probably be removed.

The next problem was that the shipments are limited to twenty pounds except within 150 miles of the shipping point, where fifty pounds are taken. Twenty pounds will carry not more than two reels, with a case. Fifty pounds will take care of a five-reel feature, and the National Association will ask that the Post Office Department consider the proposal to increase the limit on film shipments to 65 pounds, to any parcel post zone.

It is thought that the question of time can be settled if the Post Office will use the regular letter canceling stamp, which marks the time of mailing, as if this is done the shipper will not be tempted to delay taking the package to the Post Office in the hope that any delays in mail shipments will protect him from blame.

It has been rumored that the Post Office Department is planning to use the parcel post delivery wagons to collect mail as well as deliever it, which, with the other changes asked for by this committee, will make the parcel post almost as efficient as the express.

Another important move was toward standardization of film shipping cases, which are now of every shape, size and quality which can slip through the Interstate Commerce Commission regulations. The association will be able to offer to film exchanges a standard container capable not only of holding five, six or seven reels of film, but with special compartments for shipping posters and other advertising matter, lobby "stills" and photographs. The saving in express charges through shipping paper and films together will amount to thousands of dollars annually.

The loss and exchange of shipping cases will probably ultimately be avoided by the help of the express companies and the co-operation of the exchanges in charging the cases against the exhibitor and crediting him only when he returns the proper case, with the exchange's own name on it.

"Pathe Gets "Luke" Comedies

Signs Long Time Contract With Hal Roach, President of Rolin Film Co., Which Produces Them.

J. A. BERST, vice-president and general manager of Pathe, has just signed a long-term contract with Hal Roach, president of the Rolin Film Co., whereby all the Rolin product will be released through Pathe. This effectually silences rumors to the effect that the Rolin comedies would be found on another program before long and also furnishes proof of the high regard in which the Pathe Company holds these pictures.

Owing to the repeated requests from exhibitors for these "Luke" comedies, in two-reel lengths, Mr. Berst decided some months ago to discontinue the release of the one-reelers and put the comedies in two reels only. Arrangements were made with the Rolin company to this end, and Pathe has now on hand seven two-reel "Lonesome Luke" comedies that everyone who has seen declares to be "great." The first to be released will be "Luke's Lively Life," which has been put on program for March 18.

"I saw the whole seven in one morning recently," says Mr. Berst. "Fourteen reels of comedies at one sitting is a pretty severe test. I found myself laughing just as heartily at the last one as I did at the first. I am very much pleased with them. I am absolutely confident that they are a big addition to our program and will prove a great attraction to any exhibitor. We have set a price on them of $25 for first runs in large communities and furthermore we are advertising the price."

The value of the comedies to the exhibitor has been definitely established by the many unsolicited letters of hearty commendation received by the various Pathe exchanges.

Wharton to Establish Exchanges

Proposes to Market Own Pictures In Future— No Interference In Production.

WHARTON, Inc., of Ithaca, N. Y., producers of "The Exploits of Elaine," "Adventures of J. Rufus Wallingford," "Mysteries of Myra," "Beatrice Fairfax," "Patria," together with many features and short comedies which did not bear its name, springs a real surprise in announcing its plans for the forthcoming year.

Under the new policy, Wharton, Inc., will henceforth operate independently, marketing all of its productions as well as maintaining unhampered supervision in the filming of every picture.

"Our new policy" says President Theodore W. Wharton, "also means that we shall make our own pictures in our own way, unhampered influences that have more or less affected our work in the past. We propose to establish an independent open market for all of our productions which are not to be affected by any outside interests. We shall not cater to or be influenced by the buyer or exhibitor with a morbid or perverted taste. Our pictures will be made solely for the legitimate amusement of the public and the public only."

R. H. Hadfield of Chicago, Ill., who has had a wide experience in the motion picture field, has been appointed general manager of Wharton, Inc. He will be in charge of all business details of productions filmed by them, arranging for their sale and release. Mr. Hadfield has been identified with a number of successful motion picture enterprises. For the purpose of handling all of the productions of Wharton, Inc., the Wharton Releasing Corporation has been organized. It will operate independently of Wharton, Inc., but is to devote its efforts solely to the marketing of all completed pictures of the latter concern.

Mr. Hatfield will be an officer in the Wharton Releasing Corporation. There will be no outside capital involved, Theodore W. Wharton and his brother, Leopold D. Wharton, being the sole stockholders in both companies. Wharton, Inc., is making plans to establish important and far reaching affiliations throughout the United States and Europe. This does not imply that the concerns will associate itself financially with any other producers. Wharton, Inc., will be essentially an independent corporation and will have no working connection with other interests. Branch offices of the Wharton Releasing Company are to be established in the near future at New York City and Chicago.

GILMOUR BUSINESS MANAGER FOR SIGNAL.

Wesley Gray Gilmour has been employed as business manager of the Signal Film Corporation in Los Angeles. Mr. Gilmour is one of the pioneers of the picture industry on the coast. His start in the business was made as auditor of the Centaur Film Company. He then went west to assume the duties of business manager of the Nestor film company and later occupied the same position with the Universal. Leaving that company he accepted the position of superintendent of the Ince studios at Culver City, California. It was from Inceville that Mr. Gilmour came to the Signal Corporation.

LEVINE JOINS EDWARD WARREN PRODUCTIONS.

H. Z. Levine, all around motion picture man, has severed connections with the Triangle Film Corporation, where he has been since that company's inception in August, 1915, to become business manager for the Edward Warren Productions, with offices in the Fitzgerald Building, 1482 Broadway. Mr. Levine is one of the best known publicity and advertising men in the industry. He has served in various capacities with some of the largest organizations, both in this country and abroad.

DOROTHY GISH SOON TO VISIT NEW YORK.

Dorothy Gish, Triangle-Fine Arts star, soon will arrive in New York for a brief frolic in the metropolis. Miss Gish says the purpose of her trip is to purchase some new gowns and see some of the season's theatrical successes on Broadway . She will join her mother and her sister, Lillian Gish, who have been in the East since before Christmas.

PAUL EVERTON TO SUPPORT MARJORIE RAMBEAU.

Paul Everton, one of Broadway's best-known "heavy" men and character actors, has been engaged by Frank Powell for a prominent part in the support of Marjorie Rambeau in "Motherhood," the second of the series of Marjorie Rambeau pictures now being made by the Frank Powell Producing Corporation, to be distributed through Mutual.

Exchange Men Attacked

New England Clubwomen Claim that Exchangemen Ask Aid in Fighting Censorship but Fail to Reciprocate in Better Film Movement.

AT A RECENT meeting held by the Rhode Island Congress of Mothers in Providence, and at which Mary Gray Peck was one of the principal speakers, an animated discussion took place in which the exchange man came in for his share of uncomplimentary criticism. This meeting was attended by numerous clubwomen who had come to Providence for the purpose of being present at the New England conference of Women's Clubs which opened that evening; and according to authentic reports a discussion of the shortcomings of the exchange system revealed considerable exasperation on the part of the audience. It was stated that the exchangemen although eager to enlist the sympathies of the clubwomen against legalized censorship, make no effort to accommodate them in the establishment along constructive lines of the Better Film Movement.

We agree with a suggestion handed in to this department from one of the leading centers of the Better Film Movement, which stated that it would be well for exchangemen to give the matter as it stands some serious thought, in view of the fact that should the impression become general that lack of co-operation of exchangemen is the retarding measure, the latter may be forced to a realization that they themselves have been the chief movers in promoting a legislation that is undesirable. This by antagonizing an element whose influence might be put to good use in behalf of their cause.

Edna G. Riley

EDNA G. RILEY, the well-known scenario writer, has been kept busy lately on special extra-length features. Mrs. Riley's latest picture to be released is "The Libertine," the six-reel feature which has made such a signal success; she has just completed the scenario of the seven-reel story (as yet unnamed) which is to be Miss Norma Talmadge's next starring vehicle, and is at present engaged on the script of the special picture in which Evelyn Nesbit Thaw will make her screen debut. All of these productions have been, or will be, directed by Julius Steger and Joseph A. Golden, of the Triumph Film Corporation, and the last two named will be released through the Selznick organization. Besides these special features, Mrs. Riley has many five-reel program pictures to her credit, including "The Prima Donna's Husband" (Triumph), "The Blindness of Love" (Metro), etc., and has recently collaborated on an original photoplay which is soon to be produced by the Lasky Company for release on the Paramount program. She has also written several scenarios of shorter length. Mrs. Riley hails from California, and her path to motion picture work lay through the magazine and newspaper field. At present, in addition to her work for the silent drama, she is under contract to furnish a dramatization of a well-known novel for a famous star for production on the legitimate stage. This work is well under way, and will probably be produced early next season, in accordance with present plans.

JOE MILES USES RADIUM SCREEN.

The projection room connected with the new offices of Joseph Miles, at 220 West Forty-second street, is equipped with a Radium Gold Fibre Screen, and not, as was stated in last week's issue of the Moving Picture World, a Minusa screen.

Censorship Advocate Strikes Snag

Kansas Preacher Meets Opposition in Effort to Boost Colorado Censorship Bills.

THE censorship pot has reached the boiling stage in Colorado. Two new bills were introduced in the state legislature, making four in all, and the backers of the measures have finally come out in the open and begun a campaign to have them placed on the statute books.

Theodore Hanson, a Kansas preacher, is the instigator of the bills. He is the superintendent of an organization known as the Public Welfare League with headquarters in Kansas City, Kan. He has come to Colorado to organize a branch of the league and with it to establish state censorship of moving pictures. He has had anything but smooth sailing thus far and troubled waters are ahead.

The last two moving picture bills to be introduced, like the first two, were presented "by request." One provides for state censorship and is similar in its provisions to the original bills, details of which were told in the last issue of The Moving Picture World. The other provides for supervision of amusements. It covers all branches of recreation but is aimed at moving picture theaters in particular. It places this supervision in the hands of a "welfare" board to be named in each city and town.

Efforts to learn the authorship of any of the censorship measures was unavailing around the legislative halls. Apparently it was the intention of their backers to allow the impression to get abroad that the Mothers' Congress and the Parent-Teachers' Association were behind them. The women were prompt to go on record as having nothing to do with the bills. In fact they went further and said that they were working in friendly co-operation with the moving picture people and that conditions now prevailing are very satisfactory to them.

Mr. Hanson, after the women had taken this action, had to come out in the open. He called a meeting for Sunday, February 4, at Trinity M. E. Church to organize a local branch of the Welfare League. At this meeting he exposed the purpose of the organization. He also took up a collection to defray his "expenses" while engaged in the campaign.

The meeting was attended by several hundred men and women. It was opened with singing and prayer, after which J. K. Codding, warden of the Kansas State Penitentiary, was introduced as the principal speaker. He told about crime, its causes and cures. He said that crime was on the increase in Kansas and that the age of the criminal was decreasing. He blames the home training, or lack of it, for this condition.

A man in the audience tried to say something on the subject, but he was silenced by the chairman, who said that he would entertain any resolutions that "might be offered." A young man arose and read one containing almost the exact words used by Superintendent Hanson. It implored the legislature to pass the censorship bills that are now pending.

Here the smoothly oiled machinery ran into a snag. W. H. T. Mason, an attorney who has taken an active interest in several reform measures and attended the meeting believing that it was called for the purpose of organizing a general welfare campaign, got up and voiced opposition.

"I am opposed to state censorship because it is nothing more or less than a graft," said Mason. "As a Welfare League this body should work for reform and not seek to let down the gates for graft."

He cited an instance that had come under his personal observation where the owner of a certain picture was refused permission to show it in a certain state because it was supposed to be immoral. However when it was later passed by the censor on the ground that it taught a moral lesson, Mr. Mason learned that a payment of $600 to the censor was the reason for the sudden change in the character of the picture. He said that state censorship would not insure clean pictures. It would simply permit the man or company who has the most money to spend to get his pictures over regardless of whether or not they were clean.

Mr. Mason was answered by one of the organizers of the league by the charge that the meeting was "packed." He called attention to the fact that a half hundred or more moving picture exhibitors and exchange men were present.

No attempt has been made to conceal this fact. More than fifty members of the Rocky Mountain Screen Club attended the meeting in a body, but merely as spectators. They went to the meeting in a group, announced themselves on entering, and sat together, but they took no part in the discussion and made no attempt to vote on any subject brought before the meeting. Attorney Mason was not inspired by any member of the Screen Club; he was not even known to any of the moving picture men until they learned his identity after the meeting.

In spite of the opposition, however, the resolution was passed. The meeting was then adjourned, the names of a purported committee on organization were announced. But in this latter feature the censorship agitators reckoned without their host because they announced Carlos M. Cole, superintendent of Denver's public schools, and Mrs. R. T. Ramsey, a member of the moving picture committee of the Mothers' Congress, as members of the committee.

Both were indignant when they learned of it. Mrs. Ramsey waited on Superintendent Hanson on the Monday following the meeting and demanded that public retraction be made. She announced that she was opposed to both state censorship and the plan for city and town supervision of moving picture theaters.

Mrs. Ramsey declared that the Welfare League was trying to undo all that had been accomplished by the Mothers' Congress, Parent-Teachers' Association and the various woman's clubs of the state. She cited that the women had worked hard and diligently with the co-operation of the moving picture people to see that only the higher class of pictures were displayed in the state and now that they had gotten the matter on a satisfactory basis the Welfare League, headed by an outsider from another state, wanted to step in, name committees in each town and city to override the women.

Superintendent of Schools Carlos M. Cole declared that he had nothing whatsoever to do with the movement.

"They have no right to quote me or to use my name in any way," he said. "I was invited to take part in this movement and was asked to lend my support to the censorship bills, but I informed the league advocates that I had no time to look into the matter. I have not even read any of the bills and have not expressed myself in favor of the movement in any way."

Mrs. Burt Davis, a member of the moving picture committee of allied woman's organizations of the state numbering 15,000, said that she was opposed to the censorship bills and that a majority of the women shared her views.

"Personally, I am decidedly opposed to the bills," said Mrs. Davis. "I believe the proposed laws simply duplicate work that is being satisfactorily done at the present time. Furthermore the work now being done is thoroughly efficient and adequate and entails practically no additional cost. These bills would inflict additional burdens on Colorado taxpayers and only serve to provide some hungry politicians with high-salaried jobs."

How "Snow White" Was Put On

Interesting Details of the Arrangements for the Big Show at Kansas City Convention Hall.

SOME of the details of the "Snow White" production in Convention Hall, Kansas City, seen by some 75,000 men, women and children, will doubtless be interesting. One of the hardest problems to work out was that of the projection of four pictures on the four-sided screen in the middle of the hall. This screen was 18 feet square, and it was necessary, of course, to project all the pictures the same size. It was impossible to place all the machines at the same distance from the screen. One pair was set on the platform where the band usually plays, 97 feet from the screen and almost level with it; another pair of machines was set up some 40 feet higher than the screen, 125 feet distant, at a doorway at the top of the first balcony where entrance is usually made by persons reaching a temporary stage at that end of the hall. The other two pairs were on opposite sides of the hall, in the second balconies, one of them 65 and one 58 feet from the screen. The problem of focusing these various machines was a delicate one, but it was done.

Another problem was that of simultaneous projection of the four pictures. It was impossible to speed the machines to the fraction of a second. A plan was evolved therefore that would bring the pictures to coincidence at the beginning of each reel. Mr. Newman took his station at the south end of the hall, by the "master machines." Holes in the film of the master machines 50 feet from the end of a reel, notified of the approach of the end, and Mr. Newman rang a bell, announcing "get ready to change machines." The succeeding reels were ready on the duplicate machines, and the instant the reel running on the master came to an end, Mr. Newman rang another bell, on which signal the operators of the second machines at each of the stations started the succeeding reels. Sometimes a few feet of the reels on the other machines had not been finished, sometimes there was a short wait. But the spectators scarcely noticed these trivial discrepancies, and the general impression was that all pictures were projected exactly simultaneously, and the reels were ended as well as started at exactly the same time.

The Picture Business in Java

Interesting Sidelights on Methods and Conditions of Exhibiting by a Former Resident of the Island

JOHN J. ROBINSON, of Robinson & Walker, Seattle, who make a specialty of exporting film to Java, was for sixteen years a resident of that part of the world, fourteen of which were spent in Manila, and the last two in Java.

The motion picture business, according to Mr. Robinson, has become more Americanized in Manila than in most other parts of the Orient. The theaters are built more like our houses in America and they are run very much as we run them here. The class of picture, however, which is popular is, as in other parts of the Orient, the sensational.

Sirene Bioscope, Sourlaya, Java.

"In most parts of the Orient," says Mr. Robinson, "motion picture theaters have taken the English name of 'bioscope,' and in Java, although a theater may have a Dutch or Malay Christian name, it flaunts its disregard of the unity of languages by having 'bioscope' tacked on as a surname. The architecture of these bioscopes differs materially from that of our motion picture theaters. They average from one hundred and forty to one hundred and eighty feet in length and the throw is from one hundred to one hundred and twenty feet. The screen is of plain white cotton cloth, and beyond this curtain screen there is a space of from forty to fifty or sixty feet where seats are placed, as well as in the space between the curtain and the projecting machine. For the seats behind the screen two cents is the usual charge and this is the part of the house where the lower class of Javanese and Malays sit, to whom it makes no difference that the titles as seen on that side of the curtain are printed backward.

Javan Open Air Bioscope.

"The seating capacity of the bioscopes in Java ranges from five hundred downward. The prices of admission run from the two cents minimum mentioned above to seventy-five cents for the loges, but the profit is made from lower priced seats.

"The titles on the film are written in English and Dutch, but the programs are printed in Dutch and Malay. Although the Malays are only one of many peoples native to the Dutch East India, their's is the language which has been adopted as the common vehicle of commercial intercourse, and all the better class of natives understand and speak it.

"In Java but three large towns do anything worth speaking of in the motion picture business, viz., Sourbaya, Bandoeng and Batavia; and the film field is pretty thoroughly covered by six or eight independent exchanges and local offices established by Universal, Pathe and Eclair. American-made films of the sensational type are the kind most sought after."

FRANK KLEIN, CIRCUS STRONG MAN, JOINS L-KO.

Frank Klein, one of the world's strongest men, has joined the L-KO forces and will do all the heavy work in these comedies which are released on the Universal program. Mr. Klein has spent many seasons as a circus performer. Among the feats of strength he performed was lifting a horse with his teeth, breaking rocks with his bare fists and juggling half-ton weights. Mr. Klein makes his debut in pictures in the L-KO comedy "Defective Detectives," in which he allows a fully loaded automobile to run over him.

MOSS PLAYERS AT SARANAC.

A company of B. S. Moss players left this week for Saranac Lake, N. Y., to take some exterior scenes for a March release called "One Hour." The company, in charge of Paul McAllister, who wrote the scenario and will direct the picture, will be four or five weeks at Saranac, from whence it will journey to Jacksonville, Fla., for the final scenes.

Chicago News Letter

The New President of the Chicago Local

Joseph Hopp Is Eminently Fitted for the Honor by His Long Experience Both as Exhibitor and Distributor, and by His Acknowledged Standing as an Able Business Man.

THE recent election of Joseph Hopp as president of the Chicago local organization of exhibitors is a distinct step forward. I have known Mr. Kopp personally since he entered the moving picture business in 1907, when he and William Welch started the Standard Film Exchange in the Unity Building, this city. In two years time the business had so increased that he was forced to seek larger quarters, at 166 West Washington street. There he remained until October, 1913, when the exchange was sold to the Universal Film Manufacturing Company, Mr. Welch died in 1910 and from that time Mr. Hopp had taken over the entire business.

Joseph Hopp.

In 1914 Mr. Hopp became a stockholder in the International Trust and Savings Bank, this city, which was founded at that time, and was at once elected a director. This banking organization sold out to the German Bank of Chicago in 1916. Since then Mr. Hopp has been giving his time exclusively to his theater enterprises and to his real estate interests. He had always (from the time he entered the moving picture business) been an exhibitor, having conducted his theaters while managing his exchange and during his banking experience.

At the present time Mr. Hopp owns in Chicago the Ideal, Larabee and North Avenue, the Liberty, Milwaukee Avenue and Division Street, and the Victoria on Logan Boulevard. He also owns the Majestic in Rock Island, Ill., and is interested in the Barrison, Waukegan, and in the Lyric, Fortieth street and Ogden avenue, Chicago.

When Mr. Hopp resumed activity in the league he had no thought of becoming officially connected with the organization. Two months later he was nominated and elected unanimously to fill a vacancy on the executive committee of the Chicago local.

Soon after this a delegation of members called on Mr. Hopp and asked him to become a candidate for president of the local. He said he would take the matter under advisement. Two weeks later he was invited to attend a luncheon at the Hotel Sherman, at which twenty-five of the leading exhibitors of the city of Chicago were assembled. There were present such men as Peter J. Schaefer, of Jones, Linick & Schaefer; Nathan Ascher, of Ascher Brothers; Alfred Hamburger, of Alfred Hamburger Enterprises; Fred Schaeffer, of Schaeffer Brothers; William E. Heaney, Ludwig Schindler, Paul Sittner, Robert R. Levy, Mr. Burford, of the Aurora Theaters Co.; F. H. Franke and others.

They presented Mr. Hopp a petition, signed individually by those present, asking him to be a candidate for president of the local organization at the forthcoming election. Mr. Hopp consented.

At the election there were two complete tickets in the field, one known as the Progressive and the other as the Exhibitors'. George Henry headed the Exhibitors' ticket. Mr. Henry was then serving his third term as president.

The Progressive ticket, headed by Mr. Hopp, was elected by a decisive vote. The contest was hard fought and lasted for many hours. Notwithstanding the fierceness of the contest Chicago exhibitors can be congratulated that no split in the local will occur, the losers eccepting defeat grimly, but with good grace. That there were 160 votes cast attests the strength of the Chicago organization.

Mr. Hopp, in an interview, outlined his policy to the writer as follows:

"I believe we should apply ourselves only to constructive work, establishing a greater mutuality among exhibitors and a closer kinship with the other branches of the industry. I cannot do better than to quote from a recent speech to exhibitors in which I stated that the old commercial law of supply and demand applies to the case, inasmuch as the exhibitor is on the buying side of the counter and the distributer on the selling side. One is trying to buy as cheaply as he can, while the other is trying to sell as high as he can. This has brought about an antagonism between these two branches of the trade which must necessarily be now remedied for the good of all.

"The ruinous competition at present existing between producers has created a menace to the industry in general, especially by the hiring of high-priced stars, who receive inflated salaries—greater in many cases than most of the great captains of industry are receiving. This added cost of production is being passed down to the exhibitor, who is already burdened with a cost of operation now generally greater than his receipts, so that his very existence is threatened, unless he can pass the burden on to his patrons. In the impossibility of his being able to do this lies the great menace to the business.

"Is it not time for the producers to get together and work in close unison for a sane cost of their productions and by so doing lighten the burden on down the line, so that the exhibitor can operate with a profit sufficient to recompense him for his investment and his labor?

"It is my aim to give my energy and time to aid in bringing about such a condition, and we hope that the good work thus being started in Chicago will find ready support throughout the country."

Louis H. Frank Resigns as Manager of National Exposition.

Executive sessions of the national executive committee of the M. P. E. L. of America were held in the Hotel Sherman on Saturday, February 3, and Tuesday, February 6. The members present were Lee A. Ochs, A. P. Tugwell, Thomas Furniss, Alfred Hamburger and Wm. J. Sweeney.

The only business of importance transacted was the acceptance of the resignation of Louis H. Frank as the manager of the National Exposition, and the election of Ludwig Schindler as chairman of the National Exposition committee. Mr. Schindler will be assisted by a committee of probably twenty-five members, who will be selected from members in the Chicago local. This committee, as well as its chairman, will act under the supervision of the National Exposition committee, as provided in the by-laws.

What Mr. Frank Says.

Louis H. Frank called at the Chicago office Friday, February 9, and informed me that he had not resigned his position as manager of the National Exposition. He states that at a meeting held recently at the Hotel Sherman by certain members of the National Executive Committee he received a letter from them asking his resignation and threatened removal forthwith in case of refusal to resign. He states that he is paying no attention to his removal. He received the following telegram, dated February 8, from Samuel H. Trigger regarding the matter:

law. He takes the stand that the action is illegal on the ground that Article 1, Section 3 of the League's constitution states:

> Notice of meeting must be mailed by the secretary to the members of this committee at least ten days previous to the date of the meeting.

Chicago Film Brevities.

Wm. A. Hopp, brother of Joseph Hopp, and for many years connected with his enterprises, died Saturday, January 27, and was interred at Rosehill Cemetery, with Masonic honors. The deceased was a member of Welfare Lodge, No. 991, A. F. & A. M., of which he was a junior deacon. He leaves a widow, but no children. He was recently engaged in promoting a concern for the production of portrait paintings of all the leading stars in the business for the use of exhibitors, his partner in the enterprise being Carl Harthill, who for a number of years was manager of Joseph Hopp's Standard Film Exchange.

Frank A. Dempsey, connected with the sales force of George Kleine, traveling out of Chicago for the past year, resigned his position recently and enlisted for six months in the American Ambulance Field Service in France, at the late Allied Bazaar, held in the Coliseum, this city. He sailed on the Transatlantique February 4, from New York, and is expected to arrive in Paris about the 16th inst. His numerous friends wish him a safe arrival and a safe return.

Ben Judell, manager of Mutual's Chicago exchange, took the degree of Master Mason recently in Welfare Lodge, No. 991, A. F. & A. M. Mr. Judell wagered a box of Tom Palmer cigars that he would not "back down" during the conferring of the degree. He lost. Wm. Herschfield, president of the General Feature Film Co., a member of the same lodge, is enjoying the cigars at the expense of Ben.

R. H. Fulton, vice-president of the E. E. Fulton Co., this city, caused considerable concern by his unexplained disappearance recently from that office. Time revealed that he had proceeded to Battle Creek, Mich., where the nuptial knot made him and Miss Undine Farrington, one of the most popular girls in that city, man and wife. The happy honeymooners are still receiving congratulations from their numerous friends.

Charles G. Williams, chairman of the Ohio Board of Censors, paid the city a visit recently, and gave an address on censorship before the Political Equality League, in the Congress Hotel. The following are extracts from his speech:

"Censorship, as practiced in Ohio, is nothing more than an intelligent, systematic regulation in advance of the exhibition of the film—or the locking of the garage before the stealing of the 'flivver.'

"Censorship in the hands of intelligent, broad-minded persons is a godsend to society, but if conducted in a high-handed, arbitrary manner, it is an outrage on civilization. Motion pictures, if guided in the proper channels, will become a great factor in the elevation of the race. The censor must use much liberality, lest he become tyrannical and do more harm than good."

Mary Pickford is scheduled to arrive in Chicago, on Sunday, February 11, where she will make a stop-over on her way to California, to appear in "Rebecca of Sunnybrook Farm," her coming picture. While here she will be the guest of M. Goldstine, manager of the Chicago office of Artcraft.

A display advertisement in the Chicago Herald of Sunday, February 4, announced the suggestion by the Universal Film Manufacturing Co., that every moving picture theater in the United States should begin immediately and continue to run a slide carrying a picture of President Wilson with the four words "Stand by the President."

Jones, Linick & Schaefer have purchased the rights to Illinois and Indiana for Selig's latest feature film, in eight reels, "Beware of Strangers." The opening presentation will be given at the La Salle theater, this city, Saturday, Feb. 10. One of the strongest cards yet seen in a Selig production will be viewed in "Beware of Strangers." Includes Tom Santschi, Fritzi Brunette, Bessie Eyton, Jack Richardson, Vivian Rich, Ed. Coxen, Eugenie Besserer, Frank Clark, Harry Lonsdale and other capable people. The scenic effects of the production are elaborate and costly, and the lighting effects are unusually good. Colin Campbell directed the production.

The meeting of the sub-committee of aldermen, which was announced in my last letter to take place on Monday, Feb. 5, has been postponed until Tuesday, Feb. 13.

DEFECTION OF FRANK AND CHOYNSKI ONLY RUMOR.

In last week's issue of the Moving Picture World it was stated that there was a report to the effect that the faction headed by M. A. Choynski and Louis H. Frank had threatened to split the Chicago local in the event of being defeated at the election for officers of the Chicago branch. James S. McQuade, Chicago representative of the World, now reports that the statement was not based on fact and that the rumor was an unjust reflection upon the men named.

Walter Hitchcock Engaged by Erbograph

WALTER HITCHCOCK, who has done so much creditable work on the screen since he deserted the legitimate stage a short time ago, has been engaged by the Erbograph Company to play the leading parts in that company's productions. Mr. Hitchcock will share the stellar honors with Anna Q. Nilsson in his first picture for his new association. The production will be called "The Moral Code," and was both written and directed by Ashley Miller, and will be released on the Art Dramas program.

Walter Hitchcock.

On the legitimate stage Mr. Hitchcock was featured for a number of years in the support of America's most celebrated actors and actresses. He has appeared with such players as Henry Miller, Nat Goodwin, Margaret Anglin, William H. Crane, Otis Skinner and Kyrle Bellew.

His fine work behind the footlights soon won recognition from the picture producers, and he was engaged by one of them to play an important part in a feature. His very fine screen personality and strong dramatic talent duplicated for him his success of the stage. He had appeared in a number of the more important "special" features that have been released in the past six months, and was featured in the support of the most prominent screen actresses. Some of his more important screen plays have been "Destiny" and "The House of Tears" with Emily Stevens, "The Celebrated Scandal" with Betty Nansen, "Vera the Medium" with Kitty Gordon, and "The White Raven" with Ethel Barrymore. This last production had a run at the Rialto, and the Metropolitan critics were unanimous in their praise of his work in the picture.

HOPE TO STOP UTAH CENSOR BILLS.

George E. Carpenter, secretary of the Theater Managers' Association of Utah, writes that the association is hammering away at the exhibitors in an effort to arouse them in the fight against the proposed censorship laws offered for consideration in the legislature of that state. The outcome is problematical at present, says Mr. Carpenter, but he hopes that sufficient opposition will be developed to defeat the bills.

News of Los Angeles and Vicinity

By G. P. VON HARLEMAN

At the Keystone Studios

Week of Thrills—Sennett on Vacation—Diving Venus to Compete in Honolulu.

THRILLS and deeds of daring, all performed in pursuit of comedy, fairly tumbled over one another during the past week at the Mack Sennett-Keystone studios.

In one scene Aileen Allen, the Keystone champion diving girl, was called on to make a fall over a balcony rail onto the floor below.

After battling with the villain, Miss Allen made the fifteen-foot fall all right, but instead of going over the rail, the rail gave way, and the girl, the villain, the hero rushing to her rescue and two extra people went with it. Fortunately the net below held, and no one was seriously hurt.

Miss Allen, who is the holder of the National A. A. U. diving championship, has secured a four weeks' leave of absence from her studio work and sails for Honolulu, February 7, to defend her title in the aquatic events which form part of the great Hawaiian Mid-Pacific Carnival.

She won the diving championship last year in the national events held June 22 at the Los Angeles Athletic Club, and after her contests in Honolulu expects to secure an additional leave of absence from the Keystone in order to compete in this year's title contests, which will be held somewhere in the East in March.

Wayland Trask, working in a Ford Sterling picture, also contributed a thrill. He was bound to a mast in a sinking ship. Water, controlled from above, was supposed to gush slowly into the hold. It happened that the overhead tank gave way and in a twinkling Trask, still chained to the mast, was a foot under water. Only quick work saved the big comedian.

Then Bobby Vernon and Gloria Swanson in an auto were stalled on a track and hit by a train. This stunt was pulled off strictly according to schedule, attesting to the cleverness of the locomotive engineer on the job. But the expression on the faces of the Keystone actors were not "acting." They were really scared.

Director General Mack Sennett slipped quietly away from the Keystone studio the last Friday in January and with a congenial party went on a duck hunting trip down Calexico way. The duck season in California is drawing to a close. Mabel Normand, Mack Swain, Chester Conklin, Juanita Hansen and Gloria Swanson, all under the management of Mr. Sennett, have bagged the limit and had the temerity to crow about it. "The big boss" is determined not to be outdone. Charlie Murray, veteran comedian of the Keystone Company, has gone East for a well earned vacation. Murray has just finished his latest picture, "Her Fame and Shame," but that isn't the reason why he has gone out of town.

Balboa Closes Big Contract

General Film Company Gives Horkheimer Brothers Million-Dollar Contract for Fifty-two Photoplays.

A MILLION-DOLLAR contract has been awarded to Horkheimer Brothers by the General Film Company for fifty-two feature photoplays of four reels each, to be produced at Balboa studio, in Long Beach, Cal., during 1917.

One of these Horkheimer productions is to be released each week on the General Film program as a "Knickerbocker Star Feature," beginning March 1. All the plays will be screen versions of the strongest stories appearing recently in Ainslee's, the People's Magazine, the Popular Magazine and other Street & Smith publications.

Many of the stories are favorably known to countless readers who will be interested in seeing them on the screen. Such experienced technicians as Captain Leslie T. Peacocke, Dan F. Whitcomb and Douglas Bronston are doing the scenario adaptations.

To fulfill this contract four companies working simultaneously will be kept busy. One is to be headed by Bertram Bracken, who has just returned to Balboa from the East, where he directed Theda Bara and other Fox stars. Edgar Jones, late of the Metro forces, is another new director at the Horkheimer studio. The other two companies are those of Harry Harvey and William Bertram.

Among those engaged are Kathleen Kirkham, Viola Vale, Winnifred Greenwood, Louise Sothern, Margaret Landis, Gloria Payton, Ethel Ritchie, Mignon LeBrun and Julian Beaubien. Male leads will be taken by Arthur Shirley, Clifford Gray, Melvin Mayo, Cullen Landis, R. Henry Gray, Lewis King and James Warner.

The four-reel feature is practically a new length production. It is the idea of H. M. Horkheimer, president and general manager of the Balboa Company, who closed the big contract while in the East recently. Speaking of it, he said:

"For the adequate telling of a good dramatic story on the screen, three reels are too short and five reels too long. So I have decided on four as the happy medium. The average stage play is in four acts.

"Exhibitors have been complaining about five-reel productions, because the most of them are padded to make the length. They want variety on their program. This is possible with a four-reel picture, which requires an hour to project. That allows time for a short comedy, some news pictures and any other novelty like an animated cartoon.

"I believe that the four-reel feature which we will inaugurate will solve the problem confronting the film world today and help to settle some of the confusion prevailing. Everyone is looking for a solution and the four-reeler may be it."

Important enlargements are being made at the Balboa studio to enable it to turn out the Knickerbocker productions on schedule time. That work may progress, rain or shine, the biggest glassed-in studio in Southern California is to be erected. This will cost $50,000. Right now, finishing touches are being put on a new sunlight stage.

Los Angeles Film Brevities.

Carl Laemmle, president of the Universal Film Manufacturing Company, who arrived from New York, Wednesday, January 31, said that he was glad to get away from the cold weather in the East and enjoy a brief vacation among the sunshine and flowers of southern California. Mr. Laemmle commented on the growth of his plant since his last visit to the Coast. During his stay in Los Angeles he will arrange with Vice-President Davis for the production of several features at Universal City on an unusually elaborate scale.

David Hartford is now filming scenes at the old studios of the Culver City Film Company for a six-reel Japanese drama for Essanay. A large Japanese street scene is being built. Included in the cast are Frank Borzage, Arthur Hoyt and Virginia Kirtley. W. H. Carr is assistant director. V. R. Day, special representative of the Essanay Company, will stay in the city several weeks to supervise the production.

The Lincoln Motion Picture Company, of this city, has applied for papers of incorporation for $75,000, under the laws of this state. Incorporators include Noble M. Johnson, president; Clarence Brooks, secretary; James Thomas Smith, treasurer; Dudley A. Brooks and George P. Johnson. The Lincoln Motion Picture Company is a company of colored people, producing pictures for negroes. The actors are all negroes. So far the company has produced two plays, "A Negro's Ambition" and "A Trooper of Company K," which we are informed have met with great success among the picture theaters catering to colored patronage.

Margarita Fischer.

It is as yet undecided whether the Pollard Picture Players will remain in San Diego or move to Santa Barbara. The company has been given notice to vacate their premises on Exposition Grounds, as the commissioners have decided that commercial enterprises could not legally be given sites in the park after the closing of the Exposition. All of the buildings on the Isthmus, with the exception of the Painted Desert, will be wrecked. The San Diego Chamber of Commerce indorsed a plan this week, we learn from the local papers, for making the Pollard Picture Players a permanent San Diego institution. George Osgood, the financial head of the company, wishes to move the studio to Santa Barbara, his home town. However, the Pollard Picture Players, we are informed, would be willing to remain in San Diego if local capital can be induced to build a new studio. The Pollard Picture Players have produced "The Pearl of Paradise," "Miss Jackie of the Navy," "The Butterfly Girl" and are now working on "The Devil's Assistant," a feature production for the Mutual, in which Monroe Salisbury and Margarita Fischer are being starred.

Enid Bennett, the new star of the Thomas H. Ince constellation, who has been in New York since the opening of the New Year, returned to the Culver City studios last week and immediately started rehearsing on her third Triangle-Kay-Bee play, under the direction of Reginald Barker. This play is from the pen of C. Gardner Sullivan.

Judge Lyman I. Henry, of Colorado, is in the city to produce a motion picture film dealing with a Biblical subject. Judge Henry was formerly a judge of the Circuit Court in Colorado. He became interested in the motion picture business and organized a company with local capital. A director from Universal City, it is stated, will be employed to direct the production. The studio location has not as yet been chosen.

Work will soon begin, we are informed, on a studio for the Nat C. Goodwin Film Company, at the Goodwin ranch, fifteen miles south of Beaumont. The company was incorporated in Milwaukee for $500,000. Interested in the enterprise, we understand, are F. E. McGovern, formerly Governor of Wisconsin; Henry E. Winkler, Levi Pollard and Frank Saxe, well-known exhibitor and amusement promoter of the Middle West. It was stated that $100,000 would be immediately expended on studio equipment and preliminary producing activities.

Geraldine Farrar will arrive in Los Angeles early this spring to appear in another feature production for the Lasky Company.

Charles E. Sebastian, formerly Mayor of Los Angeles, it is stated, will depict the story of his career in moving pictures. The story of Mr. Sebastian's scenario deals with his rise from patrolman to chief of police and his election as Mayor of Los Angeles. His leading lady will be Miss Virginia Nelson, who will play the part of a woman of the underworld.

E. H. Allen, business manager of the Thomas H. Ince studios, returned this week from San Francisco, where he went to extend Ince's bon voyage message to E. R. Champion, on the occasion of the latter's departure for the Orient with a copy of "Civilization." Mr. Champion will first invade China and then visit the other far-eastern countries, exhibiting the great Ince peace drama. He is equipped with eight different sets of sub-titles, each being in a different tongue.

The tragedy of last year's road race at Santa Monica was recalled this week when it was learned that the Industrial Accident Commission had awarded a death benefit of $5,000 to Mrs. Jennie Jenkins, of this city, for the loss of her husband, Leslie B. Jenkins, a moving picture photographer, killed last November at the Santa Monica Grand Prix. The award was made against a local film company.

Clyde L. McNett, a rough and tumble actor, is suing a local film company for $40, the amount which he told Justice Brown, Wednesday of this week, the company agreed to pay him for falling from a fifty-foot wall. The company did not deny the agreement, but it did set forth that the young and handsome actor did not fall, that he jumped and as a result spoilt $4,000 worth of production. McNett claims that he fell twice and called in as a witness William Hammon, an actor employed in the same company, who testified that McNett surely fell, because he had slugged him on the head with a three-pound rubber mace, and almost knocked McNett unconscious. After several hours of deliberation the court was adjourned to the motion picture company's studio to see samples of "falls," and decision will be rendered February 5.

The Signal Film Corporation this week started production on the second installment of the Helen Holmes serial, "The Railroad Raiders," entitled "A Double Steal."

For use in the production of the second episode of this serial, Director J. P. McGowan is having built at the studios, a four-room house to be used as the headquarters of the "raiders." The set is a novel one in that it is being so constructed that it may be used for both interior and exterior scenes. It is also built so that by moving back from it with the camera, the entire interior, three downstairs and one upstairs room may be shown in one scene, showing action going on in all four rooms at the same time. This will be of special use for the staging of a gang fight that is to be made in the house.

Helen Holmes in "The Railroad Raiders"

Raiders" J. P. McGowan staged one of the most thrilling gang fights ever released on the Mutual program—thrilling, that is for the players who were engaged in it. The fight was staged on the top of a freight running at a speed of between forty and fifty miles an hour. For picture purposes it was not necessary to travel at such a rate, but the train had to make two miles in three minutes in order to meet the local passenger train at Signal siding. They made the meet on schedule, but the actors who were doing the fighting are still discovering new gray hairs in their thatches that were not there before.

T. W. Scheffield, formerly of the New York Herald, is in Santa Barbara preparing a scenario dealing with the life in the navy. This is with the approval of the United States Naval authorities, the purpose of the film being to stimulate recruiting by showing in motion pictures conditions as they actually are on board ship and in the training schools.

Secretary Daniels has given Mr. Scheffield all necessary privileges in connection with the work, much of which has been done on the Pacific Coast, with the co-operation of the commanding officers of battleships and naval stations.

Beverly H. Griffith, of the Universal Animated Weekly staff, left this week with Charles Kingsbury, one of the expert cinematographers of the Universal Company, for El Paso, having been ordered to the Texas city by H. O. Davis, immediately upon receipt of the news of anti-American demonstrations in Juarez, which is directly across the bridge from El Paso.

While at El Paso Griffith and his cameraman will cover for the Universal Animated Weekly the withdrawal of the American troops from Mexico. Griffith accompanied General Pershing's expedition into Mexico some months ago, at which time he "shot" thousands of feet of film for the Universal Company's news pictorial.

Jiro Hitomi, who is one of the chief representatives of the Japanese Government in Korea, paid a visit to Universal City this week. "American films seem to be very popular in Japan," said Mr. Hitomi, "all the people who go to see the films pay even higher prices for their entertainment than you do in this country. The film plays have taken quite a hold upon our people and our theaters are constantly crowded. The photodrama has played havoc with the legitimate stage, not only in Japan but in the other countries of the Orient, and the Japanese and other actors of the spoken drama are seeking other occupations."

Mr. Hitomi is making a tour of the United States to study industrial conditoins.

Fanny Reeves McDowell, who was known professionally as Fanny Reeves, and who was a popular star twenty-five years ago, died at the German Sanitarium, Los Angeles, on January 29, after an illness of only three weeks.

Mrs. McDowell was the widow of the late Eugene A. McDowell, well-known actor and theatrical manager, and a niece of Sims Reeves, the noted English tenor. Her father was William Reeves, also a well-known actor, and her mother was Jane Webster, another stage favorite. Claire McDowell, daughter of the woman who passed to the great beyond, is one of the leading actresses at the Universal Film Company.

Rex Ingram, who has produced many fine features for the Bluebird Company, is one of the most versatile directors in the business and an u nusually good director. He is noted for his acting ability and also for his work in sculpture. At the present time, Mr. Ingram is molding, from life, a bust of Nicolas Dunaew, the Russian tragedian, to be used in Ingram's production of "Ships That Pass," which features our good friend Dunaew.

Chas. P. Stallings, assistant to Producer Fred J. Palshofer, returned Monday of this week to the Yorke-Metro studios from the timber lands of Northern California. He brought with him several hundred feet of big tree stuff, including a log jamb. The scenes were for the current Yorke-Metro feature, "The Promise."

Stallings experienced many hardships while securing these scenes. He was obliged to live at the logging camp with the Italian laborers, and had to tote his camera in and out of the mountains. In addition, he walked forty miles because the road that he was to travel had been washed out by the big rains.

A peculiar item was listed on the requisitions for the Yorke-Metro studio this week, and Auditor W. J. Gibson had to fathom a funny enigma. On one slip was set forth this item: "Two barbers, $7.00 each—$14.00" and Gibson found that Director Oscar Apfel had used fifty extra men whose heads had been clipped close, as they had to play Indians in the picture, "The Hidden Children." Such is the moving picture business.

At the Fine Arts Studios, Director Paul Powell is staging "Betsy's Burglar," a melodramatic-comedy starring Constance Talmadge and written by Frank E. Woods. John Leezue is turning the camera for the production. Kenneth Harlan, who plays opposite to Miss Talmadge, appears for the first time in Fine Arts pictures. The other principals in the cast include Monte Blue, Joseph Singleton, Josephine Crowell, Clyde Hopkins, Hal Wilson and Kate Bruce.

Director Lloyd Ingraham is busily engaged in the filming of the Triangle-Fine Arts production, "A Young Gentleman of the Old School," writen by Frank E. Woods, manager of production at the Fine Arts plant, and featuring Robert Harron. The other principals in the cast include Sam de Grasse, Loyola O'Connor, Colleen Moore, Alma Reuben, Charles Lee, Wilbur Higby and Bert Hadley.

Director Tod Browning and his entire company worked all night this week at one of the leading confectioners in Los Angeles, staging scenes for "A Love Sublime" (temporary title), with Wilfred Lucas playing the leading role. In this production it was necessary to show an elegant confectionery store, including tables, chairs, furnishings and equipment. Director Browning figured that he could get more realism and atmosphere by engaging an entire confectionery store than he could by attempting to build it at the Fine Arts studio. Arrangements were made and as a result Browning secured the use of one of the largest confectionery stores in Los Angeles from midnight until morning. Arc lights were installed and the establishment appeared in a number of the scenes. In this picture Carmel Myers plays opposite Wilfred Lucas. The supporting cast include Fred Turner, Alice Rae, George Beranger, Jack Brammall, James O'Shea and Bert Woodruff.

Dorothy Dalton concluded her performance this week in the Triangle-Kay Bee drama by John Lynch, in which Thomas H. Ince will present her as star. Under the direction of Charles Miller she enacted the last scene at 1 a. m., she having worked, with other members of the company, until that time, on one of the glass enclosed stages at Culver City. She is now spending a few days atop Mount Baldy, skiing and snow-shoeing, prior to undertaking the interpretation of her next role.

Robert and M. F. Kherlin, of the Oakland Amusement Company, have consummated a deal with Shirley C. Ward, of Los Angeles, who will erect a large motion picture theater on Grand avenue, of this city, which will cost about $100,000 for their use. The building will be started within a month and it is planned to open the theater on the first of next November.

O. Henry's Stories In Pictures

Vitagraph Company Will Produce a Selected List for General Film.

THE General Film Company announces that it will commence releasing on March 3 the best of the famous stories of O. Henry, the greatest of all short story writers. The stories will be two-reel Broadway Star Features and will be made by the Vitagraph Company. The first release will be based on the famous story, "Past One at Rooney's," and will feature a number of famous picture players.

Seldom has a series of picture plays been announced that will bring as much anticipation. O. Henry is a name to conjure with. His stories are all "different." His career was an astounding one up to his untimely death in 1910, and he even spent several years in prison for a crime which it is declared he never committed, but he never stopped writing his wonderful stories, even while behind the bars. Today the various volumes containing his great array of short stories are in constant demand by millions of fiction lovers who will be anxious to see them on the screen.

His life, filled as it was with romance, had a profound effect on his works. He saw the romance in everything—the shop girl, the cowboy's life, the city loafer—all had their message for O. Henry. His tales of New York life vary from the most pathetic to the most thrilling. He always has some surprise in store for his readers.

O. Henry's real name, which long remained a mystery to the reading public, was William Sydney Porter. He was born in Greensboro, S. C., September 11, 1862, and died in New York, June 5, 1910.

The volumes of O. Henry's works from which the cream is to be skimmed for this series are "Cabbages and Kings," "The Four Million," "The Gentle Grafter," "The Heart of the West," "The Man Higher Up," "Options," "Roads of Destiny," "Rolling Stones," "Sixes and Sevens," "Strictly Business," "The Trimmed Lamp," "The Voice of the City" and "Whirligigs."

Schulberg Is Paramount's General Manager

President Abrams Creates Office and Elevates Well-Known Publicity Director.

BENJAMIN P. SCHULBERG, director of publicity of Paramount Pictures Corporation, has been promoted to the office of general manager of the company. Kenneth Hodkinson, formerly office manager of Paramount, had resigned. President Hiram Abrams merged the positions held by Mr. Schulberg and Mr. Hodkinson, created the post of general manager, and named Mr. Schulberg to fill it. The appointment became effective Wednesday, February 7. The action of President Abrams will be a popular one in the trade.

Benjamin P. Schulberg.

Mr. Schulberg probably has been associated with fewer companies than any other man who has been in the same branch of the business the same length of time. He made his entrance into the film industry as associate editor of one of the earliest trade papers and the first mouthpiece of the independent manufacturers, Filmed Reports. He joined the Rex company upon its formation, as scenario editor and advertising and publicity manager, remaining with that company until its affiliation with the Universal, when he was transferred to the larger organization as scenario editor.

When the Famous Players Company was organized in 1912 Mr. Schulberg became scenario editor and advertising and publicity manager. Later, after the production of many successful subjects, the work had so grown it became necessary for him to devote all his time to the advertising and publicity. He has continued to hold that position following the merger with the Lasky company and the Morosco company and the absorption of Paramount.

Mr. Schulberg brings to his new position an unusual equipment. His many years in the business, his wide acquaintance and his extensive circle of friends, and his unquestioned ability in writing a story are some of the factors entering into this equipment. He long has been looked upon as being one of the best writers among his contemporaries. He has a distinctive style; one that shows steady growth with his own development. What perhaps has contributed to the quality of his work has been his faith in the star of Adolph Zukor, with whom he has been closely associated since Mr. Zukor's entrance into the manufacturing field.

REID-ROBARDS PICTURE COMPANY ORGANIZED.

The Reid-Robards Picture Company is the title of a new organization in which Hal Reid and Willis Robards are interested. The company will have a studio at St. Cruz, Cal., and intend to produce for the states rights market.

Edward Warren Starts Company

Has Backing of Western Capitalists in New Enterprise—Important People Engaged for First Production.

EDWARD WARREN, pioneer motion picture producer, and one of the first directors in America to produce big multiple reel attractions for the state right market, four years ago, has organized a company of his own to produce big plays, to be known as the Edward Warren Productions. The new company has the financial backing of a coterie of industrial kings of the Middle West. Mr. Warren has perfected the producing and business organizations in the last month, and his machinery is now in practical operation. His first production, now known by the title of "The Transgressor," by Lawrence Marston, with Charlotte Ives (late with E. H. Sothern), Sheldon Lewis, of "Iron Claw" fame, and Walter Hampden, known the world over for his interpretation of the Saviour in "The Servant in the House," will soon be well under way at the Herbert Brenon Studios.

Edward Warren.

George Fitch, formerly technical director for Brenon, has been engaged in the same capacity with Mr. Warren. Henry Cronyager, who photoplayed "The Deemster," has been engaged as the camera man. H. Z. Levine, recently of Triangle, will be Mr. Warren's business manager.

"In launching this company," said Mr. Warren, in speaking of his new enterprise, "I am fulfilling cherished ambitions of almost a decade. All these years I have been more than anxious to have my own organization, and produce pictures in my own way. There is a sense of relief to be able to do things without catering or taking into consideration the mediocrity of ideas of those 'higher up.' For the last three years I have been a student of the industry. I have been analyzing not only tendencies of the market, but have also been keeping my fingers on the pulse of progress. I have stored up knowledge in abundance, and have conserved my energies for something worth while. I have my opportunity now, and I not only mean to profit by it, but also will the public, the exhibitor and the state right buyer."

Mr. Warren in the last five years has been with some of the leading motion picture companies and has produced what manufacturers call "money makers"—or productions that cost little and bring back a "big lot." Mr. Warren will now produce plays that cost a "lot." but will bring back acres of "dough."

NEW KALEM STUDIO NEARING COMPLETION.

According to the latest reports from Lower California, Kalem's new enclosed studio at Glendale is rapidly nearing completion. It is 100x150 feet. The present outdoor stages have been rebuilt so as to conform to convenient working with the new indoor studio.

Besides these important structures many minor stages have been built on different parts of the grounds. Landscape artists will be employed for the beautification of the grounds. Speaking editorially of the Kalem enterprises as an asset to the picturesque little city of Glendale, the Glendale Sun says: "The establishment of the head offices of the Kalem Company in Glendale (producing division) has a wonderful meaning when the whole situation is analyzed. It means the steady employment of hundreds of people with a weekly payroll of approximately $40,000. All home labor is being employed in the building of this model institution and local talent will be given the preference in the production of the various pictures wherever practical."

Quite naturally the Kalem Company feels gratified that it has the good will of the citizens of Glendale and sincerely believes that they will produce better and bigger pictures because of it.

Chaplin-Mutual Sold to Japan

Sale Arranged by Chester Beecroft, Who Handles Foreign Marketing of Famous Comedian's Pictures.

THE rights to the Chaplin-Mutual Series of twelve two-reel comedies have been disposed of for Japan for a fancy price which includes a cash payment of $10,000. This sale was made by Chester Beecroft, of 71 West 23d street, New York, and was arranged by him through Fred Bolton, of the Anglo-Italian Films, Ltd., London, the man who last autumn purchased the same series for the United Kingdom for a sum closely approaching the half-million-dollar mark.

The extraordinary popularity achieved by Charlie Chaplin since the signing of his $670,000 contract with the Lone Star Corporation has been signally demonstrated by the seemingly fabulous prices which have been obtained for the Chaplin-Mutual series from the foreign markets.

Thus far the United Kingdom, India, Africa, Scandinavia, Spain, Australia, New Zealand and Japan have been closed. Negotiations covering nearly every unsold territory on earth are well under way and will soon be concluded.

Jack Livingston, New Ince Leading Man

JACK LIVINGSTON, who will fill one of the leading roles in "Back of the Man," the new Triangle-Ince production, gives the following account of his career:

"I was born in St. Albans, Vt., but left there when I was fourteen years old, going to New York, where I remained for four years. At eighteen I went to Chicago, entering Chicago University, taking up journalism. After three years' study I decided that the world could do without my efforts in this direction, so I did not graduate.

Jack Livingston.

"I then somehow drifted into the show business, playing in repertoire at $15 per week, eventually reaching leads. In 1912 I joined Kinemacolor, which was my first picture work. Later I attached myself to Selig, playing leads.

"My next screen work was opposite Enid Markey with the Ammex Company. Then one year with the Alburquerque Film Company, after which I organized the Masterpiece Film Mfg. Company, featuring Max Figman and Lolita Robertson.

"Sometime after this I found myself playing opposite Norma Talmadge, under National auspices, and finally was engaged by Morosco, playing leads with Vivian Martin, Myrtle Stedman, Edna Goodrich and others on the Morosco program, before signing up with Thomas H. Ince.

Livingston has a part in "Back of the Man," which will call into use every resource that his experience and natural versatility make him master of.

REICHER TO DIRECT MISS ILLINGTON.

Frank Reicher, Lasky-Paramount director, has been chosen to preside over Margaret Illington's motion picture debut in the Lasky adaptation of Basil King's celebrated novel and play "The Inner Shrine," in which the star won one of her greatest stage successes. Until her departure for the Famous Players studio in the east, Mr. Reicher had been directing Marie eDoro, her transfeer from Hollywood being so timed as to give the director ample opportunity for selecting his cast and finding his locations for the Illington production before his star arrived at the studio.

As a consequence of this arrangement, Miss Illington found everything in readiness to begin work the instant she arrived at Hollywood and no time was lost in getting the picture under way.

The Knack in Naming Pictures

A Bit of the Psychology of Titles Explained by William A. Brady.

SEVERAL reviewers of the World Brady-made picture, "The Hungry Heart," in which Alice Brady is the star, have expressed surprise at the substitution of this title for "Frou Frou," under which name the play was originally known. Giving his reason for making the change, Director-General William A. Brady, of the World Film Corporation, had some interesting and practical remarks to make on play titles in general.

"I put titles on pictures to sell them," said Mr. Brady to a reporter. "If you select a name that not everybody understands and all cannot pronounce, you are placing your picture under just that much of a handicap. When 'Frou Frou' was played as a drama upon the speaking stage, numbers of persons called it 'Frow Frow,' and I do not suppose very many knew the significance of the name. But it is a sure thing that everybody of ordinary intelligence will get a suggestion from 'The Hungry Heart,' which carries a direct meaning in plan, homely words.

"It is a dangerous thing to tag a picture, or a spoken play, with a name in a foreign tongue or one that is not universally familiar. I recall that the late Augustin Daly produced a drama which he called 'Pique,' and what the public did with that title was almost beyond belief. People called it 'Pike,' 'Pick-wee,' 'Pee-Kay' and almost everything that can be imagined. The subtle meaning of the word in association with the story did not occur to them at all, and Mr. Daly's drama was greatly injured in consequence.

"There was another play named 'Mlle. Fifi' that immediately degenerated into 'Millie Fye-fye' and never came back. In my own production of 'Divorcons' I noticed that an amazing number of individuals pronounced it 'Divorkons,' and of course had no notion at all of what the title meant.

"The first idea would be that in transferring a celebrated play to the screen the original name should be retained. This would be the right conclusion in any case where the title was in plain English and simple enough to be instantly understood by practically every beholder. But not when a very considerable part of the public is sure to call it 'Frow Frow' and wonder what on earth it is all about.

"When I switch the titles of World picture plays, as I quite frequently do, the idea is to provide something that will enter every mind and stick there. Take for instance the 'Parasites,' which has been changed to 'A Square Deal.' The definition of the word parasite might be difficult to some persons—those for instance who had not been long in this country; and there are hundreds of thousands of these who patronize the moving pictures. I will venture to say that very few would have the slightest trouble in getting a tolerably clear idea of the kind of play they were likely to see under the name 'A Square Deal.'

"Just imagine what would happen to almost any article of commerce, however valuable, issued with a title that a perceptible percentage of the population could not pronounce and that carried no definite idea of its utility. Times have changed since Shakespeare inquired 'What's in a name?'"

BILL ALDRICH TO MAKE AUTOMOBILE PICTURE.

William F. Aldrich, is in Detroit, Mich., preparing to produce a seven-reel automobile story. Mr. Aldrich is well known in New York, and has had considerable experience in the production end of the business. Arrangements have been made with the Packard Motor Car Company for the use of its factory, in which many of the important scenes of the story will be filmed.

Mr. Aldrich has been making an extensive tour throughout the United States in the interest of his last picture, "The Slave Mart," and has been successful in disposing of the state rights for this production.

During his visit to Detroit Mr. Aldrich found it an ideal city in which to produce his automobile story, so as soon as he had finished his trip he returned there, with the result that his next picture will be a real automobile story, produced among the atmosphere of automobiles, such as can be obtained in no other city in the United States.

Mr. Aldrich is expected in New York in a few days to arrange for his cast which will be obtained here.

LUCILLE YOUNGE ENGAGED BY AMERICAN COMPANY.

Lucille Younge is the latest arrival at the studio of the American Film Company at Santa Barbara. Miss Younge has been engaged for the feminine heavy role in the next William Russell production, "High Play."

Miss Younge's last appearance on the screen was in the character of Mary Magdalene in "Intolerance."

Kleinschmidt Shows War Pictures

Many Scenes Taken on the Austrian Front of Various Phases of Battle and Preparation for It.

THE pictures taken by Captain F. E. Kleinschmidt on the Austrian front were shown to the trade in New York on Wednesday, February 7. The Captain, who is known to the American public as an arctic explorer and lecturer, was present and described to his audience his experiences in the taking of the scenes being shown on the screen. The exhibition lasted two hours, and to say it was interesting is putting it conservatively. There are intimate views of war in its prosecution, of trench work, of armies on the march, of big guns in transport and in action, of aeroplanes in flight and photographs taken from them, of submarines under full steam, afloat and submerged; of cavalry in pursuit of Russians, of building of bridges, of burning villages, of the despair of peasants caught between the two forces, of shelling of positions and of the position where the camera was planted being shelled.

In the first reel is a view of a trench, the camera commanding a view of many yards. The stretcher bearers are busy. One man not twenty feet from the lens falls to the ground; there is no swinging of arms or spinning around as we see it in the staged conception. He simply slips out of his place. An officer picks up the rifle lying beside the dead man and fills the gap in the ranks. There is haste, but apparently no excitement. Each man is attending to his own work; he sees nothing of what is going on about him.

There are graphic views of the country around Belgrade, taken by Captain Kleinschmidt from an aeroplane. It shows the damage done by the bombardment, of shell craters everywhere, frequently in groups just on the line of the enemy trenches. The fortifications are in plain view, demonstrating the military value of motion pictures taken from the air. The views of the submarine, taken from the deck of its companion, are of rare interest.

The burning by the retreating Russians of the city of Brest-Litovsk is shown in many of its horrors. Many feet of film are devoted to the distress of the peasants, turned out of the city four days before. It gives a side of war sometimes overlooked by newspaper readers.

One of the scenes that will star is the shelling of a Russian position a little over a mile distant, a valley separating the two forces. Later we see what the cannonading has done to this same position. Another series of rare views portray what happened when the Russians discovered the location of a battery harassing them. Great clouds of earth are thrown up close to the camera. The captain requested his audience to follow the coming picture of three shells bursting close together and to observe how short the picture was cut. There was a flash of the three earth clouds. There was no need to explain why the camera stopped working.

To Make Government Films Available

Congress May Permit Secretary of Agriculture to Rent Them for Theaters.

IF THE House of Representatives concurs in the action taken by the Senate in amending the law as it now stands relating to the sale by the Department of Agriculture of motion picture films, such films may be secured by commercial firms desiring them for rental in the same way as commercially made films are marketed.

The sale of these films is covered in a provision of the annual agricultural appropriation bill, which reads: "The Secretary of Agriculture is authorized, under such rules and regulations and subject to such conditions as he may prescribe, to loan, rent, or sell copies of films to educational institutions or associations for agricultural education not organized for profit." The Senate Committee on Agriculture and Forestry recommended that the requirement that the loan, rental or sale of these films be confined "to educational institutions or associations for agricultural education not organized for profit," be waived and the words last quoted dropped from the language of the provision. This was agreed upon with the addition of a proviso that in the disposal of the films such organizations shall have the preference.

Quite a number of the films turned out by the department's cameramen are of a highly entertaining nature and would find favor in connection with the regular programs. Efforts have heretofore been made by commercial companies, it is declared, to get some of these but the wording of the provision referred to has operated against them.

The films produced by the Department of Agriculture, as well as being very interesting, are highly educational. Some of them are very thrilling, such as those depicting the great forest fires. These pictures have on a number of occasions been shown at private exhibitions in the local theaters and have created a great deal of interest.

Return Entry Question Decided

United States Supreme Court Decision Makes Exact Identity of Film Necessary.

THE United States Court of Customs Appeals has refused to reverse the decision of the Collector of Customs, who refused to permit the free entry into the United States of two lots of positive motion picture films. Exemption from duty was claimed by Charles D. Stone & Company on the ground that these were American goods exported and returned to the United States without having been advanced in value or improved in condition. Duty was assessed upon them under paragraph 474 of the Tariff Act of 1909 as photographic film positives.

Exemption was claimed under paragraph 500 of the law, which provides for the free importation of "articles the growth, produce, or manufacture of the United States . . . when returned after having been exported, without having been advanced in value or improved in condition." This exemption from duty is made subject to the condition that "proof of the identity of such articles shall be made, under general regulations to be prescribed by the Secretary of the Treasury." Under this authority the Secretary of the Treasury has provided that if the merchandise be returned to the port of original exportation, outward shipment must appear from the records at that port, and if to a port other than that of original exportation there shall be required a certificate from the collector and naval officer of the port where the exportation was made showing the fact of exportation from that port. This requirement can be waived upon the satisfactory showing that the goods are of domestic origin, and that it is impracticable to obtain the certificate.

In the case of Charles D. Stone & Company a showing was made to the collector stating in substance that the films were shipped out of the United States at different times and that the importer was unable to furnish a bill of lading. Notwithstanding this, the collector assessed a duty upon the goods.

In affirming the decision of the collector, the United States Court of Customs Appeals said that "the only just inference from this action is that the collector was not satisfied with the showing made. There appears in the case evidence indicating that goods having the same appearance that these goods have could be reproduced abroad by first producing negatives from them and then producing positives from the negatives thus made. In view of these facts, it is quite reasonable to infer that the collector was not satisfied from an examination of the goods that they were of domestic origin. What extraneous facts may have been within the knowledge of the collector to justify him in proceeding with caution or to justify a suspicion of the domestic origin of these films, does not appear. But the duty of deciding the question was reposed in him by the regulations. Such duty must rest with the officers of the customs if proof of identity is to be exacted, and such proof of identity must be exacted because the statute in terms requires it."

Fire Regulations at Washington, D. C.

District Commissioner Considering Rules for Handling and Storing Films.

FIRE MARSHAL P. W. NICHOLSON has just submitted to the Commissioners of the District of Columbia the regulations governing the handling of inflammable motion picture films, upon which he has been working for several months and which have been keeping the local exchange managers in hot water for pretty nearly a like period of time.

The regulations are considered as an aid in fire prevention work. They cover the storage, handling and manufacture of motion picture films, the storage and handling of matches, and contain provisions to prevent the throwing away of cigars, cigarettes, matches., etc., on awnings or other building projections in the District of Columbia.

The proposed regulations further provide that no automobile or automobile truck shall be permitted to be stored or kept in or under any building used for dwelling purposes, except in a fireproof room.

These regulations are such as will require the erection of a building especially suited for housing motion picture film exchanges. When it was at first announced that the fire marshal was promulgating the regulations, it was said that a number of builders and real estate operators were figuring on putting up such a structure. When these men found that they could not tie the exchange managers and their companies up for a prolonged period of time, their interest seemed to lag, and since that time, while it would have been possble to put up half a dozen buildings, none of these men or companies has even broken ground.

It would be an exceptionally difficult matter to any but perhaps one or two of the exchanges to get into such shape as to enable them to pass muster before the fire department authorities under the provisions of the new law. For instance, it would be necessary to put in steel shelving, in a fireproof room.

Several of the firms have signified their intention of removing their offices to Baltimore in the event that it is found impossible to comply with the provisions of the regulations. Should this be done, in all probability, there will come a howl of protest from all the business organizations in the city. The managers feel that it is expensive enough in the District of Columbia to do business, without being hampered further.

The regulations were prepared by Fire Marshal Nicholson, after a consultation with Commissioner Brownlow, Fire Chief Frank J. Wagner, Inspector of Buildings Morris Hacker and Assistant Corporation Counsel F. H. Stephens.

Preparations are being made, it has been announced, for public hearings on the regulations at which the film men, the operators of large theaters and other interested parties will have an opportunity of stating their views in this matter. The hearings will probably be held early in March.

Philip Bartholomae With Pathe

Popular Playright Heads That Company's Scenario Department—Well Qualified for Position.

THE rapid expansion of Pathe's activities is evidenced in another direction this week by the announcement that Philip Bartholomae, a well-known playwright, has been quietly acting as the head of the scenario department for the past three months. This most important department approves, rejects or rewrites the scenarios of all the Pathe producing companies before the scripts are turned over to the director and then they pass on the director's work. Due to the masterly and tactful way in which Mr. Bartholomae has filled this most difficult position, authors are pleased with the improvement of their stories, and the directors by receiving better scripts and intelligent criticism of their development of the stories state enthusiastically that their pictures are better and made with less waste.

J. A. Berst, vice-president and general manager, states that this committee headed by Mr. Bartholomae and composed of men and women, each of whom is an expert in some particular line of production, deserves considerable credit for a marked improvement in Pathe pictures during the past few months.

Mr. Bartholomae is perhaps best known to the theatrical audiences of the country through his latest success, "Very Good Eddie," which ran for two solid years on Broadway and is now playing to capacity business in other large cities and is opening in London next month. Among his other Broadway hits were "Little Miss Brown," "When Dreams Come True" and "Over Night."

Of particular interest to picture people is the fact that Mr. Bartholomae has always found and developed his own stage stars, notable among them being Madge Kennedy and Joe Santley, and he now has under contract two young society girls who are so well equipped with all the qualifications of picture stars that they are expected to leap into fame in pictures just as Miss Kennedy and Mr. Santley did on the stage.

Mr. Bartholomae is now working on the scenario of a big production which will be produced under his supervision and in which these two "finds" will probably make their debut.

Educated in the universities of American and Europe and the heir of a family rich for generations, Mr. Bartholomae has always conducted all his business ventures on a high plane that has drawn cultured artists to his companies and brought an indefinable charm and refinement to his productions. Doubtless the screen world will be enriched by the same genius.

During his career as a dramatic playwright, Mr. Bartholomae was associated with some of the shrewdest producers in the show business. He has developed to a remarkable extent the ability to separate the wheat from the chaff and his keen insight into the psychology of audiences has been responsible to a great extent for the many successes with which he has been identified.

"The picture audiences of the country, I am told, number over twenty-five millions and are growing daily," Mr. Bartholomae said. "The tendency is toward better stories, better casts and better direction, and I feel safe in predicting that in a year or so three-quarters of the population of the country will be patrons of the picture shows."

Transmits Scenario by Telepathy

Alabama Man Sends Psychic Scenario to New York for Violet Mesereau, Universal Star.

HIS psychic self traveling more than twelve hundred miles on a space-annihilating train of thought, the first psycho-scenario writer of record transmitted from Selma, Ala., to New York, a five-reel scenario for Miss Violet Mesereau, the Bluebird star, on the night of Thursday, February 8. The psychic wonder's name is Edgar Cayce, and while he was physically asleep down in Alabama, his mysterious and uncanny "thought-self" penetrated the concentrated collective mind of thirty newspaper men and motion picture trade journal representatives—the guests at dinner in Churchill's of the Universal Film Manufacturing Company.

The scenario itself, taking physical form in the shape of a 450-word telegram, was received while the members of the dinner party were still making merry. The plot is psychological in the extreme, and the man whose powers have baffled scientists calls it "Through the Sublimal." That the psychic-scenarioist has entered thought-realms closed to most of us was proven by the precautions against faking taken by the Universal; and further by the fact that the rough synopsis is now in the hands of a continuity writer.

It all started something like this: On December 13 last President Carl Laemmle received a mysterious letter from one Edwin Williamson, who in addition to acting as freight agent for the Southern Railway at Selma, fills in his spare time by acting as spiritual advisor, or spiritual business manager of Mr. Cayce.

In this letter Williamson said that he had a personal friend who was possessed of "an unusual gift, power or whatever it might be called." This friend was in the habit of going into a hypnotic sleep, from self-suggestion or otherwise, and then he conversed with the party whom he went to sleep to. Mr. Williamson stated that he had diagnosed many diseases that have baffled physicians and has located lost articles, and performed many other wonderful feats.

"If you are interested, and will write me, naming a date and the hour, allowing for the difference in time, stating the name of the party who you have in mind to take the lead in a photoplay, and tell me the street and house number where the party will be, I think I can surprise you."

Mr. Laemmle was so much impressed with the possibilities that he turned over the correspondence to the publicity department and instructed that the fellow be given an opportunity of showing what he could do.

Accordingly, it was decided to hold the test at Churchill's, and that Violet Mesereau, with a staff of newspaper men and trade journalists, be on hand to await the results.

The ceremonies were in charge of Nat Rothstein, advertising manager of the Universal, who explained to the gathering what it was all about, aided by speeches on psychology, etc., by Paul Gulick, Eustace Hale Ball, who is the author of the Universal's forthcoming serial, "The Voice on the Wire," and Dr. William E. Young, who is an authority on the subject of hypnotism, mental telepathy, self-suggestion and psychoanalysis.

A table was placed in the center of the room and on it was laid a piece of paper describing the sort of play Violet Mersereau would like for her next vehicle. This was at exactly 8.30, and the paper remained there for fifty minutes—the time required for the test. And all the time it was there Edgar Cayce was suggesting himself to sleep down there in Selma.

In addition to the scientific interest manifested in the Southern man's performance, the party at Churchill's had a wonderful time socially. It was mostly a "stag" affair, Miss Violet Mesereau and her mother being the only members of the fair sex present. Miss Mesereau again proved her versatility, too, by dancing with every one of the thirty men present.

Cinema Club Ball at Plaza

More Than Four Hundred Persons Make Merry in Grand Ballroom of Famous Hotel.

RIVALING in prominence and brilliance any film affair of the past, the fourth annual ball of the Cinema Camera Club of America, Inc., was held in the Grand Ballroom of the Hotel Plaza, New York, on Saturday evening, February 10. More than two hundred couples attended, and seldom have the walls of the world-famous ballroom looked down upon a more representative gathering.

Dancing was indulged in with vivacity by all those who attended, and the social element was uppermost all the time. In the midst of the festivities interest centered in the Grand March, which was led by Alice Brady and Robert Warwick, who were, respectively, patroness and patron of the ball. Almost every one of the merrymakers participated in the march.

Credit is due the various committees for the faultless manner in which the function was conducted. Arthur Edeson was chairman of the ball committee; John W. Boyle was floor manager, and Herbert O. Carleton assistant floor manager.

The entertainment committee consisted of: Victor Miller, Edward Horn, Alfonso Liguori, Lewis W. Physioc, Ned Van Buren, and George W. Coudert.

Master Company Buys Site

Houston, Texas, To Have Producing Plant of Masterpicture Brand.

AT a cost of $21,000 the Master Motion Picture Company has purchased nearly four acres of land, with a frontage of 780 feet on Houston avenue, Houston, Texas, almost directly across the street from the old Highland Park grounds. Within the next few days buildings which will cost approximately $10,000 will be started.

The tract, within five minutes' ride on a street car from the heart of Houston, is one of the most picturesque that could be selected within miles of the city. The acreage slopes down into a broken ravine at one end and has a depth from the street of 240 feet.

It is here that motion pictures to bear the "Masterpiece" brand will be made. H. J. Binney, for eleven years identified with pictures as both actor and director, for a long time with the Keystone people, is at the head of the new enterprise, a $45,000 corporation.

Plans have already been made for buildings which will include laboratory, dressing rooms, carpenter shop, paint and paper rooms, projecting rooms, developing laboratories, printing rooms, drying rooms, cutting rooms and stage.

Beecroft Buys Picture Rights

Gets Two Edison Productions of Recent Make—Makes Quick Turnover.

CHESTER BEECROFT announces that he has purchased the world's rights to "Pardners" and "Where Love Is," both made by the Edison Company.

"Pardners" is by Rex Beach, author of some of the greatest film successes such as "The Barrier" and "The Spoilers," and features Charlotte Walker. "Where Love Is" is by Wm. J. Locke, the eminent English author, best known in this country perhaps through his "Septimus" and "The Beloved Vagabond," works which have achieved world-wide popularity. This picture features Ann Murdock, the well-known dramatic star, who is regarded as one of the greatest screen actresses disclosed in the last year.

That Mr. Beecroft's judgment of the quality and value of these productions was correct is evidenced by the fact that the American rights were immediately snapped up by the Mutual Film Corporation, and are now being advertised in a manner so elaborate and extensive as to bear ample testimony to the unusual merit of the productions. Mr. Beecroft announces that he has already sold both "Pardners" and "Where Love Is," as well as "The Running Fight," a former Paramount release of which he controls the foreign rights, to the United Kingdom and India, and is being kept busy by the buyers for other foreign territories.

Prizma Color Demonstration

Interesting Demonstration of Improved Color Method Given at Private Film Exhibition at American Museum of Natural History.

Reviewed by Margaret I. MacDonald.

THE auditorium of the American Museum of Natural History was the scene on Thursday evening, Feb. 8, of an interesting demonstration of an improved color method by the Prizma, Inc. Owing to the large number of invited guests who attended it was necessary to repeat the exhibition at 9.30 o'clock in order that the throngs who were left waiting outside the doors of the auditorium might have an equal chance to view the pictures with those whose privilege it was to have been seated for the 8.15 o'clock performance. Preceding each exhibition explanatory remarks regarding the application of scientific principles and laws of light and optics to the Prizma process were made by Ernest Fox Nichols, Sc.D., LL.D., Professor of Physics in Yale University.

The unveiling of the latest attempt to improve known methods of photographing and projecting color film cannot fail to stimulate interest; and while much of the hysterical enthusiasm of a first night exhibition comes from that portion of an audience engrossed with the easy task of admiring an accomplishment, there are others present whose minds are busied with the more serious task of putting the newly claimed attributes through a mental process of weights and measures. With reference to the latter, it is only right and just to say that with the scales properly adjusted Prizma, Inc., will not be the loser.

In viewing the various examples of Prizma photographic studies, some of which were made under natural lighting and some under the artificial light of the studio, the mind reverts unconsciously to other methods of color photography that have been demonstrated in the past, when the consequent drawing of comparisons begins. The most noticeable and one of the most favorable points about the Prizma process is the absence of that disillusionizing analysis of color that was ever present in some of the older methods. It will be remembered that flashes of green and red accompanied the rapid movement of objects on the screen. This fault has been remedied by Prizma. Also a softening of the general color scheme is noticeable, which is doubtless due to the use of four colors instead of two: first, in the exposure of the film through color filters during the photographic process, and, second, the use of these same four colors in the color wheel which is geared to the projector between the light and the film. This film is of the standard width, has the standard perforations, and is photographed at the rate of twenty-four exposures per second. It is in monochrome when finished, and carries latent color values derived from exposure through the filtered colors, red, green, blue and yellow.

The projection of the film is fairly steady and only a slight flicker is noticeable. In the comprehensive manner of demonstration resorted to by Prizma, Inc., service of the color wheel was occasionally dispensed with, giving the audience a chance to compare differences between the ordinary picture and the color picture. At such times it was noticed that the application of color to the picture interfered in a measure with its clearness; in other words, the eye unconsciously seeks a more distinct vision. In landscapes the effect is much the same as that obtained in a painting, and it will be noticed that the green of vegetation is subdued to such an extent as in most cases to give the effect of being viewed from a distance. One of the most perfect color effects is that obtained in a scene on the Pacific Coast where the color of the sea water has been duplicated with startling realism. A pastoral scene with deep perspective of hazy hills and a herd of Holstein and Jersey cattle to the fore is beautiful. Scarcely less beautiful is a river scene evidently photographed in the fall of the year, judging from the dead leaves floating over its black depth. Niagara Falls with its mists and its rainbow is a gem. The Grand Canyon of Arizona, showing also the Colorado River, is impressive as a color study. Other subjects of equal interest in color, as well as choice, were: "The Painted Desert, Arizona"; "The Petrified Forest, Arizona"; "Horse Races at Juarez, Mexico"; "Albuquerque, New Mexico," showing the Indian types, and "Portraits."

The Prizma, Inc., is located at 40 Wall street, New York City. Its officers are E. B. Koopman, president; Francis T. Homer, vice-president; Snowden A. Fahnestock, treasurer, and Geo. P. Kelley, secretary.

They are to be congratulated on the evident success of the project which they have fostered; and we feel sure that this beautiful color method will meet with favor in the filming of the drama as well as the educational picture.

At Leading Picture Theaters

Programs for the Week of February 11 at New York's Best Motion Picture Houses.

"The American Consul" at the Strand.

A PATRIOTIC all-American bill was presented at the Strand theater, the week of February 11. The performance commenced with "Home Sweet Home As Played the World Over," rendered by the concert orchestra, after which a tableaux, "The Spirit of '76," was shown on the stage. Next an Abraham Lincoln picture, entitled, "The Seventh Son," was presented. Irene Audrey, a beautiful young singer, draped in a silk American flag, rendered "My Country 'Tis of Thee," after which the principal photodramatic feature, "The American Consul," was shown. Theodore Roberts, the Lasky star, appeared in the title role, supported by Maude Fealy, Tom Forman, Raymond Hatton, Charles West, and Earnest Joy. This play was written especially for Mr. Roberts by Paul West. A new L-Ko comedy entitled, "The Auto Maniacs," was also shown, and the Topical Review.

Among the solists on the musical program were Grace Hoffman, Florence Hardman and Arthur Depew.

"Arsene Lupin" at the Rialto.

Earle Williams starred at the Rialto in "Arsene Lupin," the Vitagraph Company's film production of a successful play. The debonair exploits of Lupin, whose skill at thievery was matched only by his social graces, provide a series of exciting incidents which make admirable motion picture material. E. Alexander Powell, the war correspondent, was on the program again, preceded by a series of new motion pictures from the front. A new "Mutt and Jeff," a comedy, and the "Literary Digest of the Screen" completed the pictures.

A fantasy of American melodies, numbers by Jeanne Manbourg, and the Rialto Male Quartette comprised the musical features.

"Twenty Thousand Leagues Under the Sea" at the Broadway.

The Universal production of the Jules Verne story, "Twenty Thousand Leagues Under the Sea," continues to crowd the Broadway theater.

Eighty-First Street Theater Bill.

At the Eighty-first Street theater, four pictures were as follows: Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday, Constance Talmadge in "A Girl of the Timber Claims," Triangle Komedy, "Won by a Foot," was shown.

Thursday, Friday, Saturday and Sunday—Wm. S. Hart in "The Gun Fighter" and Triangle Komedy, "His Deadly Undertaking," were on the program.

MOVING PICTURE EVENING AT THE NATIONAL ARTS CLUB.

At the invitation of Dr. O. F. Lewis, member of the National Arts Club and also member of the General Committee of the National Board of Review of Motion Pictures, February 5 was devoted to the welcoming to the Open Table of the Club of Cranston Brenton, chairman of the National Board of Review, and Campbell MacCulloch, scenario manager of the Triangle Fine Arts Film Company. The Open Table, exceptionally well represented on that evening, is a body of approximately 100 members. Every Monday evening during the fall, winter and spring seasons brings the Open Table together. Hardly a more representative body of intelligent public opinion could be gathered in the city.

The evening was marked by repeated emphasis upon the futility of legal censorship. Mr. Brenton made a ringing speech in favor of the volunteer review; Rufus Steele a prominent scenario writer, followed with a graphic description of his present work, and Mr. MacCulloch emphasized the necessity of the development of the motion picture upon intelligent and artistic lines. Many members of the Open Table joined in the discussion.

WHO OWNS BILLY WEST?

The services of Billy West are the subject of litigation in the United States District Court and Judge Augustus N. Hand has granted an order directing Arthur Werner to show cause why he shall not be restrained from producing moving picture plays starring the actor.

Harry Kenyon, a moving picture producer, of St. Louis, alleges West, who is known in private life as Roy B. Weissberg, signed a contract with him last November, agreeing to appear exclusively for a period of three years at a salary of $375 per week in films produced under Kenyon's direction.

British Notes

THE general inquiry into the charges recently levelled against moving pictures as being conducive to juvenile crime opened at the Central Hall, Westminster, London, on January 8, under the auspices of the National Council of Public Morals. F. R. Goodwin was the principal speaker and furnished the assembly with voluminous statistical information upon the recent growth of the industry by way of introduction to the sterner business of the conference, which does not really begin until later in the week. The Lord Bishop of Birmingham presided.

Tom E. Davies, associated with H. Winnick here in the handling of Triangle products, arrived in London just after Christmas from his visit to the States.

An item appears at the London Coliseum performance that is not announced on the program, but is deserving of mention as an instance in which the moving picture film can render service in the interests of public safety. A short film taken in the London streets shows the audience the right and wrong way to cross a traffic congested thoroughfare; to board and leave a motor omnibus in motion; the value of street refuges or "islands"; and several other instructive methods of assuring "safety first" to pedestrians traversing the busy streets. As an instance of the right and the wrong way to cross the road in such a place as Piccadilly Circus it is shown that the short cut straight across the roadway is more often than not the dangerous one and the pedestrian rushing blindly across falls. The safe way is to cross the road diagonally to the center facing oncoming traffic and turning in the center at a right angle to face oncoming traffic from the opposite direction during the completion of the crossing. The film is the work of the General Omnibus Co.

"Romance," a story of the Red Cross, one of the first of the new Clara Kimball Young features to arrive in England, is announced for release through International Exclusives, Ltd.

Geo. A. Smith, the chief of the Vitagraph Company's European business, returned home from the States just in time to see the old year give its last gasp. The speeding up of the work in the production of "big" subjects on the American side will during 1917 have the customary reflection of stocking the English market with practically the whole of the company's 1916 output, comparatively little of which has yet been exploited here. The next Vitagraph release of importance is "God's Country and the Women," to be followed in the spring by "The Battlecry of War" and "The Scarlet Runner" serial, and later in the year by the "Secret Kingdom" serial, "The Girl Phillipa" and other "Blue Ribbons" at the moment playing first runs in the States. These are over and above the pre-arranged increase in the open market and feature output for the year which promises to average out at about 12,000 feet per week (negative), 9,000 feet (including one multiple reel blue ribbon feature) per week through the Vitagraph Exchange and about 3,000 feet per week for sale on the open market.

Two personalities well known to the trade in New York are starting business in London as film agents under the style of the Inter-Ocean Film Co., Ltd. They are Paul W. Cromelin, whose connections as a film renter are already extensive, and John H. Taylor, of the Clarion Film Agency of Manchester, who was responsible for the negotiations between that company and the World Film Company of New York. Premises have already been opened at 164 Woodard street, London, Mr. Taylor informs me, and several important agencies secured. No film renting will be done by the company for the present, which will specialize in the importation of high class American exclusives for sale on the European market. Amongst these are the Black Diamond, Vim and Knickerbocker comedies. The firm will also act as distributing agents in Europe for the Speer Carbon Co.

The United Kingdom rights of the Brady-made World features have been acquired by the Gaumont exchange. The first two releases, Robert Warwick in "Sudden Riches" and Kitty Gordon in "Her Maternal Right" have had an excellent trade reception.

The next Universal serial to be released here is entitled "The Purple Domino" (thirty-two reels).

A London exhibitor has been fined an amount in excess of $500 for attempting to evade payment of the entertainment tax by not using Government stamped tickets.

While so much is being uttered on two continents inseperably associating the film play with motives of juvenile crime an observation by the prefect of Nancy (France) is refreshing. "I am convinced," he says, "that one moving picture theater saves me two policemen and my motto is down with the policemen and up with the theaters."

Bidding Active for "The Whip"

Big Melodrama First States Rights Production of Maurice Tourneur—Extensive Publicity Campaign.

THE mere announcement that "The Whip" was completed, has created as much interest as any single announcement made to the motion picture trade in months, is a statement made by the Paragon Films, which is placing the production. State right buyers have been waiting for this information and now that they know that Mr. Tourneur's initial open market production is ready, they are losing no time to secure the rights for their respective territories. Canadian and foreign buyers, in spite of the present crisis, are showing unusual interest in this picture. Doubtless, the success that "The Whip" as a stage play has had in Canada and Great Britain, is largely responsible for this interest. One of the most important English buyers has cabled an offer of $50,000, or ten thousand pounds, for the rights to the English countries outside of the United States and Canada.

Maurice Tourneur.

At the office of the Paragon Films, Inc., in the Longacre Building, many wires have been received from state rights buyers, asking that nothing be done in regard to the disposition of it for their respective territories until the senders can arrive in New York.

Mr. Tourneur has followed the policy of starring no one particular player and has decided that the bulk of attention should be given to the picture in itself, and it has been "The Whip" first and foremost. Yet there has been no attempt to slight the cast, which includes such well-known stars as Irving Cummings, Paul MacAllister, June Elvidge, Warren Cook, Alma Hanlon and others.

Contrary to the usual custom, the Paragon Films, Inc., have decided upon an extensive publicity campaign that will continue long after all rights have been sold, as they feel that their interest in the picture should not stop with the sale of the territory. There are some very interesting announcements to be made shortly by the Paragon Films, Inc., in connection with this publicity campaign.

SIMERAL TAKES TO THE ROAD.

W. S. Simeral, president and general manager of the Simeral Amusement Company of Clarksburg, W. Va., which recently sold its motion picture theaters in Ohio and West Virginia, has accepted a position with the Automatic Ticket Selling and Cash Register Company of New York and will travel out of Steubenville, Ohio, over the greater part of five middle states. His headquarters will be at 248 North Third street, Steubenville.

Spokes from the Hub

By Marion Howard.

WELL, the ball of the Film Club is now of the past, but there were one or two features worth recording. First, the selection from many contestants (in costume) of a young woman whose face and general expression won favor with the judges, who was selected for a position in a film company should she so desire. There were quite a number eligible, but choice fell on Dorothy Elden, who appeared as "The Girl of the Golden West." Another prize was awarded for the best costume and this caused some heartburnings, but it went to Mrs. Louise Blackborne, who wore an original costume of a North American Indian. It was purchased in Alaska by Mrs. Blackborne, who has made a study of the race and was perfect in detail, and her make-up was so cleverly done as to deceive all there. It caught the eye of Walter Gilman Page, an expert artist, as well as the others, and the club gave her a silver loving cup suitably inscribed. Mrs. Blackborne owns and manipulates her camera and has made several motion pictures privately. She is a Bavarian, a cultured, traveled woman, a resident of Brookline and charter member of the Film Club. Preceding the grand march there was a reception in the Copley Plaza foyer by the club president assisted by the judges and club committee. All the players in town who have been seen on the screen were invited. They included June Caprice, Frank McIntyre, Emily Stevens, Valli Valli, Edward Martindell, Charles Ruggles, Richard Carle and others. It was a brilliant affair, ably managed by D. M. Staley, and reflected credit on the club.

"The Weaker Sex"—there's a play fit "for the Goddesses," a mere man said on leaving the theater. I'd like to take Alice Brown by the hand and congratulate her on working out the theme to the utter satisfaction of both sexes in front. "Seeing as how" women are entering all professions and making good, it was clever to have the heroine a lawyer—a consistent type, too, not above affection and domesticity, but chafing over the luxuries and check on her power. Charlie Ray, the dependable, was the son whose misfortunes gave her a chance to prove that she was not of the so-called weaker sex, anyhow. Dorothy Dalton handled the part with convincing skill all through, and I have never witnessed a finer court-room scene than when she was pleading for his young life, and cross-examining the guilty wretch. Such plays cause endless good, as showing that women like her can and do exist, in spite of the efforts of much exploited stronger sex. It is a good suffrage play, though not so intended by author and producer. The Triangles have staged it well under Raymond West, and isn't Louise Glaum some vampire? Hard to resist that type! "Can't blame Charlie," said an old rounder across the aisle.

"Great Expectations" ought to be shown everywhere, if only as a splendid dramatization of the famous Dickens novel. Jack Pickford has done his best work, and how much he is like Mary in gait and gestures! Everyone round me spoke of it. The atmosphere and details in directorship left nothing to be desired. Louise Huff was all that the great novelist pictured. It is the most satisfactory dramatization of one of his books seen here, and we look for more from the Famous Players. They are educational and send the young folks to the libraries to get the whole story.

"Patria" seems to be well advertised and is on here at the Fenway and other theaters. Personally I see no art in the acting of Mrs. Castle and the inconsistencies are maddening. All with whom I have talked agree that she is jerky, awkward, anaemic in appearance, and vacant in expression. The scenes are well done and represent a great amount of money, energy and hard labor generally. A friend wants to know why the bad villain who shot Patria's "dad" in the vault suddenly reappeared when the vault had been closed by the dying man's hands as plainly viewed. How did he get out? There are worse things to criticise in the third reel now on here. The titles are good, but show illiteracy, like the spelling of this word, "Developments," and the use of that awful "alright." These were in the first reel, so there may be others which I hope to escape. One excepts good English in titles put out by the International Film Corporation, which has a big newspaper man at the head.

The Drews continue to give delight to the "tired business man" and the rest of us, in their homely little domestic comedies. I like "The Pest," seen today, and the titles are the best in a long time. I have an idea that Mrs. Drew writes or rewrites them, from what I hear. Christie's are also quite funny, minus vulgarity and slapstick, and we all love smiling Billie Rhodes. "Twin Kiddies" went well here—why not? Baby Osborne will pack a house anywhere when attention is called to the little star who plays double in this picture. One woman has a bet on, that little Mary Sunshine is a daughter of her director, Henry King, but I hear he is not guilty, though he does know how to handle kid pictures.

A treat was given friends of Benjamin Chapin last week at the Tremont Temple, where we were given a private view of the first of the Lincoln Cycle pictures, with Mr. Chapin playing the martyred president and his father. It was startlingly true to tradition, history, and to the Lincoln the world knew. There was continued applause as the play progressed, and I predict much enthusiasm and still more educational value. Here we get the boyhood epoch with the mother, Nancy Hanks, impersonated by a young woman greatly resembling Ethel Barrymore, and the homely scenes at his mother's knee; her efforts to teach him, and all the rest of it showing veneration. Preceding the picture a large audience enjoyed Mr. Chapin's platform delineation of Lincoln, a dramatic portrayal, startlingly life-like. He is Lincoln's height, weight, and the facial resemblance is good. A great debt is due Chapin for making it possible to portray Lincoln as he was. The outdoor scenes were done in New Jersey and there is a perfect reproduction of the log cabin, the old swimming pool and general surroundings, together with fine views of the White House with Lincoln there.

"Indiscretion" served to show Lillian Walker and her dimples to admiring friends here, as she has been met personally and we all like her vivacity. It was a good Vitagraph offering, well directed by Wilfred North, and had the "happy ending" after a narrow escape with the society villain, who also figured in the "Battle Cry of Peace" as one of the invading army. I thought he was George Cooper, but the cast had it Thomas R. Mills, so maybe I am mixing the villains up. Lillian has some near Kellermann stunts to do, but was sincere in all of it.

"Vanity" was all right with Emmy Wehlen and a strong cast, including that dignified leading man, Edward Martindell, singing here in "Eileen" to run several more week. Rightly, as it is worth while. Mr. Martindell plays an English Colonel and it is a treat to hear his well placed voice. He will be a guest of the Film Club president on the 20th at a luncheon at the Copley-Plaza.

On Sunday evening a party of us went to see "The Rosary," which I had somehow missed when first released. It was written by a Boston man long connected with the Boston Museum and Castle Square—"Ned" Rose—and this gave added interest. What a splendid piece of work Charles Clary does here, and isn't he like Orren Johnson in "The Light at Dusk"? Kathlyn Williams too is an excellent foil and Harry Lonsdale, a former Boston man, had a part seemingly thankless at first, but rather good in the final scene.

"The Rainbow" with Robert Conness again before us, Jack Sherrill and Dorothy Bernard as a trio of good players went well and proved an excellent dramatization. "The Matrimaniac" was a disappointment all around, especially for a Triangle offering. Poor "Doug." Fairbanks, no wonder he has resigned, for to give a man such "fool" stunts to do as in this play would be excuse enough. It was full of jerky ahtletics, improbable situations and the plot (?) was a near slapstick infliction. "The Ninety and Nine" showed up well by contrast as it was full of sane action, and we have not seen William Courtenay do anything on the screen to compare with this. With a story based on a scripture verse it looked at first that it would pan out a good play with the moral all right. The forest fire scene and wild ride of the locomotive was a thriller, but would have been better to have left the heorine out of it, and have a male feeder for the fiery furnace Lucille Lee Stewart and the human bits will make this worth while. Kathlyn Williams and Thomas Holding in their first co-star play, "Redeeming Love," was most satisfactory. Helen Eddy and the two Standings gave capable support and we liked the plot.

Calcutta Letter

THE cry is still they come. The latest addition to the Calcutta bioscopes is the Picture House. It has opened in the premises lately occupied by the Gaiety Theater. The whole building has been refurnished and redecorated. Messrs. N. D. Bros. of Benares have taken a lease of the premises. They have appointed Leonard W. Thompson manager. Mr. Thompson is an experienced man. He knows his business from A to Z. The Picture House holds a monopoly of the Universal films and the other brands controlled by the T. F. Co. Only American films will be shown. The venture has been started under excellent auspices and its success may be taken as assured.

I have seen many American films in which "Indians" play some part; but I regret to say that not one of them is true to life. I would only request the T. F. Co. and other film makers to take as much care in depicting Indian people and things as they do in other cases.

* * *

While lengthy serials of the "Master Key" or "Trey o' Hearts" type are a general favorite with the Indians, they do not appeal to the Europeans. In fact, a leading European paper has just spoken against "the boosted transsomething serials of the 'Neal of the Navy' type." To me, their annoyance is not explicable. These serials convey a lesson, the value of which cannot be overrated.

* * *

Speaking of serials, I have to inform my readers that Mr. J. F. Madan is now showing us "The Broken Coin." All seats are sold half an hour before "screening time," so late comers have to go away disappointed.

* * *

People want to see serial pictures. If Mr. Madan, who specializes in serials, stops bringing out serials, I am afraid he will not be so well patronized as now. "Give the people what they want, and not what you want." Here is the secret of success.

* * *

In Bombay, a new picture theater will be opened very shortly, in the premises formerly occupied by another bioscope theater. The proprietors announce that they will have "no false scruples and standards in composing their weekly programs." This is interesting and I, for one, hope they will give us something out of the ordinary.

* * *

The "Neal of the Navy" film was completed in five weeks. "The Broken Coin" will be completed by the end of December. We shall then have "The Red Circle." It goes without saying that Mr. Madan is one of the most enterprising showmen of India. But for him we might never have had the opportunity of seeing all the big serials released for the Indian markets. That the public appreciate his services is proved by the fact that all his four theaters in Calcutta and his other theaters in Darjeeling, Hussorie, Colombo, Rangoon, Delhi and Kidderpur are always crowded. He also frequently gives charity performances for war funds, hospitals, widows, etc.

Australian Notes

THE official censor in New Zealand has just completed his seventh week of inspection. He has examined 640,000 feet of film, or 260 pictures, of which four were absolutely barred because in each case, after the objectionable parts had been eliminated, there was practically no story left.

Minor censorings in the films that were passed numbered thirty-five. The objectionable matter in those cases occurred, as a rule, in the subtitles of the pictures, much of which could be omitted without affecting the story. The censor, of course, has in each case to re-examine the altered films to make sure that his instructions have been correctly carried out.

The censor (Mr. Joliffe) expressed surprise at the poor standard of the average photoplay, as far as regards the story. "Again, out of 260 films," he went on to say, "I have not found a single industrial and only about four scenic subjects."

Mr. Joliffe concluded by saying that he considered the American film much superior to either English, French or Italian products.

It is rumored in Wellington, New Zealand, that the minimum admission rate of three pence to picture theaters is to be a thing of the past, and that in future sixpence and one shilling will rule.

Another picture theater is to be erected in Manners street, Wellington. There are already four in one block, and two others in close proximity. It is stated on good authority that all films will be imported direct from America to the new house, which will be known as "The Regal." At present all pictures for New Zealand are sent from Australia, usually Sydney.

John F. Gavin, producer of "The Martyrdom of Nurse Cavell" and other pictures, states that he has signed up Nellie Stewart to appear in several five-part productions. Miss Stewart has undoubtedly been the best known figure on the Australian stage for a number of years, and despite the fact that she has not appeared before the public for some time, her popularity remains undiminished. Miss Stewart appeared in several Australian picture production a few years ago, including a version of "Sweet Nell of Old Drury."

"Sloth"

Fourth Episode of the McClure "Seven Deadly Sins" Series An Appeal to Patriotism—Charlotte Walker the Featured Player.

Reviewed by Edward Weitzel.

"SLOTH," the fourth episode of the McClure "Seven Deadly Sins" series, was originally intended for sixth place, but was moved forward on account of the timeliness of the subject. Patriotism is the theme of the five-reel picture, the author inculcating his lesson by taking three incidents in American history and linking them together by means of a story of to-day. Two of the periods chosen are prior to 1776, the immortal Molly Pitcher being the heroine of this date. Margaret Brent and Sally Wells, the other heroines, although not so well known, are stirring examples of the courage and devotion of the early settlers of this nation, both men and women.

Scene from "Sloth" (McClure).

The heroic two are brought into the modern story by having a young girl, a product of the wonderful prosperity now enjoyed by this country, read the history of their lives, and awaken to her duty when war starts against the United States. Her lover, a member of the National Guard, enlists, and is wounded on the field of battle. Eva, the girl, becomes a Red Cross nurse and helps to save his life.

Such a handling of material in a photoplay does not make for symmetric development of plot; but, at the present time, this may be overlooked on account of the inspiration to be derived from the picture. The modern portions of the drama are produced with better effect than are the three episodes of our early history. A conscientious effort has been made to represent correctly the events as set down in the chronicles of our land, but the desired effect has not always been achieved. However, enough of the spirit that animated the souls of the three heroines has been suggested to drive their message home.

Charlotte Walker represented the three heroines of Colonial Days. No attempt was made to individualize them. The actress merely lent her own personality to the characters. This was a physical aid of no mean worth. She also acted the parts with animation, if not with the best artistic results. Miss Walker is a new comer to the moving picture studio, and, as is always the case, has much to learn—especially in the use of her hands.

Shirley Mason carried off the honors of the cast. As Eve Leslie, the modern young woman who is aroused from her slothful habits by the voice of Patriotism, she was a convincing and well graced figure. George Le Guere, Jack Meredith, Curtis Cooksey, Hattie Delaro and Helen Strickland were the leading members of the supporting company. Theodore Marston directed the production.

"The Argyle Case"

Robert Warwick in Fine Seven-Reel Screen Version of Detective Play in Which Robert Hilliard Scored a Success on the Spoken Stage—Produced by Selznick.

Reviewed by Edward Weitzel.

THE O'Higgen-Ford detective drama, "The Argyle Case," which Wm. J. Burns supervised and pronounced good, has been given a screen production by the Selznick company, with Robert Warwick in the character of Asche Kayton. The version is in seven reels, and Director Ralph Ince has speeded up the action and cut the story down to the essentials so cleverly that the seven reels seems no more than five. Wisely eliminating all the comic relief furnished by the colored auntie in the spoken drama, Frederick Chapin, who made the scenario, confined himself to the clearing up of the mysterious murder that forms the subject of the play. The combined efforts of the director and the scenarioist have resulted in an intense, firmly woven melodrama that never insults one's intelligence by the impossibility of its plot nor the miraculous skill of its detective hero.

"The Argyle Case" was first produced when the dictagraph had just come into use and its introduction into the drama was one of the features of the performance. It still remains an important asset when used in the screen version, and we have Detective Burns' word for it that it is highly prized by the professional "flycop."

The story of the play is shrewdly calculated to hold the attention and to win sympathy for its heroine, who is accused of killing her foster father. There is also the added interest of speculating who it was that committed the crime. The secret is well kept and its unraveling is confined, except for a brief period, to the forward march of events. Everything that could be achieved by mature judgment and a desire to make the production a notable one, has been done for "The Argyle Case." The cast is especially strong.

Robert Warwick, who makes his bow in this picture as the featured player of a Selznick-Warwick Company, does the best work of his screen career. His acting is facile, full of mental vigor and without a touch of over coloring or unnecessary effort. Elaine Hammerstein is an attractive heroine, having the youth, good looks and requisite amount of brains to render her worthy any young fellow's devotion.

Scene from "The Argyle Case" (Selznick).

Arthur Albertson, Frank McGlyn and H. Cooper Cliffe are high spots in a support of general excellence, and Charles Hines should be mentioned for his deft performance of Joe Manning, and Mary Alden for a moving impersonation of Nellie Marsh. Frank Evans, J. B. Fleming, Robert Vivian and Gazelle Marche complete the list.

"A Square Deal"

Peerless Five-Reel Screen Drama of New York Bohemian Life, That Has Friendship as Its Theme—Released by the World Film Corporation.

Reviewed by Edward Weitzel.

LOVE is only a good second to friendship in "A Square Deal," a five-reel Peerless screendrama on the World program. The scenes are laid in MacDougal Alley, that short street just off of Washington Square where New York's bohemian element makes its headquarters. Two young chaps are in love with the same girl; one of the boys being a writer and the other the artist, and the friendship between them is unusually strong. Doris, the girl, prefers Mark, the writer; and Hugh, the artist, does everything in his power to help his rival. Success in his profession leads Mark away from Doris, and he makes an unfortunate marriage; but Hugh traps his friend's wife into revealing her true character, and Mark marries his old sweetheart—after divorcing the first Mrs. Dunbar.

Just how true a picture of life, as it is led in the Alley, may be found in "A Square Deal," need not concern patrons of the moving picture play. The drama is intended for those who want a clean story, plentifully sprinkled with sentiment, and one that makes no pretence to furnishing food for thought. The doings of the men and women in "A Square Deal" are easily understood, although it is easier to admire Hugh's sacrifice than to believe in it. Another incident which comes under the same head is the scene at the society ladies' swimming match; also the method taken by Mark Dunbar's first wife to make him fall in love with her. She dons Annette Kellermanns, dives into the clubhouse tank in company with a number of other lightly clad society leaders and pretends to drown. Mark jumps in, fully clothed, and rescues the lady, and she thanks him so warmly that he returns the compliment by taking her in his arms and she accepts him then and there. This scene would have been considered very daring a few years back, especially the costumes of the swimmers, but, judging from the pictures taken of real society ladies at Palm Beach for the Sunday Illustrated Sections, they are not very far out of the way.

Scene from "A Square Deal" (World).

The production, directed by Harley Knoles, is equal to all demands, and the cast, headed by Carlyle Blackman and including June Elvidge, Henry Hull, Charlotte Granville, Muriel Ostriche, and Charles Charles, keep the acting at par.

"The Accomplice"

Art Dramas, Inc., Presents Melodrama Based on Young Woman's Unfortunate Predicament—Dorothy Bernard and Jack Sherrill Featured.

Reviewed by Margaret I. MacDonald.

THE ACCOMPLICE" is a five-part production that most audiences will like, and presents incidents which are no doubt synonymous with ordinary happenings in New York's smart set. The story, written by Anthony Kelly, is interesting, despite the fact that it contains no strongly heroic characters, with the exception of Miriam Collins, private secretary to the Hon. Nicholas Harcourt, one of the prime movers of Wall street, and father of a son and daughter who had drifted along their idle ways with varied aspirations. Miriam Collins proves to be the guardian angel and regenerator of the son of the Harcourt family, and suffers much through the contempt of her class flaunted at her by the head of the family. This role is played acceptably by Florence Hamilton, but is rather too smartly gowned to be convincing; and moreover, the young woman's apartment is more richly appointed than that of the average woman of her profession.

Dorothy Bernard is exceptionally pleasing as Katherine Harcourt, and Jack Sherrill as the son of the Harcourt family, persuaded into making good on his own account through his love of Miriam Collins, also does good work. In the story, which brings Harcourt's daughter into the unfortunate position of becoming fascinated by a famous dancer, on whose account she is forced to prove an alibi because she happened to be with him on the evening of the murder of his former sweetheart and dancing partner, various inconsistencies are noticeable, principally in the development of character. For instance the deliberate manner in which the private secretary offers to besmirch her own good name to save the reputation of the trifling daughter of her employer, who has already called her an adventuress, does not ring true in representation of the more sensible modern feminine.

Scene from "The Accomplice" (Art Drama).

One of the most pleasing character interpretations in the picture is given by W. J. Brady in the role of the elder Harcourt.

"THE fifth chapter of the Quality Pictures serial, "The Great Secret," left Beverly Clarke in the power of the kidnappers, and young Strong badly beaten up after his encounter with the thugs of "The Secret Seven." He is helped home and put to bed by his physician. While he is slowly recovering, the mother of Beverly is suffering mental torture at the disappearance of her daughter. Dr. Zulph, of the band of robbers, orders the members to draw lots to determine who shall kill Strong. At the finish of this episode a masked man enters the young millionaire's bedroom and is about to stab him with a wicked looking knife.

"The Yellow Claw."

Chapter seven is full of action. Strong is saved by the arrival of a mysterious masked man who countermands the order for killing the millionaire. Wee See, the Chinese valet, now gets busy. Beverly has been taken to a Chinese resort and made to dress in oriental clothes. A Chinese doctor hypnotizes the girl, and she is in great danger. Wee See finds out where she is hidden, goes home and tells his master. That young gentleman, although still weak from his last encounter, hurries into his clothes and follows Wee See to the den. The pair, having secured Chinese costumes, get inside the den, and Strong is just in time to save the girl from serious harm. The chapter closes with the arrival of the gang of thugs headed by Dr. Zelph.

"A Clue from the Klondike."

The rescue of Strong and Beverly from the hirelings of "The Secret Seven" takes place in chapter eight, after a desperate attempt is made to prevent it. The police turn up in the nick of time and a lively fight is the result. An episode is next introduced into this chapter which shows an important event in the life of the Great Master while he was a miner in the Northwest. It reveals the cause of his hatred of Dr. Zulph. A meeting of "The Secret Seven" is shown at the end of the number, when a new plan is hatched against Strong and Beverly.

The stars and their supporting company keep the interest in the story at close tension all through these three chapters, and the production is not allowed to drop at any point.

"The New York Peacock"

Valeska Suratt, the Sinuous, Repeats Her Favorite Role of Siren in Five-Reel Screendrama Produced by Fox Film Corporation.

Reviewed by Edward Weitzel.

SOLOMON in all his glory could never have exhibited such bizarre sartorial effects as are displayed by Valeska Suratt in "The New York Peacock," a five-reel screen drama written by Mary Murillo and produced by the Fox Film Company. In fact her costumes are the most striking feature of the picture, and are decorated with spiders, tigers, swans and gargoyles. She changes these costumes with great frequency, and even permits the spectator to inspect lacy articles of apparel which shall be nameless, and allows him to behold the wonders of her marble bath and the expanse of her well formed back. All of which accords with the popular notion of sirens.

"The New York Peacock" has taken valuable suggestions from "Camille," "The Easiest Way" and other works of art dedicated to the doings of fair but frail ladies that make the mistake of permitting their hearts to interfere with their business affairs. Like Dumas' heroine, Zena, the vampire, played by Miss Suratt, at the hight of her varied career meets a man that inspires her with a pure unselfish love. At least Zena claims that her love is pure and unselfish, and then proves that it isn't by refusing to make the one sacrifice which redeems Camille. The object of Zena's fancy has a wife and child, and Zena refuses to secure his happiness in the only way possible by sending him back to his family. The young fellow's father arrives on the scene and traps the siren after she has expressed her determination to capture a man with money and gain possession of the large sum which she tempted her dupe to lose at the gambling table. The young man returns home with his father and makes way for the closing scene, which is a clarion call in the cause of truth. The siren, after falling on the floor and dissolving into tears as she clasps a photograph of the lost one to her breast, springs up at the entrance of an old admirer, throws the photograph and her grief over her left shoulder and suggests it's about time she had her supper.

Scene from "The New York Peacock" (Fox).

Valeska Suratt does full justice to the playwright's ideal. She looks and acts the character as it is understood in stage fiction, and introduces several tricks of her own invention. Her serpentine walk is a great aid in showing off her wardrobe.

The production is lavish and in keeping with the subject. The directing by Kenean Buel and the acting by the supporting company, comprised of Harry Hilliard, Eric Mayne, Alice Gale, Claire Whitney, W. W. Black, John Mackin and Frank Goldsmith, are exceedingly well done. There will be no halfway measures about "The New York Peacock's" success. Those who care for this sort of thing will like it very much, but when the good housewife of the smaller cities beholds the picture it is going to make it harder work for Hiram to get away when he suggests a trip alone to the Island of Manhattan.

"Max Comes Across"

Essanay's First Release of the Max Linder Comedy Series, In Which the Noted Comedian Directs and Acts, Forces Merriment Whether One Is in the Humor or Not.

Reviewed by James S. McQuade.

AFTER viewing "Max Comes "Across," Max Linder's first two-reel comedy in the big Essanay series, I awoke to the fact that I had been enjoying myself immoderately, and that Mr. Linder's humorous powers to evoke laughter are still irresistible. It seems to me that he has grown in power as a magic mirth-maker since last seen, and that this is so impresses me as being all the more wonderful when I think of the fearful scenes both in trench and on embattled field, which have engripped him since his former appearances in this country before the camera.

Scene from "Max Comes Across" (Essanay).

There can be no such thing as an analysis of his work, except that he writes his own scenarios, and directs and acts in them first as the whim seizes him. He is distinctly a creature of fancy, whose mission lies in presenting the ludicrous in kaleidoscopic fashion, and with such appeal that the spectator is lost to everything but mirth and laughter. And all credit to Mr. Linder, his art to create laughter does not rely on vulgar incident or situation.

The incidents which form this first comedy supposedly occur during Mr. Linder's voyage from Paris to this country to join the Essanay forces. Accompanied by his friend Maupain the voyage is made, although Max is badly frightened by an item of war news which states that twelve more ships of the Entente have just been sunk by German submarines. He orders a life belt placed in every trunk and a life belt with every meal taken on board!

He mistakes the play of two dolphins for an approaching torpedo one day, and stirs his co-passengers into a frenzy of fear. The attack of seasickness which seizes his friend Maupain and himself results in uproarious fun for the spectator. In the search for his own cabin he enters that of a passenger and his wife, which leads to another paroxysm of mirth.

The services of Max as pianist at a special concert given aboard ship affords one of the most mirthful incidents during the voyage. A storm comes up and the piano slides backward and forward across the salon, with Max either in hot pursuit or in quick retreat; but he always contrives to stick to the piano stool, although in its mad gyrations it is sometimes turned upside down.

To get even on his friend, Maupain, Max induces the captain to have an attendant shout at his cabin door that the ship is sinking, not knowing that Maupain had already won over that officer to play the same trick on himself, at the very same hour. Then an actual collision takes place in midocean, and the cry, "Everybody on deck, the ship is sinking," arouses the passengers from their slumbers. Max and his friend smile, each to himself, as the cry is heard, ignorant of danger. But when an officer tells them of the accident there is wild scampering and a desperate fight between them for a life belt.

Max discovers that the ship is out of danger, and seating himself at the piano in his saloon plays an inspiriting selection. The captain and passengers rush in, marveling at the nerve of the hero, who on being questioned modestly answers, "I was playing the piano to give the passengers courage"!

The direction of the comedy shows most convincingly the rocking of the ship during the voyage, and the interiors on board have been reproduced with praiseworthy realism.

Ernest Maupain is an excellent opposite for Mr. Linder, and the other characters have been carefully assigned. The release will be made through K-E-S-E service on Monday, Feb. 25.

"The Adventurer"

Upton Sinclair's Drama Makes Splendid Entertainment on the Screen—Marian Swayne's Eye-Flashes and Acting Help.

Reviewed by Hanford C. Judson.

THIS reviewer has yet to see a picture by Madame Blache that was not sincerely and artistically directed and this, "The Adventurer," one of her recent productions is no exception. The plot by Upton Sinclair is a stirring but artfully constructed melodrama and the picturization of it is wholesome, full of mystery, and most decidedly entertaining. It is modern and up to date without attempting to teach us or assuming that we need to be taught. It sets out to make an hour and a half or thereabouts pass pleasantly for those who are willing to pay the admission and it will accomplish its purpose often before it is put with the "pictures of other days."

Marian Swayne plays the lead and as the story opens is trying to make a living honestly in a cruel city. That's a good beginning and it is registered convincingly and pleasingly. Pell Trenton has the opposite lead. We are led to believe he is a crook. We suspect that he is the son of the millionaire, but he turns out to be a crook before our eyes so persistently that we doubt our suspicions, until the reasons are uncovered in the denouement and we understand.

Scene from "The Adventurer" (Art Drama).

Around these two juveniles, there are the usual "characters" most of them wicked enough, but all played with the peculiarities of humanity so pleasing in plots that bother only with the square blocks of good and evil. There is none of them so ably put over as Charles Halton's "Austin," the distributor of charities for the big villain (Kirk Brown) who is stealing a fortune. The world thinks that the millionaire has disinherited his son and daughter to found a charity institution with Kirk at its head; but the right will is in the safe and is produced in time. Most of the action transpires in the slums, where Pell finds Marian about to commit suicide and befriends her. She thinks him a thief and is reforming him. He the son and heir is on an adventure in which he succeeds in uncovering Kirk's conspiracy. Ethel Stanard plays as Pell's sister. Yolande Doquette plays a slum character. Martin Hayden plays one of the villain's accomplices.

"The Saintly Sinner"

Old-Fashioned Melodrama Offered in Five-Reel Bluebird—Ruth Stonehouse Featured—Released February 26.

Reviewed by Ben H. Grimm.

THERE can be no doubt that "The Saintly Sinner," a five-reel Bluebird melodrama, to be released on February 26, will make a wide appeal, because the story material and plot fabric used in the picture's making has never yet failed in its appeal. The production is old-fashioned melodrama which sacrifices almost everything in the interests of the "punch." Plausibility suffers several times during the running of the five reels, especially so when the girl is about to be executed in the electric chair; the switch is thrown on, but a subtitle informs us that a fuse has blown out. This gives just enough time to inform the prison authorities of a pardon, and prevent the execution of an innocent girl. There are to be seen in the picture quite a number of familiar characters doing familiar things, but in this particular production the familiar things are done in a more convincing manner than usual. Good direction by Raymond Wells, and good photography aid the production.

Ruth Stonehouse plays the leading role—that of a girl around whose delectability, in the eyes of the villain, revolves acts of the latter which result first in the suicide of the girl's once wealthy father, later in the girl's incarceration in jail on the villain's false charge, and still later to two murders. Henry Devries capably carries the role of the villain. Jack Mulhall is seen as the dissipated youth who reforms, and whose path crosses that of the girl. Mr. Mulhall takes advantage of the scant opportunities offered him. The remainder of the cast, which is an adequate one, is composed of Raymond Whittaker, Alida Hayman, Frederick Montague and Dorothy Drake.

Scene from "The Saintly Sinner" (Bluebird).

The situation from which the picture takes its title arises when the girl and an artist conspire to ruin the villain who is the cause of all their troubles. She has about accomplished her object when she justifiably kills the artist. Circumstantial evidence leads her to the electric chair, but she is rescued by the hero, who rushes in from the West just in time to get a pardon from his father, the Governor.

The story was writen by L. H. Hutton and prepared for the screen by Eugene Lewis.

"The Black Wolf'

Lou-Tellegen, Finely Supported by Nell Shipman, in Lasky Subject Containing Good Situations.

Reviewed by George Blaisdell.

LOU-TELLEGEN is the featured player in "The Black Wolf," the Lasky release for February 12, but Nell Shipman, who plays opposite him, shares the honors. It is a subject with a happy ending. It is an interesting story, with moments that stir, and it is well told. Margaret Turnbull has made the adaptation from the play of Jean Barrymore. The theme is of a benevolent highwayman, who has been reared by a charcoal burner. The latter has concealed from his ward the fact that he, the Wolf, is a prince of the blood, but the truth comes out in good time—at the psychological moment.

Scene from "The Black Wolf" (Lasky).

It is not a story that runs along original lines; nevertheless in its working out there is introduced a novelty that will appeal. This is the showing of retrospective action in a field so large that the story teller and his two auditors are seated in a corner of a spacious room and in the center of the floor are enacted the incidents that hook up the story with the present, that reveal the identity and the position of the Wolf, thereby clarifying the atmosphere, freeing the Wolf from his bondage and making him free to seek the hand of the Countess in marriage.

The production is well staged, with picturesque backgrounds and wealth of costuming. Lou-Tellegen gives a pleasing performance. Miss Shipman charms, inspires interest and compels sympathy. The two are well supported.

"The War of the Tongs"

Five-Reel Universal Subject Features Chinese Actors in a Drama of Their Own Concoction.

Reviewed by Robert C. McElravy.

ORIENTAL simplicity is very much in evidence in this offering when contrasted with the average American five-reel feature. It moves along in a quiet way through the first three reels, the interest being maintained by the novelty of the cast and manner of presentation. All of the characters, including Ching Ting, the wealthy tong leader; Suey Lee, the heroine; Wong Wing, hero, and Lee Hoy, father of the girl, are depicted by Chinese actors. The real names of these performers are Tom Hing, Lin Leong, Lee Gow and Hoo Ching, respectively.

The production is not staged in Chinese fashion, like the play called "The Yellow Jacket," in which chairs and tables are used to represent mountains, boats and the like. It is put on in the same way other pictures are produced, except that the entire cast is an Oriental one.

The first scenes are made in China, giving views of native life. The characters concerned then come to San Francisco, where most of the action takes place in the famous Chinatown section. A good idea is given of the conduct of the Chinese secret societies, known as tongs.

The plot concerns a Chinese girl in love with Wong Wing, a grocer's clerk. Ching Ting, tong leader, also desires her and the rivalry between Wong and Ching brings on a warfare in which numerous lives are lost, including that of the girl's father. Harmony is then restored, the tong leader giving the girl over to Wong, and the principal characters return to China.

Scene from "The War of the Tongs" (Red Feather).

The story itself is entertaining in spite of its simplicity. It contains numerous informing and amusing features, giving the observer an insight into Chinatown lotteries, gambling games of other sorts, and the Celestial life in general in this country. Chinese subtitles are employed, followed by the very necessary translations. Most of the action comes in the last two reels. It makes altogether an enjoyable novelty.

"Her Own People"

Lenore Ulrich Is Seen in Good Pallas Subject in the Role of a Half-Breed Indian.

Reviewed by George Blaisdell.

IN "Her Own People," the Pallas release for February 8, Lenore Ulrich is seen in one of her best roles. The story is of outdoors, of mountains, pines and lakes; of Indians, as well as white men. Real red men they are, and to the subject they lend the color of the west. They are shown at their best, in their dances and sports. Fights and gory scalps are not in evidence. The Indians and their country provide an admirable background for the story, which has for its principal a girl who is the daughter of a wealthy father gone to the woods out of sorts with civilization, and of an Indian mother.

Miss Ulrich gives a good, a convincing portrayal of the girl of mixed blood, woed by men of white skin and of red. Her heart favors one of the former, but through the cupidity of a white man she is inclined to condemn the whole race and take up with the Indian. It is a good character delineation.

John Kemp has the role of Howard Davies, the man of means and position, who, when crossed in love, quits the world he has known. Davies holds fast to his resolution until the daughter of his union with a squaw grows to young womanhood. Then, through fear of her marrying an Indian, he takes her to the east and educates her. Mr. Kemp has a good role and plays it well.

Colin Chase is Frank Colvin, the young prospector, who falls in love with Alona and eventually wins her when she is convinced he wants her for herself and not for the money of her father. William Jefferson is Agnew, the son of the woman who discarded Davies in earlier years and who seeks to win Alona for the sake of the money involved. Others in the cast are Adelaide Woods, Jack Stark, Gail Brooks and Joy Lewis.

Scene from "Her Own People" (Pallas).

"Her Own People" is a good picture. There are a number of strong situations, cleverly developed, and none of these is quite as strong, even as it is tender, as the final.

Triangle Program

"The Bad Boy," Five-Reel Fine Arts, With Robert Harron in the Title Role, and "The Last of the Ingrams," Five-Reel Kay-Bee, Featuring William Desmond.

Reviewed by Louis Reeves Harrison.

"The Bad Boy."

"THE BAD BOY" offers a delightful piece of characterization, that of the village ne'er-do-well, simply a youth whose vigorous primitive tendencies have not been tamed and cannot be suppressed by force alone without peril to his future career. F. E. Woods and Chester Withey, the authors, present a type easily recognizable in the role assumed by Robert Harron, one common enough in the every-day life of small towns and not absent from big cities. The village bad boy is simply a healthy boob, destined in the ordinary course of things to grow up half educated, go courting, marry, settle down, keep a grocery store and vegetate the rest of his life, as most of them do. The one depicted is in revolt against constituted authority, a rebel by nature, and, headed by sheer force of will for some good or bad variation from the commonplace, more or less according to circumstances over which he has no control.

The authors build up an admirable characterization during the reels of preparation and development, in which the deft hand of Woods is clearly visible. Thereafter Mr. Woods makes a concession to melodrama, much to the detriment of his story; his comedy skill is so rare and so thoroughly interesting in its results. So many of our men of prominence were bad boys at the outset that it seems a pity to send this one along into the criminal course of a weakling. There is a lack of compensation in his eventual reform. He comes out of jail to continue his criminal associations and becomes the meanest of the lot in stealing a safe combination from the home of his mother and father, the real criminal, whose accomplices are punished when he is converted, while he goes scot free. The character, however, is realistic and is made intensely so by Harron during all the early scenes.

The early part of the story is presented so amusingly that the average sympathies of an audience are roused for the boy. It is not shown that there is anything really vicious in his character—he is simply self-willed, a quality that helps men to win their way. Then comes a sudden and complete reversal, an announcement that he has been discharged from jail and sent home. That event and the boy's voluntary agreement to act as principal in robbing a bank in which his own father holds a position of trust places the young man at once beyond the pale of further sympathy—he is a crook at heart, not to be depended on in the future. His reform merely grows out of the gentle influence of a young girl, an accidental one at that, so it is clearly indicated that the change does not came from innate fine character. He is simply lucky in having influence which shields him from the punishment meted out to others. The value of the story lies almost wholly in the sort of characterization which Mr. Woods knows well how to formulate.

"The Last of the Ingrams."

"The Last of the Ingrams" has many of the elements of a fine story and both William Desmond and Margery Wilson contribute their full share to its interest. It is seriously marred, however, by an exaggerated and almost purely theatrical view of contemporaneous village life. To cover this exaggeration it is given a supposedly unknown locale, that of Cape Cod. It might just as well have been placed where it was enacted, so far as realism is concerned. They are not tarring and feathering people in one spot any more than in the other, nor is Puritanism so painfully thrust upon attention in either east or west. It is in very bad taste to present any view of American life today from a narrow sectional standpoint—we are too cosmopolitan. There are few specimens of human nature in all parts of the country, but our people are very much the same wherever they are found, as the Texan discovered when men from New York, Pennsylvania and New Jersey went down to protect his state from the Mexicans.

The exaggeration of malicious envy and scandal might be worth while in some cases, but it supplanted in this case a very beautiful love story, that of the man who had failed as a man, and a woman who had failed as a woman, brought together in an extremity. Very little was made of this highly sympathetic situation, showing a lack of appreciation of what really grips an audience, the development of character resulting from the force of circumstances. Of course this is indicated toward the last in action, but its growth is not made visible. Exaggeration, sometimes necessary to reach slow minds, is carried beyond reasonable bounds in acting of both Desmond and McKim. They are too obvious. The stupid part of an audience is not the only one to be considered. There is such a thing as overdoing the obvious.

Margery Wilson, in a most difficult role, really carries off the honors with a suppressed and truly pathetic picture of the wronged girl. Her work is the redeeming feature of this story, giving it both dignity and strength. The theme, "Though thy sins be as scarlet," is a beautiful one, well worth another development, one in which human character emerges from weakness through effort, not by chance. The general presentation of the story is good, but there are neglected minor issues, such as showing what became of the mother's portrait, which shows that haste which is so destructive to a finished performance.

"The Deemster"

Scenic Beauty Aplenty in Nine-Reel Screen Version of Hall Caine's Famous Novel, Photographed by Arrow Film Corporation.

Reviewed by Edward Weitzel.

THE admirers of the works of Hall Caine will find much to their liking in the nine-reel version of "The Deemster," produced by the Arrow Film Corp., with Derwent Hall Caine, son of the novelist, as Daniel Mylrea. Scenically, the picture is a delight. Laid on the Isle of Man early in the eighteenth century, the stretches of bold coast line, broad expanses of foam flecked ocean, picturesque views of humble fishing huts, and of the imposing castles of the lords of the land, are always things of beauty, and harmonize perfectly with the strange, primitive people depicted in the tale.

Born on the island, Hall Caine knew all the legends and odd beliefs of his countrymen by heart, and wrote of them as one who held each tradition and article of faith in the deepest reverence. As a consequence, the modern mind frequently finds the author of "The Deemster" devoted to the obvious and the hysterical; to others he is a novelist who depicts humanity with moving power and great faithfulness. "The Deemster" is universally acknowledged as one of his masterpieces, and the story lends itself easily and effectively to screen requirements.

Readers of the book will readily recall the love of Daniel Mylrea for Mona, the daughter of the Governor of the island, and the sorrow it brought to both; of how the brother of Mona was killed by her lover in self defence, and of the sentence of banishment pronounced upon him by his own father. If some of the situations seem familiar to the screen, it should be remembered that the story is one of Hall Caine's earliest works and was written long before the birth of the moving picture.

A critical estimate of the photographic version uncovers but few points at which to take exception. The largest of these is over emphasis, a shortening of a number of scenes deing desirable—especially those at the jail. This jail, by the way, is the only mistake in locations made in the picture—it looks large enough to house comfortably half the inhabitants of the island. These defects are of minor importance, compared to the romantic and scenic charm of the photoplay. A novel and impressive incident is the trial of Daniel Mylrea on Tynwald Hill, the ancient law mount.

There is a sentimental interest in the selection of Derwent Hall Caine to head the cast. The young man is able to maintain his position by right of merit. He is more the intellectual than the romantic type, and has been endowed with the Jovian brow of his sire. His acting reveals an easy command of his resources, and his personality is distinctly in his favor. A better understanding of repose, as applied to the screen, and a greater variety of facial expression, are two attributes of his art that will come to him through experience. Marian Swayne is physically attractive and mentally alert in the character of Mona. She also plays with sincerity and feeling.

Scene from "The Deemster" (Arrow).

Sidney Bracy is the best male member of the supporting cast, and competent impersonations should be credited to Albert Froom, K. Barnes Clarendon, Alexander Hall, James Levering, Ben Lodge, Thomas O'Malley, Lee Post, William V. Miller and Freeman Barnes.

W. E. Shallenburg, who presents the picture, has provided liberally and wisely for its production. Other names connected with the making of "The Deemster" are Charles A. Taylor and E. A. Bingham, the scenarioists; Howell Hansel, dramatic director, and Henry Cronjager, in charge of the photographic work.

"One of Many"

Frances Nelson, the Star of a Five-Reel Photoplay, Presented by Arthur James and Released on the Metro Program.

Reviewed by Edward Weitzel.

THE five-reel photoplay, "One of Many," presented by Arthur James and released on the Metro program, is designated on the press sheet relating to it as "A Moral Pantomime." The term has the advantage of novelty and comes well within the borders of fact. If the product of the author had equaled his intent, all would have been well. Unfortunately several errors of construction and the employment of a "punch" finish that has happened on the stage and screen with greater frequency than in real life, mars a picture that is susceptible of being made an average good photoplay.

Shirley Bryson, the part played by Frances Nelson, is a young manicurist who makes the mistake of sacrificing herself that she may secure the money needed to properly take care of her invalid mother. Later, she is married to the son of the man to whom she sold herself. When the husband learns the truth he turns from her, but they are reconciled at the end of the last reel. The use of isolated cases to emphasize a great truth is of little value, especially when the hoped-for "punch" degenerates into a shock.

The principal error in construction is in having Shirley's future husband call upon her three times the same evening. It is a well founded rule of the drama that repeating a situation will raise a laugh, and repeating a serious situation brings the same result. A lack of diversity in the scenes of action, unexplained points of plot, too frequent use of close-ups and too devout a tone to the subtitles are other artistic failings. The story was written and directed by William Christy Cabanne. His work, in both branches of screen endeavor, gives the impression of being hurried and unfinished.

Frances Nelson's natural endowment for the character of Shirley Bryson meets every demand. A firmer technical efficiency is needed to bring out the full possibilities of her impersonation.

Three Pathe Releases

"Crime and Punishment," A Five-Reel Drama, Featuring Derwent Hall Caine; "A Million Volunteers," an Episode of "Pearl of the Army," and "Alias Nemesis," a Chapter of "Patria."

Reviewed by Ben H. Grimm.

WITH better production than it has received, and with more forceful interpretations of the participating characters, "Crime and Punishment," a five-reel drama to be released by Pathe, might have been one of the most powerful five-reelers. As the production stands, it is its story value alone that makes it at all acceptable. By that it is not meant that the acting is poor, but there are dramatic depths to the story that are unplumbed in its screen presentation. It is indeed a powerful story from which the picture was made—a story with an unusual and radical philosophy that cannot fail to make the spectator think.

The story tells of the ultra-socialistic belief of a young Russian student that it is right that one useless life should be sacrificed for the greater good of the many who suffer through the one's acts. The student is forced to flee from Russia because of his writings. He comes to America, takes upon himself (at least his mind does) the burden of the poor that surround him. Finally he kills a merciless landlord-pawnbroker, with the idea that the latter's spoils can be distributed among the poor from which the spoils were wrung. The student allows an innocent man to be accused of the murder. The accused man, tortured by the third degree, confesses. The student's mental struggles are interrupted by the arrival of his mother and sister from Russia, and by a girl who has been forced to the streets. The latter, whose father was the cause of her vocation, reforms at his death. She reads the Bible to the student. He fights his own mind, but is finally overcome by the Scripture, and gives himself up as the murderer of the pawnbroker.

Scene from "Crime and Punishment" (Pathe).

Derwent Hall Caine is seen in the role of the young Russian student. On him most of the work devolves. Marguerite Courtot is cast as Sonia, the girl. Others in the cast are Cherrie Coleman, Lydia Knott, Carl Gerard, Sidney Bracy and Robert Cummings. The film was produced by the Arrow Film Corporation.

"Alias Nemesis."

The sixth installment of "Patria," the International serial with Mrs. Vernon Castle, shows Patria at a secluded house near Newport, where she was brought after her rescue. Elaine, a cabaret dancer, who is the exact counterpart of Patria, is masquerading as the heroine. Complications result. The Baron tells a suitor of Elaine that Captain Parr has won her affections. During a mask ball Patria gets Elaine into her room and changes clothes with her. Elaine's rejected suitor climbs to the window of the room, and having previously that night seen Elaine in costume, is about to shoot Patria when Elaine inadvertently gets in the way of the bullet. Elaine is killed. Patria makes the Baron believe that she is Elaine, and that the murdered girl is herself. Mrs. Castle wears a fetching bathing suit in this two-reel number. There are several very good double exposure scenes.

"A Million Volunteers."

The mystery-tension tightens in this, the eleventh two-reel episode of the Pathe serial, "Pearl of the Army." We expect near the end of the two reels, to see the Silent Menace unmasked, but the captive proves to be the Menace's servant. In this installment Pearl frees herself from the grip of the Menace and puts the wafers in the Dare safe. Orderly Adams figures largely in this episode, and tries to dissuade Pearl from marrying the Major. The Silent Menace and his gang get into the Dare house, where a fight takes place. The intruders blow open the safe. Just as the rescuers arrive a hand is seen taking the wafers from the safe. This is an exciting number. Pearl White is, as usual, pleasing.

"The Black Stork"

Five-reel So-called Eugenic Photoplay Introducing Dr. Harry J. Haiselden and His Plea for Better Babies.

Reviewed by Edward Weitzel.

THE public at large remembers the case of Dr. Harry J. Haiselden, the Chicago physician who refused to operate on a newly-born deformed infant in order to prolong its life. This case inspired the writing of "The Black Stork." During the development of the story the terrible consequences that are visited upon the offspring of the man or woman in whose blood the taint of syphilis exists are pictured with uncompromising realism. Numerous types of mental and physical defectives are exhibited, and the entire picture takes the form of a clinic.

In fact, about the only audience that the picture might be shown to would be a class of advanced medical students or those making a study of such conditions with a view to imparting such knowledge under proper conditions. The place to exploit it is not the moving picture theater. The revelation of such a subject is of vital importance to humanity, but only under proper conditions; these conditions are not to be found within the walls of a moving picture theater open to the general public. In other words, if "The Black Stork" be a fit subject for the public screen, then the books on the shelves of a doctor's library are fit subjects for places on the shelves of the juvenile department of a public library.

By George Blaisdell.

I "sat in" with Mr. Weitzel when he viewed "The Black Stork." I heartily agree with his conclusions. I am convinced that an exhibitor who shows this picture with or without a preliminary examination will do himself and his community a distinct disservice, to put it mildly, and probably would commit an offense that by many of his patrons would be considered damnable. In saying this I would in no measure detract from the high and noble purposes that in all probability inspired Dr. Haiselden in his participation in the enterprise. I do disagree with his judgment that the picture is one for promiscuous showing. As a propaganda picture, for exhibition before members of eugenic societies, it would reach its limit of usefulness.

The story shows the source of the taint to have been in a slave woman, which, of course, means that the contamination is of a double character. The inclusion of the color question will give Southern exhibitors pause on this one angle alone.

In the subject appear many deformed children, brought forward to exemplify the evil effects flowing from uneugenic marriages. The lot in life of their prototypes in every community can hardly be a happy one. What will be the position of one of these in a neighborhood following the showing of "The Black Stork"—especially among his playmates? What of the parents? I submit this to the consideration of exhibitors who may give a second thought to the showing of "The Black Stork."

FANNY WARD TO PORTRAY SALLY TEMPLE.

Sally Temple, the famed star of Drury Lane theater and of Pump Lane, in which she lived, is to be immortalized upon the screen. Fanny Ward, Lasky-Paramount, plays the title role in the adaptation of Rupert Sargent Holland's novel to be released under the title "The Winning of Sally Temple."

Among those who appear in the support are Jack Dean, Walter Long, Horace B. Carpenter, Billy Elmer, Paul Weigel, H. Woodward, Harry J. Smith, Eugene Pallette, Florence Smythe, John McKinnen and Vola Vale.

General Film Company.

CANIMATED NOOZ PICTORIAL, NO. 24 (Essanay), Serial No. 21709.—A split reel, embracing animated cartoon burlesques and scenic. The cartoons show a convention of the Weary Willies, the picklehound at the dog show, and a training school for young brides. The scenic portion was photographed in Alaska. Beautiful Alaskan and Yukon scenery is shown, including the White Mountain Pass and Dawson City.

THE MODEL JANITOR (Kalem).—In this comedy reel, Ham becomes a model for a sculptor, but Bud spills the beans by means of a sharp stick. The sculptor, his daughter and her young man all take part in the funmaking, which is characterized by fast and amusing knockabout action. Henry Murdoch and Ethel Teare furnish their part of the fun.

A STRANGE ADVENTURE (Selig), Serial No. 21718.—An interesting reel, which tells of the romantic adventure of a youth who wants to meet a certain girl. He tries in every way to get acquainted with her, even going so far as to sham drowning, but is unsuccessful. He finally follows her to a mysterious house, and rescues her from the hands of Orientals, only to find that it is all a dream. In the cast are Jack Pickford and Bessie Eyton, who keep the romantic element uppermost.

THE SIDE-TRACKED SLEEPER (Kalem).—There is an effective human touch in this number of the "Hazards of Helen" railroad series, beside the usual thrills furnished by Helen Gibson. Careless switching almost wrecks the sleeper in which the wife of the superintendent is resting with her new-born babe. Helen saves the day by following two runaway freight cars in an auto, leaping from the speeding machine to the freight, and so stopping the cars. George Routh and G. A. Williams are also in the cast.

THE TRAP (Kalem), Serial No. 21712.—Action runs riot throughout this reel—No. 17 of the "Grant, Police Reporter" series. George Larkin shows us some live thrills again, this time performing interesting stunts in a dumbwaiter shaft and jumping from a third story window to a telegraph pole. In this number the reporter protects a police officer from disgrace at the hands of a gang of crooks. The officer's daughter is the reporter's fiancee. Ollie Kirby is seen in a boy's suit of clothes. Reviewed on page 1035 of last week's issue.

GHOST HOUNDS (Kalem), Serial No. 21078.—Ham and Bud have a lot of shivers in a haunted house in this comedy reel. They are sentenced to spend the night there after they have been caught stealing eggs. Henry Murdoch is seen as the sheriff, and Ethel Teare as the farmer's daughter who at first falls for Ham. There are numerous laughable schemes invented for scaring people by the gang of burglars which uses the house as a rendezvous. A fair reel.

THE SADDLE GIRTH (Selig), Serial No. 21071.—Tom Mix is seen in numerous hazardous riding stunts in this one-reel Western. It is the horsemanship of Tom that makes the reel worth while. The story is secondary to the stunts performed during a rodeo. Tom has a rival for the hand of a girl. This rival is consumed with jealousy when Tom captures most of the prizes, and loosens the saddle girth of Tom's mount. The rider is thrown and rendered unconscious. The guilty one is found. The girl gives her hand to Tom. Included in the cast are Louella Maxam and Sid Jordan.

General Film Company Specials.

SHIFTING SHADOWS (Essanay), Serial No. 21696-97.—This two-reel number of the "Is Marriage Sacred?" series entertainingly presents the domestic situation in which prosperity goes to the heads of the man and wife. A girl marries a man whose invention makes him rich. Overwhelmed by prosperity, they snub their friends—even the girl's father. The husband loses his money in speculating, and they come to a realization of what they have done. Funds are forthcoming, however, and the lesson is learned. The cast includes Marguerite Clayton, Edward Arnold, Lillian Drew, Sydney Ainsworth and Thomas Commerford.

THE HOODOED STORY (Essanay), Serial No. 21706-07.—One of the "Black Cat" features—a pleasing two-reel number with Gertrude Glover and Richard C. Travers heading the cast. The element of romance is uppermost at all times. The story tells of a young author who endeavors to sell his best story. It is rejected, the youth is robbed of his last penny as well as the manuscript. A series of mistakes on the part of the editor keeps the young author jumping around considerably, and in the end he finds a mate in the editor's stenographer. A pleasing release. John Cossar plays the part of the editor.

CUPID'S THUMB-PRINT (Selig), Serial No. 21702-03.—A two-reel drama with enough love interest and enough mystery to hold interest to the end. The story tells of how a would-be burglar is reformed through love, and of the downfall of an unwelcome suitor of the daughter of a wealthy man. A thumb-print on the safe and on the shirt-front of the unwelcome wooer plays a leading part in the mystery-romance. In the cast are Maybelle Spaulding, Willard Burke, Ward Wing, Frank Hamilton and Roy Sutherland.

Mutual Film Corporation

MUTUAL WEEKLY, NO. 110, Feb. 7.—New Ambassador from Austria-Hungary arrives in New York; reception at Thomas Jefferson's home, Charleston, Va.; two ships launched at Oakland, Cal.; Sarah Bernhardt sees Sarah Bernhardt handicap run, New Orleans; New York suffragists picket White House, Washington; Mrs. C. C. Boynton, family and friends live close to nature, Berkeley, Cal.; Latest creations in men's wear; eleven dog teams begin 522-mile journey, Winnipeg, Can.; three-day ice and snow carnival held at Saranac Lake, New York.

REEL LIFE, NO. 41 (Gaumont), Feb. 7.—This reel opens with instructive and interesting pictures of, as the title reads, "Queer Fish With Shells." We see the Littorina, which hides itself from enemies by attaching itself to some form of inanimate sea life with which its color blends, and the Haliotis, the inside shell of which is mother-of-pearl. Next is seen in animated cartoons, the diary of an egg from the time it is laid until the time it reaches cold storage and later the table. A visual argument against drinking from public drinking cups is given, as well as pictures of individual cups in the making. The reel closes with views of a small alligator being "hypnotized."

MUTUAL TOURS AROUND THE WORLD, NO. 15 (Gaumont), Feb. 13.—Interesting views of Mont St. Michael, a natural fortress comprising an islet on the northern coast of France, are seen in this reel. The scenes embrace sights of an imposing abbey, and the remnants of what are believed to have been the abode of the Druids, dating back to the 13th century. Also seen are views of Aro Lake, at the foot of the Alps in Northern Italy, the quaint Swiss-Italian city Lovere, the Riva di Solto, Predore, the Cascades of Aves and scenes in Casa Blanca, Morocco.

Mutual Film Corporation Specials.

SHORTY JOINS THE SECRET SERVICE (Monogram), Feb. 5.—No. 4 of the "Adventures of Shorty Hamilton." In this two-reel number Shorty leaves the West to become a secret service man. He meets up with Frisco Pete. His job is to trail down a missing secret service operative and catch the mail box thieves. A girl detective is caught by the gang and placed in a private insane asylum, where, it develops, the first detective has also been brought. Shorty fights his way into the confidence of the crooks and catches one of them. Finally a raid is made on the asylum and the two operators succored. The gang is brought to book after an exciting fight. A fair offering.

JERRY'S BIG RAID (Cub), Feb. 8.—George Ovey again in his well-known character of Jerry. He breaks into the headquarters of the Piffle Film Company and strikes them for a job. This is full of knockabout scenes and has considerable amusing nonsense in it. The plot is practically nil, but the number is pleasing in its way.

THE MUSICAL MARVEL (Vogue), Feb. 11.—Ben Turpin furnishes most of the laughs in this two-reel comedy. He is ably aided by a wild and wooly Westerner who invades the honky-tonk in which Ben is the whole orchestra. The dancehall is shot up considerably by the bold, bad man. Ben and the Westerener finally leave for the city, where a famous actress lives. The actress has told Ben that she can make him famous. In the city it develops that the actress is the bad man's wife, who left him several years ago. Several laughs occur when Ben turns on the sprinkling system in a theater during rehearsal of his orchestra. Gypsy Abbott is the leading female player. An average comedy number.

Paramount Pictures Corporation

PARAMOUNT-BRAY PICTOGRAPHS, NO. 55 (Feb. 28).—This issue contains two especially interesting subjects, the first "Swapping Foundations Under New York Skyscrapers," which takes us into the subway excavation where we see how the gigantic task which is being accomplished by the engineers is being carried out; and "Physical Experiments" showing the remarkable effects produced by rays of light through various kinds of lenses.

Pathe Exchange, Inc.

THE ISLAND GOD FORGOT (International), Feb. 11.—This, the fifth installment of Patria, has been made with the same care as that bestowed on the former releases.

A MILLION VOLUNTEERS (Astra), Feb. 11.—The mystery-tension tightens in this, the eleventh episode of "Pearl of the Army." A fine line of suspense is drawn when we expect to see the Silent Menace unmasked. But the captive is only the Menace's servant, and the real Menace is still at liberty. Exciting fight scenes occur in this number. The climax comes when a hand is seen extracting the wafers from the Dare safe, into which Pearl had previous put them, having eluded the Silent Menace. An exciting chapter. A review is printed on another page of this issue.

ALIAS NEMESIS (International), Feb. 18.—In this, the sixth two-reel episode of the serial "Patria," the girl meets with a cabaret dancer who is posing as herself. The girl is shot and Patria makes Baron Horuki and his followers believe that she (Patria) is the girl who was posing as the Channing heiress. Mrs. Vernon Castle wears a few fetching costumes in this number. Reviewed in another column.

CRIME AND PUNISHMENT (Arrow), Feb. 25.—Much of the power of the story from which this five-reel drama was made has been lost in the filming. Derwent Hall Caine is the leading player. The story tells of a young Russian student who believes that one useless life should be sacrificed for the common good of a thousand others. He carries out this belief in the murder of an oppressive pawnbroker, allows an innocent man to be blamed, but finally confesses the crime, changing his beliefs to conform with those of God. Marguerite Courtot is also in the cast. A longer review is printed on another page of this issue.

Selznick Pictures

THE ARGYLE CASE (Selznick), February.—This seven-reel version of the stage drama of the same name is a fine production and Robert Warwick is excellent in the leading role. The picture is reviewed at length on another page of this issue.

Triangle Film Corporation

THE BAD BOY (Fine Arts),—Feb. 18.—A bright comedy emerging in melodrama, containing one characterization sure to please, that of the title role, assumed by Robert Herron.

SLOTH (McClure), Feb. 19.—The fourth instalment of "The Seven Deadly Sins" series is a timely appeal to patriotism. Charlotte Walker is the featured player. A longer review is printed on another page of this issue.

Universal Film Mfg. Company

ANIMATED WEEKLY, NO. 58 (Universal), Feb. 7.—Pictures of German and American ambassadors, war preparations in this country and various other features of interest are included in this number.

DOWN WENT THE KEY (Nestor), Feb. 19.—A comedy number, by Karl R. Coolige, featuring Eddie Lyons, Edith Roberts and Lee Moran. The latter plays the part of a Lizzie-boy artist, who fascinates the young wife. The husband returns unexpectedly and some farcical, knockabout scenes occur. This is not quite up to the usual standard of this company, though the wind-up proves amusing.

AFTER THE BALLED-UP BALL (L-KO.), Feb. 21.—A two-reel comic subject, featuring Phil Dunham and Lucille Hutton. The former goes to a fashionable ball and consumes all of the punch. There is considerable amusement in these ball scenes. Later a mix-up in an apartment house occurs, the participants finally emerging to the roof tops. This is followed by a lively chase. The number is not particularly novel, but will amuse.

THE KEEPER OF THE GATE (Rex), Feb. 22.—A mission story, featuring Douglas Gerrard as a monk who leaves his brothers one night and joins a masquerade party. Remorse overcomes him suddenly and he hastens back to his place beside the gate. This is a picturesque number, with good atmosphere and telling an appealing little story.

THE HEART OF MARY ANN (Victor), Feb. 22.—A comedy number, by Ruth Stonehouse, who plays the leading role. Mary Ann's sympathies are touched by the conditions of the poor and she opens a free milk station. She follows the milk man and steals his bottles of the product, but is finally caught. This is slight in plot, but makes a fairly amusing domestic story.

ROSIE'S RANCHO (Joker), Feb. 24.—This character comedy, by Jack Cunningham, features Wm. Franey, Gale Henry and Lillian Peacock. Gale Henry plays a lady ranch owner, who rules with a rough hand. She is bound and robbed, and some laughable scenes of a knockabout type are depicted. The number is a characteristic one and a successful one of the kind.

UNIVERSAL SCREEN MAGAZINE, NO. 8, Feb. 25.—An interesting issue containing views at the "Arlington Radio Station," a lesson on "Making Pie Crust," a "New Safety Deposit Vault," and an animated clay cartoon entitled "Let There Be Peace."

Universal Film Mfg. Co. Specials

THE WAR OF THE TONGS (Red Feather), Feb. 19.—A five-reel subject, enacted entirely by Chinese players. The cast includes Tom Hing, Lee Gow, Hoo Ching and Lin Neong. The production is staged in the usual American fashion, but contains good Oriental atmosphere. It tells of the love of a tong leader and a grocer's clerk for the same girl, which brings on a tong war. The scenes are taken in China and in the San Francisco Chinatown. The chief action occurs in the last two reels, but the production is amusing throughout. Chinese subtitles, with translations, are employed freely. It makes an entertaining novelty, though the plot itself is very simple.

THE PURPLE MASK, NO. 9 (Special Universal), Feb. 25.—The first reel of this instalment is vague and disconnected. Patsy poses as a chauffeur in order to get information concerning the forthcoming motor race. Later she takes one of the cars and wins the big event with it. The loose construction interferes considerably with the suspense; though the second reel is quite strong.

THE FOLLY OF FANCHETTE (Imp), Feb. 23.—A strong two-reel number, by Harry Hagenah, featuring Mae Bush, L. C. Shumway and Malcolm Blevins. This is the story of an unhappy wife, lured away by a society crook. She becomes involved in a shooting affair, but escapes with her reputation intact. The detective in the case afterward recognizes her, but spares her. The plot is not essentially new, but is well handled and holds the interest strongly.

THE COMEBACK (Bison), Feb. 24.—A two-reel subject, from a story by Chas. E. Van Loan, featuring L. M. Wells, L. O. Pierson and others. It pictures a mining camp, dead after its boom days. A tenderfoot invades the place and is buncoed out of his roll at faro; later he pretends to make a big gold strike and regains his loss. The action is slow, but comes to a good humorous finish. It makes an interesting and convincing study of life in a former mining camp, though the story value is slight.

A DANGEROUS DOUBLE (IMP), Feb. 25.—A two-reel comedy-drama, by Harry Dittmar, featuring Sidney Bracey and Sydell Dowling. The former doubles as a newspaper reporter and a foreign prince. The prince is betrothed to a girl in this country going to Vassar. The plot is a romantic one like that of the average comic opera. The intrigue is fairly well handled, some revolutionists from the prince's home country being on hand to force his abdication. The girl is saved by the reporter and the papers torn up after the prince has been inveigled into signing them. This does not round up with much of a climax, though it is quite entertaining as it goes along.

World Pictures.

"THE GREAT TREASURE" (Selig).

"The Great Treasure" is the title of the latest Selig multiple reel feature to be released in General Film service. Otis B. Thayer directed the drama, which was written by William Anthony McGuire. "The Great Treasure" is a drama of the underworld and of reformation and love. "A Brother's Sacrifice," released the same week by the Selig company in General Film service, is a story of railroad life and of how a brother freely offered to sacrifice even his own life that his only brother might be saved. There is unusual love interest in the story. Included in the all-star cast are Edith Johnson, Lillian Hayward, Charles Wheelock, Lafayette McKee and others.

Manufacturers' Advance Notes

"GIRL REPORTER" FOILS FOREIGN CROOKS.

Two distinctly different characterizations—one of a quiet, unassuming lady's maid, and the other a clever, alert reporter out after a story and at the same time trying to foil a band of foreign crooks bent upon robbery, are entrusted to Helen Greene in "Birds of Prey," the eighth of the Mutual series, "The Perils of Our Girl Reporters." Appearing opposite Miss Greene is Earl Metcalfe as Phil Telfair, a detective and likewise the lover of the girl reporter, Claire Bristow. Edith Sinclaire does a clever piece of character work in the role of Mrs. Durkee, a wealthy, champagne-loving widow. Arthur W. Matthews appears as Baron Blanco, head of the band of crooks.

Scene from "Birds of Prey" (Mutual).

GREENWICH VILLAGE IN "WHERE LOVE IS."

Perhaps you have never been in Greenwich village, nor looked upon the famous Washington Arch through the windows of the Greenwich Village store, nor yet have slipped down McDougal Alley, past the stable studios where genius dwells—even peeked in the windows of Mrs. Harry Payne Whitney's own work shop. Perhaps you have never reveled in the Bohemian atmosphere of "Polly's" and the "Liberal Club." But you have read of these famous landmarks in New York's artistic world, and hoped that some day you might know them for yourself.

In Ann Murdock's first Mutual picture, "Where Love Is," they are there—the Village store, built in the basement of the old building on "The Square" and filled with its artistic tid bits. McDougal Alley with its wide paved street and its prim little row of studios on either side—enough to suit every seeker after artistic "atmosphere."

"Where Love Is," which brings Ann Murdock to the Mutual for the first time, is the picturization of William J. Locke's famous book by the same title. Miss Murdock is charming as the madcap "Nora," who deserts a home where everything that riches may buy can be hers, for a garret studio "where love is." Miss Murdock is supported by a distinguished cast, including Shirley Mason, Mabel Trunnelle, Jessie Stevens, Henry Stanford, Bigelow Cooper, Helen Strickland, Edith Wright, William Wadsworth and Raymond McKee.

LINDER COMEDIES FOR THE STRAND.

Kleine-Edison-Selig-Essanay announces that the Strand theater, New York City, has contracted for the Essanay-Linder comedies, the first to be shown during the week beginning February 25. This comedy, "Max Comes Across," was shown to a large number of expectant exhibitors at Loew's New York Roof theater, Tuesday, February 6, and the announcement that the Strand had signed for the entire series was made a few hours later.

Exhibitors throughout the country are prone to accept the Strand bookings as a safe guide and it goes without saying that the Essanay-Linder comedies will receive an exceptional sendoff by reason of the engagement at the Strand.

TRIANGLE MARCH 4TH RELEASES.

Constance Talmage and Dorothy Dalton are the stars of the Triangle feature releases for March 4. Miss Talmage will appear in Fint Arts comedy-drama entitled "Betsy's Burglar," written by Frank E. Woods and directed by Paul Powell. In "Back of the Man," a strong screen story written by Monte M. Katterjohn and directed by Reginald Barker, under the supervision of Thomas H. Ince.

In "Betsy's Burglar" Constance Talmage takes the part of a boarding house slavey with great aspirations. Kenneth Harland plays opposite Miss Talmage, and is said to have scored heavily in his initial performance.

"Back of the Man" is the story of a youth of brilliant prospects who lets ambition lead his heart astray from the one woman able to guide him to the heights of life.

IVAN CHANGES TITLE

In order to avoid confusion, the Ivan Film Corporation has changed the title of its new production from "The Promise" to "Two Men and a Woman." This story—written by Willard Mack, the author of "Kick In" and other famous stage and screen successes—was produced by the Ivan Film Corporation, under the direction of William Humphrey. When ready for release, it was learned that the Metro Pictures Corporation had ready for release a picture under the same title, and upon request of the officials of the Metro Pictures Corporation, the Ivan Film Corporation readily agreed to change its title.

"A GIRL'S FOLLY" NEXT WORLD RELEASE.

The next release of World Pictures Brady-made, will be "A Girl's Folly," which is mostly comedy with a very pretty love story for background. The entire play revolves around a moving picture star played by Robert Warwick and a little country girl who falls in love with him and runs away to join the company. Doris Kenyon fulfils the requirements of the little country girl. There are numerous scenes in the studio and "on location," and the making of motion pictures is shown in detail. The main idea is fun as supplied by authenic episodes in the lives of the movie players.

"A FOUR CENT COURTSHIP" (Essanay).

Bryant Washburn follows up his trmendous feature success, "Skinner's Dress Suit," in this short production. It is a Black Cat feature presenting a burlesque on the "high cost of loving." The hero, with only four cents as his bankrool, sallies forth to win the hand of a rich man's daughter. He does it, but the intermediate circumstances afford rapid-fire action which nearly lands him in jail. Hazel Daly, who was Mr. Washburn's leading woman in "Skinner's Dress Suit," appears with him in this production. There are some big scenic effects, including a theatrical performance and a lobster palace. The screen time is 28 minutes. The film will be released through the General Film Service, February 20.

Scene from "Four Cent Courtship" (Essanay).

Paramount Program

Fannie Ward and Mae Murray in Two Exceptional Lasky Features for the Week of February 19.

TWO Lasky productions will head the Paramount program for the week of February 19; "The Winning of Sally Temple," in which Fannie Ward plays the leading role, and "On Record," in which Mae Murray will be the star. "The Winning of Sally Temple" is based upon Rupert Sargent Holland's celebrated novel, "The Heart of Sally Temple," in which Miss Ward, by her beauty, charm and rare histrionic ability has made this noted character literally live forever in one's mind. The reproductions of London in the period of the story are as remarkable as were the street scenes in Lasky's adaptation of "Oliver Twist."

The production was prepared for the screen especially for Miss Ward by Harvey F. Thew. Miss Ward's latest successes were "The Years of the Locust" and "Betty to the Rescue." In "The Years of the Locust," Fannie Ward was seen as the charming young bride of an unscrupulous broker. In "Betty to the Rescue," she added fresh laurels to her brow as the harum-scarum young western girl. In "The Winning of Sally Temple," she appears as the hoydenish, sympathetic, young actress of London in the period of 1770.

Two of the unusual scenes are thrilling fights; one between Jack Dean and Billy Elmer, and the other between Jack Dean and Billy Elmer and the Duke of Chatto's retinue of servants. During the taking of the picture, this fight became so strenuous that one man was thrown through a window and severely injured.

Others prominent in the cast are Horace B. Carpenter, Walter Long, Paul Weigel, Eugene Pallette, Florence Smythe and others. The production was made for the Lasky Company by George Melford.

"On Record" is the first production that Mae Murray will have appeared in since her recent marriage, and since her return to the Lasky studios on the coast. "On Record" is a story by John B. Clymer and Paul West, the scenario having been made by Beulah Marie Dix and George Dubois Proctor, and directed by Robert Leonard. This play gives Miss Murray a wonderful opportunity of displaying her inimitable characteristics on the screen. In the cast with Miss Murray are Emmett Flynn, Henry A. Barrows, Louis Morrison, Charles Ogle, Bliss Chevalier, Gertrude Maitland, Jane Wolf, Mrs. Lewis McCord and Lucien Littlefield.

The story of "On Record" is that of a typical young girl reared in a small town, the most interesting incidents of her life being the falling of an aeroplane from the sky, after which she is enabled to be a member of the rescue party. There is a young aviator with whom, after a series of interesting and dramatic situations, she falls in love and is happily married.

Surrounding the program for this week are four single reel features of great excellence; the fifty-fourth edition of the Paramount-Bray Pictographs, the magazine-on-the-screen; the fifty-fifth of the series of Weekly Trips Around the World, personally conducted by Burton Holmes, in which he takes a visit to the Stony Indians; and a Black Diamond Comedy entitled "Her Scrambled Ambition."

In the fifty-fourth edition of the Paramount-Bray Pictographs, there are three interesting magazine articles dealt with, topped off with a very clever cartoon comedy, the first of which is an unusual series of pictures showing the delicacy and use of the methods of the Japanese in their art of self-defense—jiu-jitsu; while the second is a unique series of pictures taken at Wesleyan University by their giant telescope, showing how it works and what it does for the public, and the last, depicting the evolution of winter sports.

The cartoon comedy for this week, features "Bobby Bumps in the Great Divide."

Burton Holmes, the world's greatest traveler, in his "little journeys" for this week, takes his fellow travelers to visit "With the Stony Indians," where he pictures in a very interesting manner, the Indians of the Canadian Northwest, who long since made peace with England and Canada, and who are seen in their annual festivities of crowning one of Canada's high officers as chief of their tribe.

"Her Scrambled Ambition," a Black Diamond Comedy for this week, is a very funny picture, telling the story of one of the many thousands of girls who desire to be a motion picture star at a salary of $20,000 a week.

WILBUR BEGINS NEW FEATURE.

After several weeks' respite from work spent in vacationing while David Horsely was shaping his policy for future production, Crane Wilbur next week renews his activities at the David Horsley Studios in Los Angeles. Mr. Horsley has arranged for the appearance of his star in six five-reel feature productions which he will release through the Mutual Film Corporation.

Three of these six features have been completed, namely, "The Painted Lie," "The Single Code" and "Love Everlasting."

"The Eye of Envy" is the title of the subject on which Mr. Wilbur begins his work. The picture is to be made from a story written by the star. It is based on the theme of envy and is treated in semi-allegorical fashion. The cast which will support Mr. Wilbur is being assembled, and other preparations for production are now going on. Following "The Eye of Envy," Mr. Wilbur will appear in another of his own plays called "The Eleventh Commandment."

Miss Minter Heads Mutual

Has Difficult Role in "The Gentle Intruder"—Program for Week of February 19 is Strong.

MUTUAL announces the sixth of the Mary Miles Minter features for release on February 19. This will be in five reels and is entitled "The Gentle Intruder." It will be a fit companion piece to the preceding pictures in which the young American star has appeared, and affords her a wide opportunity in a difficult role.

"The Gentle Intruder" was produced under the direction of James Kirkwood, who has directed Miss Minter in the other features. George Fisher plays opposite the star, while Eugenie Forde, as the ambitious wife, Harvey Clark, as the conscience-tortured lawyer, Marie Van Tassell, as a spinsterly aunt, Franklin Ritchie in the role of a fortune-seeking nobleman and George Periolat as the bequeathor of a fortune, all add much to the worth of the photoplay.

On February 19, also, will be released the sixth of the "Adventures of Shorty Hamilton" series, "Shorty Promotes His Love Affair." In this adventure Shorty gets mixed up with a gang of counterfeiters. He attempts to assist Anita Keller in rounding up this gang, but first is beguiled by one of their number into exchanging a good ten-dollar bill for a counterfeit one. Later he is arrested for "shoving the queer," and has a very difficult time persuading the guardians of the law that he was trying to break up the gang and not assist them.

In "Misjudged," the ninth of the Mutual-Niagara series, "The Perils of Our Girl Reporters," Helen Greene, Earl Metcalfe, Edith Sinclair and Arthur W. Matthews play the principal parts.

The American company contributes two short dramas, "Calamity Anne's New Job," featuring Louise Lester, released February 23, and "Mouth Organ Jack," in which J. Warren Kerrigan is starred, ready February 24.

From the Horsley Studios comes a Cub Comedy, "Jerry's Brilliant Scheme," scheduled for February 22. George Ovey, of course, plays the role of Jerry and is assisted by George George, M. McCarty, Arthur Munns, Claire Alexander and Helen Gilmore.

Vogue offers "The Butcher's Nightmare" on February 25, in which Ben Turpin poses as the proprietor of a futuristic butcher shop where goat meat is sold as lamb chops. Arthur Moon plays a tough crook accused of robbing the till in Ben's shop, and there is a most exciting chase scene along the housetops, with Arthur jumping along the tops of chimneys and the police blowing up the chimneys in their effort to capture him. Gypsy Abbott, Marie Templeton and Ed. Laurie also contribute to the fun in this Vogue release.

"Mutual Tours Around the World," No. 16, reaches the screen February 20. It provides scenes at Old Heidelberg, Germany; Scottish Highlands, showing pictures of the northeastern part of the highlands in County Cromarty; Monaco, the World's smallest principality, showing scenes at Monte Carlo, the great gambling center; and the neighboring watering place at Mentone, France.

On February 21 comes the Mutual Weekly with all the latest news of the day. On this date also is released "See America First," No. 76, showing scenes around Vicksburg, Mississippi, and the National Military Cemetery. There are views of the city with its stately court house built by slave labor in 1858, of the Yazoo and Mississippi Rivers and of the battlefield. Among the monument pictures are the U. S. Navy Memorial and those of Mississippi, Illinois, Wisconsin and Pennsylvania.

On the same reel is one of the Gaumont Kartoon Komics, "Polly's Day at Home," dealing with the escapades of a parrot which creates havoc by answering the telephone and making itself an interloper in other directions with dire results.

Reel Life, No. 43, scheduled for February 25, shows four topics, "Dainty Perfumes," "Teaching Children to Swim," "Logging in Louisiana" and "Making Bottles at Home."

GENERAL FILM'S BIG WAR SERIES TIMELY.

The General Film Company has released at an extremely timely date its big series of Official Government Pictures of the European conflict "The War," which is now ready for the exhibitor. At a moment when America faces the greatest crisis in her career, these wonderful pictures with their gospel of preparedness and its results should prove a splendid object lesson. The United States must do just what England and France and the other allies have done. War stares us in the face. Preparedness is no longer a political issue or a lecture theory; it is an absolute necessity. Its neglect now would mean national disaster.

"The War" is released by the General Film Company for Official Government Pictures, Inc., of which W. K. Vanderbilt is President and H. P. Davison, Treasurer. All of the gross profits from the showing of these pictures in America will be devoted to deserving War Relief Funds.

"POOR LITTLE RICH GIRL" FINISHED.

The production of Mary Pickford's newest Artcraft Picture, "A Poor Little Rich Girl," by Eleanor Gates, was completed early last week as far as the star herself is concerned. Several scenes in which "Little Mary" does not appear are now being taken, after which the final cutting and assembling will be commenced under the supervision of Director Tourneur at the Fort Lee plant.

Kalem's New Series Ready March 1

Strong Titles Selected for Initial Episodes of "A Daughter of Daring" and "The American Girl."

FOR the benefit of those exhibitors who have not had an opportunity to get into communication with their exchanges since it was announced that the Kalem Company would shortly market two new series productions—a two-part and a single-reel series—we are authorized to state that the initial episodes of both can be booked now for showing about the first of the month.

The title selected for the first complete chapter of "A Daughter of Daring" is "In the Path of Peril," from a story by Herman A. Blackman, featuring Miss Helen Gibson. Not only is the main theme quite refreshingly new, but several genuine novelties have been incorporated into this release that will certainly be well received.

Scene from "The Black Rider of Tasajara" (Kalem).

For example: Instead of wrecking a train in the ordinary manner, Gypsy Joe, who has sworn to be avenged for the rough treatment meted out to him by a young engineer, throws a sliding switch in the middle of the passing freight. The result is that the forward truck of a flat car keeps to the main track and the pull exerted by the rear truck taking the siding, breaks the train in twain. With the engineer helpless in his cab following an attack by the gypsy, Helen, the telegraph operator at the loneliest station on the line, must do something and do it quickly to save the onrushing express.

How she mounts her motorcycle and speeds down the track after the runaway, finally riding full tilt up the dragging flat-car and from there making her way over several intervening cars to the engine, is registered in a series of compelling scenes.

The first of the Bechdolt stories, each a complete two-part production starring Miss Marin Sais, and released under the series title of "The American Girl," will be called "The Black Rider of Tasajara."

This title not only fits the play perfectly, but has a decided advantage from an advertising, interest arousing standpoint. The element of mystery is cleverly worked out and will keep audiences guessing the identity of the Black Rider until near the close of the second part.

"The Black Rider of Tasajara" meets his match when the American Girl, Madge King, takes up his trail. The author, who knows his rugged west as well, if not better, than any author living now writing for the screen, has been on hand at the Kalem studios in Glendale during the filming of his story and has co-operated splendidly with Director James W. Horne in securing those bits of local color so necessary to an artistic, finished production.

Interest in both "The American Girl" and the new railroad series is bound to grow, in view of the fact that each release is complete and does not depend upon succeeding episodes to carry out the plots. As the public dictates additional episodes will be filmed.

UNDER WATER FIGHT IN "PEARL" 13.

With the United States likely at any time to be dragged into the World War, nation-wide interest in "Pearl of the Army," Pathe's military-mystery serial, is heightened. Wise exhibitors see their opportunity. The 13th chapter announced for release the week of February 25 is entitled "Modern Buccaneers."

This chapter is a thriller if ever there was one, with Adams and the Silent Menace in divers' suits fighting under water, sure that Adams is her country's enemy, cutting his air tube. Then comes the realization that whatever he may be she loves him. She, too, dons a diver's suit and descends to the bottom of the Canal. There she finds——.

The serial is produced by Astra with Pearl White as the heroine. Advertising matter includes one, three and six-sheet posters, heralds and lobby display.

Metro Has Big List

Its Offerings Up to May Include Many Interesting Subjects.

THREE features picturized from great novels, two plays based on famous poems and one powerful play written and directed by one of the world's foremost motion picture directors are among the many big offerings on the releases for February, March, April and May, just announced by the Metro Pictures Corporation. This elaborate list of offerings forms one of the banner motion picture events of 1917, and is in line with the big program of attraction pictures recently announced by president Richard Rowland of Metro. The full list of releases is as follows:

February 5, "The End of the Tour," with Lionel Barrymore as star; February 12, "One of Many," presented by Arthur James, with Frances Nelson as star and written and directed by William Christy Cabanne; February 19, "The Promise," based on James B. Hendry's novel of the same name, with Harold Lockwood and May Allison as stars; February 26, "The Secret of Eve," with Mme. Petrova as star.

March 5, "The Barricade," with Mabel Taliaferro as star; March 12, "The Beautiful Lie," an adaptation of the poem by Ella Wheeler Wilcox, with Frances Nelson as star; March 19, "The Hidden Children," from the novel of the same name by Robert W. Chambers, with Harold Lockwood and May Allison as stars; March 26, "The Mortal Sin," with Viola Dana as star.

April 2, "The Waiting Soul," with Mme. Petrova as star; April 9, "The Power of Decision," with Frances Nelson as star; April 16, "His Father's Son," with Lionel Barrymore as star; April 23, "The Secret Spring," an adaptation of "The Hidden Spring," the famous novel by Clarence Budington Kelland, with Harold Lockwood and May Allison as stars; April 30, "God's Law and Man's" with Viola Dana as star.

May 6, "The Belle of the Season," an adaptation of the poem by Ella Wheeler Wilcox, with Emmy Wehlen as star; May 13, "The Millionaire's Double," with Lionel Barrymore as star; May 20, "To the Death," with Mme Petrova as star;

Besides these big features four comedies are announced for March as follows: March 5, "A Modern Romance," with Max Figman as star; March 12, "Handy Henry," with Mr. and Mrs. Sidney Drew as stars; March 19, "The High Cost of Living," with the Drews as stars; and March 26, "The Awakening of Helena Minor," with the Drews as stars.

Following the list just announced will come Miss Ethel Barrymore in "The Call of Her People," an adaptation of Edward Sheldon's play, "Egypt." This is the first of a series of attraction pictures in which Miss Barrymore will appear and which will cost not less than $100,000.

NEW POLICY BY MOSS.

Marking a new policy for the B. S. Moss Producing Company, announcement is made that the new year's program of feature releases will be confined to screen adaptations of popular novels. The plan involves a series of eight monthly releases, starting off with "One Hour," of which Paul McAllister is the scenario writer and director. "One Hour" is now undergoing completion with a company headed by Zena Keefe and Alan Hale, at Saranac Lake. The final scenes will be taken at Jacksonville, Fla., the feature running into six reels. On the heels of "One Hour" will come a big teeming seven-reler, adapted from Cosmo Hamilton's great book, "The Sins of the Children."

The B. S. Moss Producing Company has practically completed negotiations with two stars whose identification with "Sins of the Children" will be of surpassing interest, topping a cast of intelligence and reputation. For the promulgation of this plan of novel adaptation, the B. S. Moss Producing Company has made extensive preparations down to the last detail, and for the remainder of this series, of which titles will be announced shortly, the Moss offices will fairly hum with activity. 1917 methods will be impressed into an advertising campaign of national range, presided over by a staff of experts who know how to reach the live spots of the motion picture world.

MISS WILLIAMS TO STAR IN REAL LIFE DRAMA.

"Out of the Wreck," the Morosco-Paramount production in which Kathlyn Williams is starred, is based on an incident in actual life, having been written from a story told to Erva Corsan, the author of the photoplay, by a newspaper reporter. The story is said to be so remarkable that it bears out the old saying that truth is stranger than fiction.

In the remarkably strong cast which supports Miss Williams there are included William Clifford, William Conklin, Stella Razeto, William Winter Jefferson and Don Bailey.

Universal Offers Chinese Picture

Red Feather Feature Written and Played by Chinese—Interesting Program for Week of February 19.

A DISTINCTLY novel and interesting feature, "The War of the Tongs," which will appear under the Red Feather brand, is the leading release of the Universal program for the week of February 19. This is an unique photodrama in that the entire cast is Chinese and the story was written by a Chinese. The leading roles are played by members of the Imperial Chinese players, and the work of the Oriental actors compares favorably with that of the best known American screen stars.

For the first time in the history of screen productions the customs of the Chinese in their homes, stores and secret societies are shown by native performers. The inner workings of the tongs and the Chinese gambling houses are vividly and faithfully depicted. Every phase of Chinese home life, including the strange marriage rites, is depicted, and adds to the interest of this offering. "The War of the Tongs" will be released on Monday, February 19, on which date will also appear the Nestor comedy, "Down Went the Key," an extremely funny farce written by Karl R. Coolidge and produced by L. W. Chaudet, with Eddie Lyons, Lee Moran and Edith Roberts in the principal roles.

"The Great Torpedo Secret," a Gold Seal three act comedy drama featuring Herbert Rawlinson and Neva Gerber, is the chief offering for Tuesday, February 20. This powerful photodrama was produced by Stuart Paton, director of "20,000 Leagues Under the Sea," from the scenario by E. B. Lewis. In the cast supporting the stars are Howard Crampton, Adele Woods, Frank Tokanaga, Mrs. Crampton and Frances Mayon. "The Fireman's Bride," a Victor comedy drama, with Matt Morse and Jane Gail, is the other offering of this date.

On Wednesday, February 21 the L-Ko two-part comedy, "After the Balled Up Ball," which is one of the best of the famous L-Ko comedies. The funmakers are Phil Dunham, Lucille Gutton and Merta Sterling, and this trio makes things move lively throughout the entire two reels. The Universal Animated Weekly, with timely news in pictorial form, and the Laemmle drama, "Sin Unatoned," with Robert Leonard and Margarita Fischer, are other Wednesday releases.

The first of a series of Mary Ann stories, "The Heart of Mary Ann," written and produced by Ruth Stonehouse, and in which she plays the principal role, will appear on Thursday, February 22. This is a one act comedy drama with wide human appeal, and is an exceptional program release. If this first one can be judged a criterion the forthcoming Mary Ann photoplays will be in great demand.

The Big U two-part war drama, "The Man Who Saved the Day," with Wallace Reid and Pauline Bush as the featured players, and the Rex drama, "The Keeper of the Gate," with Douglas Gerrard and Ruth Clifford, are also scheduled for release on this date.

"The Folly of Fanchette," a two-act Imp drama of society and the underworld, produced by John McDermott from the story by Harry B. Hagenah, is the leading offering of Friday, February 23. This is a particularly interesting picture in which Mae Bush and Malcolm Blevins appear to excellent advantage. The Victor comedy, "A Bare Living," featuring Eileen Sedgwick and Ralph McComas, and the Big U Indian ,drama, "Heroes of the Plain," will also be released on Friday.

Charles E. Van Loan, the noted short story writer, is the author of the Bison two-act Western drama, "The Comeback," which will be presented Saturday, February 24. Mr. Van Loan is famed for the ingenuity of his plot, and in "The Comeback," which was scenariorized by Charles J. Wilson and produced by George Marshall, there is a clever and surprising twist to the story which makes it stand out as one of the best short features ever released. The Joker comedy, "Rosie's Rancho," with those inimitable laugh builders, Gale Henry and William Franey, will appear on the same day.

The feature release for Sunday, February 25, is the Imp two-part drama, "A Dangerous Double," written by Harry Dittmar and poduced by Robert F. Hill. This is a novel story of newspaper life, with Sidney Bracey and Sydell Dowling playing the leads. The Rex drama, "Lost in the Streets of Paris," with King Baggot and Leah Baird, and the Powers split reel, "A Day in the Life of a Dog," a comedy cartoon, and "The Buried Treasures of Ceylon," a Dorsey animated travelogue, complete the week's program.

"A Strange Discovery," the ninth episode of the Grace Cunard-Francis Ford serial, "The Purple Mask," is the most thrilling episode yet released in this popular serial. It will appear during the week.

"BURNING THE CANDLE" (Essanay).

What is claimed to be one of the best feature productions ever put out by Essanay is nearly ready for the screen. It is "Burning the Candle," Henry B. Walthall's latest play. Only a few scenes remain to complete the filming process of "Burning the Candle." Not since "The Truant Soul," has Mr. Walthall been cast in a role as tensely dramatic as in this production. The story projects a powerful lesson on the liquor theme. It presents the great emotional actor as a young southerner whose lips have never before tasted alcohol suddenly confronted with the death-dealing temptations of the saloon and cafe cocktail. He succumbs to the lure, and his passion for drink, becoming suddenly inflamed, drags him to the depths of depravity. He loses his position in a New York cotton broker's office, and his young bride quits him.

A remarkable thread of love between the inebriate and his wife traverses the plot. In the end it lifts him from his depravity and restores the young couple to happiness.

Mary Charleson, who has won nation-wide praise in her support of Mr. Walthall in his past successes, is seen again as his leading woman. "Burning the Candle" offers the young star even a greater field for the exercise of her talent than before. She has achieved her best work here.

Week's Work at Fox Studios

Numerous Activities Engage Players and Directors at Various Plants of Producing Company.

THE casts for the new subjects starring Stuart Holmes, Valeska Suratt, and William Nigh were partly completed last week. Besides Dan Mason, three other players have been chosen for Mr. Holmes' next production. The trio consists of Carl Extrom, Betty Norris and June Daye. All three are new to Fox features. Miss Norris came from Canada just to get into photoplays. Miss Daye, a native of New York City, began her stage career at the age of five in "Ben Hur." Her motion picture work has included engagements with Solax, Lubin, Biograph and Crystal.

The company under the direction of William Nigh returned to New York last week after spending seven weeks in the mountains around Chattanooga, Tenn., on locations. In the cast will be Mr. Nigh himself in the stellar role, and Martin J. Faust, Mr. Nigh's assistant, Ned Finley, Ruth Thorpe, Bert Gudgeon, Edward Roseman, Frank Robbins, Eward Kennedy and Danny Sullivan.

Miss Suratt began work last week in her seventh Fox film under the direction of Kenean Buel. The photoplay will be an adaptation of a famous novel with a remarkable story. Already selected for important parts in the picture are Claire Whitney, Tom Burrough and I. W. Percyval. Mr. Burrough was in "Caprice of the Mountains," "The Unwelcome Mother," "Sins of Men," and "The Ragged Princess." Miss Whitney has also appeared in several Fox productions.

St. Thomas Island, in the one-time Danish West Indies, which have just been acquired by the United States through purchase from Denmark, will be the scene of Virginia Pearson's forthcoming production for William Fox. Within the next few days preparations will have been completed entirely for the making of the subject on this Government's newest possession. Miss Peason's will be the first pictureplay ever to be screened in these islands. James Vincent, who directed the film which Miss Pearson finished a fortnight ago, will again be in charge of the photodrama.

Following "A Child of the Wild" and "The Tiger Woman," which are scheduled for February 19, William Fox will release George Walsh's fifth starring western film under title of "Melting Millions."

Walsh's role in his newest screen play is perhaps the most suitable the big star has ever had. In one part of the subject he portays a football warrior who is so dashing and irresistible that he demoralizes the whole team. The supporting cast consists of Anna Luther, Velma Whitman, Frank Alexander, Sydney Deane, Cecil Holland and Charles Girard. Otis Turner had charge of the direction. Scores of "extras" were used in the drama.

The Hollywood studio's latest acquisition is Carlos Romanelli, master designer. Mr. Romanelli is an Italian and gained first fame in this country by doing a panel for a member of the family of Russell A. Alger, then Secretary of War.

MANY BOOKINGS FOR LINDER COMEDIES.

Two months of solid bookings for one hundred and fifty Max Linder prints, the pre-release aims of Kleine-Edison-Selig-Essanay Service and Essanay's special sales department, have been accomplished. There is still an opportunity for exhibitors to obtain the film at an early date, as Essanay will speedily furnish additional prints wherever required.

President George K. Spoor, of Essanay, announces that his plan of dividing expense on local advertising with exhibitors has resulted in the appearance of Max Linder copy in every paper of size in the country, and in a majority of the smaller dailies and weeklies.

The first comedy, "Max Comes Across," has been viewed by thousand of exhibitors, and exchanges report that complete bookings for the entire set of twelve comedies rapidly followed the exhibition of the initial effort.

The comedian is now at work on his second picture, "Max Wants a Divorce," which he promises to make even much funnier than the first, now becoming acquainted with American methods and requirements.

NOVEL TITLES USED IN "THE DEEMSTER."

The Arrow Film Corporation's production of "The Deemster," which is now being sold on the state rights plan, is supplied with novel titles in the way of typographical construction. Instead of utilizing pictorial or other forms of advertising now in vogue, the Arrow Film Corporation has utilized a new font and set the titles in a particularly attractive fashion, taking account of the fact of legibility and ease of reading. The titles are novel and unique, inasmuch as they bear very little decoration, the tone and typographical layout being depended on to lend an atmosphere of quality befitting to the subject.

Big Publicity for Marguerite Clark Picture

Famous Players-Paramount Production, "The Valentine Girl," Heralded by Over a Million and a Half Valentine Art Supplements in Newspapers.

ONE of the greatest publicity campaigns ever given a five reel program picture has been launched in advance of the Famous Players-Paramount production, "The Valentine Girl," in which Marguerite Clark, the idol of the screen public, is to star.

By arrangement with six great newspapers in the east and middle west, there was issued on February 11 a total of 1,500,000 beautiful art supplements to these papers showing an exquisite reproduction of Miss Clark as the Valentine Girl, the issue being particularly timely because of the coming of St. Valentine's Day on the 14th of the month.

Every Paramount exhibitor will profit by the issuing of this art supplement because of the fact that Miss Clark is mentioned on the picture not only as the Valentine Girl but as a Famous Players-Paramount star. The circulation of these million and a half copies so timed as to arouse interest in the Famous Players production, "The Valentine Girl," and is scheduled well in advance of the release day, which is set for April 9.

The supplement itself is so exquisitely tinted and the portrait of Miss Clark is so wonderful in its likeness that there is no question but what these pictures will remain in the households to which they are circulated long after the photoplay itself is released.

The following big newspapers have issued this beautiful art supplement: The New York World, with a circulation of 550,000; Philadelphia Inquirer, with a circulation of 300,000; Chicago Herald, with a circulation of 275,000; Boston Herald, with a circulation of 120,000; Washington Herald, with a circulation of 28,000, and Fitchburg News, with a circulation of 6,000.

In order to permit exhibitors to benefit to the largest possible extent from this innovation, slides have been made reproducing the art supplement itself and adding information that Miss Clark will be in such-and-such a theatre in the Famous Players-Paramount Picture, "The Valentine Girl," at such-and-such a time. Three hundred of these slides have been taken for circulation by the Boston Paramount exchange, and fifty slides have been taken by each of the other Paramount exchanges. These will be distributed to the exhibitors.

The popularity of Miss Clark and her recent success in "Snow White," coupled with this far-reaching publicity campaign, should make her picture, "The Valentine Girl," one of the greatest successes in which she has appeared.

GAUMONT PROGRAM FOR THE WEEK OF FEB. 25.

The capital of beleaguered Austria and the battlefields of Chickamauga and Chattanooga are among the entertaining pictures coming from the Gaumont Studios, Flushing, N. Y., during the week of February 25 through Mutual. The former is of interest because of the history that is being made there; the latter furnish material for comparison between the present methods of making war and those in vogue half a century ago.

The first release of the week is "Reel Life" No. 43, February 25. It shows the making of "Dainty Perfume," "Teaching Children to Swim," "Logging in Louisiana" and "Making Bottles at Home." Each of these is an interesting subject, showing all that is necessary for the understanding of the subject, yet now being so long as to tire the spectator. It will be noticed that the subjects have been selected with such care that they are of interest to everyone.

February 27 brings to the screen "Tours Around the World" No. 17. Vienna is the most important contributor to this reel, but there are excellent pictures also of the Gota Elf river, Sweden, and the city of Toledo, Spain. The Gota Elf is the longest river in Sweden, and is noted for its beautiful scenery. Toledo is a perfect example of a mediaeval city.

There are two releases from the Gaumont Studios February 28. These are Mutual Weekly No. 114, and the split-reel, "See America First" No. 78, and the Gaumont Kartoon Komic. As the weekly is not made up until it is ready for release, no forecast of it can be made. "See America First" will show the Battlefields of Chickamauga and Chattanooga, both bloody conflicts of the Civil War. The cartoon is called "The Elusive Idea."

MARY MILES MINTER'S NEW SUBJECTS.

Mary Miles Minter has just completed the American-Mutual feature, "The Gentle Intruder," and will soon start work on "Environment," the first of a new series of six features to be released through Mutual. The second of this series will be entitled "Annie For Spite."

"Environment" was written by James Kirkwood and will be directed by him. Mr. Kirkwood is also the author of two other of Miss Minter's plays, "'Faith" and "The Gentle Intruder." Jack Vosburg, who has just completed his first engagement at American in the juvenile role of William Russell's production, "My Fighting Gentleman," will play opposite Miss Minter.

"Annie for Spie," which will follow "Environment," is an adaptation of the story by Fred Jackson which appeared in the "All Story Weekly."

Diplomatic Incident in Pictures

Events Surrounding Break with Germany Fully Covered in Gaumont-Mutual Weekly.

THE resources of the Gaumont-Mutual Weekly are so vast that little extra effort was required to cover the news of the break with Germany. This has been done adequately in Mutual Weekly No. 111. Spectators are shown not only leading personages in the great world drama, but also places of strategic importance where trouble is anticipated should war be the result of the present situation.

Count von Bernstorff and Ambassador Gerard are first pictured, and then the "Carmania" is seen putting to sea despite the submarine warning. The vessels of the Central Powers which sought refuge in New York Harbor are then shown. As these ships are said to have been damaged by their crews and have figured largely in the news, the picture is of great news value. The special section closes with the pictures of guards protecting the bridges and aqueducts, of coast defense guns, of President Wilson, and of the Capitol dome at Washington with the Star Spangled Banner proudly waving in the breeze.

Other pictures in this issue of the weekly include views of the American Naval Party accompanying Franklin D. Roosevelt, assistant secretary of the Navy, on an inspection tour of the marine forces of the United States, the severe blizzard which crippled London's transportation lines, the gas explosion which killed twenty-six persons in Chicago's ghetto, and the fight made by New York firemen to save several large gas tanks when endangered by a blaze in zero weather.

ROBERTS IN ROLE OF NEW TYPE OF CONSUL.

Theodore Roberts, one of the screen's greatest character actors, has added to his list of accomplishments the creation of an entirely new type of Yankee in the Lasky-Paramount picture, "The American Consul." The story, which was written by Paul West, deals with the adventures of an American from the middle west who mixes into politics, becomes a consul in a South American country, and suddenly finds himself the central figure in a small-sized war.

The peculiar thing about this particular Yankee is that instead of being the typical slap-dash, hustling type of citizen which we are accustomed to picture ourselves as typifying—and which has become traditional on the stage—Roberts makes Abel Manning a dreaming, abstracted sort of man who is not aroused from his slothfulness until backed into a corner and made to fight for his life. It is a role at marked variance with others in which Roberts has recently appeared, notably the brutal, slave driving Boer in "The Plow Girl."

The character of Manning is typical of the photoplay itself, which gathers momentum as it goes along. Among those who appear in support of Mr. Roberts are Maude Fealy, Tom Forman, Raymond Hatton, Charles West and Ernest Joy. For the scenes which occur in Washington city the players were sent across the continent from the Lasky studio in Hollywood.

"IS MARRIAGE SACRED" SERIES INCREASED.

Several additions have been made to the schedule of Essanay's forthcoming units of the "Is Marriage Sacred?" series. The twelfth dramatic offering of the cycle is entitled "The Vanishing Woman." It parallels the struggles of the old-fashioned woman and the modern woman with present-day life. This production will be released March 3.

Four other gripping photodramas have been added to the "Is Marriage Sacred?" series. These will follow weekly the release of "The Vanishing Woman."

"The Pulse of Madness," the first, is a tensely dramatic offering, hinging on an inconsequential quarrel between a man and his wife which almost leads to the destruction of their happiness. It will be released March 10.

"The Pallid Dawn," the second, depicts the awakening of a young bride to her terrible mistake of marriage.

"The Wifeless Husband," which follows, shows a man who remains true to his wife even after she deserts him, and finally wins her back.

"Meddling With Mariage," the last, takes up the problem of relatives interfering with a young couple's marital affairs.

ASHLEY MILLER PRODUCING "THE MORAL CODE."

Ashley Miller is directing Anna Q. Nilsson and Walter Hitchcock in "The Moral Code," an Erbograph Company feature, which is to be released shortly on the Art Dramas program. Mr. Miller also wrote the story of the photoplay.

"The Moral Code" is described as a powerful screen presentment of a very real, vital problem of everyday life in America and England, where the regulation of the marriage relation is in accordance with the laws and traditions of the past, and not the living present.

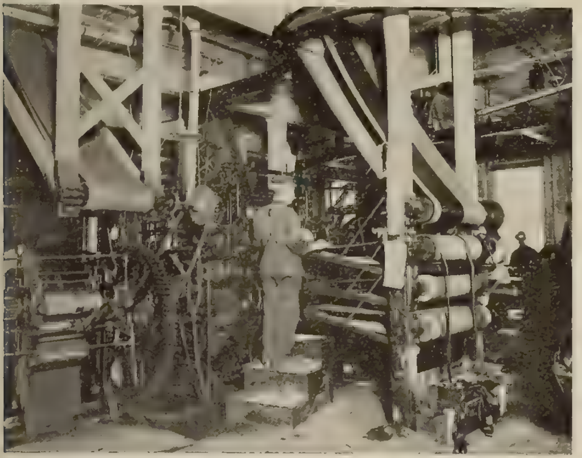
"MAKING A RUBBER SHOE" (Reel Life No. 44).

How great a part is being played in the general dissemination of knowledge is well illustrated by the weekly releases of Gaumont's "Reel Life," the Mutual Magazine in Film. Keeping well in view the fact that the screen's first purpose is to entertain, the editorial staff intrusted with the preparation of this single-reel also realizes that entertaining facts of everyday life may yet be presented in such form that exhibitors may use the pictures to hold their patrons and also to attract customers they might not otherwise secure. An illustration of this is found in "Reel Life" No. 44, showing "Making a Rubber Shoe."



Scene from "Making a Rubber Shoe" (Mutual).

The wonderful strides of the rubber industry since the days when a method of vulcanization was discovered are realized when one sees this highly diverting series of pictures of the various processes required in converting the crude rubber and other materials into the finished overshoe. The more nearly universal is the use of an object, the more nearly universal is the public's interest in it. Hence it follows that "Making a Rubber Shoe" will be a picture that any exhibitor will be glad to show. When it is remembered that this is only one section of the reel, the entertainment value of "Reel Life" may readily be understood. Week after week it shows the latest inventions, the proper way to do many things, and just how various articles are manufactured, in addition to featuring many other phases of life's activities. There is little wonder, therefore, that "Better Films" Committees recommend "Reel Life" so unhesitatingly.

MOSS TO MAKE "SINS OF THE CHILDREN."

It is announced by both Little, Brown & Co., book publishers, of Boston, and the B. S. Moss Producing Company, of New York, that the latter company has acquired the motion picture rights to "The Sins of the Children," one of last year's best sellers, and written by Cosmo Hamilton, author of "The Blindness of Virtue" and a number of other popular novels.

The Moss concern will enlist the services of a well-known dramatist to picturize the novel into a seven-reel feature. Mr. Moss is now negotiating with big players, both male and female. Also, he is flirting with several directors with reputations to stage the production. The picture will, according to present plans, represent Moss' April release.

Actuated by recently proposed adverse legislation and the motion picture antagonists generally, Mr. Moss will endeavor to make his forthcoming production free from the shortcomings ascribed to pictures by self-appointed critics. In this attempt he will engage the best material possible from the story to the minutest detail.

"PRIDE AND THE DEVIL" NEXT APOLLO-ART DRAMA.

"Pride and the Devil" is the title of the next Apollo picture to be released on the Art Dramas program. Richard Ridgely is directing the production, in which Alma Hanlon is starred, and Bigelow Cooper, Leo Delaney and Pamela Vale are seen in the principal supporting parts. The story of "Pride and the Devil" was written by Lawrence McCloskey.

Alma Hanlon plays the part of the wife in the production and Leo Delaney is the husband. Bigelow Cooper is cast for the part of an elderly libertine, and Pamela Vale, the new find of Harry Raver, plays a dramatic part. Miss Vale, incidentally, is the lady who, Mr. Raver promises, will soon outvamp the vampiest of vampires. The still pictures of the production which have come to this office would seem to bear out this contention, at least as far as looks, dress and general composition are concerned.

DAVIS DIRECTING JEAN SOTHERN IN ART DRAMA.

Will S. Davis, the former Fox director, who was engaged by the Van Dyke Film Production Corporation for the production of that company's pictures, is at work on his first picture at the Van Dyke studios. Jean Sothern is playing the lead in the production, which is being made under the working title of "The Cloud." The story is said to be an effective mixture of the light, pretty "business" that Miss Sothern does so well, and the heavier dramatic action which she demonstrated was well within her range in "Whoso Findeth a Wife," a previous Art Dramas release. The story of the picture was written by Joseph F. Poland, who is the author of a number of highly successful photoplays. In support of Miss Sothern appears a strong cast, including Arthur Housman, who distinguished himself in "The Lash of Destiny" and "Her Good Name," both Art Dramas; Ogden Crane, Mae Melvin, Franklin Hanna, Richard Tucker, Walter Miller and others.

"ENLIGHTEN THY DAUGHTER" READY FOR DISTRIBUTION.

Henry J. Brock, head of the Enlightment Photoplays Corporation, which concern is at present handling the distribution of the Ivan film, "Enlighten Thy Daughter," announced to the trade this week that the feature is now ready for distribution and that offers were being considered for territorial rights.

Mr. Brock, during the run of the picture at the Park theater, has refused bookings on the feature from various theatrical booking concerns.

First-class theaters in all the principal cities throughout the country have been offered, but Mr. Brock was firm in his desire to let the purchasers of territory use their own judgment as to the exploitation of the picture in their respective states and is now considering the many proffers for the picture.

"Enlighten Thy Daughter" has been at the Park theater for three weeks now, and during that time has shown a remarkable increase in patronage.

FAMOUS PLAYERS IN SAVANNAH.

Pauline Frederick, Thomas Meighan, Frank Losee, John Sanpolis, Pedro De Cordoba and the other members of Miss Frederick's company have gone to Savannah, Ga., where they will take the exterior scenes for Miss Frederick's next Famous Players picture under the direction of Hugh Ford. It was Mr. Ford who directed Miss Frederick's latest success on the Paramount program, "The Slave Market."

TOYLAND COMEDIES.

The Motoy Comedies, which are being produced by the Toyland Film Company, of Chicago, are something original and new to the exhibitors. The animated "doings" of these dollies bring roars of laughter from grown-ups as well as children, and the comedy is, in many situations, much more humorous than is possible for human comedians to produce.

The cleverness with which the dolls are manipulated and the photography and setting combine a picturization that holds the interest of the entire audience, and many exhibitors claim that their patrons look forward to "Motoy" pictures with an anticipation that is a new experience to the exhibitor.

Scene from "In the Jungle" (Toyland).

All the movie stars are burlesqued and Charlie himself cannot cavort in crazier capers than his doll imitator. Mary is always the heroine and appears in her pretty curls and coy manners to please her admirers.

This is the very newest thing in pictures—no doubt about it—and with the countrywide movement for "better film for children" they should be a big money making proposition for the exhibitor.

Selznick Producers Active

Herbert Brenon Returns to Studio Activity—Other Companies Reported Very Busy.

WITH the recovery of Herbert Brenon from the illness which incapacitated him for the past five weeks, activities in the Selznick Picture studios resumed their normal aspect this week. Although only out of the hospital ten days Mr. Brenon returned to his studio on the Palisades this week to finish his Selznick Picture, "The Eternal Sin," starring Florence Reed. This production was nearly completed at the time of the producer's illness, so only a few days' studio work remain. As soon as the last scene is taken Mr. Brenon will go to Atlantic City, where arrangements have been made to rent a theater to be used for cutting and assembling the film.

Meanwhile the other three Selznick Pictures stars are rapidly completing their new productions. Clara Kimball Young, under the direction of Albert Capellani, has only a few more days' work to do on her fourth Selznick offering, the adaptation of Eugene Walter's potent drama, "The Easiest Way." Her third picture under the Selznick banner, "The Price She Paid," founded on the novel of the same name by the illustrious David Graham Phillips, has been cut and assembled by its director, Charles Giblyn, and is now ready for release.

The Norma Talmadge company, under the direction of Julius Steger, is in the south filming the exteriors of her next Selznick production. The title of this picture is being withheld temporarily, but the story is said to be an exceptionally strong one and it is expected that the picture will prove a worthy successor to "Panthea," which is now playing to capacity business throughout the country.

Robert Warwick, whose first appearance as a Selznick Picture star will be made in all the Marcus Loew houses next week in the adaptation of "The Argyle Case," is progressing famously under the direction of Leonce Perret in the production of E. Phillips Oppenheim's unusual and stirring novel, "The Court of St. Simon." "The Argyle Case" is reviewed elsewhere in this issue.

Spring Bouquet of Thanhouser Pictures

Edwin Thanhouser is particularly proud of the spring Thanhouser releases which offer a variety of notable stars in Gold Rooster plays of diversified interest.

A Pathe-Thanhouser eight-act special is Mr. Frederick Warde in "The Vicar of Wakefield." The Gold Rooster program includes Florence La Badie, Gladys Hulette, Charlotte Walker, Mr. Warde in a modern drama, and Doris Grey and Wayne Arey co-starred.

Doris Grey and Wayne Arey will see their names in electric lights for the first time in "Her Beloved Enemy," a Thanhouser mystery romance released through Pathe on March 4. In the same month Glayds Hulette will be featured in another "lovely girl" comedy-drama, the most pretentious of the series, "Pots-and-Pans Peggie." Ernest Warde and W. Eugene Moore are the respective directors.

Charlotte Walker will make her first appearance as a Thanhouser star in April in "Mary Lawson's Secret," the drama of Lloyd Lonergan, which was directed by John B. O'Brien. Florence La Badie will next appear before her great following in "The Eyes of Eleanor," a story by Agnes C. Johnston, directed by Frederic Sullivan.

Mr. Warde's modern drama, "The Clerk and the Criminal," is by Lloyd Lonergan and was directed by the star's son, Ernest C. Warde. For the second half of May the Thanhouser offering will be another whimsical Gladys Hulette picture, "The Candy Girl," by Philip Lonegran. It was directed by W. Eugene Moore.

"Fortune Photoplays"

That's the Title Selected by General Film for the Street & Smith Subjects—Will Be Four-Reel Productions.

FORTUNE PHOTOPLAYS" is to be the title of the new series of four-reel features now being produced from the Street & Smith stories. This series as announced last week will be based on the pick of the thousands of stories that have appeared and will appear in the Street & Smith group of popular fiction magazines. The title has a peculiar significance from two standpoints—first in typifying the extreme good fortune of the General Film Company in securing from a score of competitors the exclusive motion picture rights to these stories, and, second, from the exhibitors' standpoint, who will be fortunate in being able to exhibit such splendid money getters.

"Fortune Photoplays" will be four-reel dramas. They will be based on stories from such magazines as Ainslee's, Popular, Smith's, People's, Detective Stories, Top Notch and The Picture Play Magazine. These publications publish more fiction annually than all other magazines combined. They reach 15,000,000 readers.

The first release, to be on or about March 2, will be based on "The Inspirations of Harry Larabee," by Howard Fielding. This story is the recognized masterpiece of this greatest of all short story writers. It has enough action to make several usual length features.

Bluebirds for March

Four Excellent Productions to Be Offered, Featuring Several Popular Players.

FOUR attractions of promised excellence have been scheduled for the Bluebird March program, leading off with Violet Mersereau, in "The Boy Girl," and embracing Myrtle Gonzales, Val Paul and George Hernandez in "Mutiny;" Ella Hall in "Polly Redhead," and Louise Lovely and Rupert Julian in "The Gift Girl."

John C. Brownell wrote "The Boy Girl" and assisted Edwin Stevens in directing Miss Mersereau, working at Bluebird's Leonia (N. J.) studio. In this feature the star plays the role of a boy through a large part of the story. The assisting players will be Sidney Mason, Byron Dean, Charles Mason, Maud Cooling, Tina Marshall, Florida Kingsley and Caroline Harris.

Lynn F. Reynolds wrote and directed "Mutiny," in which Myrtle Gonzales will be featured along with Val Paul and George Hernandez as the March 12 release. Mr. Reynolds has contributed a number of greatly popular features to Bluebirds, making a specialty of locations in the woods and mountains. This is the first time he has made a drama of the sea.

Ella Hall in "Polly Redhead," set for March 19, finished a week at S. L. Rothapfel's Rialto last Saturday, and it is said that "Mutiny" will also be shown at that theater before its date of regular release. Miss Hall plays a dual role in "Polly Redhead," the basis of the play being Edgar Jepson's "Pollyooly" stories. Jack Conway directed.

After being absent from Bluebirds more than three months, Louise Lovely returns as co-star of "The Gift Girl," with Rupert Julian, March 26. Mr. Julian directed. H. R. Durant's play, "Marcel's Birthday Present," suggested this feature, E. J. Clawson doing the scenario. Rex Roselli, Emory Johnson, Wadsworth Harris and Frederick Montague will be among the supporting players.

Apart from the regular program Bluebird is experiencing a revival of the demand from exhibitors for "The Eagle's Wings," the industrial preparedness feature released last December. The patriotic inspiration this strong play affords makes it exceedingly timely and beneficial right at this time in our nation's life.

"THE TRUFFLERS" (Essanay).

An exceptional cast is being filmed in "The Trufflers," Essanay's next feature, for release on March 4. The story was written by Samuel Merwin, the novelist, and published in the Cosmopolitan magazine. It depicts vividly the harum-scarum, unconventional life of New York's Bohemia.

"Skinner's Dress Suit" is Essanay's latest feature, having been released February 5. It is a picturization of Henry Irving Dodge's Saturday Evening Post story of classy togs and fame. Bryant Washburn is the star.

Nell Craig portrays the role of Sue Wilde, a young woman who has cast aside the draperies of conventionality, in "The Trufflers." The other well known characters in the story are impersonated by the following players: Richard C. Travers, who has occupied a stellar position in motion pictures for several years, is being filmed as Henry Bates, "The Worm." Ernest Maupain appears in the strong character role of Jacob Zanin. Sydney Ainsworth, who has won praise all over the country for his heavy leads in past Essanay features, is assaying the part of Peter Ericson Mann. Harry Dunkinson and Patrick Calhoun, both prominent in important roles in other productions, are to be seen as Abe Silverstone and Hy Lowe, respectively. Anna Mae Walthall is enacting the part of Maria Tonifetti of the story.

The story has a powerful appeal, revealing, as it does, the "inside" life of a colony of artists. It was widely and favorably read, and this in itself provides a good base for advance advertising for the picturization. It will be released through Kleine-Edison-Selig-Essanay service.

According to reports from advance private showings, "Skinner's Dress Suit" is a well staged, well enacted and well photographed feature. It is a semi-humorous treatment of human nature, portraying a clerk who buys a dress suit, and because he is well dressed and looks good, is enabled to put over a big business deal for his firm and win fame and fortune.

"Skinner's Dress Suit" is being released through the Kleine-Edison-Selig-Essanay service. It has a screen time of 1 hour, 10 minutes.

"SLOTH" IS FOURTH IN "SEVEN DEADLY SINS."

Because its message is of particular importance at this time, Charlotte Walker in "Sloth," one of McClure's "Seven Deadly Sins," will be made the fourth release instead of the sixth in this series of five-reel features.

"Sloth" is a drama of preparedness treated in an entirely new manner. It is a call for patriotism sounded on a different sort of instrument. Especially is it calculated to rouse the women of the nation, to show them their duties in time of war and to inspire them by the memory of the heroic deeds of their ancestors.

Battle scenes, exceptionally well done, are a big feature of "Sloth" and these scenes are of unusual value in that they contrast old time warfare with fighting methods of the present day.

"Is the American girl a slacker?" is a line being used in advertising "Sloth." In the play, Shirley Mason is a society loving example of "the idle rich." She cares little for anything but a good time. She lacks patriotism.

The story of "Sloth" concerns her development from a lazy little girl to one filled with the fire of a self-sacrificing love of country. The play will have the same effect upon the persons who see "Sloth" as it has upon Shirley in the motion picture.

CREATIVE SELLING "THE GIRL WHO DIDN'T THINK."

The Creative Film Corp. are now directing the sale of territorial rights on their picture, "The Girl Who Didn't Think," from their splendidly appointed new offices in the Strand Theater Building, No. 1585 Broadway, New York City. President Leon J. Wagner, Secretary Donald Campbell, and Treasurer Jack Weinberg are all active in the work of disposing of the picture with the thought that as soon as this feature has been placed another will be produced.

"The Girl Who Didn't Think" is being very favorably commented upon by the prospective purchasers to whom it is being shown. Jane Gail, who has the leading feminine role, is quite a favorite among moving picture men who remember the splendid work she did for the London Film Company and are well aware of her great popularity among photoplay fans. Stanley Walpole, who plays opposite her, is also a great favorite in the picture theaters throughout the country, and May Simon, the well-known Russian tragedienne, although a comparative newcomer on the American screen, has a role in the picture which is certain to establish her as a big asset for any producer who may be fortunate enough to secure her services for future pictures.

SELIG'S ON GENERAL FILM PROGRAM.

FOR release in General Film service the Selig Polyscope Company announced "The Redemption of Red Mullin," a sensational multiple reel drama with a capable cast. There are said to be a large number of unusual situations in the drama, which was written by Edwin Arden and produced by Otis B. Thayer. The photography, lighting effects, and scenic investiture are all said to be exceptional.

"For Reward of Service" is another of the Selig shorter length subjects exploiting a world famous star. George Fawcett stars in this comedy-drama, which is said to be filled with sentiment and appeal. The drama, "For Reward of Service," was produced by Al Green. Charles Le Moyne and other well known players will be seen in Mr. Fawcett's support.

William N. Selig is calling the special attention of the trade to his shorter length subjects released in General Film service. Such stars as Jack Pickford, George Fawcett, Bessie Eyton, Vivian Reed, Charles Le Moyne and others are appearing in these productions. They cannot but carry unusual box office value.

GATHERED BY OUR OWN CORRESPONDENTS

St. John Film Men Honor Jules H. Wolfe

Manager of Standard Film Service Leaving for New York Gets a Farewell Party, Including a Sleigh-Ride to a Suburban Inn.

By Frederick F. Sully, 68 Lansdowne Ave., St. John, N. B.

ST. JOHN, N. B.—Jules H. Wolfe, for the past year and a half local manager for the Standard Film Service, Limited, until recently distributors for the Metro pictures, is to leave soon for New York, and as a farewell party a half hundred or so of his St. John friends, including the staffs of Famous Players, the Fox, the Universal, the Pathe and the Vitagraph exchanges tendered him a sleighing party and dance.

Several large sleighs provided with heavy fur robs and all the equipment necessary for comfort for a long ride, left the Famous Players office at 7:30, and after a drive of ten miles or so into the country returned to the Manor House, an inn five miles outside of the city, where a fine chicken dinner had been prepared and was waiting. The demi-tasses were followed by a few brief speches. Bert Silberstein, of the Famous Players, paid a tribute to Mr. Wolfe as an industrious, energetic representative of the industry, and expressed regret on behalf of the St. John men for Mr. Wolfe's departure. The guest of honor responded modestly thanking his friends for the event which was a pleasant termination of a very happy stay in the city. He also took the opportunity to make known his appreciation of his fellow-workers and tradesmen. The whole affair, which brought the office staffs of the exchanges together on a social basis for the first time, was arranged by Carl Crawford, of the Fox exchange, and Mitchell Bernstein, of the Famous Players.

Mr. Wolfe is to be succeeded at the St. John post by his brother, Maurice, who has been with the Standard office in Montreal, and with the World Film Corporation in Chicago until a few years ago.

Ralph W. Sealey Building Theater.

St. John, N. B.—Ralph W. Sealey, who has been running a rink in Kentville during the winter and converting it into a picture theater during the warmer months, was a visitor in the city last week. He now has under way a fine new house costing about $20,000, which will be open and ready for business by the latter part of the spring.

Clark and Hiltz Are Building Theater.

Kentville, N. S.—Clark and Hiltz, who are now operating the Nicklet theater, are building a new house to be called the Strand, and which will be opened about May 1. The Strand will be an up-to-date theater in every detail, with 800 seats and an eight piece orchestra.

Amherst Theater Burns.

Amherst, N. S.—Fire of unknown origin destroyed the Empress theater early one morning last week, causing a loss of about $40,000. The building, owned by John H. V. Moore, was valued at $35,000, and was one of the largest motion picture theaters in the Maritime Provinces. The loss was only partly covered by insurance aggregating $15,600.

St. John Opera House Reopened.

St. John, N. B.—Repairs on the St. John opera house have been completed, and the building opened for its first season of vaudeville on Saturday, Feb. 10, under the supervision of J. M. Franklin, of the Strand theater of Halifax, with Walter C. McKay acting as resident manager.

Business Notes.

St. John, N. B.—Joe Lieberman, assistant manager for the Famous Players Film Service, Limited, is to go on the road in the near future with the big war picture, "The Canadian Soldiers in Action." Joe has been connected with the office staff for several years both in Toronto and St. John, and has had some experience on the road.

St. John, N. B.—R. Allan Christie, of the Universal office, has returned from a trip through the provinces and announces a very heavy booking of the serial, "The Purple Mask." Mr. Christie took the feature, "Idle Wives," to Digby, N. S., for a short run.

Boston News Letter

By J. J. Phillips, Moving Picture Editor, Boston Journal.

J. A. Eslow Benefit a Success.

BOSTON, MASS.—Pearl White, Florence Labadie, Dorothy Green, King Baggot and Marjorie Roberts, the winner of the movie ball last year, and a troop of vaudeville and legitimate talent from the current productions playing Boston, entertained the large and enthusiastic audience that filled the Colonial theater, Sunday, February 4, at the J. A. Eslow benefit that was presented by the Film Managers' Association of New England.

J. A. Eslow.

Chairman Farrell and Tom Sprey and the rest of the committee are to be congratulated, first, for the fine entertainment that was provided, and, secondly, for the success of the affair from the financial standpoint. The figures have not been quoted as yet, but from the number that attended from all branches of the film industry, as well as the local exhibitors and countless movie fans that clamored for seats long before the doors of the theater were opened it is safe to predict that the present proceeds will run into the thousands.

Globe Feature Gets "Civilization."

Boston, Mass.—The Globe Feature Film Company of Boston will distribute "Civilization" for New England from now on, having secured the rights from the New England Film Distributors, Inc.

Manager Soriero Plays to Patriotism.

Boston, Mass.—Thos. D. Soriero, manager of the Park theater, Boston, has arranged a very timely and effective patriotic overture "stunt" that is meeting with the approval of the patrons of this popular theater. This "stunt" is put on at the opening and close of each show and consists of a stereopticon display of patriotic figures, finally dissolving into the picture of President Wilson.

Jack Merrill Goes to Paramount.

Boston, Mass.—Jack Merrill, formerly of the Boston Universal office, has now joined the Boston Paramount forces and will have charge of the sales and promotion end of this exchange.

Federal Feature Film Buys Exchange.

Boston, Mass.—The Federal Feature Film Company has just bought the Union Film Company. Grant, the manager of the Federal, contemplates a big season with the new aquisition and proposes to enlarge his sales force shortly.

D. W. Griffith Visits Boston.

Boston, Mass.—D. W. Griffith paid a visit to Boston yesterday for the purpose of securing a theater for the showing of "Intolerance." It is rumored that the picture will be shown at the Tremont theater where the "Birth of a Nation" played for several months.

Business Notes.

Boston, Mass.—The Bluebird films that were recently secured for New England by Louis B. Mayer, of the Metro, are being booked very heavily throughout this territory.

Boston, Mass.—Vitagraph's feature film, "The Girl Philippa," opened at the Modern theater for a run of two weeks. Manager Pinanski was thoroughly pleased at the first half week's business and expects to do equally well for the remainder of the run of this production here.

Triangle Exchange to Release McClure Films.

Boston, Mass.—The McClure series, "Seven Deadly Sins," that are to be released through the Triangle exchange, have been booked at Gordon's Oylmpia in Boston. A large newspaper advertising campaign has been planned for this series in Boston and New England papers.

Greater Features Buys "Dante's Inferno."

Seattle, Wash.—George P. Endert, of the Greater Features company, announces that he has bought the rights for the revised edition de luxe of Dante's "Inferno" for the six states of Washington, Oregon, Montana, Idaho, California and Nevada. The picture is already booked to the Greater Theaters company's new Butte, Montana, house, the Rialto, and Mr. Endert is sending two companies down into California with the film. He himself will leave this week for Montana to book "Where are My Children?" "The Dumb Girl of Portici," "The Conquest of Canaan" and Dante's "Inferno" throughout that state. The Greater Theaters company has also signed for "The Conquest of Canaan" for their Coliseum in Seattle, and their Columbia in Portland.

Theater Men from Juneau, Alaska, Visit.

Seattle, Wash.—George Irving, of the Jackson Amusement Company, who own the new Palace theater in Junean, Alaska, came down to Seattle this week on a business trip of a week or two.

W. H. Thompson, of the Dream theater, Juneau, is also in town looking after new bookings and new equipment. Mr. Thompson says that Juneau motion picture fans have learned to expect the best there is in pictures, and the manager who makes good there now has to furnish them.

Senate Passes Radical Bill

Oregon Moving Picture Men Believe Measure Passed by the Upper House of the Legislature to Be Aimed at Picture Shows—Bill Is an Amendment of Old Law —It Passed Without Exhibitors' Knowledge.

By Abraham Nelson, 601 Journal Building, Portland, Ore.

PORTLAND, ORE.—Moving picture men are much concerned about the introduction and passage by the state senate at Salem of senate bill No. 65, introduced by Senator Farrell, of Multnomah county. It was introduced January 15 and passed January 26, apparently as a matter of routine and without objection. The bill was still before the house for consideration on February 1, the time of this writing, and unless the moving picture interests send some one to Salem to explain its dangers, it is anticipated that it will also pass the house as a matter of routine.

Senate bill No. 65 is an amendment to Section 2094, Lord's Oregon laws, and is commonly regarded as a law concerning the publication and distribution of obscene literature. The law was originally passed in 1864 and follows statutes of similar purpose in other states. The amendment adds the words "immorally suggestive" to the classification of things, books, photographs, et cetera, which it is unlawful to publish under the old statute, and goes on to say, in effect, that it shall be unlawful to publish anything "that is principally devoted to, or contains, or is made up, in part, of accounts or stories of crime or lust, or deeds of bloodshed." The old law reads on this point "that is principally devoted to, or made up of, accounts or stories of crime or lust or deeds of bloodshed," the words, "or contained" and "in part," having been added by the amendment. The moving picture men claim that the new wording is such that if radically construed it will eliminate those little touches in films which, when taken with the whole plot, make an interesting and highly proper story, but which, when considered by themselves and "in part" might be put in the class denounced by the proposed amendment.

Owing to its vague title, the measure was not discovered by the moving picture men until it had passed the senate, advices coming from one of the general offices in the East that the bill had passed.

One of the anomalies of the situation is that Senator Farrell, who introduced the bill, is an owner of the Strand theater building.

Washington State's Censor Measure

State Senator Walter S. Davis Has Introduced a Censorship Bill—Three Well Paid Members Will Do Viewing.

By S. J. Anderson, East Seattle, Wash.

OLYMPIA, WASH.—Senator Walter S. Davis of Pierce county, a professor in the College of Puget Sound, introduced a bill in the state senate this week, which provides for the appointment of a state board of censors, without the approval of which no film can be shown within the state. With its approval the film can run the gantlet of any number of municipal boards and critics.

The Davis bill provides for a board of three members to be named by the governor. One of the members must be a woman, and each member is to receive an annual salary of $1,800.

A secretary-treasurer is to be employed at a salary of $2,000 per annum. The headquarters of the board is to be located is Seattle. Under the provisions of the bill each film producer must pay a fee of $1 for each 1,000 feet or less of film viewed by the censors. Only such films as are moral, entertaining, or amusing, and of a harmless character are allowed to pass the board's critical eyes. Each film so approved is to be stamped and thereafter may circulate freely throughout the state.

C. F. Hill Manager of Local Triangle.

Seattle, Wash.—Exactly one week from the day we first found C. F. Hill occupying a room all his own as sales manager of the Seattle Progressive office, we walked in upon him sitting complacently in the manager's chair at the Triangle headquarters, as if he had been holding sway there all his life, instead of just since that morning.

Such sudden advances have been a habit with Mr. Hill ever since he came to Seattle last March and first started in the film business, and he has seemed to take a delight in keeping his friends guessing as to exactly what title would apply to him next time they met him.

P. M. Brinch Has Been Busy.

P. M. Brinch, special representative for Triangle, who has been in the city for several weeks looking for the best man to take charge of the Northwest territory for Triangle, decided that Mr. Hill was the man.

Mr. Birch, who is leaving next week for Salt Lake City to establish a buying branch there, expresses himself as more than satisfied with his sojourn in Seattle. Besides obtaining the services of Mr. Hill as manager, he has signed 24 contracts in 23 days, among which were the renewal of contracts with the Liberty of Seattle, the Columbia of Portland, and the Liberty of Spokane. He reports 14 Seattle houses signed in two weeks.

Appoints M. G. Winstock as Service Doctor.

For the Northwest territory he has engaged M. C. Winstock as a sort of service-doctor, to go out on the road and, by feeling the pulse of the exhibitors, to fix up any film troubles before they become serious enough to be brought to the attention of headquarters in Seattle.

New Triangle Road Representative.

Another addition to the Triangle forces is that L. K. Scamahorn as road representative. Mr. Scamahorn was formerly connected with the Kissel Kar Company in this city.

De Luxe Gets "Garden of Allah" and "Vera, the Medium."

Seattle, Wash.—Al. Rosenberg announces that his brother, Mike, who is in New York arranging the purchase of the new films, has bought the Northwest rights to the "Garden of Allah" and Kitty Gordon's latest release, "Vera, The Medium."

H. A. Johnson Company Starts Advertising Department.

Seattle, Wash.—H. A. Johnson announces that the firm name has been changed from the H. A. Johnson seating company to The H. A. Johnson company, and that he is fast signing contracts for his new film advertising department.

Visitors on Film Row.

Seattle, Wash.—Visitors at the various film headquarters in Seattle this week were: W. S. Quinby, Liberty and Bell theaters, Bellingham; W. P. Armour, Mineral, Wash.; E. W. Groesbeck, Buckley; J. E. Farrel, Colonial theater, Ellensburg.

Special Association Meeting Called.

Portland, Ore.—Following the discovery that the city commission was to pass a new censorship ordinance, the Oregon motion picture men's association held a special meeting January 29 to discuss the issue. H. W. McLean, secretary of the city civil service commission, attended as emissary from the mayor and asked for ideas from the moving picture men on the proposed ordinance. The association suggested that a clause giving the right of appeal from censors' decisions to the municipal court be added and one or two other minor changes.

The meeting was well attended.

James Books "Patria."

Portland, Ore.—James' Broadway has booked the International serial "Patria" through the local Pathe exchange. Former owners of the big theater did not have any luck with serials there, but Manager James anticipates big business with this one. He opened Jan. 28 with seven reels, three chapters, which together with a scenic and a comedy, constituted the show.

The front of the Broadway has been completed and it is now a blaze of lights.

Grants Pass House Sold.

Grants Pass, Ore.—W. A. Betts has purchased the Joy theater. This house has had several owners of late, the most recent being a corporation to which Graham Bros. sold. Mr. Betts will now assume exclusive control. He recently made a trip to Portland arranging service.

East Side House Reopens.

Portland, Ore.—The American, a small theater on Union avenue and Shaver street, will be reopened Jan. 31. The new manager is B. McAtee, a former vaudeville artist. E. M. Loy, formerly with Metro in Portland, is assisting Mr. McAtee in getting the house ready to open and has designed a striking checkerboard front for the theater.

Heard on Film Row.

Portland, Ore.—Sam Sax declares that business at his house, the Princess, is better than ever. As evidence he asked us to ride in his new Willys six, a recent acquisition.

Camas, Wash.—Mrs. Lyman Ward, Grand theater, has put in a new Powers 6 B, installed by Pete Sabo.

Philadelphia Film Happenings

Fewer Picture Theaters in Philadelphia This Year—Mortality More Noticeable Among the Smaller Houses—Changes Among the Managers and Exhibitors—Picture Features Shown—Chapin's Lincoln—Lecture for Employes.

From F. V. Armato, 144 N. Salford St., West Philadelphia, Pa.

Joseph A. Murphy to Manage the Ruby.

PHILADELPHIA, PA.—Joseph A. Murphy, formerly assistant manager of the Regent theater, 16th and Market streets, has been transferred and will assume the management of the Ruby theater at 7th and Market streets. Mr. Murphy has had eleven seasons' experience in the theatrical business in musical comedy, drama, stock, minstrelsy, vaudeville and pictures.

Fewer Theaters in Philadelphia This Year.

Philadelphia, Pa.—Local film houses will be far fewer in number this year than they were last. The number of houses that have paid the city tax of $100 required of all picture theaters is 165 this year, as against 197 in 1916. In 1915 235 houses paid the license fee.

The decrease in number has been anticipated by the shrewdest men in the film business and the feeling is that the industry was never locally on so sound a basis. It is the little fellows, the houses with small capacity, that are being eliminated. Many of them have been operated by novices in the picture game who fancied that profits could be made with little capital and less work. As every manager knows, the tendency toward more elaborate pictures has boosted rentals to such a degree that only a house of large seating capacity can under normal conditions hope to show a profit.

Though Philadelphia theaters will be fewer in number it is a case of the survival of the fittest, and the houses that remain represent the cream of the city.

Ball of Local 307 Coming.

Philadelphia, Pa.—Local No. 307 Motion Picture Operators' Union will hold their annual entertainment and ball next month. The affair will be given at Eagles temple, Broad and Spring Garden streets. Elaborate preparations are already under way for the event and it is planned to have it eclipse any similar function in the union's history.

Automatic Stop Tried Out by Swaab.

Philadelphia, Pa.—The McDougall automatic fire shutter and motor stopping device was given practical demonstration before a number of exhibitors and newspaper men at the showroom of Lewis M. Swaab's motion picture supply house last week and proved itself up to the mark. It is chiefly for use on motor driven machines, which when equipped with the device will stop automatically when the film breaks or anything goes wrong with the machine. It is being brought to the attention of the fire marshal and the insurance underwriters, with the hope that it may be the means of reducing insurance rates at least 30 per cent.

Lectures for Theater Employes.

Philadelphia, Pa.—A course of lectures for theater employees in the handling of the modern electrical equipment essential in the success of the motion picture playhouse are being given every fortnight by Harry Domgen, chief electrician of the Earle store. Mr. Domgen with a large force of men has for several months been equipping the theaters under the management of the Central Market Street Amusement Company with the most up-to-date electrical service obtainable. The lectures were arranged under the direction of Frank Buhler, general manager of the company. Managers, operators, electricians and all other employees of the Victoria, Globe, Princess, Savoy, Market Street and Auditorium theaters attended. The lectures have as their purpose the familiarizing of the employees of the theaters with every detail connected with the electrical operation of the motion picture machine.

Philadelphia, Pa.—The Lincoln Cycle, an animated visualization in motion pictures of the life of Abraham Lincoln, was shown here at Witherspoon Hall by Benjamin Chapin, who for some years has been turning to educational account his extraordinary resemblance to the great President. So successful was the first showing that the exhibition was repeated at the Academy of Music, one of the largest auditoriums in the city. Mr. Chapin is shown in three reels of pictures, showing incidents of Lincoln's life with realism and fidelity. He then steps upon the stage in person to play a scene, "Lincoln's Last Night at Home," in which the martyred President signs a pardon to save a young Confederate from being shot and addresses a cheering throng from his window.

Ben Shindler Takes Another Theater.

Philadelphia, Pa.—Ben Shindler, who recently sold his Royal Palace theater, at 27th street and Girard avenue, has taken over the management of the Ridge Avenue theater, at 18th street and Ridge avenue. The latter is at present enjoying a prosperous business and has all of the latest improvements.

Got Good Views of Guardsmen.

Reading, Pa.—Leroy Freese and Winfield Steele, of the Lyric theater, and Frank Escher, of this city, secured excellent scenes of the return of Companies A and I from the Mexican border. The companies were units of the National Guard of Pennsylvania in the federal service. The young men took views of the departure of the troops, which was marked by a big patriotic demonstration on the part of the citizens. The homecoming of the guardsmen was featured with a parade by the local patriotic societies, all of which are shown at advantage in the film. Messrs. Freese, Steele and Escher were complimented on their enterprise. The films are highly treasured. They were shown to capacity houses at the Lyric and are booked for other theaters.

Wm. Rippard Transferred to Philadelphia.

Philadelphia, Pa.—William H. Rippard, known throughout eastern Pennsylvania as one of the squarest men in the film business, leaves Wilkes-Barre, where he has been manager of the Mutual office for the past three years, to assume the duties of assistant manager of the Philadelphia office of the same company. While in Wilkes-Barre, Mr. Rippard made a host of friends who have expressed keen regret at his leaving this section.

Mr. Rippard first entered the film business in 1912 with the Universal exchange of New York, at which time he assisted E. M. Saunders in opening the first Universal exchange at 111 East 14th street. After a successful year with this company, he went to Baltimore and incorporated the Moving Picture Program company, furnishing a string of ten leading Baltimore theaters with a handsomely gotten up weekly program. Having spent nearly seven years on the Washington Star, his advertising experience stood him in good stead at this time and he was quite successful.

Baltimore News Letter

J. M. Shellman, 1902 Mt. Royal Ter., Baltimore, Md.

"Snow Cure" Lost.

BALTIMORE, Md.—On the night of December 29 Joseph Brodie had the three-reel Keystone comedy entitled "The Snow Cure" packed and ready for shipment from his Brodie theater, 1118 Light street. For some reason or other, when the theater was closed for the night and the package was looked for it could not be found, and whether it was shipped erroneously to some other place than Washington or not is not known. However, if this print turns up at some other point will the receiver please notify Mr. Brodie.

School Teachers See "Maud."

Baltimore, Md.—Louis Benesch, owner and manager of the Excelsior theater, 1358-60 West North Ave., screened the Bluebird feature, "Naked Hearts," which is based on Tennyson's "Maud," last week, and thinking that it would be especially attractive to school teachers he invited all of them from Baltimore to attend the showing.

Silver Cup Presented Bushman.

Baltimore, Md.—At a little party which was given in honor of Francis X. Bushman at the Hotel Belvidere on Sunday night, February 11, by his friends, of whom about seventy-five were present, a handsome silver loving cup was presented to the Metro star. A parchment strip was also tendered with the cup on which was inscribed the names of the donors. A very appropriate speech of acceptance was made by Mr. Bushman.

J. M. Spencer at Strand.

Baltimore, Md.—The Strand theater, 404-6 North Howard street, has been given a thorough cleaning and cut flowers have now been placed inside the theater. J. Moyer Spencer, a former well known newspaper man of this city, has now been placed in charge as house manager, and it is understood that an entire new force of employes has been appointed by him. A policy of a daily change of program is now in force with the slogan, "Every hour on the hour." As an advertising feature, it has been decided to place several 12-inch clocks in the shopping district, which is 50 seconds' walk from this house, on the faces of which the name of the theater with its slogan will be printed.

G. Kingston Howard Recovering.

Baltimore, Md.—G. Kingston Howard, a pioneer in the moving picture industry in this city, and now president of the Operators' Union, Local 181, is now recovering from an operation for appendicitis which was performed on him on January 23 at the University hospital. He is well liked by all who know him and his many friends will be glad to see him back at his old post when he arrives again in about two weeks.

Blairstown Theater Burns.

Blairstown, N. J.—In a furious blaze which is estimated to have caused the loss of $100,000 in this city on Friday, February 2, and which endangered the whole business section of the town, the beautiful moving picture theater of Robert Roy was completely destroyed.

New Equipment at Princess.

Baltimore, Md.—J. Selkman, manager of the Princess theater, Eager and Bond streets, has just completed the installation of a complete new operating equipment which consists of two motor driven picture projection machines and a gold fiber screen. Mr. Selkman has now also arranged visiting hours for his patrons to go to his projection room so that they can see just how the pictures are shown.

NORTH CAROLINA NOTES.

Clarence L. Linz, 622 Riggs Building,
Washington, D. C.

A. B. Cheatham Goes Over to "U."

CHARLOTTE, N. C.—The branch office of the Mutual, which has been located in Charlotte for the past four years, was closed on the first of January, they having moved all film and other equipment to the Atlanta office. A. B. Cheatham, who was manager of the Mutual office at Charlotte, has affiliated himself with the Universal Film exchange, of Charlotte, and will cover the state of North Carolina in the interest of this firm. Mr. Cheatham is well known to exhibitors and has a host of friends who wish him success in his new work.

R. E. Goldsmith With Universal.

Charlotte, N. C.—R. E. Goldsmith, of New York, who has been associated with the Mutual, General and other exchanges, has accepted a position with the Universal Film exchange of Charlotte and will cover Virginia for this firm. Mr. Goldsmith is an old time film man and a hustler. From reports received from him in the territory in which he is working, there is no question as to his success, and that he will make a host of friends among the Virginia exhibitors.

Personal and Business Notes.

Charlotte, N. C.—R. V. Anderson, of the Pathe exchange, is making an extensive trip over his territory and reports that he has been exceptionally successful in closin contracts for his latest serial, as well as the Gold Roosters.

Elizabeth City, N. C.—There is to be a new theater built in this city by Spence and Harney which will have a seating capacity of about 300. It will be one of the most modern and up-to-date theaters in the state.

Charlotte, N. C.—The Ottoway theater, of Charlotte, has installed a five-piece orchestra, made up of the best musicians obtainable, as Mr. Haas is a great believer in the motto that "Nothing is too good for his patrons," and this has been the cause of the popularity of this theater.

Durham, N. C.—R. D. Craver, who owns the Paris theater at Durham, the Broadway theater at Lynchburg, the Rex at Winston-Salem, and the Broadway at Charlotte, has closed negotiations and taken over the Grand theater at Durham, formerly owned by C. E. Jordan. It is understood that C. E. Demetrius, of Winston-Salem, is associated with Mr. Craver in the Durham houses. They will make a number of changes in these theaters.

Charlotte, N. C.—The Edisonia theater has increased its seating capacity over one hundred to take care of the business they have built up with the Universal program. Louis Holmes is manager of this theater, and deserves a great deal of credit for the success it has attained.

Sanford, N. C.—E. F. Dardine, manager of the Universal Film exchange at Charlotte, as the guest of W. A. Manes, of the L-Ma theater, gave an interesting five-minutes talk to an audience of people who visited the theater upon the inauguration of the Universal service as a part of the theater's program. Mr. Dardine spoke in reference to the program, telling how pictures are produced and the efforts made by the producers to bring out the most interesting features possible.

Jake Wells to Build Theater in Richmond

Colonial Theater to Be Razed and a Handsome Theater to Be Erected on Its Site—Seat 1,800 Persons—Part of the Wells Chain.

By Clarence L. Linz, 622 Riggs Building, Washington, D. C.

RICHMOND, VA.—The Colonial theater, Eighth and Broad streets, is soon to be razed and on its site erected a handsome office and theater capable of seating 1,800 persons, according to the present plans of Jake and Otto Wells and their associates.

The proposed theater will not only occupy all the ground covered by the present structure, but will also take in the adjoining property and will extend back on Eighth street to an alley in the rear. It will have large entrances on both streets.

A drawing of the new building is now on exhibition in the lobby of the Colonial theater and shows that the Broad street front will contain, besides the entrance to the theater, three large stores, modernly equipped for high class specialty businesses. The executive offices of the theater will also be located on the street floor, while the upper floors will be used as an office building, and equipped with elevators and other features of a first class business structure.

The entrances on both streets will be protected from the weather by massive awnings of bronze and glass, suspended from the building by heavy chains. The seating capacity of the theater, it is claimed, will be the largest of any motion picture house in the South, and has been planned so that every spectator will have a clear and unobstructed view of the screen and stage. The projection machines and other equipment are to be of the latest and most approved types obtainable.

This theater will be operated in connection with a number of other houses in southern cities that have been secured by the Wells interests within the past few months. Among the houses that will form the circuit are four in Savannah, Georgia, including the Keith vaudeville house; four in Atlanta, including two Keith vaudeville houses and two moving picture theaters; the New Grand ,in Macon, and the Bijou, in Knoxville, Tenn., and a theater that will soon be completed in Augusta.

CAPITAL CITY NOTES.

Fire in Dudley Theater.

Washington, D. C.—The explosion of a hot water boiler in the basement of the S. H. Dudley theater, a colored motion picture house, at 1213 You street, northwest, started a fire that did damage to the extent of $400.

Stand for Camera Men at Inaugural.

Washington, D. C.—The Inaugural Committe which will have all matters incident to the inauguration of President Wilson in charge is figuring on erecting a special stand for the use of those cameramen who may be detailed to make pictures for the inaugural parade. This is the first time in the history of the industry that its workers have been given such recognition and the courtesy will be greatly appreciated. The stand will cost in the neighborhood of $1,200 to erect and it will be located at a point where the parade can be taken to advantage. The location has not as yet been selected.

New Motor Cars Scooting Around.

Washington, D. C.—Prosperity apparently has hit the Metro Film exchange, for Manager L. M. Day is to be seen sporting around in a brandnew up-to-the-minute Lozier twin-six. The new car is of the seven-passenger type, and is a beauty. In all probability, if accused of having made so much money out of the exchange business, Mr. Day would promptly deny this and say that the car was purchased with the proceeds from the theater he recently bought down in Virginia.

Wonders do not cease with the seven-passenger Lozier, however, for Abe Dresner, assistant to Mr. Day, accompanied by Mrs. Dresner and little Miss Dresner, may be seen scooting about in a Jeffrey car.

Pathe Exchange to Move.

Washington, D. C.—The Pathe exchange is soon to vacate its present quarters in the Bank of Commerce and Savings Building. Manager O'Donnell states that in all probability the new quarters, at Sixth and F streets northwest, will be ready for occupancy on or about the first of March. This latter place is in a building which conforms to the requirements of the proposed new fire regulations and, in addition, the space that will be available is greatly in excess of that represented by the several rooms at Seventh and E streets.

Willard Theater Company Formed.

Washington, D. C.—The Willard Theater Company has just been granted a certificate of incorporation under the laws of the District of Columbia. This company was formed to handle the proposed new Willard theater, which is to be located at 1306 F street northwest, and to include the property occupied by the buildings from 510 to 520 Thirteenth street northwest. This property is known as the Willard estate.

The company has a capital stock of $175,000 divided into 1,750 shares of a par value of $100 each. The incorporators are Charles M. Casey, motion picture exhibitor, of Lynchburg, Va.; Anson T. Babcock, George M. Mann, manager of the Famous Players exchange in Washington; Alexander Wolf, attorney, of Washington, D. C., and Charles H. Galliher, of Washington, D. C.

H. E. Reddish Joins Local Metro.

Washington, D. C.—Harry E. Reddish, who formerly was in charge of the Baltimore branch of the Washington Pathe exchange, has joined the sales force of the Metro exchange in Washington, and will handle Baltimore for the Serial Producing Company, marketing "The Great Secret." By reason of his long connection with the motion picture business, Mr. Reddish is one of the best known film men traveling in Maryland. He has a host of friends and is making good in his new position.

"Buffalo Bill" Film Seen by Evening Star Club.

Washington, D. C.—The five-reel feature, "Adventures of Buffalo Bill," was given its premiere at the Raleigh hotel under the auspices of the Evening Star club. The club, whose membership is confined exclusively to the employees of the newspaper, was enabled to exhibit the picture through the courtesy of R. Berger, local manager of the K-E-S-E Film corporation, and the manager of the hotel. In addition to the Buffalo Bill pictures the program included a showing of a number of Pathe films, the use of which was donated by D. F. O'Donnell, manager of the Pathe exchange. The newspaper folks were loud in their praise of the films, and were particularly interested in the first three reels of the Buffalo Bill picture, which contained many thrilling feats of horsemanship, and gave a very graphic description of the skirmishes had between the United States troops and the Indians in the old days before the West was settled. These pictures were made by Buffalo Bill himself in conjunction with regiments of United States soldiers who were detailed for this work by the War Department. The films are serving as a part of the pictorial history of the United States.

Pittsburgh Screen Club Holds Meeting

Short Business Session Followed by Entertainment—Plans Call for a Regular Monthly Meeting—Co-operation Asked For.

From Pittsburgh News Service, 6016 Jenkins Arcade, Pitsburgh, Pa.

PITTSBURGH, Pa. — The Pittsburgh Screen Club held an enjoyable and largely attended meeting on Sunday afternoon, February 4, in the Lyceum building headquarters, this being the second gathering of a combined business and social nature "pulled off" by the club this winter. A delightful program was arranged and carried out in an able manner by President Alfred H. McClelland and several assistants.

Following a brief business session, the entertainment began with the showing of a very timely naval preparedness film, supplied by Manager Walter Kinston, of the Mutual. This was followed by the principal feature of the afternoon, an address by Lieut. Jacques A. La Belle, a soldier of note and a former exhibitor. He spoke on "Conditions Along the Mexican Border," having just returned with the Pennsylvania troops. His talk was highly entertaining, as he touched upon Mexican border life not only as a military man but as one interested in the moving picture business.

The program was concluded with the showing of the film "Is Any Girl Safe?" furnished by Manager Harry Grelle, of the Supreme photoplay productions. Plans were adopted to continue the regular monthly meetings of the club as informal get-together affairs, and interesting programs are to be carried out. The attendance and co-operation of all the members was requested, so as to continue the success of this new and pleasing arrangement.

Local Fox Leases Bigger Features

Pittsburgh, Pa.—The Pittsburgh branch of the Fox Film corporation, 117-125 Fourth avenue, has leased for a term of five years the entire second floor of its present location, the Decatur building, and has thereby more than doubled the size of the exchange. The addition consists of six large rooms. According to the terms of the lease, which takes effect May 1, the building will be remodeled to suit the requirements of the exchange. New film vaults will be built and other improvements made.

The Pittsburgh Fox exchange has experienced a remarkable growth during the past year, Manager Eckart states. The decision of the Fox exchange to stay for five years more at its present location removes the possibility of the entire abandonment of Fourth avenue's "old film row," and despite the many removals last spring it still remains an important center of the trade.

Strand's First Anniversary.

Pittsburgh, Pa.—The Strand theater, Forbes and Atwood streets, Pittsburgh, one of the finest of the Rowland and Clark chain of houses, celebrated in a brilliant manner its first anniversary during the week of February 5. The theater was completely renovated and redecorated for the occasion and presented a beautiful appearance. An extraordinary program of big pictures was presented, beginning with Metro's "White Raven," featuring Ethel Barrymore, and including "The Slave Market," featuring Pauline Frederick; "The Island of Desire," featuring George Walsh; "Redeeming Love," featuring Kathlyn Williams. Throughout the week handsome souvenirs were given away.

J. B. Buchanan Returns to Work for News Weekly.

Pittsburgh, Pa.—J. B. Buchanan, known in film circles as "Buck," has returned to this city permanently as cameraman of the Universal weekly, after spending several weeks doing special work for the Universal in the east. He will again look after Pittsburgh, Cleveland and surrounding territory. Arrangements have been concluded whereby the Pittsburgh "Leader" is now co-operating with the Universal in a news reel, the Pittsburgh Leader Universal animated weekly.

T. Kelly Back on the Job.

Pittsburgh, Pa.—T. Kelly, representative of Pathe in the Erie, Pa., territory, has returned to his duties after a serious illness of several weeks from ptomaine poisoning, having been in the Erie hospital. His many friends in the trade were glad to know of his recovery and welcome him back to the ranks.

Louis Ferry Buys American Poster Mounting Co.

Pittsburgh, Pa.—The American poster mounting company, 109 Diamond street, Pittsburgh, has been sold by D. L. Harmon to Louis Ferry, who has been connected with the concern for the past three years. William Ferry, a brother of the new owner, will be manager of the plant.

Alfred H. McClelland Nominated for Censor.

Pittsburgh, Pa.—Alfred H. McClelland, president of the Pittsburgh Screen Club, has been recommended by high officials at Harrisburgh for the important position of chairman of the Pennsylvania State Board of Censors, left vacant by the recent removal of J. Louis Breittinger. Captain McClelland has long been a prominent figure in civic and church work and in military affairs, and his host of friends are boosting him for the much-coveted chairmanship. His recognized broadness of view, depth of insight into affairs of a sociological nature and high general qualifications for the position have brought his name before the governor.

Trials of Cold Weather Gas Failure.

Pittsburgh, Pa.—A serious effect of the extremely cold weather recently upon the moving picture theaters in Pittsburgh was a shortage of gas, the most acute ever experienced in this city. A number of theaters closed down entirely, as it was impossible to keep the houses comfortable, and others continued open under difficulties. All exhibitors suffered a considerable loss on account of the gas shortage, which added to the general dullness during the cold spell.

Pittsburgh Local Notes.

Pittsburgh, Pa.—Work of remodeling the Hill Top theater, Warrington avenue, Pittsburgh, is nearing completion, and Manager Alexander Moore states that it will be finished within the next few weeks. The capacity of the auditorium is being increased from 300 to 500 seats, and the interior of the house greatly beautified and brought up-to-date in its equipment.

Pittsburgh, Pa.—The Imperial theater company has purchased the Imperial theater, at 1624 Beaver avenue, Northside, Pittsburgh, from A. P. Weitzel, trustee. The Imperial is one of the largest and finest houses in that section of the city and has been conducted with much success by the company for several years. The purchase price was $52,000. Big feature pictures will be continued and no change in policy has been announced.

Pittsburgh, Pa.—The Novelty theater, 217 Federal street, one of the largest moving picture houses on the Northside, Pittsburgh, was totally destroyed last week by a fire of undetermined origin. The blaze started in the early morning hours when there was no one in the theater. The loss is estimated at $20,000.

WINNIPEG MAY EXTEND CENSOR ACTIVITIES.

By E. C. Thomas, 821 Rogers Building, Vancouver, B. C.

WINNIPEG, MAN.—If present plans of the provincial authorities go through, Manitoba will not only continue the censorship of films, but will also extend the powers of the board of censors to cover posters as well, and even newspaper advertising of moving pictures. This startling information was brought out at a recent meeting of the social workers' league held at the Y. M. C. A. here, at which there was considerable discussion of the film situation.

During the course of a talk dealing with the intentions of the provincial government with respect to films, A. Hedley Garland, chief inspector of amusements in Manitoba, stated that two amendments to the public amusements act were being drafted, and would be brought before the present legislature. The first will provide for the censoring of all moving picture advertising, while the second will make the same provisions in regard to posters.

Max Bloom, manager of the Famous Players film service office in this city, was quick to take exception to the policy outlined, and vehemently declared that the picture men would fight such a proposition to the last ditch. "We would carry it to the privy council, if necessary," said Mr. Bloom. "It would never go through." Other exhibitors and exchangemen have expressed themselves in similar terms.

On Reconsidering Passed Films.

Another question brought up and discussed at the meeting was the matter of reconsidering films, the suggestion being made that a petition signed by twenty-five people should be sufficient cause for reconsideration of a picture condemned by the censors.

The following resolution was unanimously passed: "That we endorse the motion of the local council of women recommending the government of Manitoba to amend the public amusements act to provide for the reconsideration of any film by the censor board upon the written request of 25 citizens.

"As the act stands, only the film producers or their agents have the right of appeal. It is felt that provision should be made extending this right to the public."

After considerable discussion another motion, of considerable importance to exhibitors, was passed, to the effect "That the portion of the film censored be not allowed in the advertising display on the billboards." This, it will be noted, would render it necessary for each exhibitor using a subject to know whether or not it had been cut by the censors, and if so, whether or not the scenes depicted on the paper were among those detailed.

S. B. Taube Drops Us a Line.

Vancouver, B. C.—The World man has just received a letter from S. B. Taube, formerly one of the real live wires of Vancouver, but now in the east with Regal films, distributers of World productions. Mr. Taube reports that the opening of the Winnipeg office is to be followed by other branches which will shorly reach the coast. Sid sends his best wishes to all his friends in British Columbia—and he has a lot of them.

How's the boy?

Winter's Demoralization of Traffic.

Calgary, Alberta.—Train service in this section has been badly demoralized recently, and several theaters have been forced to remain closed on occasions when a program failed to arrive on schedule time. Exchanges are making efforts to keep their customers going, but in some cases are unable to make the necessary deliveries. Another item which is causing small-town theaters to remain closed is the shortage of coal.

Pine Tree State Letter

By John P. Flanagan, 147 Park View Avenue, Bangor, Me.

Manager William Means Is Better.

BANGOR, ME.—Manager William Means, of the Phoenix opera house, Machias, has just been discharged from the Eastern Maine General hospital in Bangor, much improved after undergoing an operation for appendicitis. Mr. Means will enjoy a few days' stay around Bangor before returning to his home town. During the past few weeks his theater has been extensively remodeled and improved so that it is now one of the finest in Washington county. Mr. Means's many friends are glad to hear that he is better and extend him best wishes for future success.

Exhibitors Recent Visitors.

Bangor, Me.—Among the moving picture exhibitors who have been in Bangor durin the past few days to attend the food fair and automobile show were Harry Main of Patten, C. F. Pettengill of Island Falls, and Arthur Libby, proprietor of Libby's theater, Fort Fairfield. Mr. Libby reports that the show business is booming in his home town.

Shepherd's Hall Opens.

Rockport, Me.—Shepherd's hall recently opened in Rockport under the management of W. G. Crockett. He is showing Universal pictures three times a week.

Good Business in Maine.

Bangor, Me.—Manager Charles M. Stern, of the Universal exchange, reports that the moving picture business is better in Maine at present than ever before in midwinter, despite the fact that the weather has been extremely stormy and there has been a great deal of snow. Mr. Stern thinks that the stormy weather has tended to increase audiences for the most part rather than lessen them. People have had nowhere else to go, nothing else to do, so have patronized the film houses liberally.

Mr. Stern recently arranged for a unique circuit in northern Maine. Houses in Caribou, Van Buren and Presque Isle, towns away up in the top of the United States, are having a daily change of reels, taking five reels of Universal service daily. It is the Powers house at Caribou, Dreamland at Van Buren, and Golden Horseshoe at Presque Isle.

Bangor, Me.—Manager Harry Smith, of the Bangor office of the General Film, called on headquarters in Boston this week. "Grant, the Police Reporter" is going well all through eastern and northern Maine.

Bangor, Me.—Manager Grafton Corbett, of the Bangor branch of the Pathe exchange, says that "Patria," with Vernon Castle, is in great demand in this section of Maine. The Park at Bangor is the largest theater using this feature. It is showing on Mondays and Tuesdays. Later, it may be shown at the Nickel in Bangor. "Pearl of the Army" and the "Shielding Shadows" are big drawing cards. Mr. Corbett recently sold four serials and twenty features in one small Maine town, Presque Isle, to two houses.

Modern Feature Photo Plays Opens Branch in Buffalo.

Buffalo, N. Y.—The Modern Feature Photo Plays, Inc., have opened a branch at 41 West Tupper street, Buffalo. Fred Gage is manager. Mr. Gage is well known in Rochester and Syracuse as an old-time legitimate show man. His assistant is Miss J. M. Ryan, who formerly did advertising work in the New York office of the Artcraft Pictures Corporation. For eight years Miss Ryan was connected with the Victor Film Service, Buffalo. She was lately sent to Buffalo to assist Mr. Gage on account of her extensive knowledge of this territory. W. J. Cushing, also connected with Mr. Gage's staff, will call on the local exhibitors.

Loyal Picture Stories Wanted

Buffalo Picture Men See a Demand for the Right Kind of Patriotic Pictures and War Stuff of Virile Nature Is Popular—Billy Sunday Also Sees This Fact—Plenty of Free Publicity for the Evangelist.

BUFFALO, N. Y.—Buffalo film men are on the anxious seat as to how their business will be affected through this country's complications with Germany. It is generally conceded that the local film trade, like the stock market, would be upset for a time, following an actual declaration of war. It is believed that the public mind would be so engrossed for a time with the war fever—enlistments, the protection of our coasts and arsenals, and other subjects prompted by patriotism—that amusements by means of the screen would receive a decided setback for a few weeks.

The present industrial prosperity of the city has greatly helped the moving picture theaters of Buffalo for more than a year. Local theatrical men declare that this prosperity would be uncertain in many lines directly following an outbreak. It is believed that people would hang on to their dimes to safeguard themselves against a possible slump in trade. This temporary conserving on the part of film fans and others would cut down the box office receipts at the Buffalo houses. The exhibitors in turn would have less money to spend at the exchanges.

Some of the local moving picture men say, however, that prosperity would not be absent very long from the theaters.

"Just as soon as the people would know where they were at, after hostilities began, they would have to be amused, and a heavy flow of patronage would soon return to our houses," said one exhibitor. "When war was declared in Canada in 1915 the film business was hit hard for a time, but now the theaters of the Dominion are doing a fine business. The same condition would prevail in Buffalo and other cities."

Loyal Picture Stories Wanted.

Buffalo exhibitors and exchange men are already casting eagle glances around the film market for suitable war pictures.

The appropriate kind will help to attract and satisfy the crowds who during war times would assemble, for instance, in front of the newspaper bulletin boards and at other sources of war news. On every side the opinion is expressed that Buffalo moving picture fans will have none of the "milk and water" war pictures, which cater to the smug contentment of the pacifists.

They will want pictures that coincide with this period of stress and action. If they clamor for pictures, the films must inspire loyalty among the various races represented in Buffalo and must show that personal service to this country is a paramount duty.

Billy Sunday in Buffalo.

Buffalo film men are learning from Billy Sunday, who is holding an eight weeks' campaign in Buffalo, that the people want "war stuff," whether at a revival or a theater. Mr. Sunday is now interpolating patriotic remarks into his regular sermons and his talks are "going over big."

At the same time Mr. Sunday is getting thousands of dollars, much of which would otherwise go to Buffalo theaters. On the opening day of his campaign here the attendance at his tabernacle totaled 42,000. The first day's collection amounted to $10,181. The attendance and receipts of his succeeding days also ran up into the thousands. Just as a circus for a day hits the local moving picture business, so is Mr. Sunday's campaign cutting down the receipts of the Buffalo theaters.

When a local exhibitor wants an additional reading notice from a Buffalo newspaper in which he is an advertised, the business manager of the paper acts as if he would much prefer to sacrifice his right arm than to give up a little extra space for a film story. On the other hand, Billy Sunday, whose financial contributions to the newspapers are infinitesimal, when compared to the thousands of dollars which the film and other theatrical men have spent and are spending for publicity in the papers, is getting hundreds of columns of free reading notices.

Envy His Free Publicity.

This partiality as to free publicity is galling to the exhibitors as well as to the managers of the local vaudeville and legitimate houses. The editors try to justify Mr. Sunday's free advertising on the ground that his words are "full of human interest" and therefore have a news value. Buffalo theatrical men say there is a "human interest" in the prompt way in which they have always paid their advertising bills. They also say that the regular, year-round advertisers, including the theaters, department stores, etc., are the ones who really support the papers, whose "animal," as an Englishman once said, Mr. Sunday now possesses.

"But what's the use of knocking a brother showman?" said one Buffalo exhibitor. "If I only had one-tenth of Billy Sunday's showmanship, I wouldn't be taking the time to criticise him for cutting in on the local moving picture business. I would have had my money made long ago."

J. R. Stevens Booking "Dope."

Buffalo, N. Y.—J. R. Stevens of Buffalo has taken over the six-reel feature, "Dope," which he is booking as a road show.

Popular Cinema Booking "Purity."

Buffalo, N. Y.—The Popular Cinema, Inc., Buffalo, has taken over the upstate rights on "Purity." J. M. Sitterly of the Popular has completed a trip in the interests of this feature. "Neptune's Daughter," the Annette Kellermann pictures, handled by this exchange, continues as a live attraction.

H. E. Hughes Moves to 1 Chapin Block.

Buffalo, N. Y.—H. E. Hughes, who handles feature films, has moved his office from 23 West Swan street to 1 Chapin Block, Buffalo.

Buffalo Business and Personal Notes.

Buffalo, N. Y.—E. M. Saunders, general manager of the Metro Film, recently caled on C. A. Taylor, Buffalo manager. Mr. Taylor has been visiting the exhibitors in the Rochester territory. In his absence his office is in charge of O. A. Siegel.

"Beginning this month the Buffalo newspapers will have a series of advertising of the Max Linder comedies," said Louis Green, Buffalo manager of the K. E. S. E. "Mr. Linder's first release, 'Max Comes Across,' wil be screened shortly at Becker's Film Exchange. 'Skinner's Dress Suit,' first run, will be shown at the Palace theater, Buffalo, for two days, and our 'Buffalo Bill Pictures' will have first run at the Regent and Academy theaters, Buffalo."

D. J. Savage and Howard F. Brink, of the Buffalo branch of the William L. Sherry Features, visited New York this week. Mr. Brink recently returned from a two weeks' trip east of Syracuse and reports satisfactory business. His daughter, Miss Katherine Brink, with Frank J. Leonard as partner, had the honor of opening the recent ball of the Buffalo Screen Club.

Protests of Ministers Are More Effective Than Newspaper Space in Boosting Mutual Feature—Two Weeks' Run With Good Business.

By Kenneth C. Crain, 307 First Nat. Bk., Cincinnati, O.

CINCINNATI, O.—The Masterpiece Film Attractions Co.'s film, "Purity," has created more than a little controversy and excitement in Cincinnati during the first half of its two-weeks' run at the Walnut theater; all of which has had the usual effect of advertising the film even more widely than the paid space would permit, and of making the second week more successful than the first.

The Juvenile Court, several religious organizations and an evangelist of the "hell-roaring" type who has been conducting a revival in Cincinnati all joined in the work of attacking and thereby advertising the film, with the result indicated. Several ministers secured the arrest by Juvenile court authorities of Manager Libson, of the Walnut theater, on a charge of contributing to juvenile delinquency by permitting boys under 18 to be present at performances of the film.

On the other hand, the dramatic critic of one of the papers pointed out that while the story of the picture is not extraordinary, its presentation is beautiful and unobjectionable. In the meantime, the public throngs the Walnut at 25 and 15 cents to see the beautiful Audrey Munson, and proves that it pays to advertise.

New Bill Aimed at "Nation" Film.

Cincinnati, O.—The anticipated action of the Ohio censors in removing the ban against the exhibition of "The Birth of a Nation," following the inauguration of Gov. Cox, gladdened the hearts of those interested in the picture, as well as of exhibitors who have been longing to exhibit it, and people who have not had a chance to see it in other states. There is another obstacle threatened, however, in the form of a bill which has been introduced by a gentleman of color sent to the Legislature as a representative from Cincinnati, designed to prohibit the exhibition of "any lithograph, drawing, picture, play, drama or sketch that tends to incite race riot or race hatred, or shall represent or purport to represent any hanging, lynching or burning of any human being." The measure is, of course, aimed directly at "The Birth of a Nation," but it is stated that there is little chance of its getting any substantial support, although a similar law is in force in Illinois.

F. B. Chase to Handle McClure Series.

Cincinnati, O.—The local Triangle officers are preparing to take full advantage of the wide general advertising which has been done on behalf of .the new McClure series, "The Seven Deadly Sins," Joseph Partridge, eastern division manager of the series, starting things in its behalf during a recent short visit. F. B. Chase, formerly with the V-L-S-E and the International, has been appointed to handle the Cincinati territory for the series and for McClure productions in general. Gus G. Kinzeler, formerly manager of the Elite theater, of Dayton, has also been added to the Triangle force as a special representative in Cincinnati.

Fire in Grand Opera House Extinguished

Cincinnati, O.—A fire which started in the dressing rooms of the Grand opera house a few evenings ago, shortly after the audience had left following the conclusion of the performance of "Hit-the-Trail Holliday," threatened serious consequences for a time. Quick and efficient work on the part of the fire department, however, extinguished the blaze, with a loss of only $600. The damage was principally to the clothing of some of the members of the company. The Grand is one of the city's principal theaters, and has been the scene of some large moving picture productions during its regular season, besides regular summer seasons of pictures for the past two years.

Callaghan-Merkle Co. in Receiver's Hands.

Cincinnati, O.—The producing venture of the Callaghan-Merkle Co. of this city, which started operations in Covington in the moving picture cartoon line, was short-lived, as the concern was in business only a few months, and receivership proceedings have just been filed by Arno Merkle, a member of the firm, on the ground of insolvency. Master Commissioner Hind has been appointed receiver to take charge of the concern.

New Producing Company in Dayton.

Dayton, O.—The Mena Film Company has been incorporated by local New York men, with a capital stock of $250,000, to engage in the production of feature films. It is one of the first companies organized in Dayton to handle features, although its headquarters will be located in New York, and some work will be done around Dayton. G. C. Driscoll, of Dayton, is general manager; E. W. V. Keuhn, of Toledo, president; G. G. Keuhn, of New York, vice president, and L. W. Jones, of Chicago, secretary and treasurer.

Suit Over Express Delay.

Piqua, O.—Young Bros., who operate the Favorite theater in Piqua, are firmly of the opinion that the loss caused by an express company's delay in the delivery of a film scheduled for exhibition on a certain date should be passed back to the company, and their attorney agrees with them, hence their suit for $200 damages against the Wells-Fargo Company. The damage is the amount estimated to have been lost by Young Bros. because of the express company's failure to deliver to them the film advertised for exhibition on Thanksgiving Day. The film arrived in the express company's Piqua office all right, it is alleged, but was not delivered, and the firm declares that not less than 1,600 persons would have seen it.

James Thomas to Manage Park Theater.

Youngstown, O.—James Thomas has been made manager of the Park theater, succeeding John Green, who has gone to New York. Mr. Thomas has been associated with the Beiber & Shea interests for some time in various capacities, being a skilled electrician and operator. The appointment was made by District Manager L. B. Cool, who has charge of the concern's houses in this section.

Atlanta May Lose Essanay Plant.

ATLANTA, Ga.—Stories published in the Knoxville and Chattanooga newspapers indicate Atlanta is about to lose the Essanay motion picture studio and plant, which is soon to be established, with Ted Hardcastle, formerly manager of the Piedmont theater, in charge, unless some action is taken by Atlanta authorities.

Mr. Hardcastle, who was in Atlanta after a visit to Chicago and to Tennessee points, declared that while no decision had been made as to the location of the plant, that Knoxville and Chattanooga were very anxious to get it, and that Atlanta, up to date, had not taken the interest in the proposition which, in his opinion, the plant warrants.

"It would be a big thing for Atlanta," he said, "in more ways than one. For one thing it would mean the monthly expenditure of some $4,000 for the company pay roll, and in addition to advertising to this section, through the medium of the many pictures to be produced here, would be of immense value."

Mr. Hardcastle was so impressed by the plans offered by the Knoxville Boosters and their allied interests that he returns this week for a thorough inspection and will then definitely decide whether Atlanta or Knoxville will be the home of the new plant.

Kerrigan Warmly Received.

Atlanta, Ga.—J. Warren Kerrigan was at the Alamo No. 2 theater Friday and Saturday, Feb. 2 and 3. Immense crowd attended. Mr. Kerrigan gave a ten-minute talk every hour and was delighted with his Atlanta reception. After each talk he mingled with the crowd at the Whitehall street entrance of the theater and was greeted with true southern hospitality.

Belgian Benefits at Local Theaters.

Atlanta, Ga.—The Rialto and Odeon theaters gave motion picture programs from 2 until 10 p. m. Sunday for the benefit of French and Belgian war sufferers. Great crowds attended, due to the fact of our present strained relation with Germany.

Carl H. Pierce Here.

Atlanta, Ga.—Carl H. Pierce, special representative of the Paramount Picture Company, is spending a few days in Atlanta. A special invitation has been extended to all exhibitors in this territory to visit Atlanta while Mr. Pierce is in the city.

Strand Theater, Atlanta.

Tennessee News Letter

J. L. Ray, 1014 Stahlman Building, Nashville, Tenn

Children's Matinees for Knoxville.

KNOXVILLE, Tenn.—Consistent with the general policy throughout the country of offering children's matinees on Saturday, Manager George N. Shorey, of the Queen theater, has made arrangements whereby this class of exhibition will be a regular weekly feature at one of his Knoxville houses. The co-operation of parents, teachers and others is assured in Knoxville, and is expected to prove of material benefit to the elevation of child welfare in this city.

Chattanooga Women Again Complain.

Chattanooga, Tenn.—Club women and social workers of Chattanooga have again shouted against the terrible "unclean pictures." They have sent their pet censorship measure to Nashville by the committee in charge, with a view of having enacted into law a state censorship bill. It is expected that this measure will be introduced in both houses of the Legislature within a few days by the Hamilton county delegation, and it remains to be seen just how far a radical measure of this kind can be carried in the law-making bodies of the state.

Tennessee Topics.

Nashville, Tenn.—During the week of February 5 a high-class quartette was on the bill at the Strand theater, in addition to the regular quality feature program. The singers attracted quite a bit of additional patronage to the house, and Manager Bradford and Billy Arnold were well pleased with the results.

Nashville, Tenn.—After leaving Nashville Warren Kerrigan appeared in person at the Knoxville Lyric for a day, and at a Chattanooga house, where he made short talks.

Nashville, Tenn.—Manager Milton Starr, of the Bijou, a colored house, is offering occasional road shows in addition to the picture program.

Knoxville, Tenn.—The Queen theater announces that the most popular five reelers, such as "Wildflower," "The Virginian," etc., will again be offered to Knoxville patrons in brand new editions—"unscratched," as they term it.

Big Advertising for Dixon Feature.

Nashville, Tenn.—One of the most pretentious newspaper advertisements ever displayed by a Tennessee moving picture theater was offered a few days ago by Manager W. H. Wassman, of the Knickerbocker, when the entire back page of the morning daily was devoted to exploitation of "The Fall of a Nation," booked for a four days' run in Nashville. The ad was printed in numerous colors, and created much comment locally.

Ontario May Rescind Censor Recall Rule

Board May Now Pass a Film and Later Recall It—It Is Expected That the Government Will Take Away This Power.

By W. M. Gladish, 1263 Gerrard Street, East Toronto, Ont.

TORONTO, Ont.—There is a reason to believe that the Ontario Government may rescind the provincial regulation which allows the recall of a subject after it has been once passed by the Ontario board of censors. The reason in the case is the assurance of the provincial treasurer that action will be taken along this line. Representatives of the moving picture industry have waited upon the government official to pray for the granting of this and other relief.

It is also hardly likely that the fee for the censoring films will be increased from $2 per reel.

W. R. Stewart's New Theater.

London, Ont.—W. R. (Bill) Stewart, manager of the Princess theater, London, has opened his second picture house here. The new place is the Patricia and it is the finest thing in the city. Every brick of the Patricia is brand new and it started on its career auspiciously with Mutual productions. The seating capacity is 1,000. By way of variance, the policy will be to have some good vaudeville dividing the photoplays.

Good Business in Windsor.

Toronto, Ont.—The report brought back to Toronto after a personal tour of the principal cities of Western Ontario by Manager Barrett, of the Mutual's Toronto office, was that Windsor is one of the best moving picture centers of the Province. Barrett was particularly surprised to see the steady matinee crowds in this city of 25,000 people.

Barrett, by the way, secured a repeat order from the Home theater, Windsor, for Chaplin-Mutual releases. Repeat bookings for the Chaplins have also been received from Sudbury, Hamilton, Peterboro, Kingston and other Ontario places. The repeat list was scheduled to start in February.

New Loew Theater in Hamilton.

Toronto, Ont.—The construction of the new Loew theater in Hamilton, Ont., will be started in the early spring, according to additional information regarding the proposition available here. The plans have been filed with the building inspector of Hamilton. The building will cost $300,000 when completed. It will have a seating capacity of 1,600 and will be a two-story structure with flat roof, etc., with the frontage on King street, Hamilton.

Regent Theater Stock for Sale.

Toronto, Ont.—The Regent theater company, operating the new Regent theater, Toronto, is offering $75,000 worth of 7 per cent cumulative preferred stock on the open market. The offering is at par with a bonus of 25 per cent of common stock. Coincident with this offer comes an official statement from the company to the effect that the syndicate which created the company purchased $100,000, or one-half, of the authorized preferred stock for cash at the time the theater was built and decided to finance the whole enterprise until such time as it had been definitely proven profitable before making a public offering of any stock.

Incidentally the directors of the Regent company are announced as follows: President, E. L. Ruddy, who is president of the Regal films and other enterprises; vice-president, J. P. Bickell, stock broker; W. J. Sheppard, who is president of the Georgian bay lumber company; J. B. Tudhope, who is president of the Canadian Briscoe motor car company and other concerns; J. W. Wilson, director of Dome mines, and N. L. Nathanson, who is also managing director of Regal films, World distributors in Canada. G. S. Aronson is secretary of the company.

James Travis to Represent Essanay.

Toronto, Ont.—Announcement has been made of the appointment of James Travis, formerly Pathe's Toronto manager, as special Canadian representative of the Essanay company for Max Linder Comedies. W. Cooper, Toronto, the K-E-S-E representative in the Dominion, and J. Larente, Montreal manager for Cooper, as well as Mr. Travis, recently paid their compliments to President Spoor of the Essanay at Chicago, and the outcome has been the above appointment. Travis will look after the whole country for the Linder releases, but in the cause of Ontario and Quebec Travis will work through the Cooper offices at Toronto and Montreal. For all other parts of the Dominion, however, Travis will be the direct representative for the Linder subjects.

Mr. Travis has made his headquarters in Cooper's K-E-S-E offices at Toronto.

Offers Free Passes for Soldier and Lady.

Toronto, Ont.—J. S. Smart of the Royal theater, Port Hope, Ont., was good enough to drop the Toronto representative of Moving Picture World a line or two the other day to explain the new policy of the theater with regard to returned war veterans who were former residents of Port Hope.

"Any Port Hope man who has been honorably discharged after seeing active service at the front will be a welcome visitor at the Royal," writes Smart, who suggests that the policy of the Royal theater in this connection may offer a suggestion to other exhibitors, particularly in small places.

The returned men of Port Hope have been requested to apply at the theater box-office for permanent passes for "holder and lady." These passes will be honored for any picture performance at the Royal.

Cleveland Survey Questions Are Curious

How Many People Attend Your Moving Picture Show Every Week?—How Many of Them Are Between the Ages of 18 and 25?—How Many Are Older?

By M. A. Malaney, 218 Columbia Building, Cleveland, O.

CLEVELAND, O.—Cleveland for a year or more has been the victim of the survey movement. Bankers and other wealthy men are backing the Cleveland foundation to find out all about this and that and then make recommendations for improvements which may never be carried out.

Now these people have started at the moving pictures. They have taken up the matter with the Cleveland League, and have asked exhibitor to tell them different things about their theaters, something like this:

Between what hours is your show open?

How many days per week?

How many hours per week?

How many people per week attend, male and female, between 5 and 15 years?

How many between 16 and 25 years?

How many over 25 years?

The picture men are going to try to answer these questions, and they have one question which they want the survey folks to answer. It is this:

"What's the idea, anyway? If so state why."

Reserve Co. Winds Up.

Cleveland, O.—The wind-up of another film concern which sold stock in Cleveland came this week, when W. W. Burk, receiver of the Reserve Photoplays Co., which featured comedies with Johnny Ray, held a public auction sale of the effects of the company. Thousands and thousands of dollars were invested by Clevelanders, some very prominent, in the stock of the concern, which carried large ads in the newspapers.

Another "Purity" Arrest.

Cleveland, O.—Police again stopped the showing of "Purity," this time at the Liberty, a local vaudeville theater in the East End. The theater manager went to court and asked that the police be enjoined from interfering with the film.

The mayor took a stand against this picture when it had its first run at the Strand theater and instructed the police to notify theaters that pictures showing nude women in the future would not be allowed to be shown.

The owners, the Masterpiece Film Attractions Co., are making a hard fight to balk the ban on "Purity." Leon D. Netter, an official of the company, was in Cleveland last week directing the court fight.

Northern Ohio Theater Notes.

Marion, O.—W. D. Clark, manager of the Columbia theater, and others, have incorporated a company to build a new house.

Cleveland, O.—The new Grand theater, on Broadway, was opened last week, showing "The Raven." John Wisneiwski is the owner.

Wapakoneta, O.—The Brown amusement company, operating a theater here, is now in the feature film business. They have bought a new copy of "Satan."

Mt. Vernon, O.—The Grand theater, which has been closed, has been redecorated and opened up by William Coutts.

Lorain, O.—George Schenker and August Ilg, local theater owners, are planning to build a big new house.

Tiffin, O.—Ira E. Wright, owner of the Northern theater, Columbus, has bought the Sigma theater in Tiffin.

Missouri Censorship Fight Warms

Exhibitors and Exchange Men and Others Who Believe in Good Government Join in a Lively Contest to Keep the State Legislature from Enacting a Bill to Provide Salaries—St. Louis Club Women With Film Men.

A. H. Giebler, 4123 Westminster Place, St. Louis, Mo.

ST. LOUIS, Mo.—Missouri exchange men and exhibitors are in the midst of the biggest censorship fight they have ever had. At various times during the last five years bills aiming at local, as well as state-wide censorship, have been up for passage, but in the past they have been defeated without much trouble.

The condition that confronts the industry now, however, is more critical. Shortly before his inauguration, Governor Gardner announced the various ways in which money might be raised for the state treasury, now in a very depleted condition. Among the things he proposed taxing were moving picture shows, and although it is doubtful if the bill now pending before the state legislature would result in any surplus after the purposes of the law is carried out, there is no doubt but that it is looked upon with favor by the law-makers.

The measure was scheduled to come up before that body for consideration on the evening of January 30, and almost caught the exhibitors, exchange men and others interested without warning.

A meeting of the Theater Managers and Motion Picture Exhibitors' Association, to which the heads of all exchanges were invited, was called for 11 A. M. of the day in question. The officers of the association got in touch with the legislative committee in Jefferson City, and secured a postponement of the hearing until February 1st. The association then appointed a committee composed of: E. W. Dustin, of the Pathe exchange; S. J. Baker, of the Bluebird; George V McKean, of Paramount; Hector Pasmezoglu, manager of the Congress theater; Fred Wehrenberg, of the Best; E. F. Fay, of the Grand-Arsenal, and Thomas Myers, of the Shaw, to go before the legislature and present arguments against the passage of the bill.

Exchange managers Jack Weil, of the World Film; Fred Keller, of the Mutual; Sam Shurman, of Fox; Sam Werner, Unicorn; Charles Werner, Metro, and the following exhibitors: Edward Pohlman, Al-Wittmann, and D. T. Williams accompanied the committee.

A. L. Stone, secretary of the operators' union, also went to Jefferson City, and Miss Sarah Edwards, of the St. Louis board of motion picture review, an organization composed of club women, who give voluntary and unlegalized criticism of films, arrange children's programs and work of that character. This body is well thought of in picture circles, and the members have always declared themselves as strongly opposed to legalized censorship.

The committees were given a very short time to present their claim, but arguments were made and a second hearing secured, at which time a committee composed of E. W. Dustin, representing the exchanges; E. F. Fay for the exhibitors; Miss Mary Grey Peck, of the legislative board of the national federation of women's clubs, and Miss Edwards, of the St. Louis board of review, will again appear and argue against the passage of the bill.

A lively fight has developed among the women's clubs of St. Louis and of Missouri in consequence of the impending censorship measure. At the meeting in Jefferson City Mrs. Gilbert Fox, of the executive board of the federation of women's clubs of Missouri, appeared as sponsor for the measure, and now many club women claim they do not stand behind the bill.

Mrs. B. F. Burch, who is a member of the legislative committee of the eighth district federated clubs, in an interview in the St. Louis Globe-Democrat, denies that 60,000 club women had indorsed the measure. She said that, to her knowledge, the bill had never been read before any of the St. Louis clubs.

An open forum meeting was held at the Planters hotel on February 3d, attended by members of various social organizations, exhibitors and exchange men. Speeches in opposition to the bill were made by Miss Mary Grey Peck, of New York; Mrs. C. V. L. Mechin, president of the woman's council; Rev. J. Boyd Coxe, pastor of Trinity Episcopal church; Rev. Frank Gonzales, of the Fountain Park Congregational church; Hector Pasmezoglu, manager of the Congress theater, and Miss Sarah Edwards, of the St. Louis board of review.

Resolutions condemning the bill as un-American were adopted, and a committee appointed to send copies of the resolutions to all exhibitors in the state, and to all state officers of the federation of women's clubs.

Good and Sufficient Reasons.

The St. Louis newspapers have taken up the matter, and strong editorials have appeared in the Globe-Democrat and the Times. The Times says in part:

"We are inclined to the opinion that the measure has an excellent chance for passage. We can readily understand the facility with which lawmakers will find reasons for law. We will undertake to give some of these reasons. * * * The censorship department of films will consist of three commissioners, one at $3,000 a year, one at $2,500 a year, and one at $2,000. Three good reasons for the enactment of the bill.

"Other reasons—perfectly good reasons—manifold reasons, unanswerable arguments: One chief clerk at $1,800 a year, one assistant clerk at $1,500, one assistant clerk, two stenographers, two more stenographers, one chief inspector, three assistant inspectors, one operator, two less important operators, another assistant operator, two messengers, one patcher, one assistant patcher—and 'such additional employes as the board may require.'

"All the jobs enumerated are lovely jobs, remunerative, not entirely exacting, and calculated to fit in as wholesome adjuncts to limited incomes, as Dickens would say. The private citizen, untutored in the ways of legislatures, need not waste any particular degree of valuable time in reading the rest of the censorship bill. The arguments for its passage, which are enumerated above, have a strange weight with legislators, even in this day of administrative retrenchment and reform."

Kansas City Screen Club to Hold Ball

Tentative Plans Have Been Arranged for the Club to Give a Dance Early in March at Convention Hall—Screen Stars Hoped for.

Kansas City News Service, 205 Corn Belt Building, Kansas City, Mo.

KANSAS CITY, MO.—The Kansas City Screen club will hold a big ball early in March in Convention hall.

This event has long been in the minds of the officers of the club, and at a meeting of officers and directors, February 2, the tentative plans were decided upon. The decision was reached following the receipt from producing companies of their cooperation.

While the attendance at moving picture exhibitions in Qansas City and the territory have been sufficient indication of public interest in the industry, the real sympathy of the public was not realized until the Kansas City Star had brought more than 75,000 people to see "Snow White" in Convention hall—more than that, since thousands did not get into the hall. The exchange men and exhibitors became convinced that the people of the community wanted more and more to get into personal touch with the industry. And the Screen club ball was the thing to do it.

The big feature of the ball will be the presence of screen stars. Several of these are expected to be on tour at that time, and others are to be sent especially for the event.

Another feature will be a plan for providing young women of this territory an opportunity to secure a try-out with producers, with the view of becoming screen stars themselves. This will be effected through a sort of contest, or awarding of prizes, the winners to have expenses paid to the studios.

Standard Film Opens Offices Here.

Kansas City, Mo.—The Standard Film Corporation opened its main office in Kansas City last week. G. H. Howe is general manager and Phil L. Ryan, formerly of Universal, is manager of sales and advertising for the new company. Branch offices are to be located in St. Louis and Des Moines.

The Standard has the distribution of Art Dramas for Iowa, Kansas, Nebraska and Missouri.

The first release in this territory will be "The Lash of Destiny," featuring Gertrude McCoy, and comes on Feb. 19. Contracts with over twenty-five leading theaters have been closed, among which is the Holland theater of Wichita, Kan., under the management of Jos Fox, a leader among Kansas and Missouri exhibitors.

A member of the new company stated today that an attempt would be made to secure one of the Art Drama stars here for the Screen Club ball to be held in Convention Hall, March 6. Any of the many screen favorites who will appear in these productions would help to make the Screen Club affair a bigger success.

Missouri Theater Notes.

Albany, Mo.—The Rigney theater was destroyed by fire here January 30, with a loss of about $25,000.

Trenton, Mo.—The Majestic theater has been closed down indefinitely. Byron Sherwood, the owner, is considering its sale to a prominent theater man of Cedar Falls, Ia.

Lancaster, Mo.—The building occupied by the Downing opera house was burned recently.

Kansas City, Mo.—Charles H. Elliot will begin soon the construction of a new picture theater at Tenth St. and Lydia Ave., here. The cost is estimated at $5,000.

Springfield, Mo.—Gruble Brothers, of Kansas City, are planning the erection of a $100,000 theater adjoining one already owned by them here. This one will be used as a moving picture house, while the other one will be reserved for vaudeville.

Kansas Theater Notes.

Osborne, Kan.—C. G. Neiswanger will build an airdome soon in connection with his Crystal theater. Seating capacity will be about 500.

Winfield, Kan.—Messrs. Eakin and Lathrop, of Burns, Kan., have bought the Novelty theater of this city from Rufus Cone, of Wichita, Kan.

Axtell, Kan.—R. L. Labbe is building a new picture house here. It will be of brick construction and 100x60 feet.

Concordia, Kan.—Leo Epstein is the new lessee of the Brown Grand theater. Between big theatrical productions moving pictures will be presented.

Iola, Kan.—The Grand theater, ranked as one of the finest houses in southeast Kansas, has been sold by its owner, C. L. Knowlton, of Geneva, to F. B. Logan, of Botes County, Mo. Ernest Williamson, of Pittsburg, is the present manager.

Cawker City, Kan.—Fred Mollenkopf and his son Walter have purchased the interest of E. A. Lutz in the local picture house. The new owners contemplate a number of improvements.

Luray, Kan.—Hickman Brothers will erect a building to be used as a picture show soon.

Chanute, Kan.—Chanute is to have a new picture show with a seating capacity of between 550 and 600. Up-to-date machinery is to be installed.

Kinsley, Kan.—W. M. Harwood will begin work about March 1 on the erection of his new theater here. It will be a one-story brick, 33x120 feet.

Kentucky News Letter

Ohio Valley News Service, 1404 Starks Building, Louisville, Ky.

Men Handling "The Crisis" Are Busy.

LOUISVILLE, KY.—The Big Features Rights corporation closed a very successful engagement with "The Crisis" at the Mary Anderson theater, of Louisville, and is busy in other cities booking this picture. George Starkey, Jr., connected with the southern headquarters, at Atlanta, has been transferred to the Louisville office, and is booking in southern India, having closed a deal for showing this picture at the Circle theater of Indianapolis. Frank Montgomery is covering northern Indiana for the company, which is now working four prints. One print has been doing fine work at Jacksonville, Fla., and proved so successful that Jake Wells contracted with V. T. Koch, of the Atlanta office, for the picture to open his new Lyric theater. It is also booked at the Bijou, of Birmingham, Ala. Herbert Morgan, who is handling Kentucky and other states for "The Little Girl Next Door," and other special features, has met with great success. The revival of the war scare has also revived interest in the company's picture, "The Battle Cry of Peace," which is again being shown in some of the larger cities. Col. Fred Levy, head of the corporation, has gone to New York, where he expects to close deals for one or more additional big pictures, taking state rights in the district now handled.

Strand's Festival Features.

Louisville, Ky.—The Strand theater staged a festival week starting Sunday, February 4, which was without doubt the worst day the theaters of Louisville have ever known. However, a double bill was offered, and prices advanced to ten and twenty cents. The double bill was headlined by "The Witching Hour," featuring Helen Prettyman Arnold, prominent Louisville girl. The other half of the bill consisted of Gladys Blackwell in "One Touch of Sin." During the latter part of the week "The Witching Hour" and Mable Taliaferro in "A Wife by Proxy" made up the attraction.

Mary Anderson Abandons Big Features.

Louisville, Ky.—After five weeks of special features at increased prices, the Mary Anderson theater has gone back to continuous feature shows at ten cents. During the early part of January, Annette Kellermann showed for two weeks at fifty cents, and during the last two weeks "The Crisis" was shown at fifty cents, a twenty cent show, having featured Christman week. Lee Goldberg, connected with the Keith interests, and managing the Strand and Keith houses, has moved his offices from the Mary Anderson to the Strand.

J. G. Connor in Charge of Local Mutual.

Louisville, Ky.—A change has been made in the Louisville office of the Mutual, whereby J. G. Connor, feature specialist connected with the Indianapolis office, has temporarily taken charge of affairs, succeeding Percy L. Smith, who made no announcement of his future plans in absenting himself from the office. W. H. Engleman, manager of the Indianapolis office, is also in the city aiding in rearranging operating plans.

Southern Rights to "Civilization" Are Acquired.

Louisville, Ky.—Announcement has just been made of a deal by J. Harper Read, Jr., general manager of the Harper film corporation, to the effect that the All Star features company, of Jacksonville, Fla., has acquired state rights to the new Thomas H. Ince production "Civilization," for the entire southern territory, including Kentucky, Virginia, North Carolina, South Carolina, Georgia, Alabama, Mississippi and Florida. The Jacksonville company is now busy booking the picture, having a crew of men on this work. It has not been booked in Louisville so far, but several theaters will probably bid for it.

Orpheum at Richardson's Services.

Louisville, Ky.—Arrangements have been made between A. C. Farrel, of the Central film service, and Judge W. A. Kinney, of the Orpheum, whereby that theater will be placed at the disposal of F. H. Richardson, projection editor of the Moving Picture World, who, in making his tour of the country, will address the operators and managers of the local theaters. No date for the local address has been selected as yet.

Personal Mention in the Trade.

Louisville, Ky.—C. C. Hite, of the Cincinnati office of the Triangle film, recently paid a visit to Louisville, calling on Joseph L. Steurle, manager of the Walnut theater, which is the Louisville Triangle house.

Sunday Local Option Bill in Wisconsin

State Senate Is Considering an Amendment to Blue Law 4595 Which Will Give Local Option on Sabbath Shows—Originated in North Wisconsin.

By Frank H. Madison. 628 S. Wabash Ave., Chicago.

MADISON, Wis.—Efforts to have Wisconsin blue laws amended so that moving picture theaters can be operated on Sundays have resulted in an airing of the question before the corporations committee of the Wisconsin State Senate. This committee of the Senate on February 1 reported for passage a substitute for 32s, the original bill legalizing Sunday shows.

The substitute measure does not mention moving pictures, but provides as amendment to the blue law section 4595 that keeping open Sunday places of entertainment tending to upbuild character and elevate morals, or participation in wholesome sport promoting health and physical development, providing peace of the community is not disturbed, shall not be deemed prohibited if town board, village board or city council permits it, such permission to be granted subject to censorship or restriction by board or council, and permission may be given only if upbuilding of character, elevating of morals or development of health and physical welfare is promoted.

The original bill provided that the operation of Sunday moving picture shows should be left to the local community. It did not open the entire Sunday law. R. W. Jackman of Madison appeared before the committee and asked that it be amended so as to apply to all theaters. Rev. R. A. Chase of Madison, who, with Rev. J. E. Davison of Milwaukee opposed the bill, said it was class legislation and that groceries, meat markets and other business should be opened on Sundays.

The movement to have a bill passed to legalize all Sunday shows originated in northern Wisconsin. Some of the houses now operating in that part of the state find there is a general tendency on the part of churches to agitate the movement against the theaters.

Neenah and Menasha Theaters Raise Prices.

Neenah, Wis.—Exhibitors in Neenah and Menasha have raised admission prices from ten to fifteen cents except on Mondays and Tuesdays, when the old price will be charged.

Wisconsin Theater Notes.

Milwaukee, Wis.—Manager O. L. Meister of the White House theater on Third street had a Contractors' Day, when he entertained every contractor and workman who assisted in the construction of the theater and their families. Over 600 workmen were engaged on the building, therefore Meister had a large number of appreciative guests.

Meister has made every Saturday from 9:30 to 6 P. M. Children's Day and is giving special educational and comedy programs in addition to the regular program. He is working this out with school principals and teachers.

Fond-du-Lac, Wis.—Incorporation of the Henry Boyle Theater Company with capital stock of $35,000 does not indicate any change in the policy for the Henry Boyle theater here. O. F. Beyer, treasurer; T. A. Lee, manager of the theater and District Attorney T. C. Downs, who has been connected with the company for several months, are the incorporators.

Madison, Wis.—Student patronage from the University of Wisconsin comprises about ten per cent. of the moving picture business, according to one manager. Two-thirds of this number are men and one-third women. Matinees draw about a two per cent. crowd of women students.

Milwaukee, Wis. — "Intolerance" was held over at the Davidson theater for a second week by Manager Sherman Brown.

Two Rivers, Wis.—The Opera House has planned a series of Saturday afternoon and evening shows, featuring Mary Pickford, Marguerite Clark and Mary Miles Minter.

Amery, Wis.—The Gem theater is now under control of O. Stiendorff.

Racine, Wis.—A new moving picture theater will replace the Baker block, it is reported.

LaCrosse, Wis.—F. M. Rehfuss, proprietor of the Star, has sold his moving picture house at Wausau.

New Clarus, Wis.—E. J. Helgeson has sold his moving picture theater to G. Lengacher and son.

Michigan Theater Notes.

Rockford, Mich.—Benjamin Van Antwerp has purchased the interest of Victor Priest in the Star theater.

Grand Ledge, Mich.—Because of an epidemic of scarlet fever, moving picture theaters in Grand Ledge were closed until Feb. 19 by orders of the board of health.

Clinton, Mich.—The local moving picture show has been taken over by the Culture club, an organization of women which will operate both with a view of profiting financially and to developing the taste of the community for better pictures.

Benton Harbor, Mich.—The Princess theater had a special showing of the films made of the fifth annual tour of the West Michigan Pike. The films were made by the National Education Film Company of Detroit.

Jackson, Mich.—The Majestic theater is elated over its bookings for February. Among the attractions scheduled for this month are: "The Truant Soul," "The Birth of a Nation," "A Daughter of the Gods," "The Crisis," "The Witching Hour," "Panthea," and "Patria," and other big features.

Indianapolis Schools Advertise Good Films

Commissioners Permit the Use of the School Blackboards for Boosting the Pictures Commended by the Local Review Board.

From the Indiana Trade News Service, 861 State Life Bldg., Indianapolis, Ind.

INDIANAPOLIS, IND.—The Board of school commissioners of this city has granted permission to the Indianaplis board of indorsers of motion pictures to use the city schools in their efforts to supervise motion pictures for children. The schools, it was pointed out, are about the only means the indorsers have of reaching many of the children of the city.

By using the schools, said Mrs. C. A. Hodges, the indorsers could place the names of the best films on the blackboards.

Children, she said, should see the motion picture shows only Friday night. The indorsers, she said, are thinking of asking the owners of theaters in the residential districts to show films passed for the children only on these nights.

In an editorial, the Indianapolis News had the following to say regarding the work of the board of indorsers of motion pictures:

"The Indianapolis board of indorsers of motion pictures has taken steps to make it possible for careful parents to exercise some control over the kind of pictures their children see. The board of school commissioners has done well to grant to those interested in the movement the assistance of the schools in conveying to parents, through their children, the names of picture productions which can be classed as fit for the child mind. The project includes a plan whereby exhibitors will endeavor to present such pictures on Friday night. There is nothing in the program to compel parents to keep their children away from improper pictures, but the way is made clear for the dutiful parent, and this is a great step in advance."

Will Erect Fine Theater in Fort Wayne.

Fort Wayne, Ind.—The Bankers and Merchants Theaters company, of Fort Wayne, which was recently formed for the purpose of establishing a chain of photo play houses throughout the state with the Orpheum of Fort Wayne as a nucleus, has purchcased the Varieties theater in Terre Haute and after tearing down the present structure will erect a new theater, costing approximately $65,000.

The property just purchased was owned by John McFall and is situated at the corner of Main and Eighth streets, one of the most valuable business corners in Terre Haute and a strategical location for a motion picture theater. The purchase price has not been announced. Officials of the company say the new theater will be one of the handsomest and most up-to-date photo play house in the state of Indiana.

Local Unicorn Bankrupt.

Indianapolis, Ind.—Action on a petition filed in the federal court in Indianapolis by L. L. George, Samuel H. Fine, and Charles Abrams, of New York City, Albert Rabb, referee in bankruptcy, appointed John F. Boesinger, of Indianapolis, as receiver for the local branch office of the Unicorn Film Service Company, a New York Corporation.

The petition of the men alleged that they had filed a similar petition in the federal court in New York City and that a receiver was appointed there and the firm adjudged a bankrupt. They alleged that attachment proceedings had been filed in the state courts against the firm's fixtures, etc., and that the appointment of a receiver was necessary. The Indiana assets of the company, the petition alleged, are listed at $2,500.

Mr. Rabb directed Boesinger to take charge of the assets, property and effects of the corporation's branch office in Indianapolis, and to take whatever other measures necessary for the conservation of the corporation's assets.

Indiana Film Managers Elect Officers.

Indianapolis, Ind.—A new organization to be known as the Indiana Film Managers' Association was perfected last week by attaches of local film exchanges at a banquet given at the Severin hotel. Officers were elected and arrangements made to hold weekly meetings every Friday night.

The officers elected were H. W. Engleman, assistant manager of Mutual Film exchange, president, and W. A. Ratz, manager of the eGorge Kleine exchange, secretary-treasurer. The new organization, it is said, will be affiliated with the F. I. L. M. Club, of Chicago.

H. W. Drucker, of Chicago, secretary of the Film Industries Local Managers' Association, and also attorney for the Hoy Reporting Service, explained working conditions in cities where other organizations of this nature are being perfected. Mr. Drucker urged greater co-operation among exchange men and exhibitors.

Indiana Theater Notes.

North Manchester, Ind.—Charles Copeland, who recently purchased the Crystal theater, here has had a force of men working at the place, decorating the ceiling and side walls and making other improvements. A new cash window was built and the lobby repainted, giving it a much brighter appearance.

Warsaw, Ind.—The Colonial theater, a local photoplay house, will be formally opened the latter part of the week under the personal management of B. E. Miller, of Decatur, who recently purchased the house and removed with Mrs. Miller to this city. Mr. Miller has installed a complete individual heating plant in the Colonial and besides redecorating and overhauling the pretty place is installing an electric piano.

Rockville, Ind.—The Cozy theater, one of Rockville's pretty motion picture houses, was badly damaged the latter part of the week as a result of a fire that apparently started in the ticket office. The show had not yet been opened for the evening and it was the opinion of firemen that the flames originated from a small oil stove in the office. The picture machine and seats in the rear of the theater were destroyed. The show is owned by Tad L. Johnson.

Gary, Ind.—"Gary on a Busy Day" is the title of a motion picture made recently by U. V. Young, the hustling manager of several Gary photoplay houses.

North Vernon, Ind.—The North Vernon Amusement Company, which operates the Jennings theater, has taken over the Philbarg theater of this city. The Philbarg has been operated for the last ten years by W. E. Phillips and Fred Verbarg, as a motion picture and vaudeville house.

Goshen, Ind.—Charles A. Freeland, formerly of Middlebury, has sold his interest in the Crystal theater, a motion picture house at Sturgis, a few miles from this city, to John E. Luttman.

Church Worker Plans Closed Sundays.

Indianapolis, Ind.—Sunday moving picture shows will follow the exit of Sunday saloons in Indianapolis if Miss Elinor Stafford Millar, of the Moody Bible Institute, who spoke at the Roberts Park M. E. church last week furthering the evangelistic campaign now in progress, has her way about it.

"After we close the saloons we are going to see that the moving picture houses shut up on Sundays," declared Miss Millar. "The Church Federation, supported by the women of the city, can easily do it. We intend to begin working at once with that end in view."

Motion picture men of the city said they were not losing much sleep over Miss Millar's assertions, because, they say, there is no just comparison between the saloons and the moving picture houses.

Miss Margaret Padavic to Sell Film.

QUINCY, Ill.—Miss Margaret Padavic will be one of the road representatives of the Specialty Feature Service company which her father, Anton Padavic, has opened in the Quincy National Bank building. The latter's son John also will go into the field for his father.

Another Young Woman Exhibitor.

LaSalle, Ill.—Another young woman has entered the ranks of Illinois exhibitors. Miss Olga Heilstedt has purchased the Marquette theater on Marquette street from Westmeyer & Weidner. The re-opening under the new management was marked by the presentation of carnations to the patrons.

Federal Tax for Entertainments in Schools.

Springfield, Ill.—If not more than two entertainments are given in any one month at any one school it will not be necessary to pay the federal tax for motion picture theaters. An admission fee may be charged. This ruling given by John L. Pickering, internal revenue collector at Springfield, has been upheld by the department at Washington.

Pontiac License Committee to Censor.

Pontiac, Ill.—Censoring the moving pictures in Pontiac is to be done through the supervision of the committee on license of the city council. Mayor Torrance has notified Alderman DeVoe, who is chairman of the committee, that the watch that the police keep on theaters is to be supplemented by supervision of the committee which has power to call upon the police department any time to enforce orders that may be given.

New Illinois Incorporations.

LaSalle Film Company, Chicago; capital stock increased from $10,000 to $25,000.

Illioscope Motion Picture Corporation, Rockford; capital, $5,000; incorporators, William E. Clode, Edwin J. Burley, John H. Sutherland.

Barrison Theater Company, Waukegan; capital, $2,500; incorporators, Harvey W. Fulton, William J. Sweeney, A. P. Zattan.

Avers Amusement Company, Chicago; capital, $10,000; incorporators, Daniel O'Connell, Walter A. Sweitzer, Michael A. Vitullo.

Barker-Swan Reorganization.

Peoria, Ill.—The Crystal Photoplay Company probably will be the concern which will emerge from the affairs of the Barker-Swan Film Company. Dr. A. H. Shields, who has been active in the affairs of the company, has been working for reorganization along this line.

New Illinois Picture Theaters.

Yates City, Ill.—Carl Stark has reopened the moving picture show in the Opera House.

Peoria, Ill.—James Carrier has resigned as assistant general manager at the Apollo theater to take a similar place at the Avon theater in Decatur, Ill.

Aurora, Ill.—Mrs. C. W. Dewey, owner of the Orpheum theater in Main street, has been making plans to remodel that house, adding a balcony and about 200 seats on the main floor. The total capacity will then be 700 persons.

Arthur, Ill.—Willard Fleming has purchased the Garden theater from Frank Stanley.

Nokomis, Ill.—Holmes Opera House has been leased by Harold G. Holmes, who will operate the moving picture house nightly.

Ottawa, Ill.—Harry Lewis, who has been manager of the Gayety theater, has entered into a partnership with Frank Thielen, lessee of that house. The Gayety is planning to enter the moving picture field, running high class features exclusively.

Rockford, Ill.—John Morrison has sold the Princess theater to Charles F. Hunt. Robert S. Hoppe, a brother-in-law of Hunt's, one of the original founders of the Bijou and later manager of the Orpheum, will be in charge of the Princess for the new owner.

Savanna, Ill.—J. D. Fulrath had plans drawn for a fireproof theater costing $30,000 and seating about 900 persons to replace the structure which recently was destroyed by fire.

Sterling, Ill.—John Cushman of this city and C. M. Fox of DeKalb have purchased the Grand theater in Joliet, Ill., and will operate it as a strictly moving picture house under the name of the Fox.

Ava, Ill.—Martin's moving picture theater which has been closed since the first of the year because of an epidemic of smallpox has re-opened.

Sterling, Ill.—The remodeled Grand theater has been re-opened by Manager George Greenough. One of the improvements is that the seating capacity has been increased to 499.

MINNEAPOLIS NOTES.

With the Exhibitors.

Minneapolis, Minn.—Joseph Farrell laid a trap for telephone thieves at The Strand here recently and after the fifth telephone to be stolen in two months had been "lifted" two arrests were made.

Hankinson, N. D.—Mefers and Withnell are the new owners of the Gem theater here.

Thief River Falls, Minn.—A. J. Lawrence has opened the new Princess theater here.

Bird Island, Minn.—J. G. Lyon has purchased the Crystal theater here from Ralph Hebberstad.

Glendive, Mont.—Owen Wyman has opened the Lyric theater here to the public.

Denton, Mont.—E. O. Jenkins has purchased the Paramount here from W. H. Bruen.

Hurley, Minn.—Ollie Towney of Minneapolis has bought the Garrick theater here from Carl Becker.

Granite Falls, Minn.—The Palace theater here has been sold to George M. Feroe.

St. James, Minn.—J. C. Clausen has taken over the Star theater here.

Sauk Rapids, Minn.—E. A. Kurr has sold his photoplay house here to Walter McGraw of Hutchinson, Minn.

Towner, N. D.—Charles Hultman has leased the Grand theater here and will show films.

Hettinger, N. D.—L. O. Ramstad has purchased a half interest in the Star theater here.

W. K. Hollander, Fox exchange road man, has returned from the East, where he attended the funeral services of his father. Mr. Hollander visited his brother of the Chicago Daily News, photoplay critic, on his way back to Minneapolis.

Minneapolis Filmdom Last Week

A New Artcraft Exchange Manager—Good Business During Carnival Week—Local Operator Proves Himself Innocent of Charge of Film Theft and Is Aiding Police in Tracking the Real Culprits—Local Personal Notes.

By John L. Johnson, 604 Film Exchange, Minneapolis, Minn.

New Artcraft Manager.

MINNEAPOLIS, MINN.—Another new film exchange manager was crowned here the week of January 29, R. C. Fox having succeeded Benjamin Drum as chief executive at the Artcraft office in the Film Exchange building. Mr. Drum, who has left the Asbury hospital after about six weeks within its walls must take things easy for some time to come according to his physicians and with a hope that he could regain his former health, Mr. Drum tendered his resignation. As soon as Mr. Drum is able to return to office work it is expected that he will have but little trouble in locating with some local exchange.

Mr. Fox, who was formerly a road man for the local Vitagraph and Mutual exchanges here, has resigned his position as manager of the "Ramona" department of the Elliott & Sherman Film Corporation to accept the Artcraft managerial berth. He is well known in the Northwest and it is believed that he will be very successful in his new location. Mrs. Benjamin Drum will continue as assistant manager at the Artcraft.

Good Business in Carnival Week.

Minneapolis, Minn.—The continued cold and extra heavy fall of snow has not kept the film followers of the Twin Cities within their homes to any noticeable extent. The past week or two, with all of the leading theaters offering good bills, box office receipts picked up considerably. The week of January 28, being carnival week in St. Paul, brought thousands of visitors to both St. Paul and Minneapolis and first run pictures proved very attractive to a majority.

At the Minneapolis Lyric, "A Daughter of the Gods" started off its third week with good business and "Panthea," at the New Garrick, played to a big week's business at 15 cents. Two Triangle features drew well at The Strand, and February 4 a week's run of "The Libertine" was begun.

In St. Paul, Clara Kimball Young at Starland in "Hearts Afire," furnished opposition for Clara Kimball Young at The Strand in "The Common Law" at advanced prices and both theaters did well. Carnival films were added to the programs at both theaters. Theda Bara, in "A Darling of Paris," drew overflow crowds to the Blue Mouse every day during its run, and Anita Stewart in "The Glory of Yolanda," at the New Princess enjoyed good business. "Patria" has proved a valuable addition to the vaudeville program at both St. Paul and Minneapolis Orpheum theaters.

W. B. Mick's Popularity Contest.

St. Paul, Minn.—Manager William B. Mick of The New Palace theater here staged a queen's popularity contest at his theater during St. Paul Carnival week and this and carnival pictures added much to the box office. Miss Louise Schilling, Northern Pacific Railway queen, won the contest with 21,000 votes. She was given a diamond ring by the theater.

James V. Bryson Has "20,000 Leagues Under the Sea."

Minneapolis, Minn.—The Lyric theater has booked "20,000 Leagues Under the Sea" for an indefinite run to begin Sunday, Feb. 11, at advanced prices. The big Universal subsea is controlled for the Northwest by James V. Bryson of Minneapolis, who has incorporated for $100,000. Mr. Bryson has opened branch offices in Milwaukee and Butte and has arranged with the Western Newspaper Union to handle his publicity campaign. Essay and art contests will be conducted in several cities in connection with the showing of the feature. A collapsible submarine which can be put on an automobile body will be used to advertise the feature in various cities also.

B-B Gets German War Film.

Winona, Minn.—The B-B Film Producing Co. has secured a six-reel feature "The Battles of a Nation," which shows the German side of the European conflict.

J. Barnet Exploiting Dardanelles Film.

Minneapolis, Minn.—Jacob Barnet of the Crystal theater here has secured a feature film entitled "The Great Dardenelles Expedition" and exploiting it in the Northwest.

Westcott Offers "Masque of Life."

Minneapolis, Minn.—The Westcott Film Corp. has offered for sale its rights to display "The Masque of Life" in Iowa, Nebraska, Missouri and Kansas, according to Manager E. A. Westcott.

Regent Becomes the Alhambra.

Minneapolis, Minn.—The Regent theater on Hennepin avenue near Sixth street has been renamed the Alhambra by Manager James McClenaghan. The Alhambra, a small but well located theater, was the only local house to raise its admission prices January 1. Until the first of the year the theater was a jitney house.

Local Personal Notes.

Minneapolis, Minn.—I. Ruben, who with M. L. Finkelstein controls seven Twin City vaudeville and picture theaters and who is spending a few weeks in California, is expected to return to his desk next week. Mr. Ruben has missed the most severe weather Minneapolis has experienced in a decade.

Jack Cohen Proved Innocent.

Minneapolis, Minn.—Jack Cohen, whom local papers connected with a recent arrest of a ring of film thieves, has proved his innocence and is aiding the police in their investigations. Mr. Cohen will be called as a witness when the thieves are brought into court, it is expected.

Northwest Personal Notes.

Minneapolis, Minn.—Joseph Gardner, who has been managing one of the Favorite Feature Film Corporation's "Dumb Girl of Portici" shows on the road, has joined the sales force of the local Bluebird exchange.

Minneapolis, Minn.—The membership committee of the newly organized F. I. L. M. club reports big success in its campaign for members to date and according to Chairman W. K. Howard a 100 per cent organization will likely be attained within a short time.

Minneapolis, Minn.—Word has been received from H. E. Friedman, former manager of the local Pathe exchange, and now in the East, that he is shortly to assume the management of some other Pathe branch. It is expected Mr. Friedman's new office will be in a Southern city. J. E. Schwartzbein is acting manager of the Minneapolis Pathe exchange.

St. Paul, Minn.—G. R. Kerschner, camera man from Detroit, Mich., attended the outdoor sports carnival here to take moving pictures for the Ford weekly and independent news reels. Selig, Htarst-Pathe, Universal and Paramount cameramen also snapped views of the carnival.

Denver's Newest Neighborhood House Opens

Webber's Show Has Formal Premier on February 1—Over 2,000 Persons Turn Out to Celebrate the Occasion—Has 1,000 Seats.

By E. C. Day, Denver Times, Denver, Colo.

DENVER, COLO.—The Webber Show, Denver's newest neighborhood picture house, was formally opened February 1. Fully 2,000 people turned out for the occasion, in spite of bad weather, and the theater's seating capacity of 1,000 was taxed to its utmost all night.

State and city officials and prominent business men made speeches as part of the dedicatory program.

The Webber is the largest and most costly neighborhood theater in Denver and is said to be without equal in the whole United States. It is owned by De Witt C. Webber, a veteran show man who until recently operated the Iris, a downtown picture house. E. H. Moorman, who has had considerable experience in the building of theaters, was the architect in charge of the construction of the Webber.

Mr. Webber announced that the policy of his house will be to show only first run pictures at a standard admission price of 10 cents. This is something that never before has been attempted in Denver. All the other neighborhood houses in the city use second run films. "Her New York," a Pathe production featuring Gladys Hulette, and a Universal comedy constituted the opening program.

J. C. Graham Stops Off.

Denver, Colo.—J. C. Graham, former vice president of the Mutual Film corporation and now general representative for the Jesse L. Lasky company was a Denver visitor last week. He stopped off here on his way from the Pacific Coast to New York. His visit in Denver had no business significance but was, in fact, an accident. He got held up by the snow blockade in Wyoming and was detoured east by way of Denver.

Eugene Gerbase to Help Manage the America Theater.

Denver, Colo.—Eugene Gerbase who has been connected with the General Film exchange in Denver for four years has resigned to accept the position of assistant manager of the America, the new Curtis street moving picture theater which is almost ready for opening. Gerbase was in the booking and selling department of the General Film company.

"As good as gold." "As white as snow." "As fine as silk." Why do other papers in this field invariably try to compare with the standard of the MOVING PICTURE WORLD? There's a reason.

Royal Theater Reopens.

Denver, Colo.—The Royal theater located at Second and Broadway in South Denver, has been reopened under the management of H. C. Bowers, a former Pittsburg, Pa., exhibitor. The Royal has had a rather checkered career and recently closed down after several changes in ownership. The new owner has established a straight five cent admission policy instead of the former five and ten cent plan and believes that the theater can be made a success. The crowds which responded to his call during the first week of his management justifies the prediction.

In Pittsburg Mr. Bowers operated the Keystone theater on the North Side. Prior to this he was the owner of the Pitt theater at Turtle Creek near Pittsburg.

Ozz Theater Being Remodeled.

Denver, Colo.—F. N. Baldwin has started work on the remodeling of the Ozz theater in Elyria. The seating capacity will be increased to 450, and the house will be entirely redecorated within and without.

Alcott Theater Changes Hands.

Denver, Colo.—The Alcott theater in North Denver, owned by Runkle and Gable, has been sold to A. B. Hoover. The latter will make some needed improvements and continue to operate it as a moving picture theater.

Des Moines News Letter

By Dorothy Day, Register-Tribune, Des Moines.

Jess Hartman With Midwest.

DES MOINES, IA.—Jess Hartman has accepted a contract with the Midwest Photoplay Corporation, and will act as special representative for the A. H. Blank interests in Iowa and Nebraska. Mr. Hartman will handle the Clara Kimball Young and the Norma Talmadge productions, Nazimova in "War Brides," the Triangle program and other features which Mr. Blank controls.

Reed, of McClure Features, Drops In.

Des Moines, Ia.—Mr. Reed, the road man out of Kansas City for the "Seven Deadly Sins" and other McClure features, was in town last week and has closed a deal with Abe Frankel of the Casino for the "Sins." The five-week series will start on the 21, 22 and 23 of February.

C. J. Ruble Goes to A. H. Blank.

Des Moines, Ia.—C. J. Ruble, formerly of the General Film in this territory, has been secured by A. H. Blank as the Triangle salesman out of Kansas City for the Iowa and Nebraska territory.

With Exhibitors Over the State.

Vinton, Ia.—A. G. Stolt is managing the Palace theater in Vinton now, and with good stuff is said to be doing a rapid fire business. With "War Brides" last week he broke all records of the house in spite of bad weather. Mr. Stolts was formerly a newspaper man and was connected with the Waterloo Times-Tribune.

Henry J. Lego has just had a $5,000 pipe organ installed in his Majestic theater in Fort Dodge.

Spencer, Ia.—C. C. Cartwright recently took over the New Star theater in Spencer, Iowa. He was in town last week and booked the Mutual star productions, the Mutual service and "The Lass of the Lumberlands." Mr. Cartwright was formerly in the hardware, harness and implement business in Paton, Iowa.

Creston, Ia.—N. Samish and L. Rosenfield have closed up their Willard theater and will devote all their time from now on to the operation of the Temple Grand.

Leon, Ia.—The Idle Hour theater in Leon was damaged by fire last week, but just to what extent had not yet been found out. W. F. Lindsey is the manager and with a very new opposition in the form of the New theater on his hands, the fire is indeed a disaster.

Local Hits—Business Notes.

Cedar Rapids, Ia.—W. J. Slattery of the Majestic theater in Cedar Rapids, seems not to be able to express in mere words the manner in which the International-Pathe serial, "Patria," took in his city. The Majestic is a vaudeville house that caters to the very highest class of trade, and he is running "Patria" almost as a separate act. His house was packed and the people seemed most enthusiastic over the star and the story. This is the first serial that Slattery has ever run in his house. He began the picture with a four-day run Sunday, the 21st of January.

Waterloo, Ia.—Myers, of the Palace in Waterloo, is featuring Baby Marie Osburne in "Twin Kiddies" in a program to be given in connection with the Women's Clubs of the city.

Des Moines, Ia.—Mr. White, who formerly traveled for the Vitagraph out of Kansas City, is now with the Vitagraph in Omaha, but will continue to make Des Moines his headquarters.

Des Moines, Ia.—Lew Bent, the St. Louis representative of the Midwest Photoplay, has his office now at 3320 Lindell Boulevard.

At the Des Moines Pathe.

Des Moines, Ia.—The Des Moines exchanges are surely going through a course of reconstruction. At the Pathe it was possible to find Manager Sheridan in the maze on changes and carpenters. He reported that the cold weather had knocked the train service until it was almost impossible to get the films over the state and the extreme cold weather is knocking business almost off the map.

Big Jim Garrity considers himself a lucky big man since he took the train just ahead of the one which met with such a fatal accident near Creston last week. In addition to this escape he succeeded in leaving Creston with a pocketful of contracts much to the chagrin of six rival roadmen, who were left behind in the hotel.

Strand Theater Manager Averts a Panic.

Iowa City, Ia.—The Strand theater was damaged by fire Saturday night, Feb. 2. A large audience was seated in the playhouse when at 8:30 o'clock smoke was seen emerging from beneath the stage Thomas A. Brown, proprietor and manager of the theater, quickly stepped to the front of the house.

Calm, cool, and collected, he took his stand at the south end of the auditorium, and, in tones stentorian, but composed, he gave a call of warning and of advice—echoed at the various entrances of the playhouse, by his son, Charles, and others in audience, who took their stands at the inner doors of the packed playhouse.

Mr. Brown was thoroughly the master of the situation—the governing genius of the hour, and inspired by his calmness and his evident understanding of the actual dangerlessness of the situation, the men, women and children in the audience—instead of indulging in a wild, mad flight that would have resulted in trampling, crushing, and tragic climaxes—obeyed Mr. Brown's instructions, and filed out quietly, but quickly; peacefully, but promptly; and without the vestige of a panic.

A number of persons who left their wraps and pocketbooks in the theater recovered their valuables later.

ARKANSAS NOTES.

Eagle's Wings Pleases Hot Springs.

Hot Springs, Ark.—The most important picture event this season took place at the New Central theater, when "The Eagle's Wings," the Bluebird production, from the pen of Rufus Steele, made its initial appearance in this noted health and pleasure resort.

Mr. Steele is a Hot Springs boy. His venerable father is one of the city's most loved ministers. His brother, Hugh Steele, is recognized as one of Hot Springs' most successful and enterprising business men. Hot Springs is proud to claim Rufus Steele as its own. The author was visiting in this city when his feature was shown, and the proprietor of the New Central theater, Sidney M. Nutt, beautified the exterior and interior of the lobby with special decorations of a patriotic nature, and Mr. Steele delivered a lecture on the subject of "Industrial Preparedness," the theme of his picture.

The Business Men's League, the city's leading commercial organization, took cognizance of this picture, members of its board of governors attending the performance, and Mr. Steele was introduced by Walter M. Ebel, secretary of the league, who paid a tribute to the author of "The Eagle's Wings."

San Francisco Briefs.

A. L. Erlanger, a theater magnate of New York, and partner of Marc Klaw, was a recent visitor here.

E. Carl Wallen, formerly of the local International staff, has gone to Los Angeles to act as news photographer for Pathe.

Edgar G. Milne, manager of the Pantages theater at Seattle, Wash., was here a short time ago on a vacation and will visit all of the coast cities covered by the Pantages circuit.

Beatriz Michelena, for the past three years with the California Motion Picture Corporation, and George Middleton, director for the same length of time, will leave shortly for New York.

J. J. Unger, district manager for the Metro, returned recently from a trip of inspection thoughout the Western territory. He reports that conditions in Colorado are especially satisfactory.

M. L. Markowitz, of the California Film exchange, returned recently from a trip to Los Angeles, made for the purpose of superintending the move into new quarters.

Mitchell Leichter, a recent arrival from New York, has taken over the management of the Rex theater, on Polk street.

H. J. Henrioulle has been made assistant manager of the Pathe exchange, succeeding O. B. Smith.

Morris Epstein plans to go to Los Angeles shortly in the interests of the Consolidated Film, and will remain there about three months, while Marion H. Kohn is here.

California Jottings.

Hawaii Film Man to Visit San Francisco.

San Francisco, Cal.—Henry Bredhoff, manager of the Hawaii Film Supply, of Honolulu, T. H., is expected to arrive in this city at an early date, for a stay of several months, and his son, C. H. Bredhoff, will go to the islands to take charge of the business during his absence. The latter is considering making a trip through the Orient in a few months.

Eureka Hit by Epidemic.

Eureka, Cal.—An epidemic of scarlet fever has caused the Board of Health to issue an order closing public and private schools for two weeks and forbidding children under sixteen years of age from attending theaters and other public places.

San Francisco Fox Exchange's New Quarters

Has Moved to Its Finely Appointed New Office at 243-245 Golden Gate Avenue—Some of the Special Advantages of the Building.

From T. A. Church, 1507 North Street, Berkeley, Cal.

SAN FRANCISCO, Cal.—The local branch of the Fox Film celebrated the first of February by removing from its former quarters at 107 to its magnificent new home at 243-245 Golden Gate avenue, in a building erected for its special needs and occupied by it in its entirety. An interesting feature of the removal is the fact that the new building was occupied exactly two months following the breaking of ground for its erection, the builders having made unusually rapid progress on account of fine weather.

Much attention has been paid to the arrangement of the shipping room in the rear and films and advertising matter are cared for with a minimum of handling. All express shipments are received and delivered from a rear entrance, the wagons being brought directly to the door. Manager William J. Citron has devised a system of filing racks for small publicity matter that is at once unique and convenient. A vertical row of boxes in each rack is given over to separate productions, each distinguished by a number, and here are carried all slides, cuts, photographs, write-up material, etc., enabling the shipper to assemble an order without loss of time.

In the basement is a large vault of fireproof construction, with metal racks for films, and on this floor is carried all the posters and heralds. A freight chute from the street greatly simplifies the handling of incoming shipments.

One of the distinguishing features of the new exchange is the facilities provided the inspection department. This department is located on the mezzanine floor that covers the rear half of the exchange and all work is done under daylight conditions. Two huge skylights, in addition to side windows, furnish an abundance of natural light, and electric lights will not be used, except in rare cases when light work is necessary. All films are carried between the inspection and shipping departments by a dumb waiter.

The building is a very attractive one in appearance, being of brick construction with a concrete front, and can be seen from Market street, three blocks away. A feature of its design is the extensive use of windows, which form almost the entire front. The wide expanse of glass is relieved by an interesting grill work painted a light green, an effect copied from the recent Exposition in this city.

Earle Takes a Partner.

San Francisco, Cal.—Ralph Radnor Earle, 451 Eddy street, has taken a partner in the person of Hale Ayres, and a producing, developing and printing business is now being carried on under the name of Earle Films. In addition to making scenic pictures feature productions are now being turned out under the direction of Mr. Ayres and some of these will be ready to be marketed at an early date.

New Exchange Enters Field.

San Francisco, Cal.—The Pacific Photoplays Company has been organized by Fred C. Richardson and Mitchell Leichter and quarters have been opened on the sixth floor of the Mechanics building at 948 Market street. A large part of the films handled by the C. L. Williams company has been taken over, together with one of the offices and the exhibiting room formerly used by this concern. Mr. Leichter, who also has charge of the Rex theater on Polk street, is a recent arrival from New York, and Mr. Richardson is learning the film exchange business under his direction.

Progress on California Theater.

San Francisco, Cal.—Rapid progress is now being made on the California theater being erected at Fourth and Market streets by the Market Street Realty Company, a large part of the steel work already being in place.

Eastern Film Man on Coast.

San Francisco, Cal.—W. H. Whipple, representing the Lincoln & Parker Co. of Worcester, Mass., producers of films for schools and colleges, was a recent visitor here to place these productions.

Lesser Sending Out Road Shows.

San Francisco, Cal.—Sol L. Lesser is sending out three companies to cover the California territory with "War Brides," each of these including a manager, musical director and publicity expert. A similar number will be put on the road with "Civilization," following its premier in this city. The engagement of "War Brides" at the Alcazar theater was a great success.

E. H. Emmick Home Again.

San Francisco, Cal.—E. H. Emmick, of the Peerless film service, returned recently from an extended stay at Los Angeles, visiting exhibitors on the way home. He has added another comedy release and is now releasing five comedies a week, a record for an independent exchange. In view of the publicity being given Mrs. Vernon Castle in "Patria" a big demand has sprung up for the "Whirl of Life," featuring the Castles, controlled by this firm.

Artcraft Representatives Come In.

San Francisco, Cal.—Arthur S. Kane, Western district manager for the Artcraft, has returned to his headquarters following an extended visit to the Northwest. J. J. Patridge is also here for a short stay, after having completed a successful trip of several weeks through Arizona.

San Francisco Briefs.

The Empress theater has booked "The Great Secret," this being the first serial to be shown at this house.

The Greater Vitagraph will be in its new quarters in the Musical building about the middle of February.

The California film exchange has just received a shipment of the new Model Motiograph and now has this machine on exhibition at its quarters on Film Row.

J. H. Magoon, vice-president of the Consolidated Amusement Company of Honolulu, is here inspecting late releases, securing advertising ideas and making arrangements for service.

Mark A. Lasky, president of the De Luxe-Lasky, plans to make a visit to New York at an early date in connection with important business matters.

The Turner & Dahnken circuit of this city has announced its intention of building a new house at Richmond, Cal., at an early date.

The Gem theater, 1025 Ocean Drive, has been opened by Bartola Lima.

Recent visitors have included R. Shinn, of Monterey; N. Throckmorton, of Oak Park; C. C. Howell, of the Monache theater, Porterville, and Chas Goddard, of Sacramento; all well known exhibitors.

Phil Doll, formerly of the Excelsior theater, has returned from an eastern trip of several months.

The Polk theater has been remodeled and refitted since the recent fire and will be reopened at an early date.

The Atlas Educational Film Company has received its first shipment of the new Atlas projectors and is also showing the new Universal camera with a dissolver.

Jacob L. Kempner, of Signet Films, Inc., was a recent business visitor here.

"Patria" Thrills Spokane Society Audience

Pathe's Northwest Manager, F. C. Quimby, and Exhibitor H. S. Clemmer Show Five Reels of Serial in Hotel Ballroom.

By S. Clark Patchin, 1811 Eleventh avenue, Spokane, Wash.

SPOKANE, Wash.—At the Marie Antoinette ball room at the Davenport hotel, January 26, nearly 1,200 were entertained and fully 300 turned away with the unusual atraction of a pre-release showing of the moving picture film serial, "Patria," featuring Mrs. Vernon Castle.

Two performances were given during the evening, both to capacity crowds. An adequate screen had been provided at the east end of the ballroom and a temporary operator's booth was located in the balcony. All the remaining space on the ballroom floor and in the balcony was crowded with people and fully 75 stood for the first exhibition.

Five chapters were shown of "Patria," representing the first two episodes of the serial. Thrill follows thrill in rapid succession in the production and occasioned gasps and exclamations and much applause from the fashionable audiences.

The winsome personality of Mrs. Castle and her seemingly inexhaustible wardrobe of stunning creations are the outstanding features of the production, but Louis Joseph Vance, the author, and the Whartons, producers, have injected exciting thrills which should satisfy the most ardent lover of melo-drama.

The private showing was made by F. C. Quimby, Northwest manager for Pathe, through arrangement with L. M. Davenport, president of the hotel company, and H. S. Clemmer, manager of the Clemmer theater; the audience were their joint guests.

Many Children See "Snow White" at the Clemmer.

Spokane, Wash.—More than 4200 children saw "Snow White," with Marguerite Clark as the princess, during the five-day run at the Clemmer theater. During the first four days of its showing the children's tickets averaged 800 a day, and on the fifth afternoon, between 11 a. m. and 5 p. m., 2180 children's tickets were sold.

Ralph Ruffner Gets New Projectors.

Spokane, Wash.—The Liberty theater is installing two Baird projectors in its operating booth, said to be the first of these machines to be purchased by a northwestern theater. Each projector weighs 590 pounds, a fact, according to manager Ralph Ruffner that absolutely removes all vibration in the operation. He describes the new projectors as rock steady, non-flickering machines with mechanism that operates in oil, noiselessly. The projectors are operated by electrical power and every bit of mechanism is enclosed. The machines have been attracting much attention on the lobby, where they have been on exhibition.

Western Union Film Organized.

Spokane, Wash.—The Western Union Film Company has just been organized in Spokane and is putting up a studio where the work of taking motion pictures will be started it is said within a month. The company contemplates making pictures of various events in Spokane and vicinity and will also make advertising moving pictures, some having been contracted for. The company further plans to make moving pictures of parties at the various homes which will be run on local screens in connection with features.

Montana Theater Items.

Ronan, Mont.—The Ronan opera house, Ronan, H. M. Gehlert, manager, was burned down one afternoon last week, the place catching fire from a blazing store next door.

Whitefish, Mont.—J. L. Shaw, an exhibitor of Washington, has taken over the Liberty at Whitefish, and reports good success in showing Pathe and Vitagraph features. Much credit for his success must be given the consistent and judicious use of advertising, especially the personal reviews of each feature in Shaw's especially prepared heralds and programs.

Polson, Mont.—The Orpheum theater, Polson, managed by D. Earl Evans, is again running after a short shutdown, occasioned by fire. Taking advantage of this layoff, manager Evans installed two new Simplex machines and it is the boast that Polson sees as good projection as the larger cities.

Want No State Censor Board in Washington

Spokane's City Commissioners Throw Out a Plea from Tacoma Commissioner of Public Safety Asking Help Toward State Censorship.

Spokane, Wash.—With a view of having a state board of censorship for all moving picture films, F. H. Pettit, commissioner of public safety of Tacoma, has requested the co-operation of the city commissioners of Spokane. Copies of the proposed law were received from him, together with a statement that he had presented the matter to a number of the legislators, who received it favorably. In his letter he sets forth that he does not believe the city censorship boards are fair to the exhibitors and that a state board could pass on all films, and claims that this would be a benefit to the public.

After conferring with moving picture managers, Commissioner of Public Affairs F. K. McBrown prepared a resolution, which the city fathers adopted, opposing state censorship, explaining that the city consorship ordinance had been working fairly satisfactorily and that as a national censorship law was pending in Congress the commissioners felt that would be better than a state law.

The commissioners further set forth that it was not fair to the moving picture men who have probably $5,000,000 invested in the state, to have their films censored by a poorly paid board of three persons, appointed by the governor of the state, as that would be placing too much power in the disposal of the board and would put the matter into politics.

Copies of the answer adopted will be mailed immediately to the legislators now in session in Olympia.

Dr. H. S. Clemmer expressed himself as opposed to the state law, and that of the two propositions he preferred the proposed national censorship law.

The exhibitors are of the opinion that in the end the public will have to pay the cost of censorship, and on this point Manager Ralph Ruffner, of the Liberty theater, who just returned from the coast, said:

"Exhibitors on the Coast do not want a state board. The proposed measure fixes a charge of $1 per reel, which the board can collect for each reel of 1,000 feet it inspects. In theory, that is paid by the producer of the picture, or the owner of the state rights. Actually, it will be tacked on to the price the exhibitor has to pay, and the exhibitor will pass it on to the patrons who buy tickets to his entertainment. He must do so in self defense.

"In a year, based on present film importations, the board would be called on to inspect 8,736 reels of 8,736,000 feet of pictures. This would mean a revenue of $8,736."

More Montana Notes.

Big Timber, Mont.—Dorman Kellog has closed his Arcade theater at Big Timber, being content to let what profit there is in the town go to his opposition rather than keep open for the sake of competition.

Malta, Mont.—The Lyric theater, Malta, has been taken over by the Orpheum interests and closed, and its manager, R. Robbins, it is said, will have charge of the Orpheum at Glasgow, a nearby town. It is not known who will run the Orpheum at Malta.

Glendive, Mont.—Wyman and Wyman, new men in the business, have taken over the Lyric theater at Glendive, Montana. Among the features are three Pathe Gold Roosters each week and from reports they are doing a good business by showing features only.

Butte, Mont.—Manager C. E. Schmidt, Pathe exchange at Butte, has just returned from an extensive trip which he is understood to have taken in Spokane and Seattle. When asked about rumors that the Rialto was to use Pathe service, he would neither deny nor affirm it, saying that he was merely coviring his territory and denying that he was in Seattle lining up service.

Great Falls, Mont.—The new Lafayette theater, Mrs. Leona Deakin, manager, will open in West Great Falls, using three changes of Pathe Gold Roosters each week.

Hamilton, Mont.—E. C. Freshwater has taken over the Star and Family theaters at Hamilton, Montana, from Mr. and Mrs. Seafield.

Livingston, Mont.—The Lyric theater, Livingston, has closed. The owners, it is said, are now running the Orpheum, having taken over the interest of W. M. Haight. Like lots of other Montana towns, the number of theaters are being reduced. Last summer there were five theaters—Lyric, Strand, Alcazar, Orpheum and Hefferlin—while now there are but two, the Strand and the Orpheum.

SALT LAKE NEWS.

Local Screen Club to Give Ball.

Salt Lake City, Utah.—Motion picture circles are all astir with preparatons for a big ball which will be given toward the end of February by the Screen club, the new organization of exhibitors, theatrical managers and exchange men. Every feature is to be unique, say those in charge, and there will be enough "stunts" to make the evening a whirl of gayety from start to finish.

The exact date of the affair has not been set, pending word from several noted film stars as to when they can attend. One of the big features of the ball is to be a grand march led by several of the most brilliant luminaries in motion pictures. If all goes well at least half a dozen will be in attendance as nearly that number have already indicated their desire to attend.

Utah Censorship Discussion

Bill Is Being Prepared by Senator Chez and the Women's Clubs—Film Men Organize to Fight State Censorship—Three Organizations Elect Officers—Aid Will Be Given by Vaudeville and Stage Managers.

By D. W. Cummings, Motion Picture Editor, Deseret News, Salt Lake City.

SALT LAKE CITY, Utah.—Censorship is the principal topic in the minds of motion picture managers and fans in Utah just now. Senator Joseph Chez, of Ogden, has introduced a rigid censorship bill which he declares is practically a copy of the Kansas law on the subject. The bill had only its first reading before the senate and is now in the hands of a committee.

Senator Chez himself says that before being finally presented to the legislature for passage the bill will be materially changed. In its present form it is being criticised, not only because it is a censorship bill, but because of the vagueness of its provisions and the impracticability of the scheme it proposes.

The bill makes the state superintendent of public instruction responsible for the review of every film that comes into the state. He is outhorized to hire one or more "clerks," although the bill does not say clearly whether they will be empowered to help him review films or not. Senator Chez says he intends that they shall have this right. The clerks are to receive $3 a day. This sum, declares the author of the bill, will probably be raised to $5 or $6.

Economy is the big cry in Utah affairs just now, and in order to keep the bill afloat, Senator Chez has endeavored to make the censorship self-suporting. He provides that a fee of $2 shall be charged for the review of each picture. This has aroused a storm of objection, both from motion picture men and even from clubwomen advocating censorship. As the bill now reads an exhibitor with a program of four or five pictures would have from an $8 to a $10 review bill to pay every day, not counting the films that might be rejected and have to be replaced. Senator Chez says he will modify this provision, but insists that it should be retained in some form.

In case of a refusal on the part of an exhibitor to accept the ruling of the superintendent of public instruction, the bill provides that he may appeal to a committee consisting of the governor, the secretary of state and the attorney general. Mr. Chez himself admits that this may prove to be impracticable and is now studying up a more economical and accessible mode of appeal.

The only grounds upon which films may be ruled out are those of sacrilege and obscenity or immorality. The penalty for displaying films prohibited by the censor is a fine of from $25 to $100 for the first offense and not less than $100 for the second offense. The law is to take effect on the first of April.

Club Women and Censorship.

Clubwomen of the city are taking an active intrest in the subject of censorship. Many are opposing it strenuously while others are advocating it just as hard. But even among those who favor some sort of state censorship, the Chez bill does not seem to be meeting with great favor.

The legislative committee of the state federation of women's clubs has taken up the matter and is framing proposals which, if adopted by the legislature, will materially change the Chez plan. They propose to have the reviewing done by voluntary committees in each town, the state superintendent of public instruction to be the final arbiter in case of appeal. These local committees would serve without pay. They would, in most instances, accept the ruling of the New York Board of Review, but would reserve the right to view some films which the New York board had approved. This committee is holding meetings with Senator Chez and the question will probably be threshed out within the next two weeks. The women are opposed to any fee, and are inclined to be liberal in their ideas of censorship.

Film Men Will Fight State Censorship.

The motion picture men of the city are determined to fight state censorship to the bitter end.

The motion picture exhibitors and managers of exchanges take the position that state censorship is not only unjust but that it is unnecessary. They argue that the sentiment among the great majority of producers and exhibitors is against salacious, unpatriotic or sacrilegious films, and that there are not enough of these types of pictures in existence to worry about. And if they do appear in the state, they contend that present police powers are quite sufficient to deal with them.

Realizing that they must do something themselves to obviate the necessity of censorship, as well as to protect the industry in other ways, the exhibitors and exchange managers are organizing. The exhibitors have united with managers of the local vaudeville and stock houses and formed the Theater Managers Association of Utah. They are preparing to file articles of incorporation and plan to hold regular meetings each week at which problems confronting the industry will be discussed. Among other things they have taken their stand for clean, high-class photoplays and vaudeville acts.

New Film Organizations Elect Officers,

Salt Lake City, Utah.—All three organizations in Salt Lake composed of men interested directly or indirectly in the photoplay industry have now selected officers.

The Screen club has as president Lew Marcus, president of the Notable Feature Film company, for vice president H. E. Ellison, manager of the Swanson theaters, for secretary, Ben Ketchum, manager of the Wilkes theater, and for treasurer, M. H. Hanaouer, manager of the Broadway.

The Theatrical Managers' Association of Utah has Frank Newman as president and George E. Carpenter as secretary.

The F. I. L. M. association has the following officers: Lew Marcus, president of the Notable Feature Film company, president; George Mayne, manager of the Universal exchange, vice president; J. L. Frazier, manager of the Mutual exchange, secretary; Carl Q. Cannon, of the Deseret Film company, treasurer, and these, with Leon Vorhies, of the Metro exchange, constitute the board of directors.

Exchange Managers Form Separate Organization.

The exchange managers have formed a separate organiaztion known as the F. I. L. M. association. Besides the purpose of general mutual interest, the organization has for its aim the elimination of objectionable films. They contend that the exhibition of such pictures is to be feared only from the wild-cat transient exhibitor, and have determined to unite in an attempt to keep this class out of the state. They have agreed to sever relations with any exhibitor who persists in giving a welcome to the transient with filthy films.

Screen Club.

Besides these two organizations there has recently come into existence the Screen Club, composed of both exhibitors and exchange men. Its purposes are largely social, but it holds regular meetings each week, at which topics of general interest to the industry are discussed.

CUPID'S THUMB-PRINT (Two Parts—No. 21702-03).—The cast: Dean Fairchild (Frank Hamilton); Irma, his daughter (Maybelle Spaulding); Leonard Prewitt (Ward Wing); Hewitt Breen (Willard Burke); Bret Nelson (Roy Sutherland). Written by L. V. Jefferson. Directed by Otis B. Thayer.

Leonard Prewitt, in desperate financial straits, courts Irma, Dean Fairchild's daughter, but without encouragement from her. He resolves to rob his host on the night of a social event given for Irma.

Hewitt Breen, a burglar, has just opened the Fairchild safe when Prewitt comes upon him. The burglar escapes and Prewitt robs the safe. Breen has left a thumbmark on the safe. Maddened at the loss of loot, he strives to enter Prewitt's room to claim his share, but by mistake enters the room of Irma. Seized with the desire to be worthy of the love of such a beautiful woman and to some day win her, he is regenerated.

Prewitt drinks deeply and resolves to force his attentions upon Irma. As he gropes into the girl's room he is confronted by Breen, who overpowers him. Prewitt escapes, turns in an alarm and poses as a hero, claiming to have saved Irma. The girl, although grateful to Breen for saving her from Prewitt, says nothing. Breen disguises himself and becomes a butler in the Fairchild home. There he is instrumental in showing up Prewitt and in winning the love of the beautiful Irma.

Rupert Winslow, traffic superintendent of the railroad that employs Helen as operator at Lone Point receives a telegram stating that his wife, who is ill, will be on the midnight express. He calls in Summers, a veteran brakeman on the passenger run and instructs him to watch over Mrs. Winslow and to sidetrack her sleeper if she requires medical attention.

Near the Lone Point station the superintendent's wife takes a turn for the worse and Helen, on night duty at Lone Point, is appealed to. She rouses Dr. Harris, whose headquarters are at the Burro Mine nearby. Meantime the sleeper has been set out on the Lone Point siding. Helen telegraphs Winslow, who charters a "special."

Careless switching at the Burro Mine sets two cars running down the siding upon which the sleeper stands. Helen makes use of the doctor's automobile and manages to switch the runaway cars onto the main track. Having saved the sleeper, she sets out to warn the special. Reckless of her own danger, she makes a flying leap from the hood of the auto to the ladder of the box car and, climbing up, sets the brakes. Running forward, she signals the approaching special, which is brought to a grinding stop with only a few feet to spare.

ESSANAY.

Sam Leiter, big of statue and mind, loves Mary Elizabeth. Instead of asking her to marry him, he tells her she is going to do so and through cave man tactics makes her his wife. The union proves an unhappy one. Sam should have given Mary Elizabeth a "say-so" in the first place. They separate and Sam lives for a year in solitude. This makes a new man of him. By chance he happens to return to the little home where he left Mary Elizabeth. She is there, waiting for him. But Sam is no longer the cave man now, and so their reunion is a happy one.

ALL IN A DAY.—A school of physical culture languishes for lack of clients. The partners decide to obtain at least one. They kidnap a thoroughly henpecked individual and make a physical giant of him. He returns to prove to his wife that he is the master of his household. But so busy have the physical culturists been in developing the muscles of their victim, that they have neglected themselves and fall easily before the onslaughts of the irate wife. Alaskan scenic shares the reel with this comedy.

IS MARRIAGE SACRED?—(No. 10).—"Ashes on the Hearthstone"—(Two parts).—The cast: Stella Wentworth (Marguerite Clayton); Carl Dixon (Edward Arnold); Albert Fowler (Sydney Ainsworth); Willard Wentworth (Thomas Commerford).

Frivolity and luxury have undermined Stella Wentworth's womanhood. She elopes with Carl Dixon, a poor, hardworking youth, but becomes dissatisfied with love in a cottage. Her dissatisfaction is encouraged by her father and Albert Fowler, an unsuccessful suitor and finally, following the birth of her baby, she is pursuaded by them to desert her husband and infant for Fowler. Fowler proves an evil genius. Stella, upon her disillusionment, returns to Carl's cottage to seek forgiveness and go back to him and her child. She enters the little home to find Carl kneeling over the dying infant. It was too late to recitfy her great mistake.

NORA DECLARES WAR (No. 21711).—Nora, an Irish cook, is imbued with the idea that she is terribly abused. All the members of the household order her around and the children play pranks which anger her. Her back is turned for a few minutes and the children pepper the soup which she is about to serve to the head of the house, a grouchy old man. It is so strong with pepper that he decides to get after Nora. Just as he is about to chastise Nora, the iceman enters and, thinking that he is crazy, forces a piece of ice into his mouth.

Next door Bridget reigns supreme, and Nora cannot understand it. Bridget discloses her methods and Nora decides to try them out. She routs the old man from the kitchen, spanks the children, and everyone in general begins to feel her temper. After getting the members of the household under her control she dresses and informs them that it is her afternoon off. She and Bridget depart to enjoy a few hours of recreation—which is something Nora has not done for some time.

HAPPY NAT'S DILEMMA (No. 21713).—Happy Nat, a society drunk, has an engagement with his fiancee, a widow. Through overindulgence he falls asleep and dreams that his fiancee has jilted him because of his drinking, and he therefore decides to become a prohibitionist. He becomes "charitable" and steals a delivery boy's groceries because he sees a blind man and his daughter in want. He also steals clothes for the little girl.

When he wakes he remembers his appointment with the widow. His dreams so worry him that he decides to quit drinking and then he hustles to meet his intended.

SEEING DOUBLE.—Dud, a henpecked husband, while doing the weekly ironing, burns his hand. He leaves by a window and is met by his friend Bert, who has left his wife because of her biscuits. Bert steals a cigar cutter. The two ex-husbands enter a saloon, followed by a policeman. The cigar cutter serves as a weapon of defense, and after Bert has succeeded in ejecting the proprietor and the officer the two ex-husbands take over the thirst parlor and become hilarious, proceeding to invite all who enter to join them. While in hiding the two heroes see double and they decide to visit their wives at Bert's home, where they receive a peppery reception and are forced to retreat to the dog house, where, wrapped up in each other's arms, they depart for the land of dreams.

HARRY'S PIG.—Harry La Pearl, a rube, visits the grocery store, and as he is about to leave, is attracted by a pretty girl. In endeavoring to make a hurried exit he upsets things in general, including the flour barrel, fruit stand, etc. His wife, however, is close upon his heels and to make a getaway he steals a pig and rides through town, followed by his wife, the marshal and others. The pig finally finds his way back to the pen. Harry is captured by his wife and resolves not to look away from the straight and narrow path in future.

SIN UNATONED (Feb. 21).

Bob is a gambler, but upon his marriage he gives it up. One night a man whom he recognizes as an old pal enters the house and he gives the man money not to betray him to his wife. He leaves the room to get the money and his wife enters. The man catches her and kisses her. Bob returns and a fight ensues, in which Bob is victorious.

REX.

THE KEEPER OF THE GATE (Feb. 22).—The cast: Fra Bennoni (Douglas Gerrard); Floretta (Ruth Clifford). Story by E. Magnus Ingleton. Produced by Douglas Gerrard.

Fra Bennoni, gate keeper at a monastery, where monks daily give food to the poor, finds a rose on the gate and places it on the Virgin's shrine. One night he hears the music of the street carnival and unable longer to withstand its lure, hurries to the village. The revelers think he is one of themselves disguised as a monk. All night he watches the dances and makes merry with Floretta.

In the morning comes the realization of what he has done. Hurrying back, conscience-stricken, he is surprised to find a monk at the gate. As he looks closer he sees that it is The Christus. The Fra, pentinent and ashamed, kneels in adoration before The Christus, who vanishes as the monks pass on their way to the day's work.

LOST IN THE STREETS OF PARIS (Feb. 25).—King, an American, is separated from his wife. Later a child is born unknown to him. Years pass. We find him a successful stock manipulator on the Paris stock exchange. The wife, with her child, is visiting in France. The child is lost in one of the parks. She is kidnapped and is sold to an unscrupulous fagin, who forces the child into the street as a beggar. She is found by her father, who, unaware of her identity, gives her a home and becomes greatly attached to her.

Later the mother finds her child playing in the gardens of her husband. She attempts to take the child away with her immediately, but the child insists that her mother first see her benefactor. The man and wife come face to face and are reconciled.

JOKER.

ROSIE'S RANCHO (Feb. 24).—The cast: Rosie (Gale Henry); Barbara (Lillian Peacock); Bill (William Franey); Milt (Milburn Moranti).

Rosie, a mannish individual, is the owner of the M. T. Ranch. Her niece, Barbara, comes to visit her, and she warns her cowpunchers to keep away from the girl. But they will not obey her. Even Bill, the cook, falls a victim. In anger, Rosie discharges everyone. The Mexican sees her pay them and resolves to steal her roll. He ties her in a chair and builds a fire that will soon reach her. Bill hears a noise, holds up the Mexican and rescues Rosie. The result is a double wedding between Milt and Barbara, and Rosie and Bill.

UNIVERSAL SPECIAL FEATURE.

THE PURPLE MASK (Episode 9, "A Strange Discovery"—Two Parts—Feb. 25).—The cast: Patricia Montoz (Grace Cunard); Phil Kelly (Francis Ford); his assistants (Pete Gerald and Jerry Ash); Mary MacLean (Gertrude Short); Robert Jackson, inventor (Leonard Clapman); Wallace Drew (Abe Mundon); Jack Elliot (Joe Moore).

While crossing the Atlantic, Pat had sent by wireless an order for the American Apaches to meet on the morning Kelly had called to redeem the stolen pearls. In the room reached by the secret passage she informed the members of her gang that she had been retained by Robert Jackson, manufacturer of high speed motors, to ferret out a plot against his commercial welfare. She delegated six men to find employment at the factory, and, having disguised herself as a man, also became one of the workmen.

Mary MacLean, niece of Robert Jackson, is heiress to his fortune and Wallace Drew is trying to gain her good graces. Pat becomes suspicious of Jack Elliott, superintendent of the factory, and advises Jackson to disappear, leaving the impression he has sailed for Europe.

Subsequently a cable is received that Jackson has died in London. The reading of the will is accomplished, and when Elliott finds the entire estate and fortune has been left to Mary, he becomes resentful. In the hope of finding some way to break the will or cast doubt upon Jackson's death, he engages Detective Kelly. Finally it is established that Jackson did not die, and Drew joins forces with Elliott.

Miss MacLean has entered a car, equipped with Jackson motors, in the race for the Golden Cup. Drew and Elliott determine to put the car out of commission. Pat determines to thwart them.

Convinced that she must first dispose of Kelly, she decoys him to her home and traps him in an iron-walled compartment in the cellar.

Going to the factory, Pat takes the car, through force applied by her gang, drives it to the track and starts in the race for the Golden Cup. Records fall and serious "spills" excite the throngs. At the finish the Golden Cup goes to Mary MacLean's car with Pat driving.

GOLD SEAL.

THE GREAT TORPEDO SECRET (Three Parts—Feb. 20).—The cast: Billy Olmstead (Herbert Rawlinson); Henry Olmstead (Howard Crampton); Marion (Neva Gerber); Jap valet (Frank Tokanaga); Mrs. Jas. Rutherford (Mrs. Crampton); Mrs. Warren (Frances Mayon); Marion's aunt (Adele Woods). Scenario by E. B. Lewis. Produced by Stuart Paton.

Billy Olmstead hears his uncle has been blown up by a bomb. His Jap valet tells him Mrs. Rutherford, president of the Society of Universal Peace, and Mrs. Warren, president of the Anti-War League, insist upon seeing him. The two women and their followers glare at one another. Billy refuses, and when they enter his room hides behind the curtains of a shower bath and threatens to come out if they do not leave. In desperation, he climbs out of a window.

Henry Olmstead, his uncle, head of the great war munition plant, disinherited Billy on account of his frivolous life. The peace societies try to make Olmstead stop manufacturing munitions.

Billy is accosted by two men who take him to a house, where he is surprised to meet his uncle, who tells him he couldn't stand the women any longer, so pretended to die and that if Billy will control the plant for six months, he will give him a large sum of money so that he and Marion Winters may be married. Billy consents.

Marion's aunt, thinking Billy the heir of his wealthy uncle, phones to offer her condolences and hurries to the house with Marion.

Billy understands absolutely nothing about the plant, and when a faker appears with a wonderful new explosive, he pays fifty thousand dollars for the invention. He also buys another invention, and pays a hundred thousand dollars for the blue-print. The men at the plant are horrified and uncle comes to the conclusion that his nephew is a fool and he must get him away from the plant before it has ruined him. He asks Marion's assistance. They plan that she shall pretend to be kidnapped.

Meanwhile the peace ladies have discovered the new invention has been bought by Billy and order two men to steal the plans. But Billy, thinking the invention useless, makes them a present of it. Soon afterward he learns that the government is willing to pay one million dollars for the invention.

Marion's aunt, becoming upset over her niece's non-appearance, phones Billy. He hastens to his uncle's house and forces his way into the room in which the girl is hiding. Henry Olmstead explains the situation. Marion informs her aunt where she is.

The Anti-War League and the Society for Universal Peace are celebrating because of gaining the possession of the invention of the "Magnetic Governor." Only Marion's presence is lacking, so that they can gloat over their prize before her eyes. When the girl arrives, they are stunned to see her hand the blue-print to Billy, who, with his uncle, has been standing in the doorway unnoticed by the women. They all rush at him, but Henry Olmstead stops them, saying, "I am Henry Olmstead * * * but not at your service." As the two men and Marion leave the house, the women slump weakly into their chairs.

RED FEATHER.

THE TERROR (Five Parts—Feb. 12).—The cast: Chuck Connelly (Jack Mulhall); Maggie Connelly (Grace MacLean); Annie Mangan (Virginia Lee); Jim Canford (Malcolm Blevins); Jerome Travers (Hugh Hoffman); Mike Tregurtha (Noble Johnson); Jimmy, the Dope (Jean Hersholt); Mrs. Connelly (Evelyn Selbie). Scenario by Fred Myton. Produced by Raymond Wells.

Chuck Connelly discovers his sister in a compromising situation with a gunman and kills the man. Two private detectives connect him with the crime. Later, the members of the protected organization to which the man belonged, attempt to kill Chuck, but he kills three of them and the detectives help him make a get-away.

They then force Chuck with threats of the electric chair to kill a reformer who has been upsetting the organization. Chuck then becomes a regular member of the gang.

Chuck falls in love with Annie Mangan, who is persuaded to go to the Salvation Army home. Chuck comes to the dancehall looking for her and is told that she has joined the Salvation Army. The new District Attorney is pounding the graft organizations. Word is passed to the gunmen to get him. Chuck goes to the District Attorney's house to threaten him, and is taken aback when the District Attorney's three-year-old daughter leans trustfully on his knee and looks up into his face with a smile. He goes to the Salvation Army for another sight of Annie. Chuck's sister has become the mistress of Jim Canford, the man higher up. The District Attorney pays no attention to the warning. Chuck is ordered to kill him and breaks into the house. He sees the District Attorney's little daughter, who forgot one of her dolls and is on her way to the library to get it. He steps out of sight, the child passes him, and he attempts to go up the stairs but cannot do it.

Canford arranges to put some other man on the job and accuse Chuck. His sister overhears and warns Chuck, who has gone to the Salvation Army. He tells Annie he has thrown the gang down and asks her to teach him "this religion thing." She explains, but he cannot understand how a few words of acknowledgment can square all he has done. His sister arrives and, seeing a chance "to square himself with God," goes to save the District Attorney.

The gunmen have surrounded the District Attorney's house before Chuck arrives. He reaches the door and sees the gunmen. There is no time to wait, so he breaks through the library window, grabs the District Attorney and his daughter, hurries them up stairs and faces the gunmen.

The District Attorney's life is saved, but Chuck is mortally wounded. Word is sent to Annie and his sister and they come to the house. Chuck dies, feeling that this was the only way in which he could atone.

THE WAR OF THE TONGS (Five Parts—Feb. 19).—The cast: Chin Ting (Tom Hing); Wong Wing (Lee Gow); Lee Hoy (Hoo Ching); Suey Lee (Lin Neong).

Ching Ting is a wealthy landlord, and the leader of his Tong. Sam Hop, a tea merchant, is his tenant, and Chin calls for the rent. Sam sends his clerk, Wong Wing, to Lee Hoy to collect a debt that he owes. Wong Wing meets Lee Hoy's daughter, Suey Lee, with whom he falls in love.

Suey Lee, wishing to see Wong Wing again, goes to Sam Hop's shop. The lovers are having an interesting conversation, when Chin Ting enters. He decides that the girl would make a fine wife. He asks Sam Hop to try to arrange for a marriage. Lee is flattered. But Suey Lee makes strenuous objections.

Sam reports the favorable answer, much to the distress of Wong Wing. Chin goes to call on the girl's family and is received with honor, but Suey Lee will have nothing to do with him. Wong Wing enters in the midst of the negotiations, making the excuse of delivering a package. He has heard Chin Ting trying to present a pair of jade bracelets to Suey Lee. Wong declares that he loves the girl. Lee says that if he can raise the dowry of nine hundred dollars, he may have her.

Wong determines to try the lottery, but luck is against him and he wins nothing. Then he decides to try gambling. He wins at first, then begins to lose and decides to try pai-gow, or Chinese dominoes.

Chin Ting sees that Wong is winning and instructs the dealer to cheat Wong, who loses all of his savings. He declares that he has been cheated and has a quarrel with Chin, who has him thrown out.

Chin tells his Tong of the insults of Wong, who belongs to a rival brotherhood. They decide death must avenge their leader. Two are chosen, although Lee speaks for Wong. However, Wong has been warned, and the two men are disarmed and one killed. The other reports to Chin, who calls another meeting. Lot falls on Lee Gow, who hides confederates about the door of Wong's lodging. But Wong's Tong brothers are hidden on the roof and when Lee Gow steals up to kill Wong, one of his brothers shoots and Lee is killed.

His body is carried to the Tong, and Chin Ting determines to bury it with honors, and then proceed with the wedding. Lee, before going on his mission, locked his wife and daughter in an inner room of his house, for he fears an uprising of the Tongs. So when Wong goes to Suey Lee he cannot enter the house. This makes him suspicious, and he is more disturbed when the rival Tong leader and several men come to the house. He hides, and sees them try to get in. Then they break down the door. He goes to the back of the house, and makes his way through a window, and is just in time to rescue Suey Lee from Chin Ting. We are allowed to suppose that the course of true love runs smooth after the rescue.

VICTOR.

THE FIREMAN'S BRIDE (Feb. 20).—Jane is stage-struck, and her ambition causes her to scorn Moore, a fireman on duty in a vaudeville theater. He secures her an opportunity on amateur night and Jane's Ophelia causes the gallery to pelt her with vegetables, so Moore dashes to the stage, and by beating one rowdy and throwing the stageman with the "hook" into the alley, gives Jane an opportunity to proceed. Jane leaves and hides in her dressing room in tears.

Fire breaks out and a panic is averted by the fireman. He finds Jane when all means of escape have been apparently been cut off. Wrapping the girl up, he manages to reach the roof.

Cured by a double lesson. Jane renounces the stage to be a fireman's bride.

THE HEART OF MARY ANN (Feb. 22).—The cast: Mary Ann (Ruth Stonehouse); Mrs. Kelly (Lydia Yeamans Titus). Scenario by Fred Myton. Produced by Ruth Stonehouse.

Mary Ann is standing near a milk station and sees a poor woman turned away as all the milk is gone. Mary Ann gets five cents from a policeman, which she gives to the poor woman. With the help of two boy pals, Mary builds a shed in a vacant lot and puts a sign on it which reads: "Mary Ann Free Milk Station, No. 1." The following morning, slipping from the house while her mother is still asleep, Mary takes the bottle of milk on her own doorstep and then follows the milkman, and steals every bottle of milk he delivers Then she returns to the shed.

Mary gives a bottle of milk to a colored woman. All the neighbors wonder what Mary's game is. They miss their milk and soon a crowd has gathered. The negress comes along and tells them about the new milk station in the vacant lot. The crowd rushes to the shed. Mary picks up two bottles of milk and looks formidable. A policeman goes to see what the trouble may be. Mary confesses to having taken the milk and the officer tells her, with mock severity, that she must take the milk back to the places from which she took it. Sadly she goes the rounds.

A BARE LIVING (Feb. 23).—The cast: Ralph (Ralph McComas); Eileen (Eileen Sedgwick); Tramp No. 1 (Milton Sims); Tramp No. 2 (Jack Conolly). Written by W. Warren Schoene. Produced by Allen Curtis.

Ralph is discouraged when he sees bills for the month. Eileen thinks Ralph miserly. Ralph reads about the South Sea Islanders' economical living and tells Eileen he is going to copy them. She consents to try the plan.

The next day the two are located in a tent. Ralph goes fishing and falls into the water. He comes back to the tent, half-frozen, and finds Eileen trying to light the fire. He makes his wife wear clothing made of grass while he goes out to hunt. He shoots an arrow at a turkey, but is chased by the farmer. They have a fight and Ralph is forced to pay for the bird.

Two tramps see Ralph's roll and take the money. Eileen invites them into the tent and urges them to clothe themselves with grass.

Ralph comes home. The sheriff arrives and is shocked to see people in such attire. Eileen informs her husband that the women of the South Sea Islands were privileged to have as many husbands as they desired. The sheriff takes the tramps as prisoners.

BISON.

Optimo is a dead mining town, and the remaining six citizens gather at Cunningham's bar daily, where they have a drink and then wend their way home. One day, Quackenboss, a tenderfoot from the east, arrives in town and treats the population to a drink.

One of them discovers that he is a "bug" on faro. They resurrect the old faro outfit and "frame up" a crooked game with Cunningham as dealer. They give him their combined capital of two hundred dollars and await their victim. Uncle Jimmy, who is always broke and always wanting a drink, arrives in the town during the preparations and watches them fleece their victim. They invite him to help himself to a drink. While the game progresses he indulges frequently, and becomes boisterous. So they throw him out. He is sore and waits outside until Quackenboss comes out after losing a thousand. Uncle Jimmy tells him of the "frame-up." The old man outlines a plan to him.

Quackenboss goes on a prospecting trip and returns to the town. The citizens have planned another faro game, but he explains that he is too tired to play, and asks them to look over some ore samples. The majority of the stuff is no good, but suddenly they discover the real article in one of the samples and ask about it. He explains that he has found a canyon full of it. Cunningham gets the others together, who persuade Quackenboss to sell them the claim for twelve hundred dollars. The next day they all start out on a mad rush. The only two who arrive at the canyon are Cunningham and one of the citizens. Instead of the gold they find a note informing them that there are other cheating games beside faro. In the meantime Quackenboss has given Uncle Jimmy his share of the twelve hundred and rides away.

BIG U.

THE MAN WHO SAVED THE DAY (Two Parts—Feb. 22).—The Cast: John King (Wallace Reid); Ethel Warren (Pauline Bush).

Ethel Warren has many suitors for her hand. She cannot decide between two of them, Anson Pryce, a lawyer, and John King, a journalist. John has had an accident and lost the use of an arm. War is declared and both men hasten to volunteer. Anson is accepted at once, but John is rejected on account of his arm. Anson is lauded as a hero by the neighbors and Ethel is impressed by his prowess in volunteering. She does not know that John has been rejected for physical reasons.

Anson is called at once, and has no time to visit Ethel. He writes her a letter in which he says good-by and mentions the fact that John will not be with him in the regiment. Ethel then thinks that John has shown the white feather, and when he calls to see her, she denies herself to him. He is much hurt but accepts her decision.

He tries in every way to get to the front. and at last succeeds in being sent as a war correspondent. One day his heroism is instrumental in saving the Union army from defeat. In writing the story for his paper, he gives the credit for his brave deed to Anson, for Ethel's sake, so that she may be proud of her lover.

After the return of the regiment, at the end of the war, Anson is received as a hero by his town. Ethel worships his courage, and is engaged to him. Anson at last finds it impossible to accept any longer the praise which he has not earned. He confesses that it was John and not himself who saved the regiment from disaster. John is then declared the real hero and marries Ethel.

HEROES OF THE PLAINS (Feb. 23).—A man and wife, with their daughter, Doris, are crossing the plains in a prairie schooner. They are attacked by Indians, and one of them, Blue Mountain, being wounded, climbs into their wagon. They nurse him and he and Doris become friends. He gives her a necklace, and returns to his tribe. She wanders away and is found by Lone Eagle, the chief, who recognizes the necklace. He takes her to camp, and she is brought up among them.

Twelve years pass. Blue Mountain wants Doris to marry White Hawk, but she is in love with Jack, the adopted son of her own parents, who live, unknown to her, on a nearby ranch. White Hawk is killed in a fight with Jack. The Indians, under Blue Mountain, attack the ranch and are defeated. The chief is killed, but before he does he recognizes his old friends, and tells them that Doris is their daughter.

It was Eddie's birthday, but he had forgotten about it. His wife Edith planned a surprise for him. Lee, an artist, is painting a picture for her. Eddie notices the smiles of the two and becomes suspicious.

IF WE SHOULD GO TO WAR

(Released February 14)

A Patriotic Masterpiece. The Pride of the Nation. The United States Army and Navy. Dreadnaughts, Aeroplanes, Big Guns, Submarines, Tense, Tremulous, Thrilling, 2 Reels.

A. STONE

145 W. 45th St., New York City

Edith asks Lee to help her hang the picture and he loses his balance, falling on Edith and causing her nose to bleed. She immediately faints and Lee recalls an old remedy—to place a piece of cold metal on the sufferer's neck. He gets the door key, but in his flurry drops it down Edith's back. Eddie arrives, finds the door locked and looks through the keyhole. With his own key he opens the door and rushes at Lee.

He chases the artist with a cutlass, through the house and over the roof, down skylights and fire escapes. Finally Edith hides him in a trunk. Eddie begins to pack his clothes to leave and Lee is discovered. At last the painting is brought forth and Eddie, deeply humiliated, begs Edith to forgive him.

POWERS.

THE BURIED TREASURE OF CEYLON (Feb. 25).—Wonderful tombs and temples, hidden by the luxurious growth of the jungle, until a recent investigation revealed them, are shown. Ruins of a city more than 2,000 years old, found by the British thirty years ago, rock tombs, hidden by vines until recently, shrines of Buddha built of brick work which has withstood the weather for 2,000 years, houses of the priests, and other interesting views obtained by Doctor Dorsey in the island of Ceylon.

A DAY IN THE LIFE OF A DOG.—(On same reel as foregoing).—Sammie Johnsin is reading a book about dogs. He goes to sleep and dreams that he is one. Many adventures happen to him, ending with a fight with a cat in which the feline has the best of it. Sammie wakes and decides that he does not care about being a dog after all.

IMP.

THE FOLLY OF FANCHETTE (Two Parts—Feb. 23). The cast: Mrs. Rayburg (Mae Bush); Mr. Rayburg (L. C. Shumway); Mr. Byron (Malcolm Blevins); Jack Rhodes (Clyde Benson). Story by Harry B. Hagenah. Produced by John McDermott.

Fanchette, Mrs. Rayburg, whose husband is district attorney, cannot understand his neglect and accepts the attentions of Mr. Rhodes, an "idler." Mr. Byron, head of the detective bureau, and Mr. Rayburg have many conferences regarding a band of crooks who are overrunning the city. Byron reports that his men are closing in upon the gang.

Mrs. Rayburg is angry because her husband will not take her to tea and tells Rhodes she will elope with him, promising to meet him at his apartment. Rayburg invites Byron and some friends to dinner.

Mrs. Rayburg meets Rhodes, who presents her with a wonderful necklace obtained from one of the crooks whom he employs. Byron and his men come to the house. The crook hides behind the curtain. Byron arrests Mrs. Rayburg and Rhodes, and phones for the patrol. He informs Rayburg, who has not missed his wife, that he has caught the leader. The crook pounces upon Byron, and Mrs. Rayburg escapes and returns home.

Byron subdues the two men and goes to keep his dinner engagement. To their mutual surprise Byron and Mrs. Rayburg meet each other. Byron takes her in to dinner and she begs him not to disclose her secret, as she has learned her lesson. The detective promises to keep her secret.

A DANGEROUS DOUBLE (Two Parts—Feb. 25). The cast: Stuart Warren and Prince Eric (Sidney Bracey); Marjorie Norwood (Sydell Dowling); Luella L'Estrange (Nellie Slattery). Written by Harry Dittmar. Produced by Robert F. Hill.

Stuart Warren, a cub reporter on a daily paper, reads that Marjorie Norwood, Vassar graduate, is to be betrothed to Prince Eric of Maurania. He ascertains that Maurania is a small European principality, and hopes to secure a good story.

Owing to a striking resemblance, Marjorie mistakes Warren for her fiance, but asks him why he is masquerading without his mustache. When he requests an interview, Marjorie denounces him as an imposter, and he is ejected from the house.

Several foreigners seize him and take him in an auto to the outskirts of the city. There he is ushered into the presence of an assemblage. Their leader addresses Warren as "Your Highness," and tells him that they regret being compelled to take forcible measures.

They request Warren to sign a letter which reads: "My queen, I am ill. It is important that you come to me. Accompany the barber." Warren refuses, and makes his escape. The conspirators engage a lady of vampire proclivities to embroil the Prince.

Warren finally succeeds in interviewing Marjorie, who tells him the king of Maurania is surrounded by conspirators, who await his death to declare a republic. The aged monarch only trusts Prince Eric, and has dispatched him to America to marry her. They have been persecuted ever since. However, Marjorie does not reveal that she is the King's daughter.

At the conspirators' headquarters the Prince becomes intoxicated and is induced to sign the decoy letter. Marjorie receives the letter and goes at once to join him. The conspirators fail to force her to abdicate her rights to the throne. Warren, fearing for her safety, rushes in an automobile to her assistance.

The conspirators prevail on the Prince to feign death and carry his supposed corpse to Marjorie, and tell her further opposition on her part will lead to a similar fate. Marjorie is about to sign her abdication when Warren breaks into the room and holds up the conspirators. He is compelled to shoot a guard in self-defense. The chauffeur hears the shot and summons the police, who subdue the conspirators. Marjorie and Warren make their escape in the automobile. Later Warren on board a steamer bids farewell to Marjorie.

Jerry is thrown from the premises by father and the count, when he comes to call on Tiny, and realizing that persuasion has little effect upon father, who insists that his daughter marry the count, he decides upon different tactics.

He hires four ruffians who kidnap father and take him to a deserted shack—where father, still under the influence of chloroform, is deprived of his clothing and Tim, one of the ruffians, makes up to represent him, and is taken by Jerry and the ruffians back to Tiny's home. There he imbibes freely and is sent to bed by Tiny's mother, who never suspects the deception.

Jerry now has easy sailing. Meanwhile the real father recovers, and, discovering his lack of clothing, decides to stay. He finds a bottle of whisky and before many minutes is under its influence. Finally, remembering his home, he staggers away.

His reappearance in his own home startles everyone. No one except Jerry knows which is really the master of the house. The butler, believing ghosts have arrived, summons a policeman. Tiny's mother faints and there is general excitement. Tim, now thoroughly sobered, jumps from the window and joins his pals who are waiting with an automobile. The policeman recognizes Jerry and, suspecting him to be the cause of the trouble, boots him from the scene.

NIAGARA FILM STUDIOS.

THE PERILS OF OUR GIRL REPORTERS No. 7—"The Smite of Conscience"—Two Parts—Feb. 7).—When Helen Girard learns of her husband's mode of life she refuses to accept support from him. Girard is a drunken and worthless specimen of the wealthy criminal class. She lives in his home, however, in order to conserve her family reputation, but supports herself by writing articles for a morning newspaper. She is assigned by the editor to study the sociological aspects of the New York night courts, and in the execution of her duty is brought many times in the company of Exton Manley, a lawyer.

In an altercation with her husband, Helen struggles with him for the possession of a revolver with which he has declared his intention of killing her. She is knocked unconscious, and when she regains her senses she sees her husband lying on the floor, dead, with the discharged pistol beside him.

James Hale, the butler, who had sworn vengeance on his employer, is arrested for the crime and prosecuted by Manley to a conviction and sentence of death. Only after the man's sentence does Manley realize the full enormity of his action, he having been convinced from the beginning that the woman he loves had fired the shot which killed Girard in order to save her own life. When she failed to confess to him he believed that she had killed with intent, but his affection for the supposed slayer forced him to protect her at another's expense.

Manley goes through tremendous mental torture during the days that precedes the date of Hale's execution. Helen notices the peculiar attitude of Manley, but she does not suspect that he believes her guilty.

Just as Father Burke has finished administering the last rites to the condemned butler, he receives a complete confession from him to the effect that it was he who had killed Girard.

THE PERIL OF OUR GIRL REPORTERS (Episode No. 9—"Misjudged"—Two Parts—Feb. 22).—Grace Calvert, a newspaper reporter, is loved by the editor and keenly desired by the sporting editor, neither of them knowing that she is married to an artist. She returns to her husband's studio one night and finds that he has murdered one of his art patrons, who had sneered at his work.

Later the murdered man is found by the janitor and it is discovered that he is the brother of the editor. Grace was seen in the studio by the sporting editor, and is assigned to cover the story, but pleads sickness. Later it is discovered that Gray has committed suicide and that the reason for Grace's being in the studio was that the murderer was her husband.

S. "Carmania" sails after the submarine warning and the break with Germany. Teutonic Allies' ships, comprising a total of 500,000 gross tons and valued at $30,-000,000, are tied up in New York harbor. Fearing plotters, police and federal guards are on constant duty to prevent destruction of this valuable property. All bridges are protected by Naval Militia armed with bayonets and one-pounders. Is it to be this—or this? It is the duty of all loyal Americans to stand solidly back of our President in his efforts to maintain peace.

GAUMONT.

REEL LIFE NO. 43 (Feb. 25).—Men as well as women will be interested in "Dainty Perfumes." These pictures were made on the Riviera by the Gaumont Company. They show in detail how the flowers are gathered and how they are treated to extract their fragrance. The methods of preparing both extracts and essences are pictured, the views having been taken in one of the world's greatest perfume factories.

"Teaching Children to Swim" is naturally an important subject. Children are shown at the edge of the pool going through the motions, and then they are put into the water to demonstrate their ability.

"Making Bottles at Home" shows how the dairyman may purchase pasteboart blanks which can be shaped into the form of a bottle. There is a saving in express charges because of the lighter weight and non-breakable character of the material, as well as an advance in sanitation since the bottle is used only once.

The fourth section of this reel shows "Logging in Louisiana."

TOURS AROUND THE WORLD, NO. 17 (Feb. 27).—Views of Vienna opens this number. This city is one of the most picturesque in Europe, and its society is said to be the most exclusive. The pictures include the cake market, the flower market, the Hochstrahlbrunnen, one of the most beautiful fountains in the world, the Schwarzenberg Palace, the City Hall, the House of Parliament and the Grand Opera House. Emperor Franz Joseph's Votive Church is also shown.

The Gota Elf, Sweden's most important river, connects Lake Venern with the Kattegat. The scenery is typical of Sweden's waterways. Particularly beautiful are the pictures of the island of Hissingen and of the locks around the falls at Trolhattan. How the water from the rapids is used as motive power for the mills is also shown.

Toledo, Spain, still retains many of its mediaeval characteristics. Many places are still typical of the days when the Toledo blade was the best tempered sword in the world. As the city is situated upon a rugged granite promontory, it is probably the most picturesquely located of any in the world. Of particular interest are the magnificent Gothic cathedral, the graceful, fortified bridge of Alcantara, and the citadel of Alcazar. Other pictures show the former hospital of Santa Cruz, the baths of Caba, and St. Martin's Bridge.

SEE AMERICA FIRST, NO. 77 (Feb. 28).—Two important battlefields of the Civil War have been "covered" by the Gaumont Company for this issue of "See America First." These are Chicakamauga, Ga., and Chattanooga, Tenn. Both took place in 1863, the former upon Sept. 19 and 20, the latter upon Nov. 23, 24 and 25.

Transferred to the screen from Chickamauga are Viniard Field, Poe Field and Kelly Field, the scenes of heavy fighting, and Brotherton House, where the Confederates pierced the center of the opposing line on the second day. Snodgrass Hill, where the closing engagement was fought, and Snodgrass House, where Gen. George H. Thomas had his headquarters, are of particular interest. There are pictures of the Wisconsin Cavalry Memorial and the Second Minnesota Monument.

The Battle of Chattanooga consisted of three separate engagements—Orchard Knob, Lookout Mountain and Missionary Ridge. The pictures of the battlefields include where General U. S. Grant had his headquarters, where the "Battle Above the Clouds" was fought, and a distant view of Chattanooga from Lookout Mountain.

On the same reel is a Gaumont Kartoon Komic, "The Elusive Idea," animated for the screen by Harry Palmer. The pictures tell of the tribulations of an artist in capturing an idea suitable for illustrating.

MUTUAL STAR PRODUCTION.

THE GENTLE INTRUDER (American—Five Parts—Feb. 19).—The cast: Sylvia (Mary Miles Minter); Arnold (George Fisher); Mrs. Baxter (Eugenie Forde); Mr. Baxter (Harvey Clarke); The Count (Franklin Ritchie). Scenario by Clifford Howard. Directed by James Kirkwood.

Sylvia is the niece of a man who leaves a fortune for her. He leaves it in the hands of his attorney, who is supporting an aspiring wife and daughter. Sylvia goes to the lawyer's home and is looked upon as an intruder. The lawyer's son sets out on a road of dissipation and soon becomes a devotee of gay life. He is saved just in time by the gentle influence of Sylvia and, upon discovering that his father is using all of the girl's fortune, he makes him give her the money. The family is horror-stricken at the thought of losing their fortune. They ask Sylvia's forgiveness for their treatment of her and she insists upon sharing her fortune with them. She also tells Arnold, the son, that his love is reciprocated.

THE BUTCHER'S NIGHTMARE (Two Parts—Feb. 25).—The cast: The Butcher (Ben Turpin); The Widow (Margaret Templeton); the Boy (Ed Laurie); the Girl (Gypsy Abbott); the Crook (Arthur Moon).

Ben, the butcher, is in love with a girl who does not reciprocate his affections. He falls asleep and has a dream in which he threatens to foreclose the mortgage on the home of the girl he loves. He also makes a regular crook of the girl's brother by having his safe robbed and the money placed in the brother's pocket. Ben is aroused from his dream by his partner, who is beating him over the head with a slab of meat.

MONOGRAM.

THE ADVENTURES OF SHORTY HAMILTON (No. 6, "Shorty Promotes His Love Affair"—Two Parts—Feb. 19).—Shorty and Anita set out to arrest a band of counterfeiters. Ruby, the daughter of the head of the gang, is forced to pass out bad money and, upon being discovered, leaves for the Arrowhead ranch country to become the school teacher. Shorty asks Anita to marry him, but she demurs, and tells him that love and work do not harmonize. Shorty returns to the ranch and there finds that Ruby is about to be married to Ralph.

Shorty and Ruby go to town and there the head of the counterfeiting gang sees the girl and demands that she pass more bad money. The girl, frightened because he might tell Ralph about her, takes the money. She tells Shorty of the trouble after he has passed some of it over the counter. Anita has come to talk things over with Shorty. He is arrested for passing bad money, but is freed through the persuasion of Anita. Ralph and Ruby decide to get married at once, as do Shorty and Anita, but Shorty forgets the license.

THE DEEMSTER (Nine Parts—February).—The cast: Daniel Mylrea (Derwent Hall Caine); Mona (Marian Swayne); the Bishop, father of Dan (Sidney Bracy); the Deemster, father of Mona and Ewan (Albert Froom); Ewan (K. Barnes Clarendon); Davy, Dan's faithful friend (Alexander Hall); Quayle (James Levering); Billy Quilleash (Ben Lodge); Hommy Beg (Thomas O'Malley); fishermen (Lee Post, William V. Miller, Freeman Barnes).

Daniel Mylrea is the son of the Bishop of Man, the baron of the Isle of Man, whose temporal power is higher even than that of the Deemster, or governor. The Bishop desires Dan to become a minister, but he prefers to be a fisherman.

The Deemster of Man has a son and a daughter—Mona and Ewan. Dan and Mona are in love. She consents to marry him when he can obtain her father's consent. Ewan, her brother, decides to become a clergyman, even in the face of his father's insistence that he take up business as a vocation.

The Deemster opposes Dan's suit for Mona's hand because he has fallen from his high estate as the son of the Bishop by becoming a fisherman. His dislike turns to open hatred when Dan endeavors to borrow money from Ewan, whom he thought his friend, to pay off the crew of his boat. Dan had squandered his earnings of the season in drink. Ewan refuses Dan the loan, who makes him a bitter enemy by knocking him down on his taunt that spending money in drink is as bad as theft.

Dan is now opposed in his love for Mona by both her father and brother. The Deemster forbids Dan to come to his house to visit her. Despite this, he sees her at night. Though this meeting is innocent in intent, the Deemster uses it to inflame the mind of Ewan against Dan, whom he supposes has dishonored his sister.

Arming himself with a knife, Ewan seeks Dan and comes upon him at his cabin while he is mending his nets. They quarrel and Ewan falls backward over a cliff and is killed. Dan's crew of fishermen throw the body into the sea, hoping to hide his death, but the tide sweeps it ashore. It is discovered and suspicion of murder falls on Dan.

He is arrested by the Deemster's constables and committed to jail, where he is visited at night by his father, the Bishop, who gives him an opportunity to escape. Dan refuses to go, feeling that he must atone for Ewan's death.

Dan is tried on Tynwald Hill, the ancient law mount. The Deemster insists that the Bishop shall exercise his legal prerogative as the highest civil power on the isle and sit at this trial. He aims to force the Bishop to sentence his own son on the gallows.

Dan is convicted. The Deemster insists on the death sentence being passed by the Bishop, who, instead of condemning Dan to be hanged, decrees that his son shall be cut off from the people—no tongue to speak to him, no hand to touch him, and, in death, no hand to bury him.

Dan is driven away, and for seven years lives alone in a hut by the sea. Then a plague strikes the people of Man. The Bishop has learned of a monk in Ireland who has discovered an antidote for the pestilence and sends for him. The monk comes to the isle on a vessel which is wrecked on the shore near Dan's desolate hut. He dies in Dan's arms, who then dons the monk's garb and carries the antidote to the people, as he had been commanded by the dying cleric.

When there is but one powder of the antidote left, Dan learns that the Deemster is a victim of the plague. When he faces his enemy to minister to him, he finds himself stricken. Either he or the Deemster must die. Revealing himself to the Deemster he choses to die himself—hopeless under his father's irrevocable sentence to a living death. Giving the Deemster the healing powder he staggers away to his hut. There he is followed by Mona and dies in her arms.

TRIANGLE·FILM CORP.

BAD BOY (Fine Arts—Five Parts—Feb. 18).—The cast: Jimmie Bates (Robert Harron); His Father (Richard Cummings); His Mother, (Josephine Crowell); Mary (Mildred Harris); The Town Marshall (William H. Brown); Clarence (James Harrison); Ruth (Coleen Moore); Yeggmen (Elmo Lincoln and Harry Fischer).

Jim is the leader of the "Slouchy Seven," a gang of small town boys. He takes the gang for a swim in the reservoir, and is reported to his father, who, as a punishment, locks him in his room. Jim, however, escapes and goes to the assistance of Clarence, a "nice" boy, who is vainly trying to secure an apple for his sweetheart, Mary. Mary is won by the prowess of Jim, but he is indifferent to girls. Clarence and Mary go for a walk and Tom, the blacksmith's boy, pushes Clarence aside and takes his place beside Mary. Jim goes to find the gang. At the railroad station he meets a girl, who asks him the direction to Mr. Morton's, who, she says, is her uncle. Jim offers to take her bags and show her the house. The boys see him and have fun at his expense. He leaves the girl, whose name is Ruth, at the gate and goes to meet the gang. They have lost a member who moved away, and initiate Clarence, who proves to be a good sport. Unaware of the interest he has aroused in Mary's heart, Jim fights Tom, when he again interferes with Clarence and Mary, and is accused by Ruth of being "stuck" on Mary. This he stoutly denies. He calls on Ruth and her uncle tells her to dismiss him—that he is a bad boy. Jim then joins the gang in a prank on the schoolmaster, and as a punishment his father orders him to chop a pile of wood. Jim is rebellious and, taking his dog, leaves the house. He meets Mary and tells her he is going to the city. His dog deserts him and he falls in with a band of tramps. His mother places an ad in a local paper asking him to come home and Mary takes care of his dog.

Later he comes back and is induced by the tramps to assist in robbing the bank, of which his father is vice-president. He dresses up and goes to secure the combination. Mary is impressed by his prosperous appearance, and when he hears his mother talking he almost gives up the idea of aiding the tramps, but his father's gruff remarks determine him to keep on. On going back to the tramps he sees his mother's ad in an old newspaper and refuses to help the hoboes, but they take the paper with the combination away from him and bind him in a freight car. He escapes and hurries back to the town and tells the gang. They go to the bank, but are not in time to prevent the robbery, and the tramps escape with the loot. The loss ruins the bank, and although Jim is hailed as a hero his conscience troubles him. Finally he tells his father and is forgiven. The money is discovered in a woodpile, and the next day Jim carries Mary's books to school.

PRINCESS OF THE DARK (Kay-Bee—Five Parts—Feb. 18).—The cast: Fay Herron (Enid Bennett); "Crip" Halloran (Jack Gilbert); Jack Rockwell (Alfred Vosburgh); James Herron (Walt Whitman); Crip's Father (J. Frank Burke).

In a squalid mining town in West Virginia James Herron, a consumptive, has built a shack in the hope that the mountain air may prolong his life. With him dwells his daughter, Fay, whom he idolizes. Fay, who has been blind from her birth, has a wonderful imagination. Even the town and its sordid inhabitants become invested with romance and take their part in the stories of adventures that her father reads to her.

While Fay goes about with security and fearlessness, which causes the ignorant to regard her with almost religious respect, her inner life is in sharp contrast.

She has secret haunts, where she hides, and in thought recreates fairyland. Her favorite retreat is a cavern formed by an old abandoned tunnel which she peoples with knights and princesses, gnomes and fairy guardians. The one thing lacking is the Prince. And one day he comes. The "Prince" is a hunchback, "Crip" Halloran, the son of the village drunkard, who stumbles into Fay's imaginary fairyland, and is at once endowed by her with every heroic attribute.

Finally Fay's father passes away and Fay becomes a drudge in the hut of ignorant aliens, and the meetings between her and the Prince are few and far between, and "Crip" is almost heartbroken.

Jack Rockwell, son of a rich mine owner, comes to look after his property. Chance throws him in contact with Fay, and he becomes infatuated with her charm and idealism. He is admitted to the kingdom and gradually dethrones "Crip," to the hunchback's bitter distress. In love and pity for Fay's misfortune, Rockwell secures a great oculist and an operation opens Fay's eyes to the harsh world that her fancy idealized. She sees her two devoted admirers as they really are, and shrinks with horror from the poor misshapen "Crip."

Broken-hearted, the hunchback seeks the old cavern and with a revolver ends a life that holds nothing but hopeless misery. Rockwell and Fay visit their old haunt, and with years of love and happiness opening before them discover the body of the poor hunchback, who had once for a few happy hours reigned as a Prince in a fairy realm of a girl's imagination.

Hugh Eltinge, a struggling artist, and Mark Dunbar, a genius of the pen, whom the world has as yet failed to reward, live together in MacDougal Alley. Across the hall is Doris Golden, a reporter on the Evening Star, who enthuses over the work of both.

Mark's novel is sold and Hugh and Doris see a new Mark. Mark begs Hugh to allow him to stake him until his pictures sell, but pleasure in his new clothes and new popularity dwindle as he sees his old friends will not profit by them.

A happy idea strikes him and he buys all of Hugh's paintings on exhibition at a local dealer, requesting that his name be not mentioned. Mark rejoices with Hugh when he comes home to tell the news. Then the two decide Doris must also share with them, and together they go to a lawyer, and arrange to persuade him to send a letter to Doris saying her uncle in San Francisco has died leaving her a thousand dollars.

In another section of the City Mrs. Trailes and her daughter, Ruby, scheme to ensnare a wealthy husband for the girl. Mark's reputation has impressed them. He is invited to attend a meeting of their Literary Club and the girl is given instructions to attract him. Mark meets the young society girl. Hugh and Doris—she is reporting the meeting—are also there and to them evidences of Mark's awakening infatuation are pitifully clear. Mark sees Ruby often. At a ladies' swimming club he is the guest of her mother. At a sign from her mother Ruby pretends to be drowning and Mark jumps in to her rescue.

The friendship thus engendered ripens into love and it is not long before they are married. But early in his wedded life Mark begins to feel the pangs of disillusion. Ruby is pettish and extravagant and when he remonstrates with her, she breaks into tirades of scolding that drive him to silence. Doris discovers her uncle is alive, and, perplexed, goes to the lawyer, who tells her all. She writes to Mark, enclosing a check for the whole amount she has left and promising to send the balance as soon as she can. His wife intercepts the letter and accuses him of infidelity. Her true vulgarity asserts itself and he goes to the little studio. Ruby follows and finds him with Doris and another scene is enacted. Mark begs Hugh to look after Doris, then leaves.

Hugh leaves a letter for Doris and a note in which he asks her not to read the letter before she has found happiness. Hugh tells a newspaper reporter with whom he is acquainted that he has inherited a fortune from his grandfather, and the account is printed in the evening paper. Ruby and her mother remember he is a friend of Mark's and ask him to call. Soon a closer intimacy than friendship develops and Mark comes home one evening to find Ruby in his friend's arms. Disillusioned, his last ideal—friendship—completely shattered, Mark hurries away.

After the divorce, he seeks Doris and the two become engaged. She remembers the letter and opens it. Herein Hugh has outlined his plans—the story of the fortune was a hoax, wherewith to entrap Ruby. For the sake of friendship he had sacrificed himself to bring happiness to the two he loved. Mark telephones to him and when he comes the old feeling of happiness and love fills once more the little studio in MacDougal Alley.

Neal hates to give up his evenings with "the boys," even for his wife, Betty. She gets a burglar scare and insists on his staying home. However, he wants to go to a mask ball, so he gives her a powder, telling her it will make her sleep soundly. She slips the powder into his favorite decanter, hides his costume, and then retires. In the kitchen, the cook gives a policeman some of the doped whiskey. Neal takes the cop's coat, hat and stick and starts for the ball. On the way he is called on to restrain a wife-beating husband. He gets a black eye, so decides to go home.

Meanwhile, the cook has tried to waken the real policeman. A burglar enters, drinks from the decanter and rolls under the table, asleep. The officer wakes up, upsetting his chair, so that Betty is awakened. Taking a gun, she looks for the trouble, and shoots at the officer in the kitchen, which awakens the burglar. Running into the dining room, Betty tries to capture the burglar, but he is getting the best of her, when Neal rescues her. The officer makes the arrest, while Neal promises to stray no more.

PARAMOUNT-BURTON HOLMES TRAVEL PICTURES ("Beautiful Banff"—Feb. 12).—Beautiful Banff and its hot springs are located in the center of the Canadian Rockies. The Banff Springs Hotel is called by the Stony Indians—which is the native tribe of redmen in the vicinity—"The Big Stone Tepee." From its terrace one gets a magnificent view down the Valley of the Bow River. The natural bathtub at the Hot Springs, the Government pool, free for all; Sun Dance Canyon, scene of Ralph Connor's story of similar name, are shown, together with beautiful cloud scenes; bison, buffalo, mountain goats and yaks. H. R. H. the Princess Patricia of Connaught and her father, the Duke of Connaught, third son of Queen Victoria, are seen, with the survivors of "Princess Patricia's Own Regiment," which was nearly annihilated in Flanders. One of the veterans is wearing a watch charm made from the bullet which caused him to be invalided home. A corporal tells his adventure; three times he was buried in craters created by shell explosions; was invalided home, blind, deaf and dumb, and then run over by an auto and his sight, hearing and speech instantly restored.

HER SCRAMBLED AMBITION (Black Diamond—Feb. 1).—Susie Speed, out of a job again, sits in her room and scans the paper while consuming coffee and rolls. She reads an account of Sarah Slickford, the movie queen, whose salary is $400,000 a month, and contrasts it with her last job at $4 a week. Finding an ad "comedian wanted," she decides to go in for the movies and after a wild ride on a street car reaches the studio.

The director gives her a try-out, and she displays her ability by running up and down a tree, pulling a flat tire off an auto, blowing it up with her mouth, and slamming it back on again. She then jumps fences with the car, climbs poles and runs on telephone wires. She then races another car, but half way around the course her machine stalls and her opponent gets the lead. Not to be defeated, she fastens a chain to her car and tows it down the street. She gains on the other car and finally whips her flivver around on the chain and wins the race.

The director now tells her he will try her out in a real scene. In the studio a set represents a cafe. The director explains that several roughnecks are to try to kidnap her and she is to resist. She puts up a terrific fight, beats up the gang, and smashes everything. She even knocks down an adjoining set where a dramatic company is working.

The director now yells to the gang to stop her. They bear down on Sue, who retreats to a brick wall with an archway. As the gang approaches, Sue tears a brick out of the arch and throws it with such good effect that she repeats the trick. Soon she is tearing down bricks by the armful and bombarding the gang. At last the arch collapses and Sue is buried under the bricks.

She is rescued by the director, who tells her the job is hers. She is delighted and has visions of a $10,000 salary, but when the director says $9 a week, she hits herself on the head with a brick and passes away.

PARAMOUNT PICTOGRAPHS, NO. 53 (Feb. 4).—Beginning with this edition of Paramount Pictographs, Bray cartoons will form a section of this screen magazine. The first cartoon is entitled "Colonel Heeza Liar."

The Pictographs subjects tell how man-hunting bloodhounds are trained. How the way of the mariner is marked, or how the U. S. Lighthouse Service keeps an eye on five thousand miles of coast. Skating a la mode is the third subject.

A varied collection of whirligigs, spins, pivots, pirouettes and jumps are presented. An exhibition of one of the first skates ever used and of the most recent skate points out clearly the remarkable progress made in this art.

THE BLACK WOLF (Lasky—Five Parts—Feb. 12).—The cast: The Black Wolf (Lou-Tellegen); Dona Isabel (Nell Shipman); Don Phillip, Duke del Miras (H. J. Herbert); Count Ramirez, Chancellor (James Neil); Old Luis (Paul Weigel).

In the Spanish Mountains, the Black Wolf, a bandit, reigns at the head of his band, known as "The Charcoal Burners." Although a robber, the Black Wolf is a benefactor at heart, as is shown in his many charitable acts towards the poor and helpless. The Duke rides with the Chancellor to meet the Countess Dona Isabel, the Chancellor's daughter, and on their return trip they come upon the Black Wolf assisting a friend to escape the police. Outnumbered, the Duke's men withdraw, but a price is then placed upon the bandit's capture, "dead or alive."

Declaring his love to the Countess, the Duke takes Dona Isabel in his arms, but freeing herself, she starts to run through the forest, the Duke in pursuit. He stumbles and is found by a member of the Black Wolf's band, who takes a ring from him. Isabel meets the Black Wolf, who takes her to the castle, promising to return the following night. He does call, but is discovered by the Duke, who lays his plans to capture him on his next visit.

The Black Wolf takes a locket and chain from the neck of the Countess, preferring, for her sake, to be taken as a thief instead of a lover. He is sentenced to die, but Dona Isabel's promise to marry the Duke secures his pardon. According to the laws he whom the Duke pardons becomes his slave for life. Only the desire to keep secret Isabel's love for him influences the Black Wolf to accept the pardon.

The Black Wolf was raised by Old Luis, a charcoal burner and a comparison of a locket and chain in his possession, with the ring taken from the Duke's finger, leads to the discovery that the Black Wolf is the rightful successor to the title now held by the Duke, and he is declared by the King to be the legal ruler and Duke. Don Phillip endeavors to hold Isabel to her promise to marry him, attempts to assassinate the Black Wolf, now the Duke del Miras, and is finally killed in a duel with his successor. The real Duke and Dona Isabel are at last united.

THE AMERICAN CONSUL (Lasky—Five Parts—Feb. 15).—The cast: Theodore Roberts, Maure Fealy, Tom Forman, Raymond Hatton, Charles West and Ernest Joy.

Abel Manning, an attorney, has spent the greater part of his life waiting for "something big." Joan, his daughter, is teaching school and is of great financial assistance to her father. Senator Kitwell is to hold a big political rally, and Manning is elated because he is to give the address. Geoffrey Daniels returns home for the election, bringing his college chums. He sees Joan and is interested. As Joan's father is making his speech, Geoffrey plays a joke on him, incurring Joan's contempt.

In the meantime the Mexicans are scheming for a new government and Gonzales goes to Washington to use his influence in securing an American consul his gang can influence. Kitwell wins, and Manning, believing Kitwell's promise to do something for him, goes to Washington. He is given nothing, however, his funds diminish and Joan finally joins him. Geoffrey is appointed to install wireless stations at some valuable mines in the Mexican country, Gonzales, promising Kitwell an interest in the mines if he will send a consul who will recognize their new government. Kitwell, believing Manning the right man, appoints him, and the latter views this as his great opportunity.

As Gonzales endeavors to rope Manning into their scheme, the real man in the old attorney rises against the traitors and he puts Gonzales out of his office. As he is sending a cable to Washington for help, Manning is seized by Gonzales and his men, the cable instrument demolished and Manning threatened with death if he does not join the Mexicans in their revolution. Geoffrey learns of the situation, and that Joan has been taken to Gonzales' ranch, rushes to the rescue just as a company of American marines land and after overpowering the Mexicans, the marines put Manning upon a box and he delivers an oration with great intensity. His loyalty has won for him at last the recognition he has so long coveted.

The picture is tinted and toned, so as to give dual tone and triple tone effects.

GREATER VITAGRAPH.

THE SWAMP ADDER (Ninth Episode, "The Secret Kingdom"—Feb. 26).—Nicholas, mate of the schooner, who has been on the side of Phillip, is won over by Romon and Savatz. Boyd, the Swamp Adder, a desperate, bloodthirsty creature, captures the castaways.

Ramon offers him a large sum of money if he will kill Phillip and Juan, and spare the rest. Phillip offers a larger sum for the pirate's refusal. But the pirate ascertains that neither of the men have any money. So he holds Savatz and Julia for ransom and sets the male members of the party adrift, each party in a separate canoe, with the instructions that whoever bring him the money first will get the women. He then withdraws into the dismal swamp with Julia and Savatz. He begins to make advances to Princess Julia, but ere he can carry out his intentions he is attacked by a band of Cuban settlers.

During the terrific battle which ensues, Phillip and Juan secretly return and rescue Princess Julia from horrible death by drowning on the sinking pirate boat.

Ramon and Nicholas, who were in the party of settlers led against the Swamp Adder, rescue Madam Savatz, leave the locality in a small power sloop. An octoroon woman, consort of the dead Swamp Adder, but turned against him in her jealousy, offers to guide Phillip's party out of the dangerous morass.

BLUEBIRD PHOTOPLAYS, INC.

THE MAN WHO TOOK A CHANCE (Five Parts—Feb. 19). The cast: Monty Gray, (Franklyn Farnum); Wilbur Mason (Lloyd Whitlock); Constance Lanning (Agnes Vernon); Mrs. Lanning (Countess du Cello); Richard Lanning (Marc Fenton); The Duke of Cannister (Charles Perley); James (Arthur Hoyt). Written by Ben Cohn. Directed by Wm. Worthington.

Monty Gray, just returned from ten years in China, meets Wilbur Mason, his old college chum, who shows him a photograph of Constance Lanning, his cousin. Monty falls in love with the picture and vows he shall win the original for his wife.

Mason informs Monty his chances are slim, because Mrs. Lanning is determined her daughter shall marry some representative of foreign nobility. Undaunted, Monty secures a letter of introduction and appropriates the photograph. Monty secures an English valet, who coaches him in the ways of the nobility. At the Lanning home he finds a house party in full swing, the Duke of Canister being among the guests.

Monty hears Constance refuse the Duke's proposal. He then makes bold to propose, despite the fact that he is impersonating Lord Winston Radleigh. Constance confesses her admiration, but declines to give her final answer.

Matters take a surprising turn next morning when a messenger brings a note from Constance. She informs him she is being held for ransom at a nearby ranch. Monty hurriedly goes in the Lanning motor to the ranch designated, conducts a spirited assault upon the band, and makes things so warm for them that four hurry the girl to a horse and carry her off, with Monty in pursuit. He shoots her captors and finally comes upon Constance tied helpless and prone upon the ground, where the cowboys have thrown her.

He returns to the ranch and is astonished to find the men whom he believed he had shot and killed assembled to meet them. Those whom he has encountered are badly bruised but are in a merry mood. Monty realizes that he has been the victim of an experiment. Constance wanted to know if she was in love with a "real man."

THE PROMISE (Yorke Film Corp.—Five Parts—Feb. 19.) The cast: Bill Carmody (Harold Lockwood); Ethel Manton (May Allison); Buck Moncrossen (Lester Cuneo); Charlie Manton (Paul Willis); Mrs. Appleton (Lillian Hayward); D. S. Appleton (W. H. Bainbridge); St Ledger (George Fisher); Miss Baker (Leota Lorraine); Fallon (John Steppling); Stromberg (T. H. Gibson-Gowland).

Bill Carmody, a likeable young chap, is wasting his time in Broadway restaurants. His father loses a large amount of money because the youth forgets to deliver bonds entrusted to him. Bill quarrels with Ethel Manton, the girl he loves, and he makes up his mind to leave home and "make good" in his own way. Mistaking the bonds for a package of Ethel's letters, he puts them into his pocket and takes them with him.

On the way west Bill meets D. S. Appleton, a lumber baron. The train is wrecked, and Bill having saved Appleton's life, is taken from the wreckage unconscious and hurried to the Appleton home. Bill tells Appleton that he is looking for work, but refuses to reveal his identity. Appleton sends Bill to Buck Moncrossen's camp, believing the boy is made of the right stuff, and that the stern discipline of Moncrossen's place will bring it out. A clash of wills between Bill and Moncrossen takes place, and the big lumberman proves to have a cowardly streak in him. His hatred for Bill grows.

Meantime Ethel has accepted the invitation of St. Ledger, a fortune hunter, to join his party on a cruise to Palm Beach. Ethel is accompanied by her aunt and brother, Charlie, who, loyal to Bill, loses no opportunity to balk St. Ledger's attentions to Ethel. Finally tiring of the fortune hunter, Ethel persuades her aunt to accept the invitation of Appleton to come north and inspect his lumber holdings.

Moncrossen has taken a fancy to Jeanne, an Indian girl. Bill has protected her from Moncrossen, and the lumberman plans to be revenged. During the spring drive, when the logs are taken down to the mills, Bill almost loses his life when a log jam is dynamited. Hurled into the river, and believed by Moncrossen to have been drowned, he is rescued by Jeanne and taken to her tepee. While he is recovering Jeanne falls in love with him, and makes him promise that if Moncrossen ever tries to molest her again, he will come to her assistance. Then he goes farther up the river, where Appleton has another camp.

Ethel, on her visit to the Appleton holdings, meets Bill. Their misunderstandings grow rather than lessen, and just when Ethel begins to realize the change that has come about in Bill. Jeanne comes into camp, telling him that Moncrossen is threatening her. Without explaining to Ethel, he goes away with Jeanne. Ethel, brokenhearted, is about to leave camp and return home, when Fallon, a friend of Bil's, tells her of the promise Bill has made to Jeanne.

Moncrossen has imprisoned Jeanne's old grandmother. Bill goes to force Moncrossen to release her, and a fight, almost to the death, follows, in which the big bully's spirit is utterly broken, Bill being the victor. Jeanne wants to go to Bill after the contest is over, but her wise old grandmother will not permit it, saying that it is a divine law that the red shall not mix with the white. A complete reconciliation between Ethel and Bill follows. The father having learned the truth about the disappearance of the bonds, comes to express his joy in the regeneration of his son.

THE GREAT SECRET (Chapter VIII—"A Clue from the Klondike"—Two Parts—Feb. 26).—Strong, realizing that his identity has been discovered, tries to hold the door against the yellow invaders, but they are too much for him in his weakened condition. They rush in, seize Strong and Beverly, and he is carried to an underground room and bound to a chair. A Chinaman tells him when the sand in an hour glass standing nearby runs down he is to be slain.

Meanwhile Dr. Git Sin, who is determined Beverly shall belong to him, is coolly engaged in mixing a potion to give her, when his wife, crazed by jealousy, determines that he shall die. "Bull" Whalen enters and warns him of the approach of the police. The Highbinders flee through a subterranean pasageway. Wee See, who knows of this passageway, leads the police into it from a vacant lot.

The Chinaman who is preparing to kill Strong, flees with the rest. Git Sin's wife frees Strong and he darts into the passageway which is barricaded by a wall beneath which is a pool of water. Through the pool the Chinamen drag Beverly, and a general fight is taking place when Strong encounters a policeman, explains his identity, then finds Beverly and carries her to safety while Git Sin is slain by his wife.

During this time the Great Master, in his mansion, is planning the downfall of Dr. Zulph. He picks up a photograph album and indulges in a reverie which accounts for his feeling toward Zulph. Jane Warren owned a dance hall and was in love with Zulph. One day when the Great Master entered he saw a beautiful girl. Two miners appeared and one wagered he could win the girl's heart.

Then followed a courtship which was interrupted by the Great Master, who floored the miner and restored the girl to her mother. Then he won her heart. They were married. A baby came. The last part of this reverie completely overcomes the Great Master, who gives way to his grief. Later he attends a meeting of the Secret Seven. He faces Zulph angrily. Zulph glares at him.

"I tell you," says Zulph, "we must put William Strong out of the way."

"And I say no," exclaimed the Great Master. "I am still the master here. I have a better plan for disposing of him." And so, while William and Beverly rejoice at being safely home again, another plot is being hatched.

THE HEART OF TEXAS RYAN (Selig—Five Parts—Feb. 26). The cast: Colonel William Ryan (George Fawcett); Texas (Bessie Eyton); "Dice" McAllister (Frank Campeau); Jack Parker (Tom Mix); Antonio Moreño (William Rhino); State Senator J. Murray Allison (Charles Gerrard); Marion Smith (Goldie Colwell). Written by Gilson Willets. Directed by E. A. Martin.

Colonel William Ryan, a ranch owner, in the Lone Star State, has named his only daughter Texas. Jack Parker, a devil-may-care cowpuncher, loves only two things—one is his horse and the other a photograph of Texas Ryan, whom he has never seen. He has named his horse "Dream Girl" after the girl of the photograph.

After several years in an eastern college, Texas return home. Her father is happy and she is idolized by the cowboys of the ranch.

Antonio Moreno is the head of a band of cattle rustlers. His lieutenant, "Dice" McAllister, a former road agent, uses his office as marshal as a cloak for unlawful deeds. Moreno and McAllister have long plotted to secure Ryan's wealth, and Moreno resolves to pay court to the girl.

In the "Last Chance" saloon and dance hall a shooting scrape occurs. Jack Parker, enemy of McAllister, is charged as being an accessory. Harsh words are exchanged and Parker overcomes McAllister in a desperate conflict, and then crosses the border until the disturbance blows over.

He returns on the Fourth of July and proceeds to celebrate. Colonel Ryan and Texas meet him and Parker learns she is the girl of the photograph.

Moreno and his gang, under pretense of friendship, visit the Ryan ranch during the round-up, and when Texas spurns the Mexican's offer of marriage, he threatens her, and is driven from the ranch.

When Texas and her girl friend, Marion Smith, are riding in the hills, they are seen by Moreno's men. Texas is pursued and made prisoner. Marion brings the news to Colonel Ryan. Jack Parker resolves to free the girl. By an offer of money, he persuades the bandits to free her.

Moreno and McAllister rustle the Ryan cattle and are discovered by Parker. During a night of rain and wind he slips into the camp of the outlaws, takes Moreno a prisoner, and leaves a note telling McAllister of what he has done. When McAllister finds the note in the morning, he decides to leave the country.

Moreno later makes his escape. Parker decides to go on the trail. He bids Texas farewell, telling her he is not worthy of her.

As time passes Texas comes to understand that she loves the cowpuncher.

Moreno continues his lawlessness. After a desperate conflict Parker is taken prisoner. Word is brought to Texas Ryan that he is to be shot that evening. The girl tells her father she believes the cattle thieves will spare Jack's life for money and starts in an automobile on her race with death.

Moreno gloats over the revenge. The executioner awaits the order to fire. Just as Moreno is about to give the order, Texas arrives. The cupidity of the Mexican bandits is aroused by the gold, and the cowpuncher is freed and takes Texas into his arms.

MAX COMES ACROSS (Two Parts).—Monsieur Max Linder, the screen idol of Europe, had just recuperated from a dangerous war wound when an agent of Essanay secured his services to produce comedies in America. On the eve of his departure a submarine sinks a big Atlantic liner. He and his friend, Ernest Maupain, who is crossing with him on the steamship Espagne, are frightened. No undersea boat appears, however, and they are calmed. Max persuades the captain of the vessel to make Maupain believe a U-boat has torpedoed the Espagne; simultaneously Maupain persuades the captain to make Max believe the same thing.

That night the sailors douse Maupain with water and shout that the vessel has been torpedoed. He tells them they have made a mistake, and points to Max's cabin. They douse Max.

A few moments later a freight steamer rams the Espagne. The passengers rush to the decks in terror. Max and Maupain, however, believe it is their joke. They discover, though, the truth, and both fight for the only remaining life preserver. Maupain gets it and rushes on deck. Max finds himself locked in the saloon. He is terror-stricken. Death faces him. Meantime in the hold of the boat the sailors are battling with the onrushing waters. They stop up the leak and all is safe.

Max hears the captain reassuring the passengers. His terror passes. He seats himself at the piano and is playing a lively tune when they find him. Max is proclaimed the hero of the moment. All the girls aboard kiss Max.

FOX FILM CORP.

A CHILD OF THE WILD (Five parts—Feb. 19).—June Griest, wild as the birds to whom she calls, thinks school something to abominate. When Frank Trent comes to the wilderness to teach, she is one of the first problems he has to handle. June sees him coming up the road, and contrives to introduce herself by dropping from her point of vantage—a branch of a tree—upon Trent's shoulders.

Frank falls in love with the litle sprite, but June, for all her liking of the newcomer, will not promise to attend school next day until she learns that Trent is to be the schoolmaster. Then her opposition ceases. Bob Gale, Trent's mountain rival for the hand of June, has his innings when the teacher's sister and child arrive in the village to visit Frank.

Gale takes advantage of this opportunity to warn June that her sweetheart is married and that his wife and baby have come to the town. At first June indignantly refuses to believe the statement at all. Her faith is shaken, however, when Frank brings his kin to see "the best little girl in the world." June, tearful and distrusting, angrily orders him from the house.

Frank and his sister leave, but the child remains to play with some puppies in the room. June approaches to pet her. The baby is frightened by the weeping stranger and cries out "Uncle Frank! Uncle Frank!"

June sees the truth now. And they all lived happily ever after.

CHASED INTO LOVE (Foxfilm—Two Parts—Feb. 12).—The cast: The Bridegroom-to-be (Hank Mann); the Bride-to-be (Carmen Phillips); her Father (John Lancaster); the Lover (Joe Lee); the Lawyer (Charles Arling).

The will of T. W. Glutz provides that his bashful nephew, Hank, will inherit the entire estate if married by 2 P. M. of a certain date. Hank loves a girl who lives fifty miles away, but his uncle's executor, a lawyer, arranges a marriage with a somewhat antiquated home product.

At 1 P. M. on the appointed day, Hank is sleeping off the effects of the night before. He wakens with a fever, a raging thirst, and an awful taste, when the lawyer enters and tells him the bride is waiting. "And my heart is fifty miles away," sadly muses Hank.

At the home of the bride-to-be all is ready and everyone present except the prospective groom. If Hank does not arrive in fifteen minutes, the estate will go to endow a home for aged chauffeurs.

The door opens. Hank and the lawyer arrive, the clergyman is ready, when Hank exclaims, "Oh pshaw, I've forgotten the license." Hank and the lawyer start for the city hall. The chief clerk, who is deaf, is tuning an organ. He demands two dollars for the license. Hank goes out, and finally gets the money by setting fire to a saloon, and returns at 1.57 P. M. He finds the clerk has gone to lunch, and the door is locked; Hank removes the door, gets the license and starts for the bride's home, but meets a beautiful woman in the park, and tears up the license.

The prospective father-in-law comes along, takes Hank by the neck and shakes him. Hank escapes in abbreviated raiment, and with father-in-law in pursuit, joins a party of marathon runners. He is soon in the lead, passing a flock of birds, and an automobile going 120 miles an hour. He romps over the 50 mile course, tears under the wire, right into the arms of the girl he loves; and wins the girl, the prize, and a loving cup.

THINK THIS OVER! You are "sold" on the necessity of providing the best possible service for your patrons. The pictures you show are probably the most expensive you can afford. If you could get better pictures for the same money, you'd unquestionably jump at the opportunity. And if you could get them for less money you'd be more than grateful to the individual or company that made such a thing possible.

No matter what pictures you are showing they will be better pictures, in the opinion of your patrons, if they are projected on a RADIUM GOLD FIBRE SCREEN—and they won't cost you as much money.

The RADIUM GOLD FIBRE SCREEN is scientifically made to accurately reproduce the shades and tones which are found in real life. It banishes all glare—the picture is soft and mellow.

Your saving in money is represented by the reduction in your bills for electrical current. The first cost of the screen, properly distributed over the years the screen will last, is little or nothing.

We don't ask you to take our plain, unvarnished words for anything we have told you. Let us put a screen in your house. If you are not entirely satisfied with results—and remember, you are to be the judge—we'll refund your money and accept our screen in return.

Your Name Here →
Etched in Plate Glass

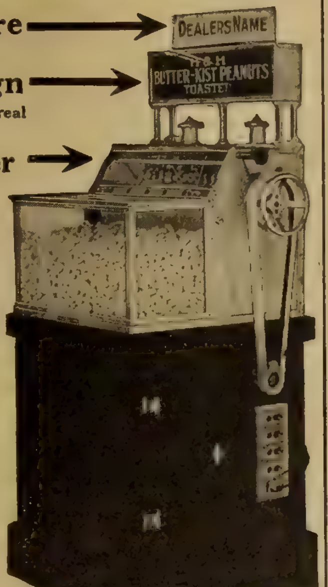
The Flasher Sign →
tells folks they're the real advertised Butter-Kist.

Visible Toaster →

Motion of the tumbling, toasting peanuts makes people stop and look; appetizing fragrance makes them buy.

Every time you toast the roaster full of peanuts, it holds 95 cents NET Profits for you.

Handsome golden oak cabinet beautifies your store. Keeps accessories, motor, etc., out of sight.



BUTTER-KIST

PEANUT ROASTER

The Only Machine Making Roasted Peanuts

Merchants call this the HUMAN machine. It is more than a peanut toaster—it is a powerful advertising medium and salesman combined. People come from all directions to watch it work in the stores and theatres that have now installed it.

"Peanut sales are double what they used to be," says Mr. Burlando, the confectioner in one town we'll gladly name on request.

Swan News Room (location on request) writes: "Sales $1,622.50 in 8½ months, from Butter-Kist Peanut Toaster."

Plenty of other signed sales records to prove that this machine earns 100 per cent. profit, wins trade for theatres, stores, stands, etc., stimulates trade in cities and towns of all sizes.

3 Reasons for Success

Don't think that this machine will make money for someone else but not for you. It will! It has three great essentials that insure big earnings in your own business.

1. Peanuts—a product everyone likes—now roasted as never before to an even toasty flavor, brittle and piping hot, and widely advertised by us under the well-known Butter-Kist trade-mark.

2. Roasted and toasted in a novel way that makes them the talk of the town.

3. Sold in the Butter-Kist Horn o' Plenty—the cornucopia container that holds full measure but seems to be twice as big as the average!

We control this valuable invention.

Write for Circular, "The Horn o' Plenty."

Motion put the money in the motion picture business, and the Butter-Kist Peanut Machine acts on the same principle in holding people's attention and teasing the nickels and dimes from the pockets.

High-class, dignified addition to your business no matter what your line is. Our great big circular "The Horn o' Plenty" tells all. Write for free copy today without fail.

Winnipeg to St. Paul Dog Derby

Longest endurance contest on record

10 noted crack drivers and dog teams entered—only 5 finish

Showing:

Albert Campbell, winner; Wm. Grayson, second; Joe Metcalf, third; Gabriel Campbell, fourth; and heroic Fred Hartman, who actually ran 476 of the 522 miles of the race, minus lead dog; who "mushed" his huskies average of 50 miles per day and is credited with one continuous run of 17½ hours' duration.

CARBONS

HAVE REVOLUTIONIZED THE ENTIRE INDUSTRY

The Ideal Lower Carbon for Direct Current

Constructed with a hard core and metal coating, the "Hold-Ark" negative carbon permits the use of a smaller carbon in the lower holder---assures a permanent arc---gives longer life to the carbon---prevents wandering---produces a perfect crater---aids in securing a bright, flickerless light---and assists in many ways in eliminating projection troubles.

Gentlemen:- Attention Mr. O. F. Spahr, Mgr.

I can frankly and truthfully state that the Motiographs we are using in our plant are giving very good satisfaction.

We are using Motiographs exclusively in all of our screen inspection work and we have had innumerable compliments from our customers upon the clear steady pictures we present.

You doubtless know that in selecting the equipment of our laboratory-studio, we spared neither time nor money in getting the very best regardless of price, so that our selection of Motiograph may, indeed, be considered a compliment to you.

Wishing you every success, we are

Very truly yours,

ROTHACKER FILM MFG. CO.

Mr. W. E. Drummond, Manager of the Palace Theater, Maryville, Tenn., says:

"You are certainly to be congratulated on furnishing such a machine as the Motiograph at a less price than your competitors. If exhibitors will buy Motiographs when they are in need of machines they will not only save money, but get machines that are equal, if not superior, to any other machine on the market."

Mr. F. H. Richardson, the Projection Expert, says:

"The Motiograph is now a machine which I can conscientiously recommend to the serious consideration of motion picture theater managers who are contemplating the purchase of new projection apparatus."

TO YOU WHO ARE ABOUT READY TO BUY A PROJECTOR IT WILL BE WELL FOR YOU TO INVESTIGATE THE MOTIOGRAPH.

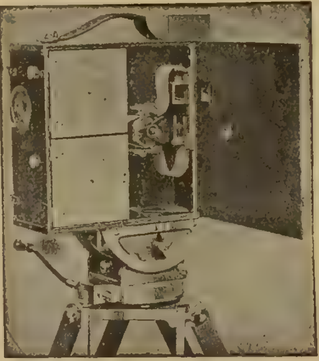
WRITE FOR ANNOUNCEMENT OF Important Improvements of the Motion Picture Camera

Send a postal for our Announcement—just off the press—of the Universal Motion Picture Camera's exclusive new features.

First, speed enables you to "get the picture and get away before the other fellow gets set up." Then, this is the only camera with an adjustment for "framing" the film so that the picture can be located in any desired relation to the perforations. The film transmission is improved—you get absolute registration of film. Further, it is easy to guide the film straight because the film channel makes threading easy—opens like a gate. The focusing tube magnifies image double size—with film in place! Footage indicator measures number of feet exposed. Static eliminated—this lightweight, one-piece all-metal camera grounds through the body of the operator.



Capacity, 200 feet. Four extra magazines enable total of 1000 feet.

Positive superiority—exclusive improvements—extraordinary quality at a remarkable price—less than half price of similar instruments. Address

Gentlemen:

Now that you have completed equipment in our new theatres here in New Orleans, and Houston, Texas, we want to take this means of expressing to you our appreciation of the manner in which we have done business with you, also as to the character of your goods. You have, without exception, filled our orders just as promptly as we could ever expect and probably quicker than we had anticipated, and the fact of your having supplied us with brass frames and various other equipment in our fifteen theatres is evidence that we are pleased with your goods, for they are the most attractive, durable and practical that we have as yet found.

We wish you good luck in the prosecution of your work.

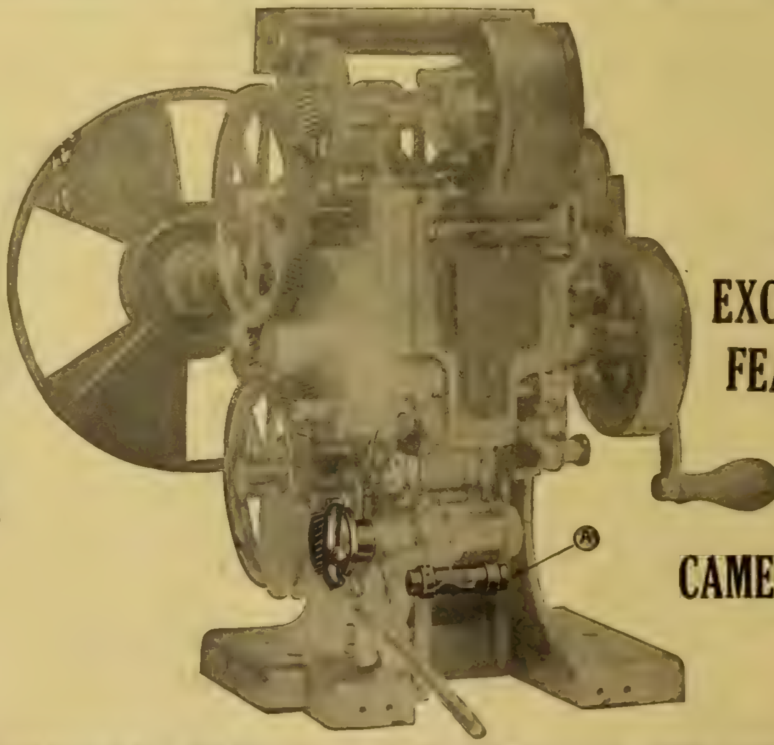
Power's Loop Setter

AUTOMATICALLY PREVENTS LOSS OF THE LOWER LOOP

THUS ELIMINATING THE MOST FREQUENT CAUSE OF TROUBLE IN MOTION PICTURE PROJECTION

A DEVICE AS SIMPLE AS IT IS EFFECTIVE



AN EXCLUSIVE FEATURE OF POWER'S CAMERAGRAPH

When the lower loop is lost, the film necessarily rips or tears apart. While making repairs an impatient audience is entertained by a dark screen.

Power's Automatic Loop Setter eliminates this constant source of trouble by continuously maintaining the lower loop.

The loop forms around Roller A. Any slackening of the loop draws the roller upward thus disengaging the take up. The loop immediately assumes normal proportions. The roller springs into its original position and the take up again starts to operate.

"Spike's Busy Bike"

"End of a Perfect Day"

"Nabbing a Noble"

Three Smashing L-KO Comedies That Kept the Most Calloused Critics of Comedies at the Strand Theatre, New York, in Convulsions of Laughter

TALK is cheap. Anybody can buy advertising space and fill it with "Talk." It takes merit, however, real merit, to book Comedies at The STRAND Theatre, New York's Finest Moving Picture House. When the comedy situation at this big House needed a tonic to boost business The STRAND immediately booked "SPIKE'S BUSY BIKE," "THE END OF A PERFECT DAY" and "NABBING A NOBLE."

ALL the advertising talk that you could read from now till next Xmas wouldn't mean a hundredth part as much to you as the fact that New York's Finest Picture Theatre selected these L-KO Comedies in the face of the fact that any number of comedies were offered simultaneously to the Strand. If the critical Strand can use L-KO'S, any House in the world can to immense advantage. WATCH for the big things COMING.

BOOK
BLUEBIRD Release

BLUE HAVE AR

FOLLOWING are extracts from a few of the hundreds of letters we are constantly receiving from enthusiastic Exhibitors who have found in BLUEBIRD Photoplays the perfect entertainment that attracts and pleases their patrons, and proves profitable in every sense of the word. Read them. They are from men who, like yourself, are in business to make money:

I have noted with much interest the steady improvement in QUALITY and the ever increasing POPULARITY and PRESTIGE of the BLUEBIRD Program. I have paid more than ordinary attention to the PROGRESS of the BLUEBIRD Program because in the Spring of 1916 I staked my judgment on its WINNING QUALITIES against the advice and opinions of a number of Film Men who were in a good position to be qualified judges of a Program's possibilities, and have seen my judgment verified. The fact that the BLUEBIRD Program has lived up to and exceeded my expectations, explains my unusual interest.—WM. E. POWELL, Columbia, Pa.

We find them uniformly clean, meritorious, well played and all the productions are excellent. This is not my personal opinion but that of our patrons also, as we endeavor to ascertain from them from time to time their likes and dislikes, and cater to their tastes.—JOHN POPULIAS, Steubenville, Ohio.

BIRDS
RIVED

BLUEBIRD features rank among the very best film productions on the market in every respect. I have run quite a number of BLUEBIRD features in my house, all of which have pleased my patrons immensely. To a number of my patrons all I have to say is "There's a Bluebird Coming" and regardless of the title of the subject they turn out in large numbers knowing that they will have the pleasure of witnessing a good picture.—C. E. BERNARD, London, Ont.

I am proud to give place on the Circle screen to "THE MYSTERIOUS MRS. M."—S. BARRET McCORMICK, Indianapolis, Ind.

If there are any houses in this neck of the woods you are unable to put BLUEBIRDS in and I can assist you in any way to accomplish this, I will only be to glad to help, as "I am strong for BLUEBIRDS" (Why?) Because "BLUEBIRDS" are strong for me, having won a home with my patrons.—A. A. ULM, Randolph, Neb.

Must say in all my eleven years' experience of operating and managing houses, "THE THREE GODFATHERS" is the Greatest and Best Picture I have ever had the pleasure to witness.—H. M. MASON, Newman Grove, Neb.

Why gamble with flivver features? BLUEBIRDS are sure winners. The finest feature films on the market today. You can get your share of the wonderful BLUEBIRD popularity by communicating with your local BLUEBIRD Exchange, or

A Little Philosophy on Bluebird Photoplays

What is the object of moving pictures?—Entertainment.
For whom is this entertainment created?—The Public.
Who pays for all this entertainment?—The Public.
Who knows best what character of entertainment is desired?—The Public.
Who then is the first and last judge of what it wants to see?—The Public.

Is it reasonable then to suppose (guided by the foregoing facts) that people who pay good money to be entertained are best versed in judging what they spend their money to see? Yes.

Then, read what Mr. A. E. Sewell, of Minneapolis, Minn., says about BLUEBIRD Photoplays and bear in mind that Mr. Sewell is one of thousands who have written to BLUEBIRD Photoplays expressing appreciation of BLUEBIRD productions.

"The writer is one of those people who prefers to shop in one particular store, eat in a particular restaurant, and patronize a particular barbershop. Therefore, I would prefer to have at least a favorite theatre—a theatrical home as it were. I have never been able to decide on the latter because I have never been able to find one that satisfied me. But last Saturday night I think I found it. I am convinced that it will be that theatre that shows BLUEBIRDS regularly." (Signed) A. E. SEWELL, Minneapolis, Minn.

Mr. Sewell reflects the judgment of millions of people throughout this and other countries, who know what they want, and who gladly pay for the kind of entertainment that really entertains.

BLUEBIRDS HAVE ARRIVED in every section of this country. BLUEBIRDS HAVE ARRIVED TO STAY. . . BLUEBIRD Photoplays are the answer to the great National demand for better pictures—for entertainment that really entertains.

Some exhibitors are jealous of the success of their competitors. Other Exhibitors haven't time to be jealous or to wonder how the "Other fellow" gets the money—the profits and the prestige. The wise Exhibitor learns what is winning Nationally and nails the "Winner" for his House. That's why hundreds and hundreds of shrewd Exhibitors have thrown out the thread-bare mediocre of "features" and are holding fast and boosting hard for BLUEBIRDS.

How about you?

MARJORIE RAMBEAU MAKES FILM DEBUT IN "GREATER WOMAN"

MARJORIE RAMBEAU, famous star of "Cheating Cheaters," makes her screen debut this week. In the first of the releases from the studios of the Frank Powell Producing Corporation, Miss Rambeau appears as Auriole Praed, who falls in love with an artist. Despite the fact that this is Miss Rambeau's first appearance before a motion picture camera she performs with all the ease, grace and lack of self-consciousness that marks her work upon the speaking stage. To see her act one would imagine that she had been working in the studios for some time.

A Broadway Beauty.

Miss Rambeau brings both beauty and brains to her work. On Broadway she has risen to fame as one of the most radiant beauties of that famous thoroughfare. In her playing of various roles she has demonstrated time and again the amount of study she has put in in creating them. The first of the Rambeau-Mutual Photoplays is an adaptation of the famous European success, "The Greater Woman," from the pen of Algernon Boyesen. It is in five acts. It is lavishly staged. Miss Rambeau is surrounded by a cast that includes many players of note. The lighting effects and stage settings are unusual to say the least.

Heart Interest Story.

A real heart interest story is unfolded as the film progresses. A woman's fight for her husband's love is vividly depicted. When the wife discovers that another woman is attractive to her husband, she sets out to prove herself the greater of the two. The working out of the story will hold audiences spellbound. "The Greater Woman" is released the week of February 26. Bookings can be made now at any Mutual Film Exchange.

American Signs New Players

Within the past few weeks the American Film Company, Inc., has added several players of note to its roster. George Fisher, until recently connected with the Ince studios, was engaged to play opposite Mary Miles Minter. Jack Vosburgh, another newcomer, has a strong role in William Russell's next picture—"My Fighting Gentleman," and still more recently Lucille Younge was signed to play a heavy role opposite Russell in "High Play."

Work on the first of the Mutual-Empire All Star Corporation's productions has begun at an eastern studio.

WORK PROGRESSING ON MUTUAL SERIAL— "RAILROAD RAIDERS"

Work on "The Railroad Raiders" is progressing nicely at the Los Angeles studios of the Signal Film Corporation. "The Railroad Raiders" is the big new chapterplay starring Helen Holmes. It will be released through the exchanges of the Mutual Film Corporation. It is a tremendously powerful story of railroad life. It is based upon a remarkable railroad story from the pen of a man who has spent years of his life in actual railway circles. Many of the incidents are based on real happenings on certain western railroads. Some of these incidents are spectacular in the extreme. "The Railroad Raiders" will set new speed records when the throttle is opened and the right of way signal finally given. Reservations can be made at any Mutual Film Exchange. The new chapterplay is in fifteen chapters, each two reels in length.

"Girl Reporters" Opens New Theater

For the opening attraction of a new Ohio theatre, the management selected the Mutual's big serial of newspaper life —"The Perils of Our Girl Reporters." Turnaway business resulted. Earl Metcalfe, Helen Greene and Zena Keefe are continuing to attract crowds. Nothing exactly like this thrilling series of newspaper stories has ever before been screened. Exhibitors are loud in their praise of its novelty. Any Mutual Exchange can arrange bookings. Each story is complete in itself—each is an actual incident from real newspaper life.

"DAMAGED GOODS" NOW AVAILABLE FOR BIG THEATERS

MUTUAL Film Exchanges all over the country are reporting a tremendous demand for the New Edition of "Damaged Goods"—the big seven reel Mutual Special Feature, starring Richard Bennett. Exhibitors everywhere are taking advantage of the opportunity offered them for showing this big feature attraction which has played some of the biggest theatres in America at admission prices of 50c or higher. This play, revised, re-edited—with a new prologue and a new conclusion, has just been released anew. It is an attraction that has been endorsed by some of the most famous divines, physicians and social uplift workers in the country. It features Richard Bennett—one of America's foremost male stars. It is a production that has been nationally advertised. Full week showings in big cities throughout America are now being contracted for. Full details regarding prices, open dates, advertising helps and lobby displays on "Damaged Goods" can be obtained from your nearest Mutual Exchange.

Chaplin Scores Hit With "East Street"

"Easy Street," the newest of the Chaplin-Mutual Specials, has been a riot since the first day of its release. Theatres all over the country have "stood 'em up" with the latest Chaplin-Mutual release. The public has hugely enjoyed it. It isn't a promised success—a picture that is likely to be a hit—but a success accomplished—one that has already been proven to be a money maker. The exhibitor booking it is taking no gamble. He is certain of its drawing powers. Now available at all Mutual Exchanges are "The Floorwalker," "The Fireman," "The Vagabond," "One A. M.," "The Count," "The Pawnshop," "Behind the Screen," "The Rink" and "Easy Street." All of them are Chaplin-Mutual Specials. All of them are playing to capacity business wherever shown. Some theatres have played them over and over again, the rebooking proving more profitable than did even the first run on the same subject.

The sequel to "The Diamond From the Sky," many theatres report, has drawn even bigger houses than the original story. Its photography, direction, stage-settings, story and enactment all are of high calibre. It is a splendid attraction whether you played the original serial or not. Booking now at Mutual Exchanges.

When the old man passes in his checks and the heirs get their hands on the yellow boys, what happens? You know; it happens in your town just as it does everywhere else. The widow and the children rush right down to the steamship office and buy a yard or two of tickets. It's human nature to want to go some place. And if you can't go, you like to read about the places and see pictures of them.

Now just let this sink into your thought factory. You will make big money being a benefactor of every person who enters your theater when you show Gaumont's "Tours Around the World." You show the owner of the yen, the shekel, and the mazuma just where they can plant them abroad, and you show us poor stay-at-homes the places from which our rich relatives send us post cards. Just take a slant at the ticket down the left-hand side of this page. It shows a few of the places to which you can travel NOW with Gaumont. Any Mutual Branch will map out your tour for you. Once a week you can take your patrons on an "arm-chair journey to foreign lands." They will come back for more the next week, and every week. This reel, is not a "filler;" it's a one-reel "feature."

Toot! Toot! The whistle's blowing. Get aboard NOW and book your theater for the season.

Gentlemen;

It gives me great pleasure to advise you that I have done a record business in my five theatres that are running the SEVEN DEADLY SINS.

On Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday of this week I showed ENVY to capacity houses throughout the day and evening, and in five of the houses could not accommodate the people who desired to get in.

I can say with entire frankness and without hesitancy that the SEVEN DEADLY SINS are the biggest money getting pictures I have ever put out.

Wishing you the very best of luck, I am,

Very truly yours,

ENVY

"The series gets a flying start in 'Envy'—Snappy Stuff—Miss Murdock delightful—Shirley Mason could hardly be improved upon—Other manufacturers should envy the McClure Company—Should be eagerly watched for by exhibitors."

—THE CRITICS.

PRIDE

"Twice as good as 'Envy'—A great bit of work—The audience is sure of plenty of thrills—Many dramatic moments—Photography faultless—Wealth of fast 'snap-snap' action—If the McClure people can keep up the pace they have set in No. 2 for the rest of the seven, they should find a ready market."

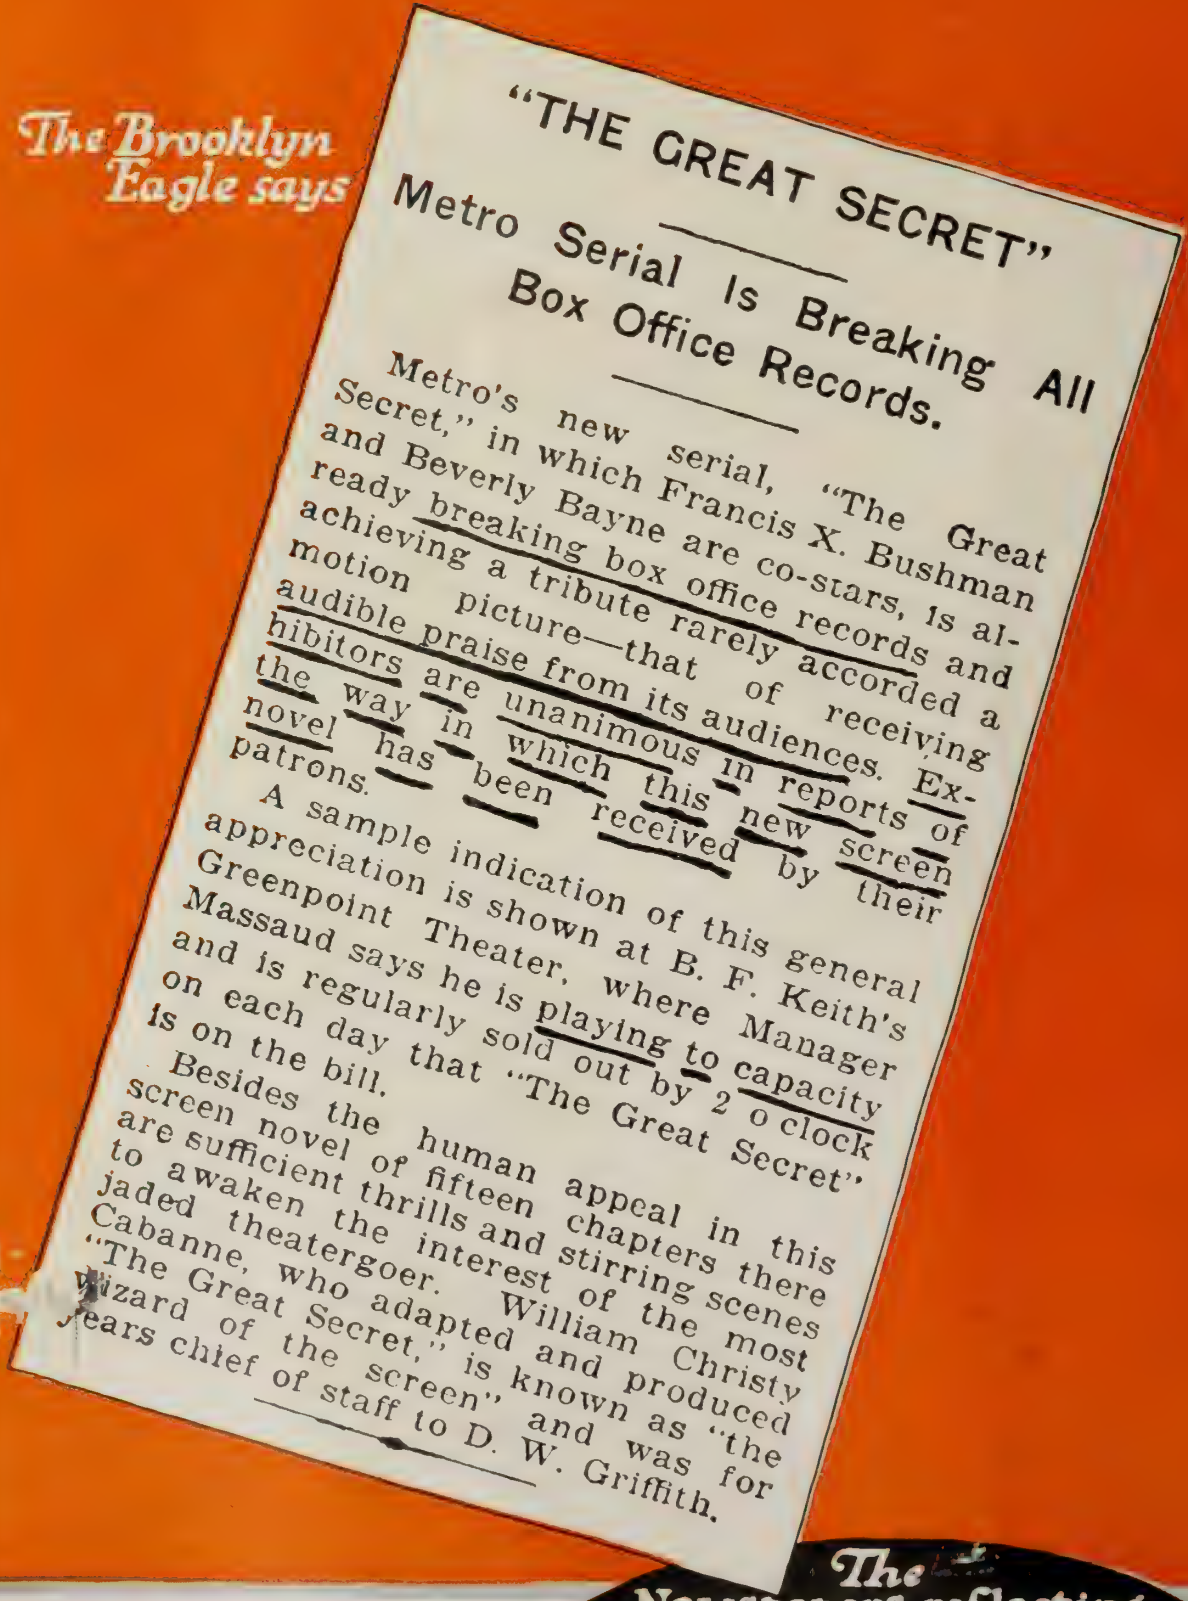
The Brooklyn Eagle says



"THE GREAT SECRET"

Metro Serial Is Breaking All Box Office Records.

Metro's new serial, "The Great Secret," in which Francis X. Bushman and Beverly Bayne are co-stars, is already breaking box office records and achieving a tribute rarely accorded a motion picture—that of receiving audible praise from its audiences. Exhibitors are unanimous in reports of the way in which this new screen novel has been received by their patrons.

A sample indication of this general appreciation is shown at B. F. Keith's Greenpoint Theater, where Manager Massaud says he is playing to capacity and is regularly sold out by 2 o'clock on each day that "The Great Secret" is on the bill.

Besides the human appeal in this screen novel of fifteen chapters there are sufficient thrills and stirring scenes to awaken the interest of the most jaded theatergoer. William Christy Cabanne, who adapted and produced "The Great Secret," is known as "the wizard of the screen" and was for years chief of staff to D. W. Griffith.

Sworn Testimony For the New York Legislature

SAMUEL GOLDFISH, President of Goldwyn Pictures Corporation, testifying before the New York legislative investigation committee, said:

"Goldwyn will have spent $1,000,000 for productions before its first picture is released.

"Goldwyn believes that the story is the important factor and that it will become constantly more important. But, pending such a development, Goldwyn is combining the greatest stars with the greatest stories.

"Our artists under contract include Mary Garden, Maxine Elliott, Mae Marsh, Jane Cowl and Madge Kennedy. These great personalities are worth every dollar we pay them."

Commenting editorially on this, the New York Sun says: "Mr. Goldfish is right." Hundreds of newspapers and thousands of exhibitors will indorse the sanity of this Goldwyn policy.

MAE MARSH

Here are some of the things the critics say:

ASHTON STEVENS, Chicago Examiner: "Mae Marsh is the first actress in my experience to possess a mental magnetism translatable to the celluloid."

W. N. HARDY, Boston Post: "Mae Marsh is a girl of smiles and tears—a remarkable figure in the screen world."

RANDOLPH BARTLETT, Photoplay Magazine: "Mae Marsh possesses the biggest thing in the creative world—SINCERITY. A star of the first magnitude at twenty."

NEW YORK TIMES: "Mae Marsh is the Maude Adams of the screen."

LOUELLA PARSONS, Chicago Herald: "Mae Marsh is the best actress on the screen."

R. G. McCOY, Pittsburgh Leader: "Mae Marsh is 'The Girl of 1,000 Faces'—every one of them appealing."

CHARLES DARNTON, N. Y. Evening World: "Mae Marsh is a vivid, electric actress."

CHICAGO DAILY NEWS: "Mae Marsh is the BERNHARDT of the films."

ROB REEL, Chicago American: "Mae Marsh is becoming the most popular star in America."

"I selected Gladys Hulette in "Her New York" as an attraction for this theatre because it, more than all of the attractions available, fitted into the ideals embodied in this theatre and the character of entertainment that we are striving to give... We know of no such production in recent months that made for such irresistable entertainment."

My dear Mr. Seelye:

I want to congratulate you upon having secured "The Vicar of Wakefield" production and must congratulate Mr. Thanhouser, Mr. Ward, and his son who directed the picture. It is a masterly effort and I am indeed glad to be able to book it at the Rialto on the 25th of February. I am sure that my patrons will also be delighted with it.

There were at least thirty-five people in the theatre at the time of its private showing and everyone was most enthusiastic about it.

Very truly yours,

Facts and Comments

WHATEVER may be the popular opinion of the usefulness of legislative investigating committees close observers of the work being done by the Wheeler committee, which is investigating motion picture industrial conditions, are unanimous in the belief that no such committee has ever worked harder or more conscientiously or has secured more genuine information on the subject under investigation. This is saying much for a legislative committee and, if true, we may look with confidence for a safe and sane conclusion of the whole matter.

In investigations of this sort it too often happens that the ultimate action of the legislative body as a whole has been previously mapped out and determined and that the "investigators" are merely looking for such information as will substantiate the final action when taken. The lamb has been marked for the slaughter, and the justifying evidence must be manufactured. There are indications in this case that a different course is being pursued. It is not that we believe the motion picture industry is to go scot free, but we do believe that a tax if imposed will be so placed that the burden may be equitably divided among the different branches of the industry.

On this point a strong inference has been given that there will be no tax placed on small exhibitors. If it is true that exhibitors are not to be taxed directly there is much ground for hope. It is true, and the MOVING PICTURE WORLD believes that the Wheeler committee cannot fail to make the discovery, that every exhibitor is already overburdened. The demand made upon him in almost every municipality in New York State is greater than any other industry has ever been asked to meet. So insistent and persistent have been these assaults that exhibitors, either singly or collectively, have never been able successfully to defend themselves. Many have been forced out of business thereby and others are on the verge of bankruptcy. To add another dollar to that burden would be the height of injustice and would border upon confiscation.

THIS is the open season on censorship bills. In a score of states measures have been introduced looking toward regulation of motion pictures incidentally, and toward providing a few more "jobs" for political henchmen mainly. In many of the states where the industry has been threatened with censoritis the exhibitors are out "gunning" in full force, but in others there is a lack of interest that may permit some obnoxious legislation. A case in point is that of Kansas, where the exhibitors' indifference allowed a very bad example of censor bill to become a law. The same is true of Pennsylvania. There should be no censorship laws by default.

In this connection there have come to our attention complaints from exhibitors to the effect that the various exchanges in states where censorship is pending have refused to lend their assistance in the fight. Whatever has been the practice in the past the exhibitor should not depend upon the exchange to help him out of his troubles. For the most part the manager of exchange branches is but a hired man. If there is to be any outside assistance it should come from the home office of the distributing company, or from the producer of pictures. Theoretically the National Association of the Motion Picture Industry is supposed to handle censor bill contests and, while that organization is doing all that its resources will permit, there is a painful lack of funds which prevents it from prosecuting a vigorous campaign in every state. Hence, it remains for the exhibitor to get busy and make the best fight he can put up.

A PROMINENT Southern exhibitor controlling several high class theaters heartily endorses the MOVING PICTURE WORLD for its article on this page two weeks ago refusing advertising on films that we considered harmful to the industry. He pertinently says, that without publicity these abominations of the screen would soon die out. Unfortunately there are a few men in the exhibiting end of the business as well as in the producing and renting end who will rush to get such pictures, and the more we tell of their unfitness the more they desire to get them. In this way the one per cent. counteracts all the good intentions of the ninety-nine per cent. and so the demand for censorship secures ample excuse for its existence.

Making a Hit

By Louis Reeves Harrison

DID it ever strike you that the audience makes the hit? What do any of us know about it anyway until we hear from that uncertain quantity the common people, damned by every weakling director and impotent playwright in the land? Of course the author must burn with ambition as he writes his story—it is about all he has to keep him warm—and the director must be saturated with egotism to put on the stuff he elects to visualize, or we would not be floating serenely on in the general flood of mediocre production toward higher salaries for our star performers. Nearly all the wealthy families of the future will be descended from movie stars and munition makers according to present indications.

Did you ever hear of a director insisting, in his contract or verbally, that he must be given good plays to put on? Never. He thinks that his brass will be taken for pure gold. Until a few comet actors suddenly lighted up the movie skies, the director took anything that came along and smeared it over with his own personality and pet theories and declared that it would outshine the stars themselves, to say nothing of a few little half-burned candles, the hack scenario scribes. To the producer he said, "You don't need plays; you don't need actors; all that you need is me. I am the whole orchestra from leader to drummer."

You will find that the director who is modest enough to acknowledge that he did not "make" Frohman and Belasco is one of a line long enough to stretch from Times Square to the Battery who "made a hit on Broadway." As a gentleman of dextrous insincerity he can make the average Hamfat turn green with envy. No director ever made a hit on Broadway, inside of a theater or out on the pavement. Now and then, author, actor, director and stage carpenter have united in a harmony of purpose and evolved a play which the people in front have discovered to be a work of art.

"Let's do another like that," suggests the producer with enthusiasm. Each one of the factors in production swells up and honestly believes that he did the whole thing. "It was my play," says the Author. "Where would your play have been without me?" says the Director. "And me," says the Actor, the Camera Man, the Art Director, and the Stage Carpenter. The unvarnished truth is that the complete production, like a human being, is the creature of Heredity, Environment and Circumstances—through others of its kind.

Odd as it may seem at first glance, it is that impression which counts. The main object of nearly everything expressed in language and pictures is the effect it makes on the imagination or memory of those to whom it is addressed. The effect of a light screen presentation may be temporary, or of a strong one permanent—on the effect, on the impression it makes on the public, depend both its artistic and its financial value.

This may seem like trying to enforce the obvious, but the very fact that an idea is self-evident, that it is easily seen by all, often causes it to be overlooked. There it stands in plain view—it is the impression we are after —yet it is continually disregarded. For the sake of trivial economy, subtitles are rarely made effective by illustrative designs in harmony with what is imprinted on the screen, though they excite both attention and feeling when skilfully done.

How few directors give consideration to the common sense of an audience! Almost invariably they place a portiere where a door should be, so that an important conference, or a vital conversation may be easily overheard by the villain.

Shown in one of the Broadway theaters the other evening was a scene in which the villain was thrown over a cliff after an exciting struggle on the brink. We saw the dummy that was supposed to be him plunge down some five hundred feet, and were then given a view of him lying motionless at the base. Imagine our astonishment, two or three scenes later, on beholding him get up, dust his clothes and walk away. The entire audience burst into a scornful roar of laughter.

That episode was seen by the director dozens of times. It was seen by the producer. It may have been seen by the purchaser. With them it was great. With the audience an unbroken fall of five hundred feet to the base of a cliff means death or serious injury. Which is right, producer or audience?

A man does not have to be rich, or great, or well-dressed to grasp certain very simple things. A very large number of those who go to the picture show have had experience—even a small boy knows something about how far he can fall without doing himself serious damage. To oppose elementary common sense in the treatment of a story, as is done in thousands of moving pictures, indicates that the directors are more stupid than the audiences they address. Army officers confer about the plans of battle in a room where there is a portiere wholly unguarded. Officers of highly trained intelligence stick a record of these plans in an outside pocket, or in a table drawer, anywhere they will be exposed to theft. A wife receives a letter which she does not wish her husband to see—it may arouse his suspicions. Does she burn it at once, or does she drop it where he may find it without trouble?

Then we have the short-weight playwright, who is too weak in resource to avoid the arbitrary, the accidental, the unbelievable. How often does he present the common ordinary facts of life as the rest of us see them? He shows that he cannot—it is beyond his ability—when he deliberately avoids contemporary life as a background for contemporary action, just as much as when he forces his characters to do the impossible and transgress any sane conception of what they should be under natural influences from without and from within. There is a failure of conviction when a character goes beyond what it is reasonable for us to expect, and a play that is not convincing will never make a hit.

To make a hit, the play must have a theme, a purpose, character, mood and an address to the eye in harmony with its mood. It must have greater depth than the solution of a mystery, or the gratification of curiosity as to how it will turn out. Suspense is essential in most cases, but as a means to an end, that end the lasting impression made. It is part of the playwright's work to evoke the interest of expectancy—the spectators must be made to desire what is to be set before them. All this can be destroyed by lack of truth in portrayal.

Between authors who are careless about structure and motive and directors who are stupid about treatment there are very few real hits made during an entire season. Nearly any competent critic can put his finger on the weakest spot of screen production, the lack of logical conception and presentation. To make a hit, the complete product must be unobjectionable to the common sense of the average audience. To make the right impression, it must be consistent in all its parts, its entire form a reasonable guarantee of its validity.

A House Divided

By Sam Spedon

EVERYBODY in the industry recognizes the power of organization, but some have had a keener appreciation of it than others. For this reason a few well-intentioned men, good organizers, started the National Exhibitors' League of America. It promised great things for the advancement of the motion picture industry and it was heralded as the right move in the right direction. One of the men who started it was made its president, had high ideals and started to put them in operation. After a while he saw great possibilities of power, used it for political preferment and fell by the wayside. From that time history seems to have repeated itself and the league has been cursed with cliques and politics.

The National League has the nucleus of a strong organization for the accomplishment of great good and we agree with Mr. Trigger that it requires a man as its leader who is "an organizer with ability and force, well balanced and truly square." Such a man might bring together the different branches of organized exhibitors under one head.

Every week we read in our trade papers that different bodies of exhibitors in different states are organizing separately, independent of the National League to meet local conditions as they exist in their territories, to handle their own affairs, calling themselves Exhibitors' Associations. It is a good sign and shows they are alive to their own interests. It indicates, however, that these associations, while not inimical, are not in harmony with the National League.

There is no reason why they should not organize locally under whatever head they see fit, if it serves their interests best. There is no reason why these associations should not have representation in the National Association of the Motion Picture Industry, for the sake of harmony. And for the same reason we would like to see them represented at the National Convention of Exhibitors at Chicago, next July. Their absence would mean a greater division.

Since writing the above we are in receipt of the following communication from F. J. Rembusch, president of the Exhibitors' Protective Association of Indiana:

"If we need a National Organization at any time let the different States work together. I have been in it seven years and I can't see where a national organization is really necessary, but I do see where a state organization is necessary. They have never used the National Organization except to give balls, expositions and conventions, all of which has been charged to the overhead of this industry and a few exhibitors made money out of it. Here we are, in the midst of a crisis in Indiana. We have asked the National Association and the Motion Picture Exhibitors' League of America, both of them, to help us with a donation. One of them says it cannot and the other does not even pay any attention to us. Why should we belong to a national organization? We have paid our per capita tax and worked for the national organization for seven years and got nothing, but we will never do it again.

"I was down in Kentucky and those boys say 'Nothing doing.' They will never belong to this national organization. Neither will any of the States and I am going to do my utmost if I have any power at all to disrupt the present national organization, and every trade journal should jump in and help."

We cannot see why the National Exhibitors' League of America should be disrupted. We advocate its reorganization and a different get-together policy to make it what it was originally intended to be, the representative head of all the bodies of organized exhibitors. If something isn't done pretty soon we cannot see, if all we read and hear is true, how a house so divided against itself can possibly stand.

An expression of opinon, without animus, is always deserving of consideration. We respect Mr. Rembusch's statement as far as his experience and knowledge are concerned and we must agree with him that the evidence is largely in support of the dissatisfaction he registers. When an organization, or any body of men, takes money from affiliated members for the accomplishment of things for the good of the exhibitors and does nothing to that end it not only deserves to hear what others think of it, but it invites criticism, that in the future it may correct the mistakes of he past.

Film Junkmen

By Sam Spedon.

THE film junkmen breeze in upon the exhibitor, or prospective customer like a cyclone. Solomon in all his glory was never arrayed like one of these. "Believe me," the junkman says," I'm a regular fellow and everything I've got to offer you is a cleanup." Then he whips out a one or three sheet poster printed in all the colors of the rainbow, showing a female dressed like Eve in the garden of Eden. "That's the stuff that will pack 'em in. Of course the picture isn't as bad as the poster or the title suggests, but believe me it's what you need in a slow town to put some pep in 'em and make 'em stand up and take notice."

You've met this genus homo. He never fails to tell you what he doesn't know about the "show" business isn't worth knowing. He doesn't tell you that his knowledge of the "show" business was gotten from attending burlesque shows and frequenting questionable cabarets. He doesn't tell you that his status in society has been derived from his associations with those who knew less about it than he does. He doesn't tell you that his knowledge of psychology and character was gained from a study of human weaknesses and tendencies, to which he must always appeal. He doesn't tell you his knowledge of the rest of the world is confined to the place where he was born and brought up. Take it from us, what he doesn't know about motion pictures and a whole lot of other things would fill a public library. Take it from him and he will convince you that you are a fool and he is a regular Solomon, and when you wake up you will admit it. He is after the nimble six-pence, not the slow shilling.

How do they do it? On their nerve! They believe in the distorted golden rule "Do unto others what they would do unto you, but do them first." They presume, as most of us do, that the majority of people are honest, but they believe that we are all after the dollar, honestly if we can, but we want the dollar. They put us to the test, they are willing to take a chance at anything once and they think you are just as willing to take a chance, too. If they are right and you fall for the junk, you have no comeback.

Every new business has been the mecca for a lot of undesirables, and the motion picture industry, with its get-rich-quick and easy money tales, is not an exception. Cripple Creek and the gold fields of California were never so alluring. It will take time to get rid of the junkmen and their junk, no time like the present.

New York Legislative Committee Looks Into the Operations of the "Get-Rich-Quick" Concerns

THE claims of enormous profits to be made in the film business spread broadcast in circulars by prospective sellers of motion picture stocks came to the attention of the State Legislative Committee, which is investigating the industry as to its taxability, when the committee resumed its hearings at the Murray Hill Hotel, New York, on Wednesday, February 14. Testimony in this connection was given by J. T. Morrison.

Joe Engel on the Pan.

Joseph W. Engel, treasurer of the Metro Pictures Corporation, was under question-fire of the committee on Wednesday. Mr. Engel, according to the committee, had been subpoenaed to appear as a witness on the Friday preceding, but had failed to do so. Mr. Engel's legal representative, J. Robert Rubin, protested against any citation of his client for contempt of the State Legislature, declaring that as far as he knew Mr. Engel had not received a subpoena. Chairman Wheeler stated that the charges would stand.

During the course of Mr. Engel's examination Senator Hinman several times charged that there were inaccuracies in the financial statements of the Metro Pictures Corporation, as submitted to the committee. Senator Hinman queried Mr. Engel as to the latter's personal information regarding many points. Mr. Engel gave answers with the aid of C. K. Stern, auditor of Metro.

In an apparent desire to place any blame for any alleged inaccuracies Senator Hinman called Mr. Stern to the stand. He told the committee that he had no knowledge as to why there had been a lapse of eight days between the completion of the statement and its receipt by the committee. Asked whether his written answers or the copy of his dictation to the stenographer, who prepared the formal report, had been preserved, the witness said that he doubted that any such papers had been kept. He said that he would, however, make an effort to find them. Chairman Wheeler took exception several times to what he termed were Mr. Rubin's efforts to coach Mr. Engel when the latter was on the stand. Mr. Rubin said that his actions were entirely misunderstood—that his replies to Senator Hinman's questions were in no way meant as hints to the witness.
